Verses 5, 6. He measured the wall of the house six cubits—Three yards thick was this wall, from the ground to the first story of the side-chambers. And the breadth of every side-chamber four cubits—Of the lowest floor; for there were three stories of these, and they differed in their breadth, as the wall of the temple, on which they rested, abated of its thickness; for the middle chambers were broader than the lowest by a cubit, and the highest as much broader than the middle. The side-chambers were three, one over another—They were three stories high; and thirty in order—As in Solomon’s temple, according to Josephus’s description, Antiq. lib. viii. cap. 3, sec. 2, where it appears, that round Solomon’s temple were chambers three stories high, each story consisting of thirty chambers. It is supposed that twelve were placed to the north, twelve to the south, and six to the east. And they entered into the wall—At five cubits height from the ground, the wall which supported these outward chambers, abated of its thickness one cubit, in consequence of which there was a rest, or a ledge, of one cubit’s breadth, on which the ends of each story were fastened: see 1 Kings vi. 10. But they had not hold in the wall of the house—They were not fastened into the main wall of the house, but rested on the outside of the wall where it became more narrow.

Verses 7, 8. And there was an enlarging—Namely, of the side-chambers; so much of breadth added to the chambers as was taken from the thickness of the wall: see the preceding note; and a winding about still upward—Winding stairs, which enlarged as the rooms did, went up between each two cham-

A. M. 3430. about: the foundations of the side-
B. C. 574. chambers were ^d a full reed of six great cubits.

9 The thickness of the wall, which was for the side-chamber without, was five cubits: and that which was left was the place of the side-chambers that were within.

10 And between the chambers was the wideness of twenty cubits round about the house on every side.

11 And the doors of the side-chambers were toward the place that was left, one door toward the north, and another door toward the south: and the breadth of the place that was left was five cubits round about.

12 Now the building that was before the separate place at the end toward the west was seventy cubits broad; and the wall of the building was five cubits thick round about, A. M. 3430.

B. C. 574. and the length thereof ninety cubits.

13 So he measured the house, a hundred cubits long; and the separate place, and the building, with the walls thereof, a hundred cubits long;

14 Also the breadth of the face of the house, and of the separate place toward the east, a hundred cubits.

15 And he measured the length of the building over against the separate place which was behind it, and the ^e galleries thereof on the one side and on the other side, a hundred cubits, with the inner temple, and the porches of the court;

16 The door-posts, and ^e the narrow windows, and the galleries round about on their three stories, over against the door, ⁷ ceiled

^d Chap. xl. 5.—^e Or, several walks, or, walks with pillars.

^e Chap. xl. 16; Verse 26.—⁷ Heb. ceiling of wood.

bers from the bottom to the top; and there were two doors at the top of each pair of stairs, one door opening into one chamber, and the other into the opposite one. For the winding about, &c.—The stairs, as they rose in height, enlarged themselves too; round about the house—On all sides of the house, where these chambers were. Therefore the breadth was still upward—It became broader by one cubit in every upper chamber. I saw also the height of the house—Of the chambers which rose to three stories high. The foundations, &c., were a full reed of six great cubits—The lowest chamber had properly a foundation laid on the earth, but the floor of the middle and the highest story must be accounted here a foundation; so from the ground to the ceiling of the first room were six great cubits; from the first to the second, six great cubits; and from the third floor to the roof of the chamber, a like number; to which if we add one cubit for the thickness of each of the three floors, you have twenty-one cubits, or ten yards and a half for height.

Verses 9–11. The thickness of the wall, &c.—This is supposed to be meant of an outward wall enclosing the side-chambers. And that which was left—Or, the space which was left, as Bishop Newcome translates it, judging it to be intended of a space allowed for a walk, or gallery of communication, before the chambers, which space was five cubits broad, verse 11. And between the chambers was the wideness of twenty cubits—A word being here used for chambers different from that which occurs before, it is supposed that another row of buildings, parallel with the side-chambers, but at twenty yards' distance from them, is intended, and that there was a passage of twenty cubits between these buildings. The description, however, is very obscure, and the interpretations of commentators, of course, different. The doors of the side-chambers were toward the place that was left—Or, toward the void space. The doors of the lower rooms opened into this void space before the chambers.

Verses 12–14. Now the building, &c.—This seems to be another building not before mentioned, but now measured by itself. So he measured the house—The whole temple, oracle, sanctuary, and porch, with the walls, which were in length a hundred cubits from east to west, which may be thus computed:

| | Cubits. |
|---|---------|
| The thickness of the wall of the east porch | 5 |
| The passage through the porch | 11 |
| The wall between the porch and the temple | 6 |
| The outward sanctuary | 40 |
| The partition wall | 2 |
| The holy of holies | 20 |
| The thickness of the west wall | 6 |
| The side-chambers at the west end | 5 |
| The outer wall of those chambers | 5 |

Also the breadth of the face of the house—The front of the temple eastward was a hundred cubits.

Verses 15–17. And he measured the length, &c.—Noldius translates this sentence more clearly thus: And he measured the length of the building which was before the separate place, [and] that which was behind it, or opposite to it; by which he understands the north and south porch, the east and west sides having been measured before, verses 12, 14. And the galleries thereof on one side, &c., a hundred cubits, with [or and] the inner temple, and the porches thereof—As the temple, and the area wherein it stood, made a square of a hundred cubits; so the courts and buildings thereto belonging were of the same dimensions. By the galleries are meant the side-chambers, described verses 6, 7. Within the inner temple—Called the inner house, verse 17, chap. xlii. 15, to distinguish it from the courts and

A. M. 3430. with wood round about, ⁸ and from B. C. 574. the ground up to the windows, and the windows were covered;

17 To that above the door, even unto the inner house, and without, and by all the wall round about within and without by ⁹ measure.

18 And it was made ¹ with cherubims and palm-trees, so that a palm-tree was between a cherub and a cherub; and every cherub had two faces;

19 ² So that the face of a man was toward the palm-tree on the one side, and the face of a young lion toward the palm-tree on the other side: it was made through all the house round about.

20 From the ground unto above the door were

⁸ Or, and the ground unto the windows.—⁹ Hebrew, measures.
¹ 1 Kings vi. 29.—² Chap. i. 10.—¹⁰ Heb. post.

buildings which were about it. The door-posts and the narrow windows, &c.—He measured also the thickness of the walls on each side of the porch, and the thickness of the door-cases at the entrance into the temple; as also the narrow windows belonging to the three stories of chambers, which were placed on the outside of the temple. From the ground up to the windows—He measured from the ground up to the windows which were placed above the side-chambers. And the windows were covered—With lattices or curtains, or both. To that above the door—It seems this verse is connected with the preceding, and signifies that the windows were made in exact proportion, both over the porch, and through every part of the temple and the buildings adjoining to it.

Verses 18–20. And it was made with cherubims and with palm-trees—On the inside of the house the walls were adorned with carved work of cherubim and palm-trees, as Solomon's temple was, 1 Kings vi. 29. The cherubs and palm-trees were placed alternately; and according to the different ways of counting them, you might reckon a palm-tree placed between two cherubs, or a cherubim placed between two palm-trees. So the face of a man was toward a palm-tree, &c.—The cherubim had four faces, or appearances, but only two of these appeared plainly in this carved work; the two other faces, namely, that of an ox and an eagle, being supposed to be hid in the plain or surface of the wall. From the ground unto above the door—Up to the windows, as it is expressed verse 16, or up to the ceiling, as the LXX. explain it.

Verses 21, 22. The posts of the temple were squared, &c.—The lintels, or door-posts, both of the temple and inner sanctuary, were not arched, but square, with a flat beam, or upper lintel, laid upon the top of the side-posts: compare the margin of 1 Kings vi. 33. The altar of wood was three cubits high, and the length thereof two cubits—The LXX.

cherubims and palm-trees made, and A. M. 3430.
on the wall of the temple. B. C. 574.

21 The ¹⁰ posts of the temple were squared, and the face of the sanctuary; the appearance of the one as the appearance of the other.

22 ¹¹ The altar of wood was three cubits high, and the length thereof two cubits; and the corners thereof, and the length thereof, and the walls thereof, were of wood: and he said unto me, This is ¹ the table that is ² before the LORD.

23 ¹ And the temple and the sanctuary had two doors.

24 And the doors had two leaves apiece, two turning leaves; two leaves for the one door, and two leaves for the other door.

¹ Exod. xxx. 1.—¹ Chapter xlv. 16; Mal. i. 7, 12.—² Exod. xxx. 8.—¹ 1 Kings vi. 31–35.

add, by way of explication, και το ευρος πηχων δυο, and the breadth thereof two cubits; that it might be four-square, as Moses's altar of incense was, Exod. xxx. 2. The altar here described is a cubit higher, and double the breadth to that of Moses, which is supposed to be agreeable to the dimensions of the altar made by Solomon, who did not exactly observe the proportions prescribed to Moses, in making the cherubim and the other furniture of the temple; God having given a new model to David of all the parts and ornaments of the temple, 1 Chron. xxviii. 12, 19. This altar was made of wood, but overlaid with gold, Exod. xxx. 3, and therefore is called the golden altar. And the corners thereof, &c., were of wood—The corners are the same with the horns, mentioned Exod. xxx. 2, being made out of the four posts which supported each corner of the altar. The surface, or top of it, is called the length, and the sides the walls. This is the table that is before the Lord—The words altar and table are used promiscuously; and this table, or altar, is said to be before the Lord, as being in the place of his peculiar presence: compare Exod. xxx. 8. In the same sense the burnt-offering is said to be made at the door of the tabernacle of the congregation before the Lord, that is, in the place dedicated to his worship, Exod. xxix. 42; and the lamp is said to burn before the Lord, chap. xxvii. 21, though the candlestick stood in the outward sanctuary.

Verses 23–25. And the temple and the sanctuary had two doors—Each of them had a double, or folding-door. And the doors had two leaves apiece—The two doors being exceedingly large, that of the outward sanctuary ten cubits broad, and that of the inner six, (see verses 2, 3,) and of a height proportionable; each of them had two leaves, that they might be more easily opened, and each leaf had a wicket in it. And there were made on them, &c., cherubims and palm-trees—Namely, on the doors both of the outward and inward sanctuary. And

A. M. 3430. 25 And there were made on them,
B. C. 574. on the doors of the temple, cherubims and palm-trees, like as were made upon the walls; and there were thick planks upon the face of the porch without.

^m Chap. xl. 16;

*there were thick planks upon the face of the porch
without*—There was a wainscot work of boards fas-‘ened to the end of the great beams, which came out

26 And there were ^m narrow win- A. M. 3430.
dows and palm-trees on the one side B. C. 574.
and on the other side, on the sides of the porch,
and upon the side-chambers of the house, and thick planks.

Verse 16.

beyond the wall of the porch. These were laid so as to make a frieze-work over the entrance of the eastern porch.

CHAPTER XLII.

*This chapter contains, (1.) A description of the chambers all around the inside of the wall of the courts, 1-12.
(2.) The uses of them, 13, 14. (3.) A survey of the whole ground on which the temple and its courts were built,
15-20.*

A. M. 3430. THEN he brought me forth into
B. C. 574. the outer court, the way toward the north: and he brought me into ^a the chamber that was over against the separate place,
and which was over before the building toward
the north.

2 Before the length of a hundred cubits was
the north door, and the breadth was fifty cubits.

3 Over against the twenty cubits which were
for the inner court, and over against the pavement which was for the outer court, was ^b gallery against gallery in three stories.

4 And before the chambers was a walk of ten

^a Chap. xli. 12, 15.—^b Chap. xli. 16.—¹ Or, did eat of these.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLII.

Verses 1-4. Then he brought me forth into the outer court—Outer with respect to the temple itself, or the outer part of the court, which court was that of the priests, as appears from what follows. Into the chamber that was over against the separate place—Chamber is put for chambers. Before the length, &c., was the north door—This north door faced one of the cloisters, the length of which was a hundred cubits, and its breadth fifty, which was the proportion of all the cloisters. Over against the twenty cubits which were for [or, which belonged to]
*the inner court, and over against the pavement
which was for* [or, belonged to] the outer court—
One side of these buildings looked upon the void space about the temple, which contained twenty cubits, mentioned chap. xli. 10; and the other side was toward the pavement belonging to the outer court, described chap. xl. 17. And before the chamber was a walk of ten cubits—According to our reading of cubits breadth inward, a way of one A. M. 3430.

cubit; and their doors toward the north. B. C. 574.

5 Now the upper chambers were shorter:
for the galleries ¹ were higher than these,
² than the lower, and than the middlemost of the building.

6 For they were in three stories, but had not pillars as the pillars of the courts: therefore the building was straitened more than the lowest
and the middlemost from the ground.

7 And the wall that was without over against the chambers, toward the outer court on the forepart of the chambers, the length thereof was fifty cubits.

² Or, and the building consisted of the lower and the middlemost.

this verse, there seem to have been two rows of these chambers, and a walk between them of ten cubits' breadth, with an entrance into it from the chambers of the breadth of one cubit. But the LXX., Syriac, Houbigant, and Bishop Newcome, after a walk of ten cubits breadth, add, and of a hundred cubits long.

Verses 5-7. *Now the upper chambers were shorter,
&c.*—The two upper stories had balconies standing out of them, the breadth of which was taken out of the rooms themselves, and made them so much the narrower, because the weight of the balconies was not supported by pillars, as the rooms over the cloisters were, but only by the wall. The wall that was without, &c., was fifty cubits—The wall that enclosed these buildings was commensurate with the breadth of one of the cloisters of the outer court, which were fifty cubits broad. These three verses are allowed by the Jewish Rabbis Solomon and Kimchi to be very difficult to be understood.

A. M. 3430. 8 For the length of the chambers
B. C. 574. that were in the outer court was fifty cubits; and lo, before the temple were a hundred cubits.

9 And ³from under these chambers was ⁴the entry on the east side, ⁵as one goeth into them from the outer court.

10 The chambers were in the thickness of the wall of the court toward the east, over against the separate place, and over against the building.

11 And ⁶the way before them was like the appearance of the chambers which were toward the north, as long as they, and as broad as they: and all their goings out were both according to their fashions, and according to their doors,

12 And according to the doors of the chambers that were toward the south was a door in the head of the way, even the way directly before the wall toward the east, as one entereth into them.

³ Or, from the place.—⁴ Or, he that brought me.—⁵ Or, as he came.—⁶ Verse 4.—^a Lev. vi. 16, 26; xxiv. 9.

Verses 8-12. For the length of the chambers, &c.—The chambers that were built over the cloisters were in length fifty cubits. And lo, before the temple were a hundred cubits—In passing from the north to the south side of the temple, verses 11, 12, over the space of ground that fronted the east side of it, the prophet was shown that it measured a hundred cubits, chap. xli. 14. And from under these chambers was the entry, &c.—The entry into these south chambers was by a pair of stairs at the east corner of the outer court: see chap. xlv. 19. The chambers were in the thickness—Or rather, in the breadth of the wall—That is, of the ground which that wall enclosed. Over against, or before, the separate place, and before the building—These expressions denote that these south chambers had the same situation with respect to the temple, as the north chambers had, spoken of verse 1. And the way before them, &c.—Such a way led to these chambers, as did to the chambers on the north side. As long as they, and as broad as they—The proportions of both were the same; and the windows, doors, and passages belonging to these, were exactly uniform with those on the north side. The sense of the twelfth verse would be plainer, if the words were thus translated, And such were the doors of the chambers toward the south; namely, as those toward the north. There was a door in the head of the way, &c.—Namely, like that described verse 9.

Verses 13, 14. The north chambers, and the south chambers—Namely, those described in the foregoing part of the chapter; they be holy chambers, where the priests shall eat the most holy things—

13 ¶ Then said he unto me, The ^{A. M. 3430.}
^{B. C. 574.} north chambers and the south chambers which are before the separate place, they be holy chambers, where the priests that approach unto the LORD ^d shall eat the most holy things: there shall they lay the most holy things, and ^e the meat-offering, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering; for the place is holy.

14 ^fWhen the priests enter therein, then shall they not go out of the holy place into the outer court, but there they shall lay their garments wherein they minister; for they are holy; and shall put on other garments, and shall approach to those things which are for the people.

15 ¶ Now when he had made an end of measuring the inner house, he brought me forth toward the gate whose prospect is toward the east, and measured it round about.

16 He measured the east ^gside with the measuring reed, five hundred reeds, with the measuring reed round about.

^a Lev. ii. 3, 10; vi. 14, 17, 25, 29; vii. 1; x. 13, 14; Num. xviii. 9, 10.—^f Chap. xlv. 19.—^g Heb. wind.

The show-bread, the remainder of the meat-offering, sin-offering, and trespass-offering, are expressly called the most holy things, Lev. vi. 14, 17, and xxiv. 9; and are distinguished from the holy things, such as the peace-offerings, first-fruits, and tithes, Lev. xxi. 22. These were to be eaten within the precincts of the temple, by the direction of the Levitical law. There shall they lay the most holy things—These rooms were likewise set apart for laying up the remainder of the sacrifices, till they were eaten by the priests and their families, Lev. x. 13, and xxii. 13. When the priests enter therein—Within the inner court; then shall they not go out of the holy place, &c., but there they shall lay their garments, &c.—They shall not go into the court of the people, in their priestly vestments, but shall lay them up in some of these chambers. The priestly garments were only to be used in the time of their ministration, as appears from Exod. xxviii. 43. And shall put on other garments, and shall approach, &c.—The words should rather be translated, and shall come into the court belonging to the people; the outer court, mentioned at the beginning of the verse.

Verses 15, 16. When he had made an end of measuring the inner house—The inner house denotes the temple, distinguished from the courts about it; he measured the east side, &c.—This and the following verses contain the measures of the holy mountain, or area, upon which the temple stood, and which is described to be an exact square, consisting of five hundred reeds in measure on each side of it, that is, of very near an English mile. The whole area, therefore, was near four miles in compass; a

A. M. 3430. 17 He measured the north side, five
B. C. 574. hundred reeds, with the measuring-reed round about.

18 He measured the south side, five hundred reeds, with the measuring-reed.

19 He turned about to the west side, and ε Chap. xl. 5.

circuit as large as one-half of the whole city of Jerusalem, in its most flourishing condition, and certainly far greater than that occupied either by Solomon's temple, with all its out-buildings and courts, or by the temple built after the return of the Jews from Babylon; and indeed greater than the mountain of the temple was capable of containing, according to the description given of it by all the Jewish writers. This proves, as Mr. Scott justly observes, that the vision cannot be explained of any temple that has hitherto been built, or indeed of any literal temple, but must be understood figuratively and mystically. Bishop Newcome indeed, following Capellus, says, "Read here, and verses 17-19, אַמּוֹת, cubits, for קַיִם, reeds, with the LXX., verses 17, 20." But the former word, signifying cubits, does not once occur in the Hebrew text, whereas the word rendered reeds is repeated four times. And as to the LXX., it is evident they "had Solomon's temple in view, and changed reeds for cubits, in order to adjust the dimensions of this temple to those of Solomon's; and that late writers have proposed the alteration in the text for the same reason. But if men allow themselves to substitute one word for another in the sacred text, because the alterations would render that consistent with their systems which otherwise would be incompatible with them, there is no know-measured five hundred reeds, with A. M. 3430.

the measuring-reed. B. C. 574.

20 He measured it by the four sides: ε it had a wall round about, ^h five hundred reeds long, and five hundred broad, to make a separation between the sanctuary and the profane place.

^h Chap. xlv. 2.

ing to what lengths they may proceed. Surely it is better to acknowledge our ignorance on such abstruse subjects than to support a favourite scheme of interpretation, by giving countenance to so dangerous a measure." We have said above, that the area here described is an exact square; and it is to be observed, that the heavenly Jerusalem, represented to St. John, Rev. xxi. 16, is likewise described as four-square, that figure being an emblem of solidity. And Ezekiel's vision, as well as St. John's, is designed, in its mystical sense, to represent the regularity and strength of Christ's church and kingdom.

Verse 20. It had a wall round about—To defend it from being invaded or profaned. Such a square wall as is here described, seems only capable of a mystical sense and interpretation. To make a separation between the sanctuary and the profane place—Between that compass of ground which was included in the precincts of the temple, and was considered as consecrated to the Lord, and where it was not permitted either the heathen, strangers, or impure persons, to present themselves; and that place, here termed profane, which all the world might enter indiscriminately, men, women, pure, impure, Gentiles, and others. We learn from Josephus, that such a place of separation existed at the temple in his time: see Antiq., lib. xv. c. 14, and Calmet

CHAPTER XLIII.

In this chapter and the next the temple-service is described, but under the type of the Old Testament service. Here, (1,) God takes possession of the temple in a cloud of glory, 1-6. (2,) He promises that his presence shall continue in it, provided the people return to and continue in his worship, according to the instituted and holy ordinances of it, and keep themselves from idolatry, 7-12. (3,) The altar of burnt-offerings is described, 13-17; with directions for the consecration of it, 18-27.

A. M. 3430. AFTERWARD he brought me to
B. C. 574. the gate, even the gate ^a that looketh toward the east:

^a Chap. x. 19; xlv. 1; xlv. 1.—^b Chap. xi. 23.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIII.

Verses 1, 2. Then he brought me to the gate—The eastern gate of the court of the priests, which was just before the temple. And behold, the glory of the God of Israel—The word behold is an expression of joy and admiration; as if the prophet had said, Behold, a wonderful and joyful sight! The glory of that God who calls himself the God

2 ^b And behold, the glory of the A. M. 3430.
God of Israel came from the way B. C. 574.
of the east: and ^c his voice was like a noise

^c Chap. i. 24; Rev. i. 15; xiv. 2; xix. 1, 6.

of Israel, which had departed from this place and people, and had absented itself from them for so long a time, is now returning to them, and fixing its residence among them. When the glory of the Lord forsook the temple, it is represented as departing from the eastern gate of it; afterward, as quite forsaking the city, and removing to a mountain on the east side of it; and now that glory is described as

A. M. 3430. of many waters: ^dand the earth
B. C. 574. shined with his glory.

3 And it was ^eaccording to the appearance of the vision which I saw, even according to the vision that I saw ¹when I came ^fto destroy the city: and the visions were like the visions that I saw ^gby the river Chebar; and I fell upon my face.

4 ^hAnd the glory of the LORD came into the house by the way of the gate whose prospect is toward the east.

5 ⁱSo the Spirit took me up, and brought me into the inner court; and behold, ^kthe glory of the LORD filled the house.

^d Ch. x. 4; Isa. vi. 3; Rev. xviii. 1.—^e Ch. i. 4, 28; viii. 4.
^f Or, when I came to prophesy that the city should be destroyed, Chap. ix. 1, 5.—^g So Jeremiah i. 10.—^h Chap. i. 3; iii. 23.
ⁱ Chap. x. 19; xlv. 2.—^j Ch. iii. 12, 14; viii. 3.—^k 1 Kings viii. 10, 11; Chap. xlv. 4.—^l Chap. xl. 3.—^m Ps. xcix. 1.

returning by the same way it departed: see chap. x. 18, and xi. 23. This was intended to signify that God would again accept of this place for a temple to be built on it, and dedicated to his worship, and would accept of the service that should be paid him there, and afford the place his peculiar protection. And his voice was like a noise of many waters—Great and terrible: compare chap. i. 24; Rev. i. 15. Either to signify the dreadfulness of God's judgments, or the efficacy of his commands, who calls things into existence by the power of his word. And the earth shined with his glory—The rays of his glory, like the sunbeams, enlightened the earth: see the margin. This glory of the Lord seems to have been intended as an emblem of the light of the gospel, which is the glory of Christ, and which spread from the eastern part of the world into the western; and which has been, and still is, powerful and mighty in operation, in saving mankind, and enlightening the earth with abundance of knowledge, holiness, and comfort.

Verses 3-5. And it—This glory of the God of Israel; was according to the vision, &c., when I came to destroy the city—That is, to prophesy that the city would be destroyed. The prophets are often said to do those things which they foretell shall be done. And I fell upon my face—In humble and reverent adoration of the divine majesty, or overwhelmed, as it were, and not able to bear the lustre of such glory. But the Spirit took him up, when the glory of the Lord was come into the house, that he might see how the house was filled with it. He had formerly seen, to his great grief, how the glory of the Lord, in this same appearance, departed from the temple, because it was profaned; and now he sees, to his great satisfaction, how it returns to it. As we do not find that ever the Shechinah did in such a manner take possession of the second temple, it seems evident that this was to have its accomplishment in that glory of the divine grace which shines so bright in the gospel church, and fills it.

6 And I heard him speaking unto me out of the house; and ¹the man stood by me.

7 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, ^mthe place of my throne, and ⁿthe place of the soles of my feet, ^owhere I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever, and my holy name, shall the house of Israel ^pno more defile, neither they, nor their kings, by their whoredom, nor by ^qthe carcasses of their kings in their high places.

8 ^rIn their setting of their threshold by my thresholds, and their posts by my posts, ²and the wall between me and them, they have even

ⁿ 1 Chron. xxviii. 2; Ps. xcix. 5.—^o Exod. xxix. 45; Ps. lxxviii. 16; cxxxii. 14; Joel iii. 17; John i. 14; 2 Cor. vi. 16.
^p Chap. xxxix. 7.—^q Lev. xxvi. 30; Jer. xvi. 18.—^r 2 Kings xvi. 14; xxi. 4, 5, 7; Chap. viii. 3; xiii. 39; xlv. 7.—^s Or, for there was but a wall between me and them.

Verse 6. I heard him speaking unto me, &c.—The prophet now receives instructions more immediately from the glory of the Lord, as Moses did when God had taken possession of the tabernacle, Lev. i. 1. When God's glory shines in the church, we must from thence expect to receive divine oracles. And the man stood by me—We could not bear to hear the voice of God, any more than to see the face of God, if Jesus Christ did not stand by us as a Mediator. Or, if this was a created angel, it is observable, that when God began to speak to the prophet, he stood by, and gave way, having no more to say. Nay, he stood by the prophet as a learner with him; for to the principalities and powers, to the angels themselves, who desire to look into these things, is made known by the church the manifold wisdom of God, Eph. iii. 10.

Verses 7-9. And he said unto me, Son of man, &c.—God here, in retaking possession of his house, in effect renews his covenant with his people Israel; and Ezekiel negotiates the matter, as Moses formerly did. This would be of great use to the captives at their return, both for direction and for encouragement; but it more especially concerns those that are blessed with the privileges of the gospel temple, and shows that they hold their blessings under the condition of their obedience. The place of my throne—The sense would be plainer if the beginning of the verse were rendered, This is the place of my throne, &c.—The cherubim are described as God's throne, and he is said to dwell, or sit, between the cherubim, and the ark was as his footstool. Observe, reader, his temple, the church, is the place where the throne of his grace is erected; and in the dispensations of grace he has a throne, and manifests himself as a king, to whom we must be subject. Where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever—He alludes to the promise formerly made with relation to the tabernacle and temple, (see Ps. lxxviii. 16, and cxxxii. 14,) which promise is to be understood, like all God's other promises made of old, as con-

A. M. 3430. defiled my holy name by their abominations that they have committed: wherefore I have consumed them in mine anger.

9 Now, let them put away their whoredom, and ^athe carcasses of their kings, far from me, ^band I will dwell in the midst of them for ever.

10 ¶ Thou son of man, ^cshow the house to the house of Israel, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities: and let them measure the ^dpattern.

11 And if they be ashamed of all that they

^a Verse 7.—^b Verse 7.—^c Chap xl. 4.

ditional, (see verse 9,) and intended to be eminently fulfilled in and by Christ, in whom all the promises of the Old Testament are to have their final accomplishment. Zechariah prophesied, chap. vi. 13, that the Messiah should build the temple of the Lord, and bear the glory; that is, as such prophecies are explained in the New Testament, he shall build the Christian Church, and in him shall all the fulness of the Godhead dwell bodily and really, not in types and figures. To the same sense we may explain the prophecy of Haggai, chap. ii. 7, The glory of the latter house shall be greater than that of the former; for no visible glory appeared in the second temple, till the Lord whom they expected came to his temple, Mal. iii. 1; that is till the Messiah, who was the brightness of his Father's glory, appeared there, and made it an illustrious figure of that true temple, or church of believers, where he would continue his presence for ever; see 2 Cor. vi. 16. And my holy name shall Israel no more defile by their whoredom—By idolatry, often described in Scripture under the metaphor of fornication. The captivity had that good effect upon the Jews, that they scarce ever after relapsed into idolatry. And the entire destruction of idolatry is often mentioned as a blessing reserved for the latter days, when the Jews shall be converted, and the fulness of the Gentiles come into the church. Nor by the carcasses of their kings in their high places—Idols are called carcasses, because they are without life and motion, and likewise upon the account of their being hateful and loathsome in the sight of God: see the margin. They are called carcasses of kings because they were set up, and the worship of them encouraged, by the idolatrous kings of Judah, who erected high places for that purpose near Jerusalem, in the very view of the temple, 2 Kings xxiii. 13. By this means the temple itself was profaned by those that came directly from the worship of idols to attend upon God's service in the temple. Nay, they even advanced to such high degrees of idolatry, as to set up their threshold by God's threshold, that is, to erect the altars and images of their idols in the temple itself, and the courts before it. And the wall—For there was but a wall between me and them: see the margin.

Verse 10. Show the house to the house of Israel,

A. M. 3430. have done, show them the form of the house, and the fashion thereof, and the goings out thereof, and the comings in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the laws thereof: and write it in their sight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them.

12 This is the law of the house; Upon ^ethe top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. Behold, this is the law of the house.

^e Or, sum, or, number.—^f Chap. xl. 2.

that they may be ashamed, &c.—The prophet is here directed to show the measure and pattern of the house to the Jews, with a view to render them ashamed of their idolatries and other iniquities, which had provoked God to deprive them of the honour and happiness of his residence among them, and the benefit of his ordinances. It seems also, that this same draught and description of the house and its courts, &c., was to be laid before them, as a model for them to imitate, as far as they should be able, when they should return to their own country, and rebuild their temple. See Preliminary Observations to chap. xl.-xlviii. But, as has been more than once intimated, "the words may have a further view, and the model of God's temple here set forth might be intended as a pattern of heavenly things, as Moses's was, Exod. xxv. 40, and a type of that pure church, built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, which we may hope God will in due time everywhere restore. And, in the mean season, it is the duty of all Christians, according to their ability, to inform themselves and others what is the pattern, form, and fashion of this true church of God, in order to reform all those deviations which have been made from it. Let them measure the pattern—In order to build their new temple by it, when they shall return from captivity, as far as their abilities will reach. For the same purpose the prophet is commanded in the following verse to write it in their sight.

Verse 12. This is the law of the house—This is the first comprehensive rule; or, this is the general law respecting this temple, and all that belongs to it. Whereas formerly only the chancel, or sanctuary, was most holy, now the whole mount of the house, the whole limit thereof round about, including all the courts and all the chambers, shall be so. This signified that, in gospel times, 1st, The church should have the privilege of the holy of holies, namely, that of a near access to God. All believers have now, under the gospel, liberty to enter into the holiest, Heb. x. 19, with this advantage, that whereas the Jewish high-priests entered by the virtue of the blood of bulls and goats; we enter by the virtue of the blood of Jesus, and at all times, and wherever we are, we have through him access to the Father. 2d,

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. 13 ¶ And these are the measures of the altar after the cubits: ¹ The cubit is a cubit and a hand-breadth; even the ⁴bottom shall be a cubit, and the breadth a cubit, and the border thereof by the ⁵edge thereof round about shall be a span: and this shall be the higher place of the altar.

14 And from the bottom upon the ground even to the lower settle shall be two cubits, and the breadth one cubit; and from the lesser settle even to the greater settle shall be four cubits, and the breadth one cubit.

15 So ⁶the altar shall be four cubits; and from ⁷the altar and upward shall be four horns.

16 And the altar shall be twelve cubits long, twelve broad, square in the four squares thereof.

17 And the settle shall be fourteen cubits long and fourteen broad in the four squares thereof; and the border about it shall be half a cubit; and the bottom thereof shall be a cubit about; and ²his stairs shall look toward the east.

¹ Chap. xl. 5; xli. 8.—⁴ Hebrew, bosom.—⁵ Hebrew, lip.
⁶ Heb. Harel, that is, the mountain of God.—⁷ Heb. Ariel, that is, the lion of God, Isa. xxix. 1.

That the whole church should be under an indispensable obligation to press toward the perfection of holiness, as he who hath called us is holy. All must now be most holy. Holiness becomes God's house for ever, and in gospel times more than ever. Behold, this is the law of the house! Let none expect the protection and blessings of it that will not submit to this law.

Verses 13-17. These are the measures of the altar—The Jews, after their return out of captivity, had an altar long before they had a temple, Ezra iii. 3; but the altar here spoken of is an altar in the temple, the mystical temple emblematical of the gospel church; and this altar is mystical too, for Christ is our altar. The bottom shall be a cubit, &c.—To render the dimensions here specified of the altar more intelligible to an English reader, it may be best to observe, that it was about six yards square at the top, and seven at the bottom. It was four yards and a half high; it had a lower bench, or shelf, here called a settle, a yard from the ground, on which some of the priests stood to minister, and another, two yards above that, on which others of them stood; and those were each of them half a yard broad, and had ledges on either side, that they might stand firm upon them. The sacrifices were killed at the table spoken of chap. xl. 39; what was to be burned on the altar was given up to those on the lower bench, and handed by them to those on the higher, and they laid it on the altar. Thus in the service of God we must be assistant to one another.

A. M. 3430. B. C. 574. 18 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, thus saith the Lord God; These are the ordinances of the altar in the day when they shall make it, to offer burnt-offerings thereon, and to ^asprinkle blood thereon.

19 And thou shalt give to ^bthe priests the Levites that be of the seed of Zadok, which approach unto me, to minister unto me, saith the Lord God, ^ca young bullock for a sin-offering.

20 And thou shalt take of the blood thereof, and put it on the four horns of it, and on the four corners of the settle, and upon the border round about: thus shalt thou cleanse and purge it.

21 Thou shalt take the bullock also of the sin-offering, and he ^dshall burn it in the appointed place of the house, ^ewithout the sanctuary.

22 And on the second day thou shalt offer a kid of the goats without blemish for a sin-offering; and they shall cleanse the altar, as they did cleanse it with the bullock.

² Exod. xx. 26.—^a Lev. i. 5.—^b Chap. xliv. 15.—^c Exod. xxix. 10, 12; Lev. viii. 14, 15; Chap. xlv. 18, 19.—^d Exod. xxix. 14.—^e Heb. xiii. 11.

Verses 18-27. These are the ordinances of the altar—Here we have directions concerning the dedication of the altar at first. Seven days were to be spent in the dedication of it, and every day sacrifices were to be offered upon it, particularly a goat for a sin-offering, (verse 25,) besides a young bullock for a sin-offering on the first day, verse 19; which teaches us, in all our religious services, to have an eye to Christ, the great sin-offering. Neither our persons nor our performances can be acceptable to God, unless sin be taken away; and that cannot be taken away but by the blood of Christ, which both sanctifies the altar (for Christ entered by his own blood) and the gift upon the altar. There was also a bullock and a ram to be offered for a burnt-offering, (verse 24,) which was intended purely for the glory of God, to teach us to have an eye to that in all our services. This dedication of the altar is called the cleansing and purging of it, verses 20, 26. Christ, our altar, though he had no pollution to be cleansed from, yet sanctified himself, John xvii. 19. And when we consecrate the altars of our hearts to God, to have holy love always burning upon them, we must see that they be purified and cleansed from the love of the world and the lust of the flesh.

It is observable, that there are several differences between the rites of dedication here, and those which were appointed Exod. xxix., to intimate that the ceremonial institutions were mutable things, and the changes made in them were earnest of their termination in Christ. Only here, according to the gene-

A. M. 3430. 23 When thou hast made an end
B. C. 574. of cleansing it, thou shalt offer a young bullock without blemish, and a ram out of the flock without blemish.

24 And thou shalt offer them before the LORD, and the priest shall cast salt upon them, and they shall offer them up for a burnt-offering unto the LORD.

25 ^s Seven days shalt thou prepare every day
a goat for a sin-offering: they shall also pre-

^f Lev. ii. 13.—^s Exod. xxix. 35, 36; Lev. viii. 33.—^g Heb.
fill their hands, Exod. xxix. 24.

ral law that all the sacrifices must be seasoned with salt, (Lev. ii. 14,) particular orders are given (verse 24) that the priests shall cast salt upon the sacrifices.
Grace is the salt with which all our religious performances must be seasoned, Col. iv. 6. An everlasting covenant is called a covenant of salt, because it is incorruptible. The glory reserved for us is incorruptible and undefiled; and the grace wrought in us, influencing the hidden man of the heart, is in that which is not corruptible, and therefore, in the sight of God, of great price. We may observe further here, that constant use was to be made of the pare a young bullock, and a ram out A. M. 3430.

of the flock, without blemish. B. C. 574.

26 Seven days shall they purge the altar and purify it; and they shall ^s consecrate themselves.

27 ^h And when these days are expired, it shall be, that upon the eighth day, and so forward,
the priests shall make your burnt-offerings upon the altar, and your ^g peace-offerings: and I will ⁱ accept you, saith the Lord God.

^h Lev. ix. 1.—^g Or, thank-offerings.—ⁱ Job xlii. 8; Chap. xx.
40, 41; Rom. xii. 1; 1 Pet. ii. 5.

altar when dedicated; the priests being directed to make their burnt-offerings and peace-offerings upon it, (verse 27,) for therefore it was sanctified, that it might sanctify the gift that was offered upon it. And for their encouragement in this whole service, God promises, on condition of their observing these directions, that he would graciously accept them: for those that give themselves to God shall be accepted
of him, their persons first, and then their performances, through the Mediator; and if our persons be accepted, and our services be pleasing to him, it is enough, we need no more.

CHAPTER XLIV.

In this chapter we have, (1.) The appropriating of the east gate of the temple to the prince, 1-3. (2.) A reproof to Israel for their former profanations of the sanctuary, and a caution, 4-9. (3.) The degrading of one part of the Levites, and establishing of the family of Zadok in the priesthood, 10-16. (4.) Divers laws and ordinances concerning the priests, 17-31.

A. M. 3430. THEN he brought me back the way
B. C. 574. of the gate of the outward sanctuary ^a which looketh toward the east; and it was shut.

2 Then said the LORD unto me; This gate
shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no

^a Chap. xliii. 1.—^b Chap. xliii. 4.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLIV.

Verses 1, 2. Then he brought me back, &c.—
From the altar to the gate belonging to the court of the priests, and leading to the outward court of the temple. All the courts were reckoned holy ground, and called sometimes by the name of the temple.
And it was shut—After that the glory of the Lord
had entered that way. Then saith the Lord, This gate shall be shut—Shall be generally kept shut; no man shall enter in by it—None of the common people: see chap. xvi. 1. Because the Lord hath entered in by it—Namely, that glory which was the visible sign of God's presence. This order was given, both to perpetuate the remembrance of the solemn entrance of the glory of the Lord

man shall enter in by it; ^b because A. M. 3430.
the LORD the God of Israel hath en- B. C. 574.
tered in by it, therefore it shall be shut.

3 It is for the prince; the prince, he shall sit in it to ^c eat bread before the LORD;
^d he shall enter by the way of the porch of

^c Gen. xxxi. 54; xliii. 31; 1 Cor. x. 18.—^d Chap. xvi. 2, 8.

into the house, and also to possess the minds of the people with a deep reverence for the Divine Majesty, and with very awful thoughts of his transcendent glory; which was also designed in God's charge to Moses at the bush, Put off thy shoe from off thy foot.

Verse 3. It is for the prince—The words, It is,
are not in the Hebrew, which is only, For the prince;
and therefore the meaning seems to be, that this gate should, in general, be shut for, or to the prince, as well as to private persons; even he should not have the liberty of entering in at it, except at certain seasons. Dr. Waterland translates the clause thus: As to the prince, since he is prince, he shall sit, &c.
The kings of Judah had a distinguished place in the

A. M. 3430. that gate, and shall go out by the
B. C. 574. way of the same.

4 ¶ Then brought he me the way of the north gate before the house: and I looked, and behold, the glory of the LORD filled the house of the LORD: and I fell upon my face.

5 And the LORD said unto me, Son of man, mark well, and behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears all that I say unto thee concerning all the ordinances of the house of the LORD, and all the laws thereof; and mark well the entering in of the house, with every going forth of the sanctuary.

6 And thou shalt say to the rebellious, even to the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord God; O ye house of Israel, let it suffice you of all your abominations;

7 In that ye have brought into my sanctuary strangers,¹ uncircumcised in heart, and uncircumcised in flesh, to be in my sanctuary, to pollute it, even my house, when ye

¹ Chapter iii. 23; xliii. 5.—² Chap. i. 28.—³ Chap. xl. 4.
⁴ Heb. set thy heart.—⁵ Chap. ii. 5.—⁶ Chap. xlv. 9; 1 Pet. iv. 3.—⁷ Chapter xliii. 8; Verse 9; Acts xxi. 28.—⁸ Heb. children of a stranger.—⁹ Levit. xxii. 25.—¹⁰ Levit. xxvi. 41; Deut. x. 16; Acts vii. 51.

temple; a kind of tribunal placed opposite the eastern gate: see chap. xvi. 12; 2 Chron. vi. 12, 13. By the prince here is probably meant the chief governor of the Jews after the captivity, such as were Zerubbabel and Nehemiah, for Sheshbazzar, or Zerubbabel, is called the prince of Judah, Ezra i. 8. The prince, he shall sit in it to eat bread before the Lord—To eat part of the peace-offerings which were provided at his charge: see chap. xvi. 2. Bread stands for all sorts of entertainments, and particularly for a religious feast made of the remainder of a sacrifice: see the margin.

Verses 4–8. Then he brought me by the way of the north gate of the house—The east gate being shut. And, behold, the glory of the Lord filled the house of the Lord—As appeared by the light which shone through the windows, for there was no door into the sanctuary on that side. And the Lord said, Son of man, mark well, &c.—See notes on chap. xl. 4; and xliii. 2. Mark well the entering, &c., with every going forth of the sanctuary—The word laws is to be understood in this last sentence, the sense being, that the prophet should admonish the people of the laws relating to the admitting certain persons into the temple, or the courts of it, and to suffer none that were unqualified to attend upon God's service there. This appears to be the sense from the following verses. And thou shalt say, Let it suffice you of all your abominations—Let the time past be sufficient for you to have provoked me with your abominations. In that ye have brought into my sanctuary strangers, &c.—In that ye have offer my bread, the fat and the blood, and they have broken my covenant because of all your abominations.

8 And ye have not kept the charge of my holy things: but ye have set keepers of my charge in my sanctuary for yourselves.

9 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God; No stranger, uncircumcised in heart, nor uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into my sanctuary, of any stranger that is among the children of Israel.

10 And the Levites that are gone away far from me, when Israel went astray, which went astray away from me after their idols; they shall even bear their iniquity.

11 Yet they shall be ministers in my sanctuary, having charge at the gates of the house, and ministering to the house: they shall slay the burnt-offering and the sacrifice for the people, and they shall stand before them to minister unto them.

¹ Lev. xxi. 6, 8, 17, 21.—² Lev. iii. 16; xvii. 11.—³ Lev. xxii. 2.—⁴ Or, ward, or, ordinance; and so verses 14, 16; Chap. xl. 45.—⁵ Verse 7.—⁶ 2 Kings xxiii. 8; 2 Chronicles xxix. 4, 5; Chap. xlviii. 11.—⁷ 1 Chron. xxvi. 1.—⁸ 2 Chron. xxix. 34.—⁹ Num. xvi. 9.

set up idols within the precincts of my temple, and have appointed idolatrous priests to officiate there. When ye offer my bread, the fat, and the blood—At the very time when ye were offering my sacrifices upon the altar. Or the words may imply, that they suffered heathen to offer at God's altar, expressly contrary to the law, Lev. xxii. 27. By bread may be understood the meat-offerings made of flour, which accompanied the other sacrifices, although every thing offered upon the altar is properly called the bread of God. The fat and blood of every sacrifice were peculiarly appropriated to God. And they have broken my covenant—Idolatry was a direct breach of that covenant into which God had entered with the Jews: upon which account it is so often represented under the metaphor of adultery. And ye have not kept the charge of my holy things—You have not observed the laws I gave you for taking care of the things relating to my house and worship, but have appointed such persons to officiate there as best suited with your own inclinations.

Verses 9–14. No stranger shall enter into my sanctuary—To offer any sacrifice or oblation there, (see verse 7,) nor be suffered to go beyond the precincts appointed for proselytes. The Levites that are gone far from me, &c.—Many of the Levites departed from God's service, and fell into idolatry; first in the general apostacy of the ten tribes, and afterward under Ahaz, and other wicked kings of Judah: see 2 Kings xxiii. 9. These, God here says, should bear the punishment due to their iniquity, and be degraded from attending upon the higher

A. M. 3430. 12 Because they ministered unto
B. C. 574. them before their idols, and ²caused ⁴the house of Israel to fall into iniquity; therefore have I ⁷lifted up my hand against them, saith the Lord God, and they shall bear their iniquity.

13 ²And they shall not come near unto me, to do the office of a priest unto me, nor to come near to any of my holy things, in the most holy place: but they shall ^abear their shame, and their abominations which they have committed.

14 But I will make them ^bkeepers of the charge of the house, for all the service thereof, and for all that shall be done therein.

15 ¶ ^oBut the priests the Levites, ^dthe sons of Zadok, that kept the charge of my sanctuary ^owhen the children of Israel went astray from me, they shall come near to me to minister unto me, and they ^fshall stand before me to offer unto me ^gthe fat and the blood, saith the Lord God:

² Isa. ix. 16; Mal. ii. 8.—⁴ Heb. were for a stumbling-block of iniquity unto, &c.; Chapter xiv. 3, 4.—⁷ Psalm cvii. 26. ² 2 Kings xxiii. 9; Numbers xviii. 3.—^o Chapter xxii. 30; xxxvi. 7.—^b Num. xviii. 4; 1 Chron. xxiii. 28, 32.—^c Chap. xl. 46; xliii. 19.—^d 1 Sam. ii. 35.—^e Verse 10.

offices belonging to the priesthood, and thrust down to lower services: see verse 13. Many of the priests and Levites, who had been employed in the service of the first temple, lived to see the second, as appears from Ezra iii. 12. But the descendants of former idolatrous priests and Levites may be here meant; or, the ordinances here prescribed were intended to be standing rules, which were to be always observed whenever such a case as that here specified should happen. Yet they shall be ministers, &c., having charge at the gates—Performing the office of porters, or other inferior offices belonging to the Levites. They shall slay the burnt-offering, &c.—Shall kill and flay the beasts appointed for the sacrifices. And they shall stand before them, &c.—They shall be servants to the people, in performing the most servile offices belonging to the temple. Because they ministered unto them before their idols, &c.—They led the people into idolatry, by giving them a bad example. Therefore have I lifted up my hand against them—I have solemnly sworn that I will punish them for this their sin. They shall not come near me, &c.—They shall not offer any sacrifice at my altar, or come into the temple to perform any part of the priestly office there. So Josiah discharged the priests that had been guilty of idolatry from attending upon the service of the altar, 2 Kings xxiii. 9.

Verses 15, 16. The priests the Levites—The Levites who are priests; the sons of Zadok—Who continued faithful; they shall stand before me to 16 They shall enter into my sanc- A. M. 3430.

tuary, and they shall come near to B. C. 574.

^hmy table, to minister unto me, and they shall keep my charge.

17 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that when they enter in at the gates of the inner court, ⁱthey shall be clothed with linen garments; and no wool shall come upon them, while they minister in the gates of the inner court, and within.

18 ^kThey shall have linen bonnets upon their heads, and shall have linen breeches upon their loins; they shall not gird themselves ^lwith ⁶any thing that causeth sweat.

19 And when they go forth into the outer court, even into the outer court to the people, ¹they shall put off their garments wherein they ministered, and lay them in the holy chambers, and they shall put on other garments; and they shall ^mnot sanctify the people with their garments.

20 ⁿNeither shall they shave their heads, nor

^f Deut. x. 8.—^g Verse 7.—^h Chapter xli. 22.—ⁱ Exodus xxviii. 39, 40, 43; xxxix. 27, 28.—^k Exodus xxviii. 40, 42; xxxix. 28.—^l Or, in sweating places.—⁶ Heb. in, or, with sweat. ¹ Chap. xlii. 14.—^m Chap. xli. 20; Exod. xxix. 37; xxx. 29; Lev. vi. 27; Matt. xxiii. 17, 19.—ⁿ Lev. xxi. 5.

offer the fat, &c.—They shall serve at the altar of burnt-offering, and offer sacrifices thereon. They shall enter into my sanctuary—Into the holy place; to minister unto me—To burn incense there upon the golden altar, to sprinkle the blood of the victims before the veil, to trim the lamps, and to change the loaves on the sacred table every sabbath. They shall keep my charge—They shall have this honour in reward of their fidelity. Observe, reader, God will put marks of honour upon those who are faithful to him in trying times, and will employ those in his service who have kept close to it when others drew back.

Verses 17–20. When they shall enter in at the gates of the inner court—The court just before the temple, where the altar of the burnt-offering stood; they shall be clothed with linen garments—The ephod, breeches, mitre, and girdle, (the habit of the ordinary priests,) were all of fine linen, contrived for glory and beauty, (Exod. xxviii. 40,) fine linen being the habit of persons of the greatest quality; while they minister in the gates of the inner court—That is, in the court of the priests; and within—In the sanctuary itself. They shall not gird themselves with any thing that causeth sweat—Not with a woollen girdle, which may make them sweat during their laborious service about the altar, and make their garments smell offensively. When they go forth into the outer court, they shall put off their garments—See note on chap. xlii. 14. They shall not sanctify the people with their garments—Ac-

A. M. 3430. suffer their locks to grow long; they
B. C. 574. shall only poll their heads.

21 ° Neither shall any priest drink wine, when they enter into the inner court.

22 Neither shall they take for their wives a ° widow, nor her that is ° put away: but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow ° that had a priest before.

23 And ° they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and profane, and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean.

24 And ° in controversy they shall stand in judgment; and they shall judge it according cording to the law, common things, touching holy things, became consecrated, and no more fit for common use. Neither shall they shave their heads—This prescription is implied in the words of the law, Lev. xxi. 5; especially according to the translation of the LXX., who render the sentence, Thou shalt not shave thyself with baldness [to make thyself bald] upon the head for the dead. They indeed understand it as an expression of mourning for the dead, which agrees with the sense of the parallel texts, Lev. xix. 27, 28; Deut. xiv. 1. But the words in the original contain a general prohibition, and consequently include other seasons, as well as times of mourning. St. Jerome upon this place supposes, with great probability, that the Jewish priests were forbidden to shave their heads, that they might distinguish themselves from the heathen priests, particularly the Egyptian priests of Isis and Serapis, who had their heads shaved and uncovered. Learned men have observed, that many other Jewish laws were made in opposition to the rites observed in the heathen worship. Nor suffer their locks to grow long—Letting their hair grow long and neglected was a sign of mourning, as well as shaving it close to the head, and therefore was forbidden to be practised by the priests of God.

° Leviticus x. 9.—° Leviticus xxi. 7, 13, 14.—° Hebrew, thrust forth.—° Heb. from a priest.—° Leviticus x. 10, 11; Chap. xxii. 26; Mal. ii. 7.

Verses 21–23. Neither shall any priest drink wine when they enter into the inner court—That is, during the time of their ministration: see the note on Lev. x. 9, 10, from whence this law is taken, and where the reason of it is given. Neither shall they take for their wives a widow—This law we find Lev. xxi. 13, 14; but it there concerns only the high-priest, here it is applied to all the priests in general. And they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and profane, &c.—Between good and evil, between what is lawful and what is unlawful; that they may neither scruple what is lawful, nor venture upon what is unlawful; that they may not pollute what is holy, nor pollute themselves with what is profane. Ministers should take pains to cause peo-

to my judgments: and they shall keep my laws and my statutes in all mine assemblies; ° and they shall hallow my sabbaths.

25 And they shall come at no ° dead person to defile themselves: but for father, or for mother, or for son, or for daughter, for brother, or for sister that hath had no husband, they may defile themselves.

26 And ° after he is cleansed, they shall reckon unto him seven days.

27 And in the day that he goeth into the sanctuary, ° unto the inner court, to minister in the sanctuary, ° he shall offer his sin-offering, saith the Lord God.

° Deut. xvii. 8; 2 Chronicles xix. 8, 10.—° Chap. xxii. 26. ° Levit. xxi. 1.—° Numbers vi. 10; xix. 11.—° Verse 17. ° Levit. iv. 3.

ple to discern between the clean and the unclean, that they may not confound the distinctions between right and wrong, nor mistake concerning them, so as to put darkness for light, or light for darkness; but may have a well-informed judgment, especially in all matters of duty.

Verse 24. And in controversy they shall stand in judgment—The priests were to determine all controversies relating to the law, as well the judicial as the ceremonial part of it, which were brought before them, Deut. xvii. 8, 9; and the people were to seek the law at their mouths, (Mal. ii. 7,) that is, to inquire of them what was the purport and meaning of it, and to abide by their determination. And they shall judge according to my judgments—Which I have declared, and not according to their own fancies, inclinations, or secular interests. Thus ministers must decide controversies among the people of God according to his word; and must take care that they give no countenance to any false or perfidious, fraudulent or dishonest practices, but must set their faces against them. And they shall keep my laws and my statutes in all mine assemblies, &c.—As well upon the solemn festivals, and the assemblies proper to them, as at other times, and on ordinary occasions. And they shall hallow my sabbaths—Whereas the priests before the captivity profaned them: see chap. xxii. 26.

Verses 25, 26. They shall come at no dead person to defile themselves—Whosoever touched a dead body became legally unclean, (Num. xix. 11,) and thereby was disqualified for attending upon God's worship in the temple, Lev. xxii. 3. Upon which account the priests were forbidden to contract such defilement, unless for their nearest relations, which prohibition is here renewed: see the margin. After he is cleansed they shall reckon unto him seven days—His uncleanness continued seven days, according to the forecited law, Num. xix. 11; and the priests were to reckon to him seven days more, before he could be admitted into the sanctuary.

A. M. 3430. 28 And it shall be unto them for
B. C. 574. an inheritance; I ² am their inheritance: and ye shall give them no possession in Israel: I am their possession.

29 ² They shall eat the meat-offering, and the sin-offering, and the trespass-offering; and ¹ every ⁹ dedicated thing in Israel shall be theirs.

30 And the ¹⁰ first ^o of all the first-fruits of all

² Num. xviii. 20; Deut. x. 9; xviii. 1, 2; Josh. xiii. 14, 33. ¹ Lev. vi. 18, 29; vii. 6.—^b Lev. xxvii. 21, 28, compared with Num. xviii. 14.—⁹ Or, devoted.

Verses 28-30. It shall be unto them for an inheritance, &c.—Their ministry in my sanctuary, and the perquisites thereto belonging, shall be to them instead of lands and inheritances, of which they shall not have any share, as the other tribes have, (see the margin,) excepting the portion allotted to them in the beginning of the following chapter. They shall eat the meat-offering, &c.—They shall have their share of them, after the part dedicated to God has been consumed upon the altar. And every dedicated thing shall be theirs—Whatsoever men dedicate to God, the use of it shall accrue to the priests; if it be a living creature, it shall be killed, and the priests shall have the benefit of it; if a piece of land, it shall belong to the priests: see the margin. And the first of all the first-fruits, &c.—The word בכורים, translated first-fruits, signifies the first ripe, or best of the fruits, while they were growing in the field: see the margin. The latter word, תרומה, rendered oblation, denotes an offering out of the product of the ground after it was made fit for use; as out of the corn, after things, and every oblation of all, of A. M. 3430.

every sort of your oblations, shall be B. C. 574.
the priest's: ^d ye shall also give unto the priest the first of your dough, ^e that he may cause the blessing to rest in thy house.

31 The priest shall not eat of any thing that is ^f dead of itself, or torn, whether it be fowl or beast.

¹⁰ Or, chief.—^c Exod. xlii. 2; xxii. 29, 30; xxiii. 19; Num. iii. 13; xviii. 12, 13.—^d Num. xv. 20; Neh. x. 37.—^e Prov. iii. 9, 10; Mal. iii. 10.—^f Exod. xxii. 31; Lev. xxii. 8.

it was threshed and laid in heaps in the floor or granary; and so of oil and wine, after they were pressed and fitted to be used. Ye shall also give unto the priests the first of your dough—The first dough that you bake of the new corn every year, in the same proportion as in other first-fruits. That he may cause a blessing to rest on thy house—That the priest, whose office it is to bless the people in God's name, may pray for and bless thee and thy family. Observe, reader, it is all in all to the comfort of any house to have the blessing of God upon it, and that blessing to rest in it; to dwell where we dwell, and to extend to those that shall come after us. And the way to have the blessing of God upon our estates is, to honour God with them, and to give him and his ministers, him and his poor, their share out of them. God blesses, he surely blesses, the habitation of those who are thus just, or righteous, Prov. iii. 33; and ministers, by instructing and praying for the families that are kind to them, should do their part toward causing God's blessing to rest there.

CHAPTER XLV.

This chapter contains, (1.) The division of the holy land, 1-8. (2.) The ordinances that were given both to the prince and to the people, 9-12. (3.) The oblations to be offered, and the prince's part therein, 13-17. Particularly in the beginning of the year, 18-20. And in the passover and feast of tabernacles, 21-25.

A. M. 3430. MOREOVER, ¹ when ye shall ^a divide by lot the land for inheritance, ye shall ^b offer an oblation unto the LORD, ² a holy portion of the land: the length shall be the length of five and twenty thousand A. M. 3430.

sand reeds, and the breadth shall be B. C. 574.
ten thousand. This shall be holy in all the borders thereof round about.

¹ Heb. when ye cause the land to fall.—^a Chap. xlvii. 22.

^b Chap. xlviii. 8.—² Heb. holiness.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLV.

Verse 1. When ye shall divide by lot the land for inheritance—The land was first divided by lot under Joshua, a particular share of which was to be God's portion, as an acknowledgment of his sovereign dominion: see Lev. xxv. 23. It is therefore here called תרומה, an oblation. The word properly signifies the offering made to God out of the first-fruits and other increase of the ground, (see chap. xlv. 30; Num. xviii. 24,) because this was a sort of first-fruits of the land or soil itself, chap. xlviii. 14. The length shall be five and twenty thousand reeds, and the breadth ten thousand—The Hebrew does not express either reeds or cubits: our translation supplies the word reeds, but Houbigant, Waterland, Newcome, and many other interpreters, read cubits, which sense they think is plainly determined by verse 3, where it is said, Of this measure (namely, the cubit measure mentioned in the preceding clause, verse 2) shall thou measure the length of five and

A. M. 3430. 2 Of this there shall be for the
B. C. 574. sanctuary ^c five hundred in length, with five hundred in breadth, square round about; and fifty cubits round about for the ³ suburbs thereof.

3 And of this measure shalt thou measure the length of five and twenty thousand, and the breadth of ten thousand: ^d and in it shall be the sanctuary and the most holy place.

4 ^e The holy portion of this land shall be for the priests the ministers of the sanctuary, which shall come near to minister unto the LORD: and it shall be a place for their houses, and a holy place for the sanctuary.

5 ^f And the five and twenty thousand of

^c Chapter xlii. 20.—³ Or, void places.—^d Chapter xlviii. 10.
^e Verse 1; Chap. xlviii. 10.

A. M. 3430. length, and the ten thousand of B. C. 574. breadth, shall also the Levites, the ministers of the house, have for themselves,
for a possession for ^g twenty chambers.

6 ¶ ^h And ye shall appoint the possession of the city five thousand broad, and five and twenty thousand long, over against the oblation
of the holy portion: it shall be for the whole
house of Israel.

7 ¶ ⁱ And a portion shall be for the prince on the one side and on the other side of the oblation of the holy portion, and of the possession of the city, before the oblation of the holy portion,
and before the possession of the city, from the west side westward, and from the east side east-

^f Chapter xlviii. 13.—^g Chapter xl. 17.—^h Chap. xlviii. 15.
ⁱ Chap. xlviii. 21.

twenty thousand, &c. According to this measure, the portion here set apart will be almost seven miles square; whereas if we measure by reeds it will arise to six times as much, and can only be understood in a mystical sense. Mr. Scott, however, with some others, is of opinion, "that our translators did right in adding the word reeds to the numbers mentioned in this admeasurement; referring to the reed that was in the hand of Ezekiel's divine conductor, because the length and breadth of the sanctuary are stated the same as before: (see chap. xlii. 16-19:) so that," they think, "unless the text be there totally changed, without any authority, this passage as well as that must be understood of reeds." They acknowledge, indeed, "that the land of Canaan could by no means admit of so large a proportion being allotted to the sanctuary, with the priests and Levites," &c.; but they think "this was intended to intimate the immensely large extent of the Christian Church above that of Israel; especially in those glorious times, which are doubtless emblematically predicted."

Verses 2-5. Of this there shall be for the sanctuary five hundred in length, &c.—If we understand these dimensions of cubits, it exactly agrees with the opinion of the Jews, that the temple stood in an area of five hundred cubits square. And fifty cubits for the suburbs—This likewise bears a suitable proportion to the contents of a square of five hundred cubits. And in it shall be the sanctuary and the most holy place—Both the outward sanctuary and the inward oracle, or holy of holies, together with the courts adjoining, shall be placed in the centre or middle of it: see chap. xlviii. 10. And it shall be a place for their houses—The priests were divided into twenty-four courses, (1 Chron. xxiv.,) who performed the public worship by turns: so the houses were for them to live in who were not in their course of waiting. And the five and twenty thousand of length, &c.—The French translation renders the sense plainer, thus: There shall be other five and twenty thousand, &c.: see chap. xlviii. 13. This appears to be the true sense of the place, because otherwise there will be wanting ten thousand in breadth to make an exact square of twenty-five thousand: see the following verse. The Levites, being very numerous, (they were reckoned at thirty-eight thousand in David's time, 1 Chron. xxiii. 3,) had as large a piece of ground allotted to them as belonged to the temple and the whole priestly order. For twenty chambers—Most commentators understand this of several rows of chambers, or ranges of building. The LXX. read, πολεις του κατοικειν, cities to inhabit: such cities as were allotted to them by Moses, Num. xxxv. 2.

Verse 6. And ye shall appoint the possession of the city, five thousand broad, &c., over against (or by the side of, see chap. xlviii. 14) the oblation of the holy portion—This must run parallel in length with the holy portion, though but half its breadth, by which means these three portions made an exact square. It shall be for the whole house of Israel—The capital city, to which all the tribes shall resort upon the solemn festivals, and shall have twelve gates, according to the number of the tribes of Israel, chap. xlviii. 31. This portion appointed for the city, considered separate from the other portions, was a rectangle, containing an area of about seventeen miles in circuit; which, according to Josephus, was more than four times the circuit of Jerusalem: see Bell. Jud., v. iv. 3, where that city is stated to be thirty-three stadia in circumference.

Verses 7, 8. And a portion shall be for the prince on the one side, &c.—One-half of the prince's portion was to lie on the west side of the three portions laid out for the priests and sanctuary, the Levites and city; and the other half to be on the east side of it, and to run parallel to them in breadth from north to south. And the length shall be over against one of the portions—Or, as the words may be more intelligibly rendered, And the length shall be answerable to every one of these portions, both on the west

A. M. 3430. ward: and the length shall be over
B. C. 574. against one of the portions, from the west border unto the east border.

8 In the land shall be his possession in Israel: and ^k my princes shall no more oppress my people; and the rest of the land shall they give to the house of Israel according to their tribes.

9 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God; ¹ Let it suffice you, O princes of Israel: ^m remove violence and spoil, and execute judgment and justice, take away your ⁴ exactions from my people, saith the Lord God.

10 Ye shall have just ^a balances, and a just ephah, and a just bath.

11 The ephah and the bath shall be of one measure, that the bath may contain the tenth part of a homer, and the ephah the tenth part of a homer: the measure thereof shall be after the homer.

12 And the ^o shekel shall be twenty gerahs: twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, fifteen shekels, shall be your maneh.

^k Chapter xlv. 18; Jer. xxii. 17; Chap. xix. 6, 7; xxi. 27; xxii. 27.—¹ Chap. xlv. 6.—^m Jer. xxii. 3.—^a Heb. expulsions.—^a Levit. xix. 35; Prov. xi. 1.

border and on the east; that is, it shall run parallel with them, both on the east and west side. In the land shall be his possession in Israel—Or, this shall be his possession of land in Israel. And my princes shall no more oppress my people—As they formerly did: for which they are severely reprov'd: see the margin.

Verses 9-12. Let it suffice, O ye princes of Israel—This is a reproof of the oppressions of the former kings and their chief officers. The title of princes of Israel is to be understood of such princes as the Jews afterward had of the Asmonæan race; for there were no more princes to reign of the tribe of Judah till Christ came. Ye shall have just balances—Ye shall take care that there be no deceit in private trade: ye shall provide just measures, both for buying and selling, both dry things and liquid: for the ephah was the measure of dry things, as the bath was of liquid. The homer was about ten bushels, which amounts to about eighty gallons in liquid things. And the shekel shall be twenty gerahs.—This is made the standard of the shekel, Exod. xxx. 13, which confutes the common opinion, that the weights of the sanctuary were double to those of common use. The shekel is usually valued at 2s. 6d. of our money; but some suppose it to be in value 2s. 4½d. of our money, and a little over. Twenty shekels, five and twenty, fifteen shall be your maneh—Maneh is the same with the Greek μνα, and the Latin mina, being both derived from it. A maneh, or mina, consists of sixty shekels, that is, thirty

13 This is the oblation that ye shall offer; the sixth part of an ephah of a homer of wheat, and ye shall give the sixth part of an ephah of a homer of barley;

14 Concerning the ordinance of oil, the bath of oil, ye shall offer the tenth part of a bath out of the cor, which is a homer of ten baths: for ten baths are a homer:

15 And one ⁵ lamb out of the flock, out of two hundred, out of the fat pastures of Israel, for a meat-offering, and for a burnt-offering, and for ⁶ peace-offerings, ^p to make reconciliation for them, saith the Lord God.

16 All the people of the land ⁷ shall give this oblation ⁸ for the prince in Israel.

17 And it shall be the prince's part to give burnt-offerings, and meat-offerings, and drink-offerings, in the feasts, and in the new-moons, and in the sabbaths, in all solemnities of the house of Israel: he shall prepare the sin-offering, and the meat-offering, and the burnt-offering, and the ⁹ peace-offerings, to make reconciliation for the house of Israel.

^o Exod. xxx. 13; Lev. xxvii. 25; Num. iii. 47.—⁸ Or, kid.
⁶ Or, thank-offerings.—^p Levit. i. 4.—⁷ Hebrew, shall be for.
⁸ Or, with.—⁹ Or, thank-offerings.

ounces of silver; which, reckoning every shekel at 2s. 6d. value, amounts to 7l. 10s. The dividing the maneh into twenty, twenty-five, and fifteen shekels, supposes there were coins of these several values, which, taken all together, were to be of the same weight with the mina.

Verses 13-16. This is the oblation, &c.—The Hebrew word here translated oblation, distinguished from the first-fruits, (see note on verse 1,) signifies the portion belonging to the Levites out of the fruits of the earth, when they were gathered in: see chap. xlv. 30. For which reason St. Jerome, upon the place, supposes the following words to express the proportion the people ought to pay the Levites out of the increase of their ground; which by their rabbins was determined to amount to at least a sixtieth part: after which separation a tenth part was to be paid out of the remainder. The portions allotted to the priests and Levites were not intended only for their own maintenance; but likewise to make a constant provision for those sacrifices, both ordinary and extraordinary, which were appointed by the law: see Mal. iii. 10. And one lamb out of the flock, out of two hundred—This offering is enjoined, besides the setting apart the firstborn for the use of the priests and Levites, for making provision for the daily burnt-offering, Num. xxviii. 3, and for burnt-offerings and peace-offerings, or sacrifices of thanksgiving, that were to be made upon proper occasions. Out of the fat pastures of Israel—This implies that these lambs were to be the best and fattest of their

A. M. 3430. 18 Thus saith the Lord GOD; In
B. C. 574. the first month, in the first day of the month, thou shalt take a young bullock
without blemish, and ^a cleanse the sanctuary:

19 ^r And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin-offering, and put it upon the posts of the house, and upon the four corners of the settle of the altar, and upon the posts of the gate of the inner court.

20 And so thou shalt do the seventh day of the month ^a for every one that erreth, and for him that is simple: so shall ye reconcile the house.

21 ^t In the first month, in the fourteenth day of the month, ye shall have the passover, a feast of seven days; unleavened bread shall be eaten.

^a Leviticus xvi. 16.—^r Chap. xliii. 20.—^s Leviticus iv. 27.
^t Exod. xii. 18; Lev. xxiii. 5, 6; Num. ix. 2, 3; xxviii. 16, 17;
Deut. xvi. 1.

A. M. 3430. 22 And upon that day shall the
B. C. 574. prince prepare for himself and for all the people of the land ^a a bullock for a sin-offering.

23 And ^x seven days of the feast he shall prepare a burnt-offering to the LORD, seven bullocks and seven lambs without blemish daily
the seven days; ^y and a kid of the goats daily for a sin-offering.

24 ^z And he shall prepare a meat-offering of an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and a hin of oil for an ephah.

25 In the seventh month, in the fifteenth day of the month, shall he do the like in the ^a feast of the seven days, according to the sin-offering,
according to the burnt-offering, and according to the meat-offering, and according to the oil.

^a Lev. iv. 14.—^x Lev. xxiii. 8.—^y Num. xxviii. 15, 22, 30;
xxix. 5, 11, 16, 19.—^z Chapter xlv. 5, 7.—^a Lev. xxiii. 33;
Num. xxix. 12; Deut. xvi. 13.

kind, as all other tithes and things dedicated to God
were to be. To make reconciliation for them—
This effect is ascribed to burnt-offerings, as well as to those which were properly sacrificed for sin. All the people, &c., shall give this oblation for the prince
—Or, with the prince; that is, the people shall join with the prince in making these oblations; whereas those that follow in the next verse are to be at the sole charge of the prince.

Verses 18–20. In the first month, &c., thou shalt take a young bullock—These words are directed to the prince, who is commanded, on the first day of the new year, (which, according to the ecclesiastical computation, began with the month Nisan, and answers to our 10th of March: see Exod. xii. 2,) to provide a bullock for a burnt-offering to cleanse the temple from any defilement it might have contracted,
by the people's offering their sacrifices, or coming into any of the courts belonging to it, while they were under any legal pollution. And the priest shall take of the blood, &c.—The office of the priest is here distinguished from that of the prince: the prince was to provide the sacrifices, and the priest to offer them. So shalt thou do the seventh day for every one that erreth—For all the errors of all the house of Israel through ignorance. There were particular sacrifices appointed for sins of ignorance,

whether of private persons or of the whole congregation, Lev. iv. 13. So shall ye reconcile the house—
Cleanse it from any pollution it may have contracted through the ignorance of any of the common people.

Verse 25. In the seventh month—According to their ecclesiastical account, which is Tisri, and answers to part of our August and September. In the fifteenth day, &c., shall he do the like—Namely, the prince. On that day the feast of tabernacles began, and continued seven days. Here we see the deficiency of the legal sacrifices for sin; they were often repeated, not only every year, but every feast,
and every day of the feast, because they could not make the comers thereunto perfect. Hence we may also learn the necessity of frequently repeating the same religious exercises. Indeed, the sacrifice of atonement was offered once for all; but the sacrifice of acknowledgment, that of a broken heart, that of a thankful heart, must be offered every day. And these spiritual sacrifices are always acceptable to God through Christ Jesus.

CHAPTER XLVI.

In this chapter we have, (1.) Further rules for the worship of the priests and people, 1–15. (2.) A rule for the prince's disposal of his inheritance, 16–18. (3.) A description of the places for the boiling and baking the offerings, 19–24.

A. M. 3430.
B. C. 574.

THUS saith the Lord God; The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east shall be shut the six working days; but on the sabbath it shall be opened, and in the day of the new-moon it shall be opened.

2 ^a And the prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall stand by the post of the gate, and the priests shall prepare his burnt-offering and his peace-offerings, and he shall worship at the threshold of the gate: then he shall go forth; but the gate shall not be shut until the evening.

3 Likewise the people of the land shall worship at the door of this gate before the Lord in the sabbaths and in the new-moons.

4 And the burnt-offering that ^bthe prince shall offer unto the Lord in the sabbath day shall be six lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish.

5 ^c And the meat-offering shall be an ephah for a ram, and the meat-offering for the lambs ¹ as he shall be able to give, and a hin of oil to an ephah.

6 And in the day of the new-moon it shall be a young bullock without blemish, and six

^a Chap. xlv. 3; Verse 8.—^b Chap. xlv. 17.—^c Chap. xlv. 29; Verses 7, 11.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVI.

Verses 2, 3. The prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without—The prince shall go through the outer gate of that court, and so pass to the inner gate, where he may see the whole service performed at the altar. And shall stand by the post of the gate—That is, by the entrance of the gate, where there was a seat prepared for him: see note on chap. xlv. 2. And the priests shall prepare his burnt-offering—Or, offer his burnt-offering, as the original word often signifies. And he shall worship at the threshold of the gate—By bowing his head, bowing down his face to the ground, or falling down upon the ground, as the posture of divine worship is elsewhere described. But the gate shall not be shut until the evening—Because the people were to pay their solemn worship in the same place, as is prescribed in the following verse. Likewise the people shall worship at the door of this gate—Here the inner porch of the east gate is assigned for their station, who came to present themselves before the Lord upon the solemn festivals, and they were to come no further into the inner court.

Verses 4, 5. The burnt-offering that the prince shall offer, &c.—It was the prince's part to provide sacrifices for the sabbaths and other festivals: see chap. xlv. 17. But this was a new ordinance; and the number of the beasts that were to be offered, lambs, and a ram: they shall be ^{A. M. 3430.} without blemish. ^{B. C. 574.}

7 And he shall prepare a meat-offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto, and a hin of oil to an ephah.

8 ^d And when the prince shall enter, he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof.

9 ¶ But when the people of the land ^e shall come before the Lord in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate: he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it.

10 And the prince in the midst of them, when they go in, shall go in; and when they go forth, shall go forth.

11 And in the feasts and in the solemnities ^f the meat-offering shall be an ephah to a bullock, and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambs as he is able to give, and a hin of oil to an ephah.

¹ Heb. the gift of his hand, Deuteronomy xvi. 17.—^d Verse 2. ^e Exod. xxiii. 14–17; Deut. xvi. 16.—^f Verse 5.

and the proportions of the meat and drink-offerings, are different here from those prescribed in the law, as will appear by comparing the fourth, sixth, seventh, and fourteenth verses of this chapter, with Num. xxviii. 9–12, 15. And the meat-offering for the lambs as he shall be able to give—The Hebrew is, According to the gift of his hand; that is, as much as he shall think sufficient.

Verses 8–10. He shall go in by the porch of that gate—To go in at the eastern gate was the privilege of the prince and the priests only; the people were to enter in by the north or south gates, as is mentioned in the following verse. He that entereth in by the way of the north gate, shall go out by the way of the south, &c.—These words imply the reason why the people were not to come in at the east gate, because, there being no passage or thoroughfare out of the temple westward, if they had entered in at the east gate, they must have returned back the same way they came in, which would have occasioned a vast throng and hinderance, considering the multitude that came to the temple. And perhaps this order was also designed to take away any superstitious distinction between the several gates of the temple, by commanding that every one should go out the opposite way to that by which he came in, whether it were toward the north or south. And the prince in the midst of them—The prince shall

A. M. 3430. 12 Now, when the prince shall prepare a voluntary burnt-offering or peace-offerings voluntarily unto the LORD, ⁸ one shall then open him the gate that looketh toward the east, and he shall prepare his burnt-offering and his peace-offerings, as he did on the sabbath day: then he shall go forth; and after his going forth one shall shut the gate.

13 ^h Thou shalt daily prepare a burnt-offering unto the LORD of a lamb ² of the first year without blemish: thou shalt prepare it ³ every morning.

14 And thou shalt prepare a meat-offering for it every morning, the sixth part of an ephah, and the third part of a hin of oil, to temper with the fine flour; a meat-offering continually by a perpetual ordinance unto the LORD.

15 Thus shall they prepare the lamb, and the meat-offering, and the oil, every morning for a continual burnt-offering.

16 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God; If the prince give a gift unto any of his sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; it shall be ^{A. M. 3430.} their possession by inheritance. ^{B. C. 574.}

17 But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to ¹ the year of liberty; after it shall return to the prince: but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them.

18 Moreover, ^k the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, to thrust them out of their possession; but he shall give his sons' inheritance out of his own possession: that my people be not scattered every man from his possession.

19 ¶ After, he brought me through the entry, which was at the side of the gate, into the holy chambers of the priests, which looked toward the north: and behold, there was a place on the two sides westward.

20 Then said he unto me, This is the place where the priests shall ¹ boil the trespass-offering and the sin-offering, where they shall ^m bake the meat-offering; that they bear them not out into the outer court, ⁿ to sanctify the people.

⁸ Chap. xlv. 3; Verse 2.—^h Exod. xxix. 38; Num. xxviii. 3.
² Heb. a son of his year.—³ Heb. morning by morning.

¹ Leviticus xxv. 10.—^k Chap. xlv. 8.—¹ 2 Chron. xxxv. 13.
^m Lev. ii. 4, 5, 7.—ⁿ Chap. xlv. 19.

pay the same attendance upon God's worship with the people, since all men are equal in the sight of God.

Verses 12-14. Now when the prince shall prepare a voluntary offering—The foregoing verses gave directions about the sacrifices the prince was enjoined to offer upon solemn days; this gives directions concerning his free-will, or voluntary offerings, concerning which see Lev. xxii. 18, 21. Upon these occasions the eastern gate was to be opened for the prince; but then, as soon as the service was over, and he was gone out, the gate was to be shut, because that gate was not to stand open, but only on the sabbath and festival days. Thou shalt daily prepare—The LXX. read, He shall prepare, or make, a burnt-offering, &c., as also all the ancient versions, except the Chaldee. He shall prepare it every morning—The daily evening sacrifice is generally supposed to be here implied, according to the prescription of the law, Num. xxviii. 3. The sixth part of an ephah, &c.—In Numbers xxviii. 5, the proportion required is the tenth part of an ephah, and the fourth part of a hin of oil. By a perpetual ordinance unto the Lord—The law of the passover is called a perpetual ordinance, Exod. xii. 17; and likewise the ordinances about the first-fruits, Lev. xxiii. 14. The Hebrew word, עֲלֵל, is used in each of these places; but it does not always denote perpetuity in a strict sense, but only a long period, or succession of time.

Verses 16-18. If the prince give a gift, &c.—By these verses we learn, that even gifts, or legacies of lands, could only be granted till the year of jubilee, except to a person's own heirs; for at that period all such gifts or grants devolved again to the original possessors, or their heirs. It shall be his to the year of liberty—That is, of jubilee, called the year of liberty, because it freed men's persons from the service of their masters, and their estates from any engagements by which the right of them was transferred from their proper owners. After it shall return to the prince—Or to his heirs, if he be dead. But his inheritance shall be his sons' for them—Or, his inheritance shall belong to his sons; it shall be theirs so as not to be alienated. The prince shall not take of the people's inheritance—As Ahab did, 1 Kings xxi. 16. That my people be not scattered—Lest, being turned out of their own, they be forced to wander up and down the country for a livelihood.

Verses 19, 20. He brought me through the entry—A private passage, chap. xlii. 9, which led to the priests' chambers, which were on the north side of the inner court, and are described chap. xl. 44, 46. There was a place on the two sides westward—Or, on their sides westward; that is, there was an enclosure on the west side of these chambers. This is the place where the priest shall boil the trespass-offering—The flesh of the sacrifices, which were to be eaten, was to be boiled, except the flesh of the passover. Where they shall bake the meat-offering—According to the directions given Lev. ii. 4-7. That they bear them not into the outer court, to sanctify the people—The flesh of those sacrifices, and the remainder of the meat-offering, were accounted most holy; and consequently, according to the law, were supposed to convey some kind of holiness to those that touched them: see note on chap. xlv. 19.

A. M. 3430. 21 Then he brought me forth into
B. C. 574. the outer court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and behold, ⁴in
every corner of the court there was a court.

22 In the four corners of the court there were courts ⁵joined of forty cubits long and thirty broad: these four ⁶corners were of one measure.

⁴ Heb. a court in a corner of a court, and a court in a corner of a court.

Verses 21-24. Behold, in every corner of the court there was a court—At every corner, where the side walls met in right angles, there was another little court. There were courts joined of forty cubits long, &c.—These little courts were in the shape of an oblong square, joined with inner walls
to the outside walls of the greater court. The marginal reading, made with chimneys, gives a sense which very well agrees with the uses for which the courts were designed. There was a row of build-

23 And there was a row of build- A. M. 2430.
ings round about in them, round B. C. 574.
about them four, and it was made with boiling-places under the rows round about.

24 Then said he unto me, These are the places of them that boil, where the ministers of the house shall ^oboil the sacrifice of the people.

^o Or, made with chimneys.—⁶ Heb. cornered.—^o Verse 20.

ings round about in them—Namely, on the inside of these courts. Then said he, These are the places, &c.—As there was a place in the inner court for boiling the trespass and sin-offering, verses 19, 20;
so these boiling-places might be appointed for boiling
the peace-offerings, which were esteemed inferior in holiness to those above mentioned, and therefore,
perhaps, were dressed by the Levites, or inferior ministers; whereas the former were boiled by the priests in the court properly belonging to them.

CHAPTER XLVII.

In this chapter we have, (1.) The vision of the holy waters, their rise, extent, depth, and healing virtue; the plenty of fish in them, and an account of trees growing on the banks of them, 1-12. (2.) An appointment of the borders-of the land of Canaan, which was to be divided by lot to the tribes of Israel, and the strangers that sojourned among them, 13-23.

A. M. 3430. AFTERWARD he brought me
B. C. 574. again unto the door of the house; and behold, ^awaters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward: for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and

^a Joel iii. 18; Zech. xiii. 1;

the waters came down from under A. M. 3430.
from the right side of the house, at B. C. 574.
the south side of the altar.

2 Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, and led me about the way

xiv. 8; Revelation xxii. 1.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVII.

Verse 1. He brought me again to the door of the house—The door of the temple, described chap.
xli. 2. And behold, waters issued from under the threshold eastward—Ezekiel had repeatedly walked round the house, and had surveyed the doors of it,
but had not discovered this stream of water springing from under its threshold till now. Thus God makes known his mind and will to his people, not all at once, but by degrees. Dr. Lightfoot tells us, that there was a large quantity of water conveyed
in pipes under ground from the fountain of Etam,
for the uses of the temple; and some commentators seem disposed to interpret this part of Ezekiel's vision, of that water. Others think he only alludes to it, or draws his similitude from it, but is to be mystically understood. Whether he allude to any such conduit, or stream of water, or not, that the waters
here spoken of are to be understood mystically, will hardly be doubted by any that consider what is stated concerning their direction and course, their continual increase, and salubrious effects; circumstances all utterly inapplicable to the water said to be brought in pipes for the uses of the temple. The fore-front of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under the right side of the house, and proceeded eastward—They did not therefore come to the temple, as if intended for the purposes of washing the sacrifices, carrying off the filth,

and keeping every part clean and wholesome; but they issued from it, and proceeded to refresh and fertilize
other places. The prophecy of Zechariah, chap.
xiv. 8, that living waters should go forth from Jerusalem, half of them toward the former sea, and half toward the hinder sea; and St. John's vision
(Rev. xxii. 1) of a pure river of water of life, proceeding out of the throne of God and the Lamb, elucidate this part of Ezekiel's vision, and direct us in the application of it. It is undoubtedly to be understood of the gospel of Christ, which went forth

A. M. 3430. without unto the outer gate by the
B. C. 574. way that looketh eastward; and behold, there ran out waters on the right side.

3 And when ^b the man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters; the ¹ waters were to the ankles.

4 Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, from Jerusalem, and spread itself into the countries around; and of the gifts and graces of the Holy Ghost which accompanied it, and by virtue of which it diffused its influence far and wide, and produced the most blessed effects. Thus Isaiah foretold that out of Zion should go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, chap. ii. 3. At Jerusalem it was that the Spirit was poured out upon the apostles, enduing them with the gift of tongues, that they might carry these waters to all nations; and in the temple first they stood and preached the words of this life. But this temple of Ezekiel was not so much designed to be an emblem of the material temple, built after the return of the Jews from Babylon, or of the Jewish Church, which had its principal seat there, as of the Christian Church, the temple built on the foundation of the apostles and prophets, of which Jesus Christ is at once the foundation and chief corner-stone; nay, and also its threshold and door of entrance: and from him springs the well, and from him proceed the rivers of living water, which refresh and comfort the souls of true believers, and render them fruitful to the praise and glory of God: see John iv. 10, 14, and vii. 38, 39. Through these waters, the places, which had before been a mere wilderness, are made like Eden; and what had been a dry and barren desert, becomes like the garden of the Lord; joy and gladness are found therein, thanksgiving and the voice of melody, Isa. li. 3, and xxx. 25, where see the notes.

^b Chap. xl. 3.—¹ Heb. waters of the ankles.

Verse 3. And when the man that had the line—The angel, described with a line in his hand, chap. xl. 3; went forth eastward—Went directly from the east gate; he measured—By the line in his hand; a thousand cubits—Almost the third part of an English mile; and he brought me through the waters—To try the depth of them. And the waters were to the ankles—"The gradual rise of the waters denotes the large effusion of the Spirit, (which was very remarkable at the first publication of the gospel,) and its wonderful increase from small beginnings; as well as most probably some future and large effusion thereof to be poured out upon the Jews and Gen'tiles, in order to their conversion. And the latter part of the representation, as Mr. Scott observes, may relate to the times when the gospel shall fill the earth, and produce most exten-

and brought me through; the waters were to the loins. A. M. 3430. B. C. 574.

5 Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over: for the waters were risen, ² waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over.

6 ¶ And he said unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river.

7 Now, when I had returned, behold, at the ² Heb. waters of swimming.

sive and important good effects on the state of mankind in every nation. Thus the river here signifies the same as the stone, (Dan. ii. 34, 45,) cut out without hands, becoming a great mountain, and filling the whole earth; and the same as the little leaven (which is Christ's illustration of the subject) leavening the whole three measures of meal into which it was cast; or as the grain of mustard-seed becoming a large plant, like a tree, in which the fowls of the air might make their nests. The emblem may also be applied to illustrate the growth of grace, knowledge, and holiness, in true Christians, who, instead of resting in past attainments, forgetting those things which are behind, reach forth unto those which are before, and press toward the mark for the prize of their high calling of God in Christ Jesus. Of such the religion may be fitly compared to the morning light, which shines more and more unto the perfect day.

Verses 6, 7. And he said, Son of man, hast thou seen this?—Hast thou considered, or taken notice of, this vision now showed unto thee? To see, often signifies to take notice of what we see: on the contrary, they are said to have eyes and see not, who do not observe what is placed before their eyes. This is an intimation to us, that it is our indispensable duty to consider well what is signified by these waters, and by their increase and effects: namely, to mark well the progress of the gospel in the world, and the process of the work of grace in the heart; to follow and carefully observe these waters, as Ezekiel here did; to attend to the motions and drawings of the blessed Spirit, and walk after them under a divine conduct. It is good to be often searching into the things of God, and trying to discover the depth of them; not only to look on the surface of the waters, but to go as far as we can toward the bottom of them; to be often digging, often diving into the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, as those who covet to be intimately acquainted with them. If we carefully consider the things of God, we shall find some of them very plain, and easy to be understood, like the waters that came only up to the ankles; others more difficult, and which require a deeper search, as the waters which rose to the knees, or the loins; and some quite beyond our reach, which we can neither fathom nor penetrate into, but, despairing to find their bottom, or measure their depth must be

A. M. 3430. ³ bank of the river were very many
B. C. 574. ^o trees on the one side and on the other.

8 Then said he unto me, These waters issue out toward the east country, and go down into the ⁴ desert, and go into the sea: which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed.

9 And it shall come to pass, that every thing that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the

³ Heb. lip.—^c Verse 12; Rev. xxii. 2.—⁴ Or, plain, Deut. iii. 17; iv. 49; Josh. iii. 16.

content, with St. Paul, to sit down on the brink, and adore it, crying out with him, O the depth of the riches, both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! How unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! Rom. xi. 33.

Then he caused me to return by the brink of the river—He made me go along by the river side. Behold, on the bank of the river were very many trees—The words allude to the trees planted in paradise, and designed for man's food in the state of innocence; and especially to the tree of life which grew there. The reader will observe, that many of the ideas in this chapter are taken from the terrestrial paradise; see verse 12, and compare Rev. xxii. 1, 2, where the same ideas are carried to the celestial paradise by St. John.

Verses 8, 9. Then said he, These waters issue toward the east country—These waters are described as taking their course along the plain, or champaign country, (for that is the sense of the word here rendered desert,) toward the lake where Sodom formerly stood, called the Dead sea, and by Moses, the Salt sea: see Deut. iii. 17. Which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed—These living and salubrious streams, by mixing with the salt and brackish waters of the sea, shall render them wholesome and fit for use; finely representing the tendency of the gospel, and, the healing virtue of divine grace, in curing the corruptions of human nature, and vices of mankind. And every thing that liveth, &c., whithersoever the river shall come, shall live—“Even in the Asphaltite lake, or Dead sea, which is so unfavourable to animal life. Josephus represents this lake as salt, and incapable of feeding fishes. Tacitus says, that it does not suffer fishes or water-fowl to live in it; yet Maundrell observed two or three shells of fishes on the shore. Bishop Pococke found its water very salt; and on tasting it, his mouth was constricted, as if it had been a strong alum water. The bishop observes, ‘It has been said by all authors, and is the common opinion, that there is no fish in this lake: the fresh water fish of the river Jordan probably would not live in it. After I left the Holy Land, it was positively affirmed to me, that a monk had seen fish caught in this water; and possibly there may be fish peculiar to this lake, for which this water may not be too salt: but this is a fact that deserves to be inquired into. The air

⁵ rivers shall come, shall live: and A. M. 3430. there shall be a very great multitude B. C. 574. of fish, because these waters shall come thither: for they shall be healed: and every thing shall live whither the river cometh.

10 And it shall come to pass, that the fishers shall stand upon it from En-gedi even unto En-eglaim; they shall be a place to spread forth nets; their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish ^d of the great sea, exceeding many.

⁵ Hebrew, two rivers.—^d Numbers xxxiv. 6; Joshua xxxiii. 4; Chap. xlviii. 28.

about this lake has always been thought to be very bad.’ ‘The Dead sea,’ says Michaelis, ‘is more brackish than any known sea or salt-well in the world. It contains as much salt as water can dissolve, namely, the fourth part of the weight of the water: and this is the reason why neither men nor animals sink in the Dead sea. If you throw fishes into heavy water, they cannot swim, but fall immediately on their sides.’—Newcome. The reader who wishes to have further information on this subject, may find it in Dr. Pococke and Dr. Shaw’s Travels, or the Encycl. Britan. on the word Asphaltites. Every thing shall live whither the river cometh—This signifies the wonderful and blessed efficacy of the gospel, when accompanied by the influence of the Holy Spirit, and received in faith and love: it communicates spiritual life to such as were before dead in trespasses and sins: it creates them anew in Christ Jesus unto all holy tempers, words, and works, such as God hath ordained that men should walk in them.

Verse 10. Fishers shall stand upon it from En-gedi unto En-eglaim—En-gedi was in the wilderness of Judah, Josh. xv. 61, 62. De L’Isle places it toward the south-west point of the Dead sea; and En-eglaim is placed by the same writer at the north of the Dead sea, where Jordan runs into it. It is mentioned, Isa. xv. 8, as a place on the borders of Moab, which country lay on the east side of the Dead sea. Bishop Newcome, following the punctuation adopted by the Syriac, Vulgate, and Arabic, reads, From En-gedi even to En-eglaim there shall be a spreading forth of nets; by which is signified, that fishers should be employed along the whole coast of it, denoting the multitude of gospel preachers, all over the world, labouring to gain sinners to Christ. Their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish of the great sea—That is, the Mediterranean; exceeding many—Great multitudes of sinners, of all descriptions, in a thousand diversified forms of guilt and wretchedness, shall be brought to God by the word of these preachers, these fishers of men. So that this is a further amplification of what is said in verse 8, that the waters should be healed, and strongly illustrates the salutary effect of the gospel, and the multitude of converts that should be made in the Gentile countries, even in the most idolatrous, ignorant, and wicked.

A. M. 3430. 11 But the miry places thereof and
B. C. 574. the marshes thereof ⁶ shall not be healed; they shall be given to salt.

12 And ⁶ by the river upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, ⁷ shall grow all trees for meat, ⁸ whose leaf shall not fade,

⁶ Or, and that which shall not be healed.—⁶ Verse 7.—⁷ Heb.
shall come up.

Verse 11. But the miry places thereof, and the marshes thereof, shall not be healed—"There shall still remain some marshes, creeks, or swamps, into which these healing waters shall not find an entrance; and these must be left incurably sterile and worthless."—Scott. This represents the case of those countries or individuals, who either utterly reject the gospel, or, though they profess to receive it, do not obey and walk according to it, but hold the truth in unrighteousness. They shall be given to salt—The gospel is the only healing medicine for the disorders of our fallen nature, and they who will not receive it in the love of it, remain incurable, and are abandoned to final ruin. The Hebrew language often expresses irremediable barrenness and unprofitableness by being given up to salt, saltiness being equivalent to barrenness in that language. When Abimelech destroyed Sichem, he sowed the ground whereon it stood with salt, to denote that it should never be cultivated or inhabited again, Judg. ix. 45.

Verse 12. And by the river, upon the bank thereof, shall grow all trees for meat—See the note on verse 7. By these trees may be understood, "the plenteous provisions of the gospel, the precious promises of the sacred word, and the privileges of believers, as communicated to their souls by the quickening Spirit. These abound on each side of the river, wherever the gospel is successfully preached; they afford nourishment and delight to the souls of men; they never fade or wither; they are various, according to the variety of circumstances and occasions in the experience of Christians; (as if a tree should yield a succession of different kinds of fruit, through the months of the year;) and even the leaves serve as medicines to their souls. The warnings and reproofs of the word, and the salutary corrections of their Father's rod, though generally less valued, and always less pleasant, than divine consolations, yet tend to cure their maladies, and restore them to holiness and happiness."—Scott.

Most expositors, however, consider these trees as emblematical of true, spiritual Christians, termed by Isaiah, trees of righteousness, the planting of the Lord, chap. lxi. 3, set by the rivers of water, the waters of the sanctuary, Psa. i. 3, grafted into Christ, the tree of life, and, by virtue of their union with him, made trees of life too, rooted in him, Col. ii. 7. There is a great variety of these trees, through the diversity of gifts with which they are endued by that one Spirit which works all in all. They grow on the bank of the river, for they keep close to holy ordinances, and through them derive sap and virtue from Christ. They are fruit-trees, designed, as the neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed: it shall bring forth ⁸ new fruit A. M. 3430.

B. C. 574.
according to his months, because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary: and the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof ⁹ for ⁸ medicine.

⁸ Job viii. 16; Psa. i. 3; Jer. xvii. 8.—⁸ Or, principal.—⁹ Or,
for bruises and sores.—⁸ Rev. xxii. 2.

fig-tree and the olive, to honour with their fruits both God and man, Judg. ix. 9. The fruit thereof shall be for meat, for the lips of the righteous feed many, and the fruits of their righteousness are many ways beneficial. The very leaves of these trees are for medicine, or, as the margin has it, for bruises and sores. True Christians, with their good discourses, the leaves of the trees of righteousness, as well as with their beneficent actions, which are their fruits, do good to those about them: they strengthen the weak, and bind up the broken-hearted. Their cheerfulness does good like a medicine, not only to themselves, but to others also. And their leaf shall not fade—They shall be enabled, by the grace of God, to persevere in their piety and usefulness, having not only life in their root, but sap in all their branches. Therefore their profession shall not wither, nor their discourse lose its healing, strengthening virtue. Neither shall their fruit be consumed—That is, they shall not cease to bear fruit, retaining still the principles of their fruitfulness; but shall bring it forth even in old age. Or, the reward of their fruitfulness shall abide for ever; they shall produce fruit that shall abound to their account at the appearing of Jesus Christ, fruit to life eternal. They shall bring forth new fruit according to their months—Some in one month and others in another; or, each one of them shall bring forth fruit monthly; which signifies a constant disposition, desire, resolution, and endeavour to bear fruit, and that they shall never be weary of well-doing. And the reason of this extraordinary fruitfulness is, because their waters issue out of the sanctuary—It is not to be ascribed to their own wisdom, power, or goodness, or to any thing in themselves, but to the continual supplies of divine grace, with which they are watered every moment, Isa. xxvii. 3. For, whoever may be the instrument of planting them, it is divine grace which gives the increase.

The reader will observe, that this part of Ezekiel's vision is evidently referred to and almost copied by St. John, Rev. xxii. 2, who applies it to the salvation of Christ, begun on earth, and perfected in heaven. This whole passage, from verse 1-12 inclusive, as Bishop Newcome observes, "is one of the most striking allegories in the Hebrew Scriptures," and must so necessarily have a mystical and spiritual meaning, that from thence we are compelled to conclude that all the other parts of the vision, from the beginning of the xlth to the end of the xlviii chapter, must have such a meaning also; and that whatever allusion the prophet's description of the temple, its courts, &c., and the division of the land to the

A. M. 3430. 13 ¶ Thus saith the Lord God: B. C. 574. This shall be the border, whereby ye shall inherit the land according to the twelve tribes of Israel: ^b Joseph shall have two portions.

14 And ye shall inherit it, one as well as another: concerning the which I ¹⁰ lifted ¹ up my hand to give it unto your fathers: and this land shall ^k fall unto you for inheritance.

15 And this shall be the border of the land toward the north side, from the great sea, ¹ the way of Hethlon, as men go to ^m Zedad;

16 ^a Hamath, ^o Berothah, Sibraim, which is between the border of Damascus and the border of Hamath; ¹¹ Hazar-hatticon, which is by the coast of Hauran.

^b Gen. xlviii. 5; 1 Chron. v. 1; Chap. xlviii. 4, 5.—¹⁰ Or, swore.—¹ Gen. xii. 7; xiii. 15; xv. 7; xvii. 8; xxvi. 3; xxviii. 13; Ch. xx. 5, 6, 28, 42.—^k Chap. xlviii. 29.—¹ Chap. xlviii. 1.—^m Num. xxxiv. 8.—^a Num. xxxiv. 8.—^o 2 Sam. viii. 8.

prince, priests, and tribes, might have to Solomon's temple, or to that built after the return of the Jews from Babylon, and the former divisions of the country; yet that the vision was principally intended of the spiritual temple of the Christian Church, and of its great extent, prosperity, and glory in the latter days, when the fulness of the Gentiles shall come in, and all Israel shall be saved.

Verse 13. This shall be the border, &c.—The borders described in the following part of this chapter shall be the limits or boundaries of your country; whereby ye shall inherit the land according to the twelve tribes of Israel—By the several captivities both of Israel and Judah, the several limits or borders, belonging to the inheritance of each tribe, were obliterated and forgotten; whereupon a new boundary and division are here made of the holy land. "The allotment of the land," says Grotius, "made here, and in the next chapter, would have taken place, had the ten tribes in general, as well as Judah and Benjamin, turned themselves to the worship of the true God: for if so, they, as well as Judah and Benjamin, would have obtained a restoration. But only some part of them returned with Judah and Benjamin, with whom they settled in common in the land of Judea." This may, perhaps, be the literal sense of the following part of the prophecy; but, without question, a mystical sense is implied under this literal description, as well as in all the preceding parts of the vision. Joseph shall have two portions—Upon Reuben's forfeiting his birth-right, the double portion, belonging to the firstborn, accrued to Joseph and his two sons, Manasseh and Ephraim, according to Jacob's own appointment.

Verse 14. And ye shall inherit it, one as well as another—Namely, the ten tribes which are scattered abroad as well as Judah and Benjamin. These two tribes, together with some of the families of the tribe of Levi, made up the principal part of those who re-

17 And the border from the sea shall ^a Hazar-enan, the border of Damascus, and the north northward, and the border of Hamath. And this is the north side.

18 And the east side ye shall measure ¹² from Hauran, and from Damascus, and from Gilead, and from the land of Israel by Jordan, from the border unto the east sea. And this is the east side.

19 And the south side southward, from Tamar, even to ^a the waters of ¹³ strife in Kadesh, the ¹⁴ river to the great sea. And this is the south side ¹⁵ southward.

20 The west side also shall be the great sea from the border, till a man come over against Hamath. This is the west side.

¹¹ Or, the middle village.—^p Num. xxxiv. 9; Chap. xlviii. 1. ¹² Heb. from between.—^a Num. xx. 13; Deut. xxxii. 51; Psa. lxxxi. 7; Chapter xlviii. 28.—¹³ Or, Meribah.—¹⁴ Or, valley. ¹⁵ Or, toward Teman.

turned from the Babylonish captivity; by which it appears, that this prophecy has not yet been fulfilled, but relates to the general restoration of the Jews and Israelites, an event often foretold in the prophecies of the Old Testament. And this land shall fall unto you for inheritance—Here is an allusion to the manner of their first acquiring the possession of the land, which was by lot, by which means all controversies were prevented, the lot referring all things to the divine designation and appointment.

Verses 15–17. This shall be the border toward the north—The northern border of the land was to begin from the west point, on which side lay the Mediterranean sea, and to go on northward toward Hethlon, a place between Tyre and Damascus, and so forward to Zedad, mentioned Num. xxxiv. 8, Hamath, and other places here mentioned in these verses.

Verse 18. And the east side ye shall measure from Hauran—The city Auran, and the district Auranitis, the north-east limit of the Holy Land. Damascus lay more northerly than Hauran, but the country called Auranitis might reach near it. Gilead is well known to have been a long tract of land, which was extended to the country of Sihon king of the Amorites. From the land of Israel by Jordan—From the northern limits of the land of Israel near Cæsarea Philippi, or Dan, where the river Jordan takes its rise. Unto the east sea—That is, the Dead sea, or the lake of Sodom: see verse 8.

Verse 19. And the south side southward—The southern frontier shall be from En-gedi, called Hazazon-tamar, 2 Chron. xx. 2, to the waters of Meribah, or strife, in Kadesh, in the south limit of Judah, and from thence to the river of Egypt, namely, Besor, which runs into the sea not far from Gaza.

Verse 20. The west side shall be the great sea from the border—That is, from the southern border, mentioned in the foregoing verse. Till a man come

A. M. 3430. 21 So shall ye divide this land
B. C. 574. unto you according to the tribes of Israel.

22 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that ye shall divide it by lot for an inheritance unto you, and to the strangers that sojourn among you which shall beget children among you : * and over against Hamath—Or rather, till a man come to Hamath, the northern point toward the west frontier.

* Eph. iii. 6; Rev. vii. 9, 10.

Verse 22. Ye shall divide it by lot for an inheritance unto you—See the note on verse 14. And to the strangers that sojourn among you—Foreigners never before had the privilege of purchasing or possessing any inheritance among the Jews; so this they shall be unto you as born in the country among the children of Israel; they shall have inheritance with you among the tribes of Israel.

23 And it shall come to pass, that in what tribe the stranger sojourneth, there shall ye give him his inheritance, saith the Lord God.

* Rom. x. 12; Gal. iii. 28; Col. iii. 11.

mystically denotes the incorporating the Gentiles into the same church with the Jews, making them fellow-heirs, and of the same body with them by the gospel, Eph. iii. 6. They shall have inheritance with you among the tribes, &c.—In whatsoever tribe they sojourn, as it is expressed in the next verse.

CHAPTER XLVIII.

In this chapter we have the division of the country, the boundaries of which were described in the preceding chapter. Here is, (1.) The portion of seven tribes, 1-7. (2.) The allotment of land for the sanctuary, priests, and Levites, 8-14. (3.) For the city and prince, 15-22. (4.) For the other five tribes, 23-29. (5.) A plan of the city, its gates and new name, 30-35.

A. M. 3430. NOW these are the names of the
B. C. 574. tribes : * From the north end to the coast of the way of Hethlon, as one goeth to Hamath, Hazar-enan, the border of Damascus northward, to the coast of Hamath; (for these are his sides east and west;) ¹ a portion for Dan.

2 And by the border of Dan, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Asher.

3 And by the border of Asher, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Naphtali.

4 And by the border of Naphtali, from the

* Chap. xlvii. 15.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XLVIII.

Verses 1, 2. These are the names of the tribes: from the north end, &c.—As the description of the boundaries of the land began on the north, so the portion of that tribe to which the most northern lot fell is first named, which is Dan. For these are his sides east and west—These are the boundaries belonging to that tribe, from the east point, near mount Libanus and Gilead, to the west point, bounded by the Mediterranean sea. And by the border of Dan a portion for Asher—All along from the south side of Dan, measuring from east to west, shall the share of Asher be.

Verse 7. And by the border of Reuben, &c., a portion for Judah—From the 1st verse to the 7th, the situation of seven of the twelve tribes is described, which were placed on the north side of the holy portion, the length of Judea, from north to east side unto the west side, a portion for Manasseh.

5 And by the border of Manasseh, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Ephraim.

6 And by the border of Ephraim, from the east side even unto the west side, a portion for Reuben.

7 And by the border of Reuben, from the east side unto the west side, a portion for Judah.

¹ Heb. one portion.

south, being divided into twelve equal parts, (see chap. xlvii. 14,) besides the allotment for the holy portion and for the prince, and the city and temple being placed where they formerly stood. Hence it was necessary that there should be seven shares on the north side of that allotment, and but five on the south side; Jerusalem not standing in the middle of the Holy Land, but more toward the south, as will appear to any one that consults an accurate map of Judea. Many learned men are of opinion, that this particular description of the several portions allotted to the tribes, relates to the settlement of the Jews in their own country, after their conversion to Christianity. Certainly several passages in the prophets bear this aspect: see particularly chap. xxxvi. and xxxvii. of this prophecy. "But without laying too great a stress upon this opinion, we may reasonably suppose that some mystical sense is contained

A. M. 3430. 8 ¶ And by the border of Judah, B. C. 574. from the east side unto the west side, shall be ^b the offering which ye shall offer of five and twenty thousand reeds in breadth, and in length as one of the other parts, from the east side unto the west side: and the sanctuary shall be in the midst of it.

9 The oblation that ye shall offer unto the LORD shall be of five and twenty thousand in length, and of ten thousand in breadth.

10 And for them, even for the priests, shall be this holy oblation; toward the north five and twenty thousand in length, and toward the west ten thousand in breadth, and toward the east ten thousand in breadth, and toward the south five and twenty thousand in length; and the sanctuary of the LORD shall be in the midst thereof.

^b Chapter xlv. 1-6. — ^c Chap. xlv. 15. — ² Or, The sanctified portion shall be for the priests.

under this description. By the twelve tribes the pure Christian Church is sometimes signified in the New Testament: see Luke xxi. 3; Rev. vii. 4, in which latter book twelve is a hieroglyphical number, denoting the true church, built upon the doctrine of the twelve apostles: see Rev. xii. 1, and xxi. 14. By the same analogy, the number of a hundred and forty and four thousand, (Rev. vii. 4, and xiv. 1,) signifies the church of true Christians, who continue steadfast in the apostolical doctrine, twelve being the square root out of which that number arises; so this division of the land among the twelve tribes may imply, that all true Christians shall be equally sharers in the privileges of the gospel."

Verse 8. By the border of Judah, &c., shall be the offering, &c.—Next to the border of Judah, which runs in length from east to west, shall be the offering ye shall set apart for the service of God, chap. xlv. 1. The word reeds, it must be observed, is not in the original text, either here or in that place, and, as we have there noticed, many learned men think it more probable, that the measure of cubits is intended in both passages: see the note there. And in the length as in one of the other parts—Given to the adjoining tribes. From the east side unto the west side—Which was likewise twenty-five thousand reeds, or cubits, according to the dimensions of the holy portion, set down chap. xlv. 1-6, for the oblation was to be four-square, consisting of twenty-five thousand, multiplied by twenty-five thousand.

Verses 9, 10. The oblation ye shall offer unto the Lord—For his sanctuary and priests: see chap. xlv. 1: shall be five and twenty thousand in length—See note on chap. xlv. 3, 4. Toward the north five and twenty thousand in length—The dimensions from east to west are called by the name of breadth here, but of length, verse 8, and so they truly are, as may 11 ° It shall be for the priests that are sanctified of the sons of Zadok; which have kept my ³ charge, which went not astray when the children of Israel went astray, ^d as the Levites went astray.

12 And this oblation of the land that is offered shall be unto them a thing most holy by the border of the Levites.

13 And over against the border of the priests, the Levites shall have five and twenty thousand in length, and ten thousand in breadth: all the length shall be five and twenty thousand, and the breadth ten thousand.

14 ° And they shall not sell of it, neither exchange, nor alienate the first-fruits of the land: for it is holy unto the LORD.

15 ¶ ^e And the five thousand that are left in the breadth over against the five and twenty

³ Or, ward, or, ordinance. — ^d Chap. xlv. 10. — ^e Exod. xxii. 29; Lev. xxvii. 10, 28, 33. — ^f Chap. xxxv. 6.

appear from the description given of the whole in the notes on the xlvth chapter. But Houbigant reads this verse more intelligibly, as follows: "Toward the north the length shall be twenty-five thousand cubits; likewise toward the south the length shall be twenty-five thousand cubits; and the breadth toward the east shall be ten thousand cubits; and toward the west ten thousand cubits," &c.

Verses 11, 12. It shall be for the priests of the sons of Zadok—See note on chap. xlv. 10, 15. Which went not astray as the Levites—Or, as the other Levites went astray. "The word Levites is here used in its greatest latitude, and comprehends the priests, as well as those who were properly called Levites. Many of these had defiled themselves with idolatry, for which crime they were to be degraded from the honours due to those priests who had continued faithful in their office."—Lowth. This oblation shall be unto them a thing most holy—As all things dedicated to God were. By the border of the Levites—It shall lie next to the portion of the Levites which lay southward between the priests' and the city's portion.

Verses 13, 14. Over against the border of the priests—It might be better translated, just by, or beside the border of the priests. The words import, that the border of the Levites should run parallel to that of the priests. And in the same sense the words should be translated in the 15th, 18th, and 21st verses of this chapter. And they shall not sell it, neither exchange—Or, transfer, &c. As it was God's portion, they were not to sell, or part with it, upon any pretence of advantage, or of greater convenience. This portion of land is called the first-fruits, as it is styled an oblation, verses 8, 12, to denote that the whole land was God's property.

Verses 15-17. And the five thousand that are left in the breadth over against [or beside, see verse 13]

A. M. 3430. thousand, shall be ^ε a profane place
B. C. 574. for the city, for dwelling, and for suburbs; and the city shall be in the midst thereof.

16 And these shall be the measures thereof; the north side four thousand and five hundred, and the south side four thousand and five hundred, and on the east side four thousand and five hundred, and the west side four thousand and five hundred.

17 And the suburbs of the city shall be toward the north two hundred and fifty, and toward the south two hundred and fifty, and toward the east two hundred and fifty, and toward the west two hundred and fifty.

18 And the residue in length over against the oblation of the holy portion shall be ten thousand eastward, and ten thousand westward: and it shall be over against the oblation of the holy portion; and the increase thereof shall be for food unto them that serve the city.

^ε Chap. xlii. 20.—^h Chap. xlv. 6.

the five and twenty thousand—This five thousand, added to the twenty-five thousand in length, and two ten thousands in breadth, mentioned verse 10, makes up a square of twenty-five thousand every way: see verse 20. Shall be a profane place for the city, &c.—It is called a profane place comparatively, because it was not so holy as the temple and the sanctuary. And the city shall be in the midst thereof—A square piece of ground, of four thousand five hundred cubits on every side, shall be taken out of the middle of the twenty-five thousand cubits in length, for the area of the city. The north side four thousand five hundred, &c.—It shall be an equilateral square, every side being exactly of the same measure, consisting in all of eighteen thousand measures, as is expressed verse 35. According to Josephus, Bell. Jud., v. 43, Jerusalem was thirty-three stadia in circuit, which the square here described does not greatly exceed. And the suburbs shall be toward the north two hundred and fifty—The city and suburbs together making a square of five thousand.

Verses 18–20. And the residue in length over against [or beside] the oblation of the holy portion shall be ten thousand eastward and ten thousand westward—These two dimensions, of ten thousand in length both eastward and westward, remain on each side of the area, which is five thousand cubits square, and set apart for the site of the city. It shall be over against [or beside] the oblation of the holy portion—It shall join to the Levites' portion, both on the east and west side; and it shall lie parallel with the two portions belonging to the priests and Levites. And the increase thereof shall be for food unto them that serve the city—Perform burdensome

19 ^h And they that serve the city shall serve it out of all the tribes of Israel. A. M. 3430. B. C. 574.

20 All the oblations shall be five and twenty thousand by five and twenty thousand: ye shall offer the holy oblation four-square, with the possession of the city.

21 ⁱ And the residue shall be for the prince, on the one side and on the other of the holy oblation, and of the possession of the city, over against the five and twenty thousand of the oblation toward the east border, and westward over against the five and twenty thousand toward the west border, over against the portions for the prince: and it shall be the holy oblation; ^k and the sanctuary of the house shall be in the midst thereof.

22 Moreover, from the possession of the Levites, and from the possession of the city, being in the midst of that which is the prince's, between the border of Judah and the border of Benjamin shall be for the prince.

ⁱ Chap. xlv. 7.—^k Verses 8, 10.

offices of public utility, whether of a higher or lower kind. They that serve the city shall serve it out of all the tribes—This service being a burden, it was fit that all the tribes should bear their part in it. All the oblation shall be five and twenty thousand, &c.—That is, twenty-five thousand in length, multiplied by twenty-five thousand in breadth. Ye shall offer the oblation four-square—So the heavenly Jerusalem is described, Rev. xxi. 16, as lying four-square, a square figure being the emblem of perpetuity, strength, and solidity. With the possession of the city—Or the land assigned for the site of the city; which was a square of five thousand cubits, and being added to the portion of the priests and Levites, made their twice ten thousand to be twenty-five thousand in breadth.

Verse 21. The residue shall be for the prince on the one side and on the other, &c.—The prince's part shall be extended, both on the east and west side of the several allotments belonging to the priests, the Levites, and the city. Over against the five and twenty thousand, &c.—The particle אל פני, translated over against, is rendered before, in the parallel text, chap. xlv. 7, and thus interpreted makes the sense clearer, the words then importing, that the prince's portion was to run along eastward and westward, like a frontier before the holy portions; and to extend eastward to Jordan, or the Dead sea, and westward to the great sea, retaining its breadth of twenty-five thousand cubits from north to south.

Verse 22. Moreover from, or rather, beyond, the possession of the Levites, and beyond the possession of the city—That is, the possessions belonging to the priests and Levites, and the city, were to be

A. M. 3430. 23 ¶ As for the rest of the tribes, from the east side unto the west side, Benjamin shall have a ⁴ portion.

24 And by the border of Benjamin, from the east side unto the west side, Simeon shall have a portion.

25 And by the border of Simeon, from the east side unto the west side, Issachar a portion.

26 And by the border of Issachar, from the east side unto the west side, Zebulun a portion.

27 And by the border of Zebulun, from the east side unto the west side, Gad a portion.

28 And by the border of Gad, at the south side southward, the border shall be even from Tamar unto ¹ the waters of ⁵ strife in Kadesh, and to the river toward the great sea.

29 ^m This is the land which ye shall divide by lot unto the tribes of Israel for inheritance, and these are their portions, saith the Lord God.

⁴ Hebrew, one portion.—¹ Chapter xlvii. 19.—⁵ Hebrew, Meriba-Kadesh.—^m Chapter xlvii. 14, 21, 22.—ⁿ Revelation xxi. 12.

bounded on the east and west side with the prince's portion; so those were to lie in the middle, and this beyond them. Between the border of Judah and the border of Benjamin shall be for the prince—The border of Judah was to extend from east to west, next to the holy portion, on the north side, (see verses 1-8,) and the border of Benjamin from east to west, next the allotment set apart for the city, on the south side; see verses 23-28. The several portions allotted for the priests, the Levites, and the city, were to extend only to the length of twenty-five thousand cubits from east to west; so that wherever ground ran in a parallel line eastward and westward beyond that boundary, even to the land's end, was to belong to the prince. And, supposing the whole country to be sixty miles in breadth, and the holy portion about seven miles square, there will remain above twenty-six miles, both on the east and west side, for the prince's share.

Verses 23-28. As for the rest of the tribes, &c.—The portion assigned for Judah being situate next to the holy portion on the north side, that assigned to Benjamin lay next to the ground allotted to the city on the south side. All these allotments ran from east to west in length, and from north to south in breadth. In the 24th and the next three verses, the four remaining tribes have their allotments assigned them, lying on the south side of the holy portion.

Verse 31. And the gates of the city shall be after the names of the tribes of Israel—It had twelve gates in all, three on each side, which was very proper, since it lay four-square; and these twelve gates

30 ¶ And these are the goings out of the city on the north side, four thousand and five hundred measures.

31 ^a And the gates of the city shall be after the names of the tribes of Israel: three gates northward; one gate of Reuben, one gate of Judah, one gate of Levi.

32 And at the east side four thousand and five hundred: and three gates; and one gate of Joseph, one gate of Benjamin, one gate of Dan.

33 And at the south side four thousand and five hundred measures: and three gates; one gate of Simeon, one gate of Issachar, one gate of Zebulun.

34 At the west side four thousand and five hundred, with their three gates; one gate of Gad, one gate of Asher, one gate of Naphtali.

35 It was round about eighteen thousand measures: ^o and the name of the city from that day shall be, ⁶ The ^p LORD is there.

^o Jeremiah xxxiii. 16.—⁶ Heb. Jehovah-shemmah, Exodus xvii. 15; Judges vi. 24.—^p Jer. iii. 17; Joel iii. 21; Zech. ii. 10; Rev. xxi. 3; xxii. 3.

were inscribed to the twelve tribes. Because the city was to be served out of all the tribes of Israel, verse 19, it was fit that each tribe should have its gate; and Levi being here taken in to keep to the number twelve, Ephraim and Manasseh are made one in Joseph. Conformable to this, in St. John's vision, Rev. xxi. 12, 13, the New Jerusalem (for so the holy city is called there, though not here) has twelve gates, three on a side, and on them are written the names of the twelve tribes of the children of Israel. Observe, reader, into the church of Christ, whether militant or triumphant, there is a free access by faith for all that come, of every tribe, from every quarter. Christ has opened the kingdom of heaven for all believers. Whoever will may come, and take of the water of life, and of the tree of life, freely.

Verse 35. The name of the city from that day shall be, The Lord is there—It is very frequently said in Scripture, that a person or thing should be called by a certain name, when it was to be invested with qualities which might entitle it to that denomination. Thus Isaiah, foretelling the coming of the Messiah, says, His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace, because he was to possess the qualities which should serve as a foundation for all those titles. In like manner, 2 Sam. xii. 25, it is said, that Solomon should be called Jedidiah, or, the Beloved of the Lord; and, Isa. i. 26, and lxii. 4, 12, that Jerusalem should be called The City of Righteousness, The Faithful City, Hephzibah, or the Lord's Delight, Sought Out, A City not forsaken. Not that it was to quit its ancient name, and assume all these; but it was to be crowned with the favours of heaven in such a manner as to draw upon itself all these honourable titles. Here the prophetic declaration, that the name of the city should be THE LORD IS THERE, might be intended to signify, 1st, That the captives, after their return, should have manifest tokens of God's presence with them, and of his residence among them, both in his ordinances and in his providences; so that they should have no occasion to ask, as their fathers did, Is the Lord among us or not? for they should see and acknowledge that he was among them of a truth. And then, though their troubles should be many and threatening, they would be like the bush which burned, but was not consumed, because the Lord was there. More especially it was meant to signify, 2d, That the gospel church should have the presence of God in it; though not in the Shechinah, or cloud of glory, as of old, yet in a token no less sure, namely, that of the Holy Spirit in his gifts and graces. Where the gospel is faithfully preached, gospel ordinances duly administered, and God worshipped in the name of Jesus Christ only, it may be truly said, The Lord is there; for, faithful is he that hath promised, and will fulfil his word, Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. The Lord is in his church, to rule and govern it, to protect and defend it, and graciously to own, accept, and bless his sincere worshippers, and to show himself nigh unto them in all that they call upon him for. This should engage us to keep close to the communion of saints, and not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together; for where two or three are met in the name of Jesus, he is there. Nay, the Lord is present with and in every true and genuine Christian: God dwells in him, and he in God. It may be truly said of every one who has a living principle of grace in his soul, The Lord is there. And, as this is the chief privilege, glory, and happiness of the church militant, that the Lord is present with and in her; so, 3d, It is the principal blessing of the church triumphant. That the pure in heart shall there see God; shall see his face, and his name shall be on their foreheads; that God himself, who sits on the throne, shall be with them, and dwell among them, (Rev. vii. 2, 25, and xxi. 3,) is the crowning blessing of the heavenly city, and the consummation of the felicity of all its inhabitants. For in his presence is fulness of joy, and at his right hand are pleasures for evermore. Let us therefore give all diligence to secure to ourselves a place in that city, that we may be for ever with the Lord.

THE BOOK

OF THE

PROPHET DANIEL.

ARGUMENT.

DANIEL, the author of this book, was of the tribe of Judah, and probably of royal descent. Josephus says he was of the family of Zedekiah, who was the last king of Judah, before the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem. He was carried away captive to Babylon when he was very young, probably not more than eighteen years of age, namely, in the fourth year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah, in the year of the world 3398, before Christ 606. Being possessed of extraordinary endowments, both of body and mind, he was soon noticed and much renowned in Babylon; and on account of his extraordinary wisdom and virtue, and that supernatural illumination God vouchsafed him, which was manifested in his interpreting of dreams, and predicting future events, he was advanced to great authority under Nebuchadnezzar, which he appears to have possessed during all the subsequent period of the Chaldean monarchy. He also held an exalted station, and filled offices of great trust and power, under Darius the Mede, and Cyrus the Persian. His great wisdom and extraordinary piety are celebrated by his fellow-captive Ezekiel, with whom he was cotemporary. For that prophet, when upbraiding the king of Tyre with his self-conceit and pride, asks, Art thou wiser than Daniel? And he mentions Daniel with Noah and Job, as persons who had greater power with God in prayer than any others of the human race: see Ezekiel xxviii. 3, and xiv. 14. Daniel, though probably younger than Ezekiel, yet appears to have begun to prophesy before him. It is likely he first resided in the court at Babylon, and afterward in those of Media and Persia.

Some of the later Jews have shown an inclination to exclude Daniel from the number of the prophets; and their rabbis have accordingly placed his book among the Hagiographa, or holy writings, and not among the books of the prophets. But their dislike to him has evidently proceeded only from hence, that his predictions are so clear and so express, respecting the time of the Messiah's appearance, the character he should bear, the offices he should sustain, and the violent death he should suffer; and afford such evidence of the truth of Christianity, that they had no other way to avoid conviction than to deny the divine authority of the book from whence that evidence is drawn. But herein they contradict the sense of the more ancient Jews, and particularly of Josephus, who calls him one of the greatest of the prophets, and says that "he not only foretold future things, which was common to him with other prophets, but also fixed a time for their coming to pass."—Antiq., lib. x. cap. 12. Our Saviour's authority is decisive in this matter, expressly calling Daniel a prophet, Matt. xxiv. 15; in doing which he likewise declared the sense of the Jews of that time; for, as he spoke the words in the hearing of the Jewish doctors, they certainly would have objected to Daniel's authority, if they had not believed and allowed his divine inspiration. And if we consider the important subject of some of his prophecies, especially those respecting the Messiah, and the large extent of others of them, predicting the four great monarchies that should arise in succession, and even giving a prophetic history of the church and of the world to nearly the end of time, he may justly be reckoned among the greatest of prophets. As Daniel and St. John had both of them the honour and happiness of being persons greatly beloved of God, (compare Dan. x. 11 with John xiii. 23.) so the latter, in his Revelation, doth little more (as Mr. Mede has observed) than distinctly unfold those events which the former foretels in general terms.

This book is written partly in the Hebrew, and partly in Chaldee; for which singular circumstance we may fairly account, without any imputation on the credit of the book, or the judgment of the author. He had been early taught the language of the Chaldeans, and from his long residence in the country, may be presumed to have been well acquainted with it. And many of the Jews also, during the time of the captivity, doubtless attained a considerable knowledge of that language; and especially those Jews would make it their business to learn it who did not incline to return with their brethren into Judea, but remained in Babylon. And his prophecies were undoubtedly designed for the benefit of all these Jews, and also of the Chaldeans themselves, whose annals might receive confirmation from his work, and be alleged as vouchers of its authenticity. "Now what could be more natural," says Mr. Wintle, "than that an author, thus circumstanced, should contrive his work in a manner" which he judged would be "the most extensively useful; and with this view should compose a part of it in the language of the country wherein he dwelt, and the other part in the original language of the church of God?"

We learn from St. Jerome, that the famous Porphyry, who flourished in the latter end of the third century after Christ, and wrote fifteen books against the Christian religion, endeavoured in one of them to depreciate the prophecies of Daniel, affirming that the book in which they are contained was not composed by Daniel, whose name it bears, but by somebody who lived in Judea about the time of Antiochus Epiphanes; because all the prophecies which respected events to that time contained true history, but all beyond that were manifestly false. This work of Porphyry is wholly lost, excepting a few fragments and quotations that are preserved in St. Jerome and others of the fathers. But it was completely refuted by Eusebius, Appolinarius, and Methodius, in the answers they gave to it. And, as St. Jerome rightly observes, such a method of opposing the prophecies is the strongest testimony of their truth. For it shows they were fulfilled with such exactness, that to infidels the prophet seemed not to have foretold things future, but to have related things past. That Daniel's prophecies were not written after the times of Antiochus Epiphanes, appears clearly from hence, that they were translated into Greek a hundred years before his times; and that the translation was in the hands of the Egyptians, who were neither friendly to the Jews nor their religion. Nay, the prophecies of Daniel, foretelling the great successes of Alexander, chap. viii. 5, and xi. 3, were shown to Alexander himself by the Jews, who thereupon obtained several privileges from him, as Josephus informs us, Antiq., lib. ii. cap. 8. "Indeed it may be proved, it hath been proved, to a demonstration," says Bishop Newton, "as much as any thing of this nature can be proved to a demonstration, by all the characters and testimonies, both internal and external, that the prophecies of Daniel were written at the time that the Scripture says they were written." Add to this, that this book of Daniel was one of the Jewish canon, and continually read in their synagogues; and indeed if it had not been in their canon, and received by them as one of their sacred books, it is impossible Josephus could have made so solemn an appeal to its authenticity as he has done. They who wish for further proof of the genuineness and divine inspiration of Daniel's prophecies, may receive full satisfaction in Bishop Chandler's Vindication of his Defence of Christianity, in which he has very largely and learnedly confuted every objection to them, and established upon the firmest foundation their truth and divine authority.

The book of Daniel, says Mr. Locke, is divided into two parts; the former, containing the first six chapters, is historical, the latter is prophetic. His style, unlike that of the succeeding prophets, is plain and narrative; on which account, says Bishop Lowth, he is not to be numbered among the poetical writers of Scripture. Among the old prophets he is most distinct in order of time, and easiest to be understood; and therefore in those things which relate to the last times, he is a key to the rest. All his prophecies refer to each other, as if they were several parts or members of the same body. The first is the easiest to be understood; and every successive prophecy adds something new to that which precedes. He writes in Hebrew, where what he delivers is a bare narrative; but he relates in Chaldee the conversations which he had in this language with the wise men and the kings; and in the same language he reports Nebuchadnezzar's edict, published by him after Daniel had interpreted his dream concerning the great golden image. This shows the great accuracy of our prophet, who relates the very words of those persons whom he introduces as speaking.

It is believed that Daniel died in Chaldea, and that he did not take the advantage of the permission granted by Cyrus to the Jews, of returning to their country: the great employments which he had possessed in the Persian empire probably detained him there. St. Epiphanius says he died at Babylon, and herein he is followed by the generality of historians. See Calmet's Preface, Bishop Chandler's Vindication, and Bishop Lowth's twentieth Prelection.

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter we learn, (1.) That Daniel, and some other descendants of David, were carried captive to Babylon in the third year of Jehoiakim; and that he and some other young men were chosen by Nebuchadnezzar's orders to be educated in the learning of the Chaldeans, and that victuals were appointed them from Nebuchadnezzar's table, 1-7. (2.) That Daniel and his three companions, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, piously refused the royal dainties, and determined to live on pulse and water, which the steward, to whose care they were committed, allowed them to do, 8-16. (3.) The wonderful improvement which they made above all their fellows in knowledge and wisdom, 17-21.

A. M. 3398. B. C. 606. IN the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah ^acame Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it.

2 And the LORD gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand, with ^bpart of the vessels of the house of God: which he carried ^cinto the land of Shinar to the house of his god; ^dand he brought the vessels into the treasure-house of his god.

3 ¶ And the king spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should ^{A. M. 3398 B. C. 606.} bring ¹certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes;

4 Children ^ein whom was no blemish, but well favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and ^fwhom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.

5 And the king appointed them a daily pro-

^a 2 Kings xxiv. 1; 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6.—^b 2 Kings xxiv. 13; Jer. xxvii. 19, 20.—^c Gen. x. 10; xi. 2; Isa. xi. 11; Zech. v. 11.

^d 2 Chron. xxxvi. 7.—¹ Foretold 2 Kings xx. 17, 18; Isaiah xxxvi. 7.—^e Lev. xxiv. 19, 20.—^f Acts vii. 22.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verses 1, 2. In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim came Nebuchadnezzar, &c.—See notes on 2 Kings xxiv. 1-4. And the Lord gave Jehoiakim into his hand—He took Jehoiakim prisoner, and put him in chains, with a design to carry him to Babylon; but he having humbled himself, and submitted to become tributary, he was restored to his kingdom. "At this time," says Lowth, "Jehoiakim having become tributary to the king of Babylon, consequently the seventy years of the Jewish captivity and vassalage to Babylon began." With part of the vessels of the house of God—Some of the vessels were still left, which Nebuchadnezzar seized when he carried Jehoniah captive: see the margin; which he carried into the land of Shinar—That is, he carried the vessels, and not, as some would understand it, the captives also; for Jehoiakim only is mentioned, who died, as we have seen, in the land of Judah. Shinar was the original name of the country about Babylon, (Gen. xi. 2,) and it was still sometimes called by this name by some of the prophets: see the margin. And he brought the vessels into the treasure-house of his god—Of his idol Bel, (see note on Jer. i. 2,) from whence they were taken by Cyrus, and delivered to Zerubbabel, Ezra i. 7, 8. To this agrees the testimony of Berosus, who tells us that Nebuchadnezzar adorned the temple of Bel with the spoils of war which he had taken in that expedition: see Joseph. Antiq., lib. x. cap. 11.

Verses 3, 4. And the king spake unto Ashpenaz, master of the eunuchs—One of the chief officers of his palace; the officers that attended about the persons of the eastern kings being commonly eunuchs, (a custom still practised in the Ottoman court,) such being employed as guardians over the women which the kings kept for their pleasure. That he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and, or rather, even, of the king's seed—The conjunction copulative being often used by way of explication. And thus Isaiah's prophecy was punctually fulfilled, chap. xxxix. 7. Children in whom was no blemish—He was directed to make choice of such as were comely, and had no defect or deformity of body, to which the Hebrew word כַּחֲסִים, here used, is chiefly applied, answerable to the Greek καλῶς. But by the subsequent characters in the verse, it should seem that the young men were to be as complete in every respect as was possible, perfect in their mental as well as corporal powers. The greatest care seems to have been required as to the accomplishments of their minds, and on this account three several expressions are made use of, the particular force of each of which it may not be easy to ascertain. "Perhaps," says Mr. Wintle, "the first relates to the best and most excellent natural abilities; the second, to the acquisition of the greatest improvements from cultivation; and the third, to the communication of their perceptions in the happiest manner to others." He translates the clause as follows: Ready of understanding in all wisdom, and of skill in science, and expert in prudence. Or, more generally, the expressions may only signify that they were to be such as had been instructed, and had made proficiency, in every thing that was taught in the land of Judea. And such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace—Not only being of a strong constitution to endure the fatigue of long waitings, in or near the royal presence, during which they were not permitted to sit down; "but qualified for every business in which they might be employed, and to do credit to the situation in which they were to stand." And whom they might teach the learning and tongue of the Chaldeans—As Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, so we are not to wonder that Daniel was taught the learning of the Chaldeans; and that he so far excelled in it, as to be placed at the head of the magi: see chap. iv. 9. It must be observed that the word לְרִים, rendered children in the beginning of this verse, does not signify persons in a state of childhood, but refers to those of more advanced years. The expression is applied to Rehoboam's counsellors, 1 Kings xii. 8, who cannot be thought to have been mere children. Nor can we suppose Daniel and his companions to have been less than eighteen or twenty years of age at this time, as may be concluded from Daniel's being put into considerable posts in the government soon after.

Verse 5. The king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat—Such as he had at his own table; wherein his humanity and bounty appeared

A. M. 3398. vision of the king's meat, and of ² the wine which he drank: so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might ³ stand before the king.

6 Now, among these were of the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah:

7 ¹ Unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names: ² for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar; and to Hananiah, of Shadrach; and to Mishael, of Meshach; and to Azariah, of Abed-nego.

² Heb. the wine of his drink.—³ Ver. 19; Gen. xli. 46; 1 Kings x. 8.—¹ Gen. xli. 45; 2 Kings xxiv. 17.—² Chap. iv. 8; v. 12.

toward them the more conspicuous, they being captives. So nourishing them, &c.—The Vulgate renders it, Ut enutriti, &c.; that, being nourished three years, they might afterward stand in the presence of the king. It seems from what is here said, that the Chaldeans entertained a notion that a diet of the best sort contributed both to the beauty of the body and the improvement of the mind.

Verses 6, 7. Among these were Daniel, Hananiah, &c.—All their names had some affinity with the name of Jehovah, the God whom they worshipped. Daniel signifies, God is my judge, or the judgment of God; Hananiah, God has been gracious to me, or, one favoured of Jehovah; Mishael, the powerful one of God; Azariah, the help of Jehovah, or, Jehovah is my succour. In like manner, the prince of the eunuchs, in changing their names, as a mark of dominion and authority over them, gave them such as had an affinity with the names of the gods of the Chaldees; Belteshazzar, the name given to Daniel, being derived from Bel, or Baal, the chief idol of Babylon, and signifying the treasurer of Baal, or, the depositary of the secrets, or treasure, of Baal. Shadrach, according to some, means the inspiration of the sun; being derived from shada, to pour out, and rach, a king, a name given to the sun by the Babylonians. Meshach, derived from a Babylonian deity called Shach, or from a goddess called Sheshach, is thought to signify, He who belongs to Shach, or Sheshach. Abed-nego imports the servant of the shining light, or, as Calmet thinks, of the sun, or the morning star, unless the word should be written Abed-nebo, referring to the idol so called, which gave name to several distinguished personages among the Babylonians: see Isa. xli. 2. It is certain from Herodotus, lib. i., that the Chaldeans worshipped Jupiter Belus, Venus, and other idols, or the same under other names; and from these it is probable that the names were given, according to Chaldee usage, to these young men.

Verse 8. But Daniel purposed that he would not defile himself—The defilement here alluded to might arise either from the food being such as was prohibited in the law of Moses, or else what was offered to the idols of the Chaldeans, or entreated to be blessed

8 ¶ But Daniel purposed in his heart ¹ that he would not defile himself ² with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank: therefore, he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

9 Now ¹ God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs.

10 And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink: for why should he see your faces ³ worse liking than in their names: see 1 Cor. viii. 10, 20. With the portion of the king's meat—It was the custom of most nations, before their meals, to make an oblation of some part of what they ate and drank to their gods, as a thankful acknowledgment that everything which they enjoyed was their gift; so that every entertainment had something in it of the nature of a sacrifice. This practice, generally prevailing, might make Daniel and his friends look upon the provisions coming from the king's table as no better than meats offered to idols; and therefore to be accounted unclean, or polluted: see the margin. Nor with the wine which he drank—Though wine was not prohibited in the Levitical law, yet Daniel might wish to abstain from it, chiefly from motives of temperance; or because it came from an entertainment wherein a libation was made of it to idols, he might think himself obliged to abstain from motives of conscience: see Wintle and Lowth.

¹ Deut. xxxii. 38; Ezek. iv. 13; Hos. ix. 3; Acts xv. 20.—² Gen. xxxix. 21; Psal. cvi. 46; Prov. xvi. 7.—³ Heb. sadder.

Verse 9. Now God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love, &c.—Hebrew, רחמי, compassionate regard, or, bowels of compassion, which is also the sense of the same word, chap. ii. 18. It is a very strong expression, and denotes a kind of parental compassion, like that of St. Paul in his epistle to Philemon, verse 12, Receive him that is mine own bowels. We see a like instance of God's care over Joseph, (Gen. xxxix. 21,) when he was a poor captive, a prisoner, and destitute of all friends to support or comfort him: see Psal. cvi. 46, where, as here, the favour of men toward God's people is attributed to his overruling and gracious providence over them. And, considering what important consequences frequently follow upon it, we may, with great reason, acknowledge the hand of God in it, whenever it takes place.

Verse 10. The prince of the eunuchs said, I fear my lord the king—He objects that he should incur the king's displeasure, and bring his life into danger, if he complied with Daniel's request; the king having appointed what sort of meat and drink Daniel and his young friends should use, and having given no one authority to change it for any other, especially for a kind less calculated to preserve their health, and increase the strength and vigour of their constitutions.

A. M. 3398. the children which are of your ⁴ sort ?
B. C. 606. then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king.

11 Then said Daniel to ⁵ Melzar, whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishaël, and Azariah, 12 Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days ; and let them give us ⁶ pulse ⁷ to eat, and water to drink.

13 Then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat : and as thou seest, deal with thy servants.

14 So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days.

⁴ Or, term, or, continuance. — ⁵ Or, the steward. — ⁶ Heb. of pulse. ⁷ Heb. that we may eat, &c. — ^m 1 Kings iii. 12 ; James i. 5, 17.

tions, and beauty of their appearance. For why should he see your faces worse liking—Hebrew, וְיֵרָא, οὐκ ὡς πρόσωπα, as the LXX. render it, more sad and dejected, or meager and lean ; than the children which are of your sort—Or, which are of your age, as the Hebrew word גִּיל signifies in the Arabic, and as the LXX. understand it. Probably, however, the word may include the condition also.

Verses 11, 12. Then said Daniel, Prove thy servants, I beseech thee—To satisfy him that there would be no danger of any ill consequence, Daniel desires the matter might be put to a trial for ten days ; and let them give us pulse to eat—The word הוֹרִיעַ, here used, seems to signify fruits or vegetables ; or rather, according to the Greek interpreter, seeds in general. At the 16th verse the word is זֵרַעִים, seeds, and some MSS. read it so in this verse. The sense is doubtless the same in both places, and perhaps may be well enough expressed by that kind of nourishing seed called pulse. The LXX. render it, ἀπο τῶν σπερμάτων, of seeds. “Pliny, in his Natural History, p. 380, mentions a kind of pulse, that is said to affect the temper of those that feed upon it, and to produce equanimity and gentleness. Various sorts of grain were dried and prepared for food by the people of the East, as wheat, barley, rice, and pulse. Of some of these was the parched corn, mentioned in Scripture, and the chief food of the labourers and poorer sort of people ; and perhaps something of this kind of preparation might have been the choice of Daniel.”—Wintle.

Verse 15. At the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer, &c.—The poor pulse, seeds, and roots, nourished and strengthened Daniel and his companions more than the rich food which the others ate from the king's table nourished them. Although this might, in part, be the natural effect of their temperance, yet it must chiefly be ascribed to the special blessing of God, which will make a little go a great way, and a dinner of herbs more nutritive and strengthening than a stalled ox.

15 And at the end of ten days their A. M. 3398.
countenances appeared fairer and B. C. 606.
fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat.

16 Thus Melzar took away the portion of their meat, and the wine that they should drink ; and gave them pulse.

17 ¶ As for these four children, ^m God gave them ⁿ knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom : and ^o Daniel had ^o understanding in all visions and dreams.

18 Now at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in, then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar.

19 And the king communed with them : and

ⁿ Acts vii. 22. — ^o Or, he made Daniel understand. — ^o Num. xii. 6 ; 2 Chron. xxvi. 5 ; Chap. v. 11, 12, 14 ; x. 1.

Verse 17. As for these four children—The Hebrew is literally, As to these children, or young men, each of them four : to them God gave knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom—That is, in all sorts of learning and knowledge. They became particularly skilful in those parts of the Chaldean learning which were really useful, and which might recommend them to the favour of the kings both of Babylon and Persia, and qualify them for places of trust under them ; as Moses's education in the Egyptian learning fitted him to be a ruler of God's people. And Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams—Daniel excelled the others in the gift of prophecy, and in his extraordinary skill in interpreting all sorts of visions and dreams, namely, such as were sent of God, and foreshowed future events, under the cover of certain images and representations, which required an interpretation in order to the understanding of their true signification. But we must not suppose that Daniel attained this skill by any study or rules of art. It was God's supernatural gift unto him, as was the same kind of knowledge which Joseph possessed and manifested when he interpreted the dreams of Pharaoh, and those of the chief butler and baker.

Verses 18–20. Now at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in—At the end of three years, see verse 5, the prince of the eunuchs brought them in—According to the king's command. And the king communed with them—To try their proficiency. This shows the king's ability and judgment, without which he could not have discerned their fitness for his service, and their excellence above others. He examined all candidates that applied, and preferred those that outstripped the rest. Therefore stood they before the king—They were in continual attendance in the king's court. The same expression is used of Elijah and Jeremiah, as God's servants and messengers, 1 Kings xvii. 1 ; Jer. xv. 19. And the Levites are said to stand before the congregation to minister to them, Num. xvi. 9. And in all matters of wisdom and under-

A. M. 3399. among them all was found none like
B. C. 606.

Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore ^p stood they before the king.

20 ^a And in all matters of ^q wisdom and understanding, that the king inquired of them,

^p Gen. xli. 46; Verse 5.—^q 1 Kings x. 1.—^o Heb. wisdom of understanding.

standing—In a general knowledge of things; that the king inquired of them—This is a further confirmation of the king's noble endowments, and of his great care to choose only proper persons to be in offices of trust, namely, persons well qualified to serve him in the great affairs of the kingdom. He found them ten times better, &c.—Hebrew, עשר ידיו, ten hands above, all the magicians and astrologers that were in his realm—The words may be understood of those that employed themselves in the lawful search of natural causes and effects, and of the regular motions of the heavenly bodies. For, inasmuch as Daniel made intercession to the captain of the guard, that the wise men of Babylon might not be slain, chap. ii. 24, we cannot suppose that all of them were such as studied unlawful arts and sciences, especially as he himself was afterward made master, or head, over them. These names are evidently to be taken in a good sense, as the magi, Matt. ii. 1; and the astrologers were then nearly, if not altogether, the same as astronomers with us. In short, the words seem to comprehend those persons in general, that were distinguished in the several kinds of learning cultivated among the Chaldees. It cannot, therefore, be collected from these words, that Daniel applied himself to the study of what are called magic arts, but to the sciences of the Chal-

he found them ten times better than A. M. 3399.
all the magicians and astrologers that B. C. 606.
were in all his realm.

21 ^r And Daniel continued even unto the first year of King Cyrus.

^r Chap. vi. 28; x. 1. He lived to see that glorious time of the return of his people from the Babylonian captivity, though he did not die then. So till is used Psa. cx. 1; cxii. 8.

dees; in the same manner as Moses had, long before, applied himself to the study of the wisdom of Egypt. And in giving Nebuchadnezzar proof that Daniel excelled all the wise men in his realm in these branches of knowledge and wisdom, God poured contempt on the pride of the Chaldeans, and put honour on the low estate of his people.

Verse 21. And Daniel continued—Hebrew, ויחי, he was, namely, in the court of Babylon, known, employed, and held in reputation, under Nebuchadnezzar and his successors; even unto the first year of Cyrus—Till the monarchy passed from the Chaldeans to the Persians in the person of Cyrus, under whom also he maintained his authority. For the expression, unto, or till, the first year, is not intended to signify that he lived no longer; for it appears, from chap. x. 1, that he lived at least till the third year of that monarch, in which year he had visions and revelations. He lived to see the promises of Isaiah and Jeremiah fulfilled, with respect to the deliverance of the Jews from their state of captivity in Babylon, which began to be accomplished in the first year of Cyrus, Ezra i. 1, and for the accomplishment of which we find Daniel very solicitous, chap. ix. 1, 2. This being so remarkable a year, the text takes notice that Daniel lived to that time, but does not say how much longer he lived.

CHAPTER II.

In this chapter we have, (1.) The perplexity of Nebuchadnezzar through a dream, which he had forgotten, 1. (2.) His application to the wise men of Babylon to tell him the dream and the interpretation thereof, and their inability to do it, 2–11. (3.) Orders given to destroy them all, as impostors, and Daniel with his fellows among the rest, 12, 13. (4.) By promising to declare the dream and its interpretation, Daniel prevents the execution of these orders, at least in part; and by joint prayer with his three companions, he obtains from God the discovery of the dream and its interpretation, 14–19. (5.) The thanksgiving he offered to God for this great favour, 20–23. (6.) His admission to the king, and the discovery he made to him, both of the dream and of the interpretation of it, 25–45. (7.) The great honour which Nebuchadnezzar conferred on Daniel, in recompense for his service, and the preferment of his companions with him, 46–49.

A. M. 3401. AND in the second year of the
B. C. 603. reign of Nebuchadnezzar, Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, A. M. 3401.

wherewith his spirit was troubled, B. C. 603.

^a Gen. xli. 8;

Chapter iv. 5.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verse 1. In the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar—That is, according to the Babylonian account, or the fourth according to the Jewish; that is, in the second year of his reigning alone, or the fourth from his first reigning jointly with his father.

Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams—Having subdued all his enemies, and firmly established his throne, it is probable he was thinking upon his bed (see verse 29) what should come to pass hereafter—what should be the future success of his family and kingdom, and whether any, or what, families and

A. M. 3401. and ^b his sleep brake from him.
B. C. 603.

2 ° Then the king commanded to call the magicians, and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to show the king his dreams. So they came and stood before the king.

3 And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream.

4 Then spake the Chaldeans to the king

^b Esther vi. 1; Chap. vi. 18.—^c Gen. xli. 8; Exodus vii. 11; Chap. v. 7.—^d 1 Kings i. 31; Chap. iii. 9; v. 10; vi. 6, 21.

kingdoms might arise after his own: and as our waking thoughts usually give some tincture to our dreams, he dreamed of something to the same purpose, which astonished him, but which he could not rightly understand. The dream affected him strongly at the time; but awaking in confusion, he had but an imperfect remembrance of it; he could not recollect the particulars. It is said he dreamed dreams, because though it was but one continued dream, it contained divers scenes of affairs, being a description of the succession of the four monarchies which were to continue, under different forms, unto the end of the world. Wherewith his spirit was troubled—The Hebrew expression, וְהַנֶּפֶשׁ רָוָה, denotes that his spirit was violently agitated, or in such consternation as to affect his body, and disturb his rest. And his sleep brake from him—Or, went from him, as a like phrase is rendered chap. vi. 18.

Verse 2. Then the king commanded to call the magicians and the astrologers—Concerning the meaning of these two words, see note on chap. i. 20. Daniel and his companions were not called among them; perhaps because the Chaldeans despised them as youths and strangers, and would not have them thought equal in knowledge to themselves. And the sorcerers—This word is always taken in an ill sense by the sacred writers, signifying a sort of necromancers, that through diabolical arts pretended to an acquaintance with departed spirits; from כַּשְׁף, præstigiis uti, to use deceitful tricks, or enchantments. They were, perhaps, not very unlike the sortilegi, or fortune-tellers of the ancient Romans; and exercised themselves in various sorts of juggling tricks, or enchantments, which were supposed to be performed by the assistance of demons: see note on Isa. xxix. 4. And the Chaldeans—The Chaldeans were so much addicted to the study of the motions of the heavenly bodies, and to make prognostications from thence, that the word Chaldean is used, both in Greek and Latin writers, for an astrologer. Diodorus, lib. ii., speaking of the Chaldeans, says, They employ their whole time in philosophy and divination, and are trained up to them from their childhood: and Strabo, lib. xvi., makes a distinction, and observes, that the word is sometimes applied to the nation, sometimes to the sect. Curtius, lib. v. cap. 1, describes them thus: "Chaldæi siderum motus et statas temporum vices ostendere soliti:" "The Chal-

in Syriac, ^d O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation.

5 The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, The thing is gone from me: if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ye shall be ^e cut ¹ in pieces, and your houses shall be made a dung-hill.

6 ^f But if ye show the dream, and the inter-

^e 1 Sam. xv. 33; Ezra vi. 11; 2 Kings x. 27; Chap. iii. 29; Luke xii. 46; Heb. xi. 27.—¹ Chald. made pieces.—^f Chap. v. 16.

deans are accustomed to show the motions of the stars, and the appointed changes of times:" and Cicero, De Divin., p. 4, "Chaldæi—diuturna observatione siderum scientiam putantur effecisse, ut prædici posset quid cuique eventurum et quo quisque fato natus esset:" "The Chaldeans, by the long observation of the stars, are thought to have formed a science, whereby may be foretold what is about to happen to every one, and to what fate every one is born." These passages may serve to show the opinion that was commonly entertained of these Chaldeans; and therefore we shall be less surprised to find, at verse 4, this name, according to the general sense of it, used for the magicians of every sort. To show the king his dreams—Dreams were often considered by the heathen as giving particular intimations of the will of Heaven; and hence the expression of Homer, in his first Iliad, Καὶ γὰρ τ' ὄναρ ἐκ Διὸς ἐστὶ, For dreams descend from Jove. And in the beginning of his second Iliad, he has, by a bold and beautiful prosopopœia, conveyed the will of Jupiter to Agamemnon in a dream, investing Ὀνειρος (a dream) with all the qualities of a divine messenger. Diog. Laert. makes mention of a dream of Socrates, whereby he foretold his death within three days; and most of the schools among pagan philosophers gave credit to dreams, and considered them as revealing the will of the gods: see Wintle.

Verse 4. Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriac—The ancient Chaldee and the Syrian language were the same: see Gen. xxxi. 47; 2 Kings xviii. 26; Ezra iv. 7. This language is found in its greatest purity in the books of Daniel and Ezra. The following part of the chapter, from this verse, is written in Chaldee, and so on to the end of the seventh chapter: the reason of which seems to be, that what is said from hence to the end of that chapter, relates chiefly to the Chaldeans, or the inhabitants of Babylonia; whereas what follows, from the beginning of the eighth chapter, refers mostly to the Jewish people, and therefore is written in Hebrew.

Verses 5, 6. The king said, The thing is gone from me—That is, he could not recollect the substance, much less all the particulars of it; some traces of it, however, must have remained in his mind, by which he thought the whole might be brought back to his remembrance, if his wise men could give him any clew to his dream, or hit, any way, upon the sub-

A. M. 3401. pretation thereof, ye shall receive of
B. C. 603. me gifts and ² rewards and great honour: therefore, show me the dream and the interpretation thereof.

7 They answered again and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will show the interpretation of it.

8 The king answered and said, I know of certainty that ye would ³ gain the time, because ye see the thing is gone from me.

9 But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, ² there is but one decree for you:

² Or, fee, Chap. v. 17; Verse 48.

ject of it. This, without doubt, was the state of his mind; for unless some traces of his dream, however imperfect, had remained in it, his wise men would have endeavoured to impose upon him, and have told him any dream they could devise. If ye will not make known the dream, ye shall be cut in pieces—Literally, be made into pieces. So Syriac; that is, utterly destroyed, as the LXX. and the Vulgate render it. A kind of punishment, of which other places in Scripture make mention: see the margin. And your houses shall be made a dunghill—That is, shall be entirely pulled down, and never rebuilt. The ground of this threatening of the king is, that the eastern nations esteemed it a very grievous punishment inflicted upon any one to efface his memory, which in a great measure would be done by pulling down his house, and preventing its being ever rebuilt. The LXX. read, οι οικoi υμων διατραγησονται, your houses shall be plundered, and the Vulgate, your houses shall be confiscated, or taken for the king's use. This proud king seemed determined to exercise the bitterest acts of cruelty against his magicians, and to blot out the very traces of their memory, if they did not gratify his unreasonable but anxious wishes. We meet with a like denunciation from this haughty monarch, chap. iii. 9. But if ye show the dream, &c., ye shall receive gifts—As I have threatened you with death, and the destruction of all you have, if you do not perform what I require: so I promise you honour and great rewards if you do perform it.

Verses 7, 8. They answered, Let the king tell his servants the dream—But this the king could not do; and yet, unless he could do it, they could not proceed one step toward the gratifying of his desires. The king said, I know of a certainty that ye would gain time—"You only want to protract the time, either that the dream may return, or that my uneasiness may be dissipated, and that, occupied in other affairs, I may think no more of the dream. But I will have from you immediately a positive answer, and a precise explication." However tyrannical this may appear in the king, his reasoning must be allowed to be very just and right: for if the astrologers could obtain from their gods the knowledge of future events by the explication of a dream, certainly for ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me, till the time be changed: therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can show me the interpretation thereof.

10 ¶ The Chaldeans answered before the king, and said, There is not a man upon the earth that can show the king's matter: therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler, that asked such things at any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean.

11 And it is a rare thing that the king re-

³ Chald. buy, Eph. v. 16.—² Esth. iv. 11.

the same gods could have made known to them what the dream was. The original expression means, to buy, or redeem, time, and may be properly applied to men's using their utmost endeavours to free themselves out of some imminent danger, or difficulty, gaining time being of considerable advantage to that purpose.

Verse 9. If ye will not make known the dream, &c., there is but one decree for you—No alteration will be made as to my declaration; and you have nothing to expect but the execution of the sentence which I have passed upon you. For ye have prepared lying and corrupt words—The king's meaning seems to be, that he found by their behaviour, they were ready, in case he told his dream, to invent and give some kind of plausible interpretation of it; or such a one as might, in some way or other, be applicable to whatever events should follow it: in short, that he found their pretended knowledge to be all imposture, since, if they were able to foretell things not yet come to pass, they might certainly tell things already past, and so inform him what was the subject of his dream. Till the time be changed—Till there be such an alteration of things, that neither my dream, nor your interpretation, may be thought of any more. Or, as some think, this may be spoken of the wise men framing excuses, in order to delay their punishment, in hopes there might be some change in things, or in the king's mind, whereby they might escape it. From what he says, however, in the conclusion of the verse, it seems to be rather an insinuation, that they intended to forge or invent an interpretation of his dream, not being able to show the true interpretation of it.

Verses 10, 11. The Chaldeans answered, There is not a man upon the earth that can show the king's matter—Here the wise men are driven to acknowledge their inability, and their excuse is, that they could indeed tell what dreams signified, if the dreams were told them; but as to telling what a person had dreamed, it was above the power of any art or knowledge but that of the gods, who knew all things. But this reasoning was weak, and showed the king's accusation to be just, namely, that they had prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before him; or, that their business and skill were only to invent or

A. M. 3401. quireth, and there is none other that
B. C. 603. can show it before the king, ^h except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.

12 For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon.

13 And the decree went forth that the wise men should be slain; and they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain.

14 ¶ Then Daniel ⁴ answered with counsel and wisdom to Arioch the ⁵ captain ⁶ of the king's guard, which was gone forth to slay the wise men of Babylon:

^h Verse 28; Chap. v. 11.—⁴ Chald. returned.—⁵ Or, chief marshal.—⁶ Chald. chief of the executioners, or, slaughtermen, affix such interpretations of dreams as they thought suitable, without having any real knowledge at all of future things.

Verses 12, 13. For this cause the king was angry and very furious, &c.—The king, in his rage and fury, probably did not think of sending for Daniel, which made Daniel try to get admission to the king, verse 14, to prevent his own destruction, as well as that of the other wise men. And they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain—Though, as it appears, they had not been summoned with the wise men of Chaldea. This was extremely unjust to Daniel and his companions; for it is highly probable they would have received no share of the gifts, and rewards, and great honour, which the other wise men would have received could they have told the king's dream, therefore they ought not to have been involved in their punishment. But those concerned in the execution of the decree, being armed with power, did not attend to the voice of justice: absolute power, indeed, too seldom does.

Verse 14. Then Daniel answered with counsel and wisdom—This seems to be better rendered in the Vulgate, namely, Tunc Daniel requisivit de lege atque sententia ab Arioch—Then Daniel inquired of Arioch concerning the law and decree, namely, which the king had made for destroying the wise men: that is, he inquired the reason of the decree and judgment issued against them; for as he had not been called in unto the king with the other wise men, he probably was ignorant of all that had passed with regard to the king's dream. The word טעם, here rendered wisdom, usually signifies an edict, or public decree, set forth by authority. Captain of the king's guard—“Literally, chief of the king's executioners. Greek, ἀρχιμαγειρος, the chief butcher [or chief cook.] The term רב טבחים, may probably mean, the leader of the guard appointed for capital punishments. Nor does this office seem to have been at all infamous; for Arioch had free access to the king, as we find, verse 25: see also 1 Sam. xv. 33. And perhaps his office might be to execute any of the king's commands on his subjects, whether they related to honour or dishonour, to life or to 15 He answered and said to Arioch A. M. 3401.

the king's captain, Why is the decree B. C. 603.
so hasty from the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel.

16 Then Daniel went in, and desired of the king that he would give him time, and that he would show the king the interpretation.

17 Then Daniel went to his house and made the thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions:

18 ⁱ That they would desire mercies ⁷ of the God of heaven concerning this secret; ⁸ that Daniel and his fellows should not perish with death. The same title is given to Nebuzar-adan, 2 Kings xxv. 8; and from the character of the commander, it seems to mean a person of the first authority over the soldiery. Mr. Bruce (Trav., p. 455) speaks of an officer, called the executioner of the camp, whose business it was to attend at capital punishments; and this belonged only to a detachment of the royal Abyssinian army.”—Wintle.

Gen. xxxvii. 36.—ⁱ Matt. xviii. 12.—⁷ Chaldee, from before God.—⁸ Or, that they should not destroy Daniel, &c.

Verses 15, 16. Why is the decree so hasty from the king?—So precipitate, or, as Wintle renders it, so urgent, to slay the innocent, who were never called, and knew nothing of the matter? The word מַהֲרָה, here used, signifies both hasty and pressing. So the Syriac. The LXX. render it, ἡ ἀναιδής, shameful; the Vulgate translates the verse thus: He (namely, Daniel) asked him who had received authority from the king, for what reason so cruel a sentence had gone forth from the presence of the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel—Acquainted him with the whole affair, of which, it is evident, he knew nothing before. Then Daniel went in—Or, went up, as עָלָה properly signifies; that is, either to the palace or throne of the king; and desired of the king that he would give him time, &c.—The king's anger was now abated; and withal the providence of God was visible, in inclining the king's heart to allow Daniel that favour which he had before denied to the magicians; and that he would show the king the interpretation—Daniel promised this, in confidence that God, to whom he intended to make application by prayer, would discover to him both the dream and its interpretation. Doubtless God inspired him with a persuasion to this purpose.

Verses 17, 18. Then Daniel went to his house—Which, it seems, was near the palace, that he might there be alone with his God; for from him alone, who is the Father of lights, he expected this important discovery. Nor did he only pray for it himself, but engaged his companions also to unite their supplications to his. That they would desire mercies—Chaldee, לְמַבְעָא וְרַחֲמִין, et misericordiam petendam esse, that mercy must be asked, of the God of heaven—In applying to God for any blessing, all our dependence must be on his mercy and compassion

A. M. 3401. the rest of the wise men of Babylon.
B. C. 603.

19 Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel ^k in a night vision. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

20 Daniel answered and said, ^l Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: ^m for wisdom and might are his:

21 And he changeth ⁿ the times and the seasons; ^o he removeth kings, and setteth up kings; ^p he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding:

22 ^q He revealeth the deep and secret things: ^r he knoweth what is in the darkness, and ^s the light dwelleth with him.

23 I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers, who hast given me wisdom and might, and hast made known unto A. M. 3401 me now what we ^t desired of thee: B. C. 603.

for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.

24 ¶ Therefore, Daniel went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went and said thus unto him; Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will show unto the king the interpretation.

25 Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste, and said thus unto him, ^u I have found a man of the ¹⁰ captives of Judah, that will make known unto the king the interpretation.

^k Num. xii. 6; Job xxxiii. 15, 16.—^l Psa. cxiii. 2; cxv. 18.
^m Jer. xxxii. 19.—ⁿ Esth. i. 13; 1 Chron. xxix. 30; Chap. vii. 25; xi. 6.—^o Job xii. 18; Ps. xxv. 6, 7; Jeremiah xxvii. 5; Chap. iv. 17.—^p James i. 5.

^q Job xii. 22; Psa. xxv. 14; Verses 28, 29.—^r Psa. cxxxix. 11, 12; Hebrews iv. 13.—^s Chapter v. 11, 14; James i. 17.
^t Verse 18.—^u Chald. That I have found.—¹⁰ Chald. children of the captivity of Judah.

for we can expect nothing by way of recompense for our merits. Concerning this secret—Namely, that it might be discovered unto them. Observe, reader, whatever is the matter of our care, or occasions us trouble or fear, we must spread before God in prayer; for God gives us leave to be humbly free with him, and in prayer to enter into the detail of our wants and burdens. The danger here equally threatened Daniel and his friends, and therefore it was fit they should all join in prayer for the averting of it. And here we see the power and efficacy of united addresses to Heaven, and the important benefits which the fervent prayers of a few holy men may sometimes bring down upon a multitude. Daniel's prudence, and his piety, with that of his friends, were the means of saving the lives of all the wise men of Babylon!

Verses 19–23. Then was the secret revealed—It is generally thought that this secret was revealed to Daniel only, and that in sleep, by a dream, or, as it is here termed, a night vision. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven—He does not stay till he had told what had been revealed to him to the king, and seen whether he would own it to be his dream or not; but, being confident it was so, and that he had gained his point, he immediately turns his prayers into praises. As he had prayed in full assurance that God would do for him what he asked, so he gives thanks in full assurance that he had done it, and in both he has an eye to God as the God of heaven. Daniel answered and said—"In the latter part of this and the next three verses, Daniel celebrates the praises of the Almighty in a simple, but truly sublime and animated strain of warm and unaffected piety, makes especial mention of his wisdom and power, and illustrates the display of those attributes in several instances, apposite to the subject and occasion."—Wintle. For wisdom and might are his—His wisdom appears in ordering the great affairs of the world, and his might, or power, in bringing them to pass. To the same purpose Jeremiah styles him, great in counsel, and mighty in work, chap. xxxii. 19. And he changeth the times, &c.—The great changes of the world are brought to pass by removing kings and translating their dominions to others; by raising some empires, and pulling down others. Of this, Nebuchadnezzar's dream, which was then revealed to Daniel, contains several signal instances, as it comprehends the succession of the four great monarchies of the world. He knoweth what is in the darkness, &c.—The most secret things are manifest to him; he discerns them while they yet lie hid in their causes, and discovers and brings them to light at the proper time. I praise thee, &c., who hast given, or, because thou hast given, me wisdom and might—Namely, the means and power of saving myself and others from the greatest danger.

Verses 24, 25. Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch—Daniel, having been thus divinely instructed, was desirous to save the lives of the wise men of Babylon, who were unjustly condemned, as well as his own; and, being now prepared, he goes immediately to Arioch, and bespeaks the reversing of the sentence against them. Though there might be some among them, perhaps, who deserved to die, as magicians, by the law of God; yet that which they here stood condemned for was not a crime worthy of death or of bonds: and others of them probably employed themselves in laudable studies, and searches after useful knowledge. Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste—Or, very speedily, as the Syriac reads it; and said, I have found a man that will make known unto the king the interpretation—Jerome remarks here the manner of courtiers, Qui cum bona nunciant, sua videri volunt, who, when they relate good things, are willing to have them thought their own, and to

A. M. 3401. 26 The king answered and said to
B. C. 603. Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, Art thou able to make known unto me
the dream which I have seen, and the interpretation thereof?

27 Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, show unto the king;

28 ^a But there is a God in heaven that re-vealeth secrets, and ¹¹ maketh known to the

^a Gen. xl. 8; xli. 16; Verses 18, 47; Amos iv. 13.—¹¹ Chald.
hath made known.—^{*} Gen. xlix. 1.—¹² Chald. came up.

have merit ascribed to themselves. But Daniel was far from assuming any merit to himself, and therefore ascribes entirely to God the ability which he had to make known to the king the dream and the interpretation of it.

Verses 26-29. The king said to Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar—See note on chap. i. 7;
Art thou able to make known to me the dream? &c.
—The king seems to have questioned whether he could make his promise good. The less likely, however, it appeared to the king that Daniel should do this, the more God was glorified in enabling him to do it. Daniel answered, Cannot the wise men, &c.
—Daniel's words, as here translated, bear the interrogative form; but not in the original. They seem to be more accurately translated by the LXX., *To μυστήριον ο βασιλεὺς ἐπερωτά οὐκ ἐστὶ σοφῶν—ἀναγγεῖλαι
τῷ βασιλεῖ, The mystery concerning which the king inquires, it does not belong to the wise men, &c., to declare to the king.* Or, as the Vulgate has it, "the wise men cannot declare." But there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets—Daniel assumes nothing to himself, but gives the glory to God alone,
whose knowledge, as he tells the king, infinitely exceeds that of all the wise men of Chaldea, and of the gods, or demons, which they consulted, or worshipped. And at the same time he also, with great generosity, pleads the cause of the wise men, who could not tell the dream; alleging in their excuse, that such knowledge was not attainable by any mere human ability; and that he should have been as much at a loss as they, had not God been pleased to reveal it unto him: see verse 30. The modesty and humility of Daniel, in this whole address to the king, are highly deserving of our notice and imitation.
The soothsayers, here mentioned, were not noticed
among the several sorts of pretenders to wisdom, named in verse 2. The word so rendered, derived from גור, to cut, is thought by some to signify either the aruspices, who examined the liver and entrails
of beasts by cutting them open; or those diviners
who, by the disposition and combination of numbers,
made amulets, or charms, by which they pretended to foretell future events. Rabbi Jacchiades favours
the latter opinion, supposing that the aruspices were

King Nebuchadnezzar ^{*} what shall ^{A. M. 3401.}
be in the latter days. Thy dream, ^{B. C. 603.}
and the visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these;

29 As for thee, O king, thy thoughts ¹² came into thy mind upon thy bed, what should come to pass hereafter: ^{*} and he that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass.

30 ^{*} But as for me, this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living, ¹³ but for their sakes that shall

¹² Ver. 21, 28.—^{*} Gen. xli. 16; Acts iii. 12.—¹³ Or, but for the intent that the interpretation may be made known to the king.

scarcely known in the East. And maketh known what shall be in the latter days—Or, what shall come to pass hereafter, as it is expressed verses 29,
45. O king, thy thoughts came into thy mind upon thy bed—Daniel, by way of introduction to his telling the king what had been the subject of his dream, informs him of what he meditated, or thought, before he fell asleep, namely, that he revolved in his mind what should be the future condition of the vast empire which he had erected by his various conquests. This surely must have excited in Nebuchadnezzar a great admiration of the God whom Daniel worshipped.

Verse 30. This secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living— Namely, to merit such a discovery, or qualify me for receiving it. No praise is due to me on this occasion. Observe, reader, it well becomes those whom God has highly favoured and honoured, to be humble and low in their own eyes; and to lay aside all opinion of their own wisdom and worthiness, that God alone may have all the praise of what they are,
and have, and do. But for their sakes that shall make known the interpretation to the king—For the sake of Daniel's brethren and companions in tribulation, who had by their prayers helped him to obtain this discovery, and so might be said to make known the interpretation; that their lives might be spared, that they might come into favour and be preferred, and that all the people of the Jews might fare the better in their captivity for their sakes.
This is the sense of the words, according to the common translation; but the marginal reading is thought by many to be more agreeable to the context, which if we follow, the meaning of the clause is, "Not for any wisdom of mine, but that the king
may know the interpretation," &c. "The impious
king," says Jerome, "had a prophetic dream, that,
the saint interpreting it, God might be glorified, and
the captives, and those who served God in captivity, might receive great consolation. We read the same thing of Pharaoh; not that Pharaoh and Nebuchadnezzar deserved to see such things, but that Joseph and Daniel, interpreting them, might be preferred to all others." And, as Jerome observes afterward,

A. M. 3401. make known the interpretation to the
B. C. 603. king, ^a and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart.

31 ¶ Thou, O king, ¹⁴ sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible.

32 ^b This image's head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his ¹⁵ thighs of brass,

33 His legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay.

^a Verse 47.—¹⁴ Chaldee, wast seeing.—^b Verse 38, &c.
¹⁵ Or, sides.—¹⁶ Or, which was not in hands, as Verse 45.
^c Chap. viii. 25; Zech. iv. 6; 2 Cor. v. 1; Heb. ix. 24.

“That Nebuchadnezzar might admire the grace of divine inspiration, he (Daniel) not only told him the dream which he was favoured with, but even the secret thoughts of his heart previous to the dream.”

Verse 31. Thou, O king, sawest, and behold, a great image—“It appears, from ancient coins and medals, that cities and people were often represented by figures of men and women. A great, terrible human figure was therefore a proper emblem of human power and dominion; and the various metals
of which it was composed not unfitly typified the various kingdoms which should arise. It consisted of four different metals, gold, and silver, and brass,
and iron, mixed with clay; and these four metals,
according to Daniel's own interpretation, mean so many kingdoms; and the order of their succession is clearly denoted by the order of the parts; the head and higher parts signify the earlier times, and the lower parts the latter times. Hesiod, who lived two hundred years before Daniel, spoke of the four ages of the world under the symbols of these metals;
so that this image was formed according to the commonly received notion, and the commonly received notion was not first propagated from hence.”—Bishop Newton. This image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee—This image, says Grotius, appeared with a glorious lustre in the imagination
of Nebuchadnezzar, whose mind was wholly taken up with admiration of worldly pomp and splendour;
but the same monarchies were represented to Daniel
under the shape of fierce and wild beasts, chap. vii.,
as being the great supporters of idolatry and tyranny
in the world. And the form thereof was terrible—
The success which accompanied their arms made them feared and dreaded by all the world.

Verses 32, 33. This image's head was of fine gold—
The Babylonian monarchy had arrived to the height of glory under Nebuchadnezzar, (see verses 37, 38,) who likewise improved and adorned the city of Babylon to such a degree as to make it one of the wonders of the world; so that this empire might justly be compared to a head of gold. His breast and his arms of silver—The second monarchy, of Medes
and Persians, would be inferior to the first: see note on verse 39. His belly and his thighs of brass, his

34 Thou sawest till that a stone ^{A. M. 3401.} was cut out ^{B. C. 603.} without ^c hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces.

35 Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together,
and became ^d like the chaff of the summer
thrashing-floors; and the wind carried them away, that ^e no place was found for them:
and the stone that smote the image ^f became a great mountain, ^g and filled the whole earth.

^d Psa. i. 4; Hos. xiii. 3.—^e Psa. xxxvii. 10, 36.—^f Isaiah
ii. 2, 3.—^g Psalm lxxx. 9.

legs of iron—These emblems denoted the strength of the third and fourth monarchies, and the irresistible force with which they should subdue their adversaries. Iron and brass are the emblems of strength in the prophetical writings; and they were in other respects emblematical of these empires, as we shall see by and by. His feet part of iron and part of clay—By this was signified the Roman empire in its declining state, as will be shown presently.

Verses 34, 35. Thou sawest till a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image, &c.—Here
the whole image is represented as destroyed by a great stone falling upon its feet and breaking them to pieces, whereby the whole image was overset and broken. In like manner the kingdom of Christ, a kingdom of God's own erecting, was to break to pieces and destroy the fourth and last empire, in which the remainder of the others was comprehended,
and at length to put an end to all earthly rule, authority, and power, 1 Cor. xv. 24. The Jews, as well as Christians, agree that by the stone here is meant the Messiah, or his kingdom, and indeed it is a very apt description of it; for without any visible means, or adequate assistance of human power, it arose, prevailed mightily, and increased to a high degree of strength and greatness, and will still increase, until it become superior to, and swallow up,
all the kingdoms of the earth. *Then was the iron,
the brass, &c., broken to pieces, and became like the chaff, &c.*—There was no sign or remainder left of their former greatness. The same expression is used by Isaiah, chap. xli. 15, where see the note. The expressions in both places allude to the thrashing-floors
in the eastern countries, which were usually placed on the tops of hills. And the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, &c.—This denotes
the advancement and increase of Christ's kingdom,
that it should from small beginnings proceed to fill the whole earth; as if a stone by degrees should grow to a mountain. Thus Christ is described as going forth conquering and to conquer, Rev. vi. 2.
Christ, the foundation of the church, is often described as a stone: see Isa. xxviii. 16; Zech. iii. 9;
and the church in its flourishing state is represented
as a mountain, Isa. ii. 2; Ezek. xx. 40; Rev. xxi. 10.

A. M. 3401. 36 This is the dream; and we will
B. C. 603. tell the interpretation thereof before the king.

37 ^h Thou, O king, art a king of kings: ⁱ for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom,
power, and strength, and glory.

38 ^k And wheresoever the children of men

^h Ezra vii. 12; Isaiah xlvii. 5; Jer. xxvii. 6, 7; Ezek. xxvi. 7;
Hosea viii. 10.

Verses 36-38. This is the dream, and we will tell the interpretation—Here again Daniel shows his modesty, allowing his friends a share in the honour of interpreting the dream, because the interpretation was obtained by their joint prayers to God. Thou, O king, art a king of kings—So Nebuchadnezzar is styled Ezek. xxvi. 7, because he had divers kings for his vassals and tributaries. And Daniel here addresses him as if he were a very powerful king, and his empire very large and extensive. For the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, &c.—The monarch might perhaps think, like some of his predecessors, that his conquests were owing to his fortitude and prudence: see Isa. x. 13. But the prophet assures him, that his success must be primarily imputed to the God of heaven. Though most of the ancient eastern histories are lost, yet some fragments remain which speak of this mighty conqueror, and his extended empire. Berosus informs us, that he held in subjection Egypt, Syria, Phenicia, Arabia, and surpassed all the Chaldeans and Babylonians who reigned before him. Josephus, Philostratus, Megasthenes, and Strabo, assert, that he surpassed even Hercules, proceeded as far as Hercules' pillars, subdued Spain, and led his army into Thrace and Pontus. But his empire was of no long duration, for it ended in his grandson Belshazzar, not seventy years after the delivery of this prophecy, nor above twenty-three years after the death of Nebuchadnezzar; which may be the reason why Daniel speaks of him as the only king, the rest being to be considered as nothing; nor do we read of any thing good or great performed by them.—Bishop Newton: see notes on Jer. xxv. 9, 11, 15-26, and xxvii. 6-8. And wheresoever the children of men dwell, hath he made thee ruler over them all—The great monarchies assumed to themselves the title of being lords of the world; see chap. vi. 25, and viii. 5; so the word οικουμένη, the world, commonly signifies the Roman empire, in the New Testament. Thou art this head of gold—Thou and thy family and thy representatives. The Babylonian therefore was the first of these kingdoms, and it was fitly represented by the head of fine gold, on account of its great riches, and the splendour and glory of its capital city, Babylon, which for the same reason was called the golden city, Isa. xiv. 4, a golden cup, Jer. li. 7, and the lady of kingdoms, Isa. xlvii. 5, 7, where see the notes. The Assyrian is usually said to be the first of the four great empires, and the name may be allowed to pass, if it be not taken too strictly: for the Assyrian empire, properly so called, was dissolved

A. M. 3401. dwell, the beasts of the field and the
B. C. 603. fowls of the heaven hath he given into thy hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. ¹ Thou art this head of gold.

39 And after thee shall arise ^m another kingdom
ⁿ inferior to thee, and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth.

ⁱ Ezra i. 2.—^k Chap. iv. 21, 22; Jer. xxvii. 6.—^l Verse 32.
^m Chap. v. 28, 31.—ⁿ Verse 32.

before this time, and the Babylonian was erected in its stead; but the Babylonians are sometimes called Assyrians in the best classic authors, as well as in the Holy Scriptures.—Bishop Newton.

Verse 39. After thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee—“It is very well known, that the kingdom which arose after the Babylonian was the Medo-Persian. The two hands and the shoulders signify that the empire of the Babylonians should be destroyed by two kings. The two kings were the kings of the Medes and Persians, whose powers were united under Cyrus, who was son of one of the kings, and son-in-law of the other, and who besieged and took Babylon, put an end to that empire, and erected on its ruin the Medo-Persian, or the Persian, as it is more usually called, the Persians having soon gained ascendancy over the Medes. The empire is said to be inferior, as being less than the former, according to the Vulgate translation, because neither Cyrus, nor any of his successors, ever carried their arms into Africa or Spain, so far as Nebuchadnezzar is reported to have done; or rather, as being worse, according to Castalio; for indeed it may be truly asserted, that the kings of Persia were the worst race of men that ever governed an empire. This empire, from its first establishment by Cyrus to the death of Darius Codomannus, lasted not much above two hundred years.”—Bishop Newton.

And another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth—“The prophet,” says Jackson, in his Chron., vol. i. p. 393, “having just mentioned this second kingdom, with great delicacy hastens to the third, because he would not tell the king that the second kingdom was to destroy his.” It is universally known that Alexander the Great subdued the Medes and Persians, and subverted their empire. This prince is said, by the author of the first book of Maccabees, “to be the first that reigned over Greece, after having smitten Darius the king of the Persians and Medes; to have made many wars, won many strong holds, and slain the kings of the earth; also to have gone through to the ends of the earth, and taken the spoils of many nations.” It is reported of this mighty conqueror, that “he built more than seventy cities, twelve of which, or, as Curtius intimates, eighteen, he named Alexandria; that his soldiers, though unarmed, were never afraid, while he was with them, of any armed forces. He engaged no enemy which he did not conquer, besieged no city which he did not take, and made attempts on no nation which he did not entirely subdue.” But all would not satisfy the vast cravings

A. M. 3401. 40 And ^p the fourth kingdom shall
B. C. 603. be strong as iron : forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things :
and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces, and bruise.

41 And whereas thou sawest ^a the feet and toes, part of potters' clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided ; but there shall be in ^p Chap. vii. 7, 23.—^a Verse 33.

of his ambition, so that the Roman satirist with great justice observed of him,

"Unus Pellæo juveni non sufficit orbis ; Æstuat infelix augusto limite mundi."—Juv. Sat. x.

One world does not satisfy the Macedonian youth :
he chafes unhappy, cooped in the narrow compass
of the globe : see Wintle. The kingdom, therefore, which succeeded to the Persian was the Macedonian, or Grecian ; and this kingdom was fitly represented by brass, for the Greeks were famous for their brazen armour, their usual epithet being, Χαλκο-χιτωνες Ἀχαιοί, The brazen-coated Greeks. This third kingdom is said to bear rule over all the earth,
by a figure usual in almost all authors. Alexander himself commanded that he should be called, The king of all the world ; not that he really conquered
the whole world, but that he had considerable dominions in Europe, Asia, and Africa, that is, in all the three parts of the world then known. Diodorus Si-culus, and other writers, give an account of ambassadors coming from almost all the world, to congratulate him upon his success, or to submit to his empire :
and then especially, as Arrian remarks, did Alexander appear to himself, and to those about him, to be master both of all the earth and all the sea. But this third kingdom must be considered as comprehending not only Alexander, but likewise the Macedonian princes who succeeded him. This will appear the more probable, because the former kingdoms comprehended all the succeeding princes of the same house and nation, even till the ruin of their empire, and its translation to the different prince and nation which succeeded to the sovereign power and dominion : see Bishop Newton, and Dr. Chandler's Vindication of Daniel.

Verses 40-43. The fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron, &c.—This description agrees well with the Roman empire, and the event answered the prediction ; for the Roman was vastly more strong and extensive than any of the preceding three. As iron breaketh and bruises all other metals, so this brake and subdued all the former kingdoms. The metal is here different, and consequently likewise the nation must be different from the preceding. For the four metals must signify four different nations ; and as the gold signified the Babylonians, the silver the Persians, and the brass the Macedonians, so the iron must necessarily denote some other nation : and it may safely be said, that there is not, and has not been, a nation upon earth, to which this description

it of the strength of the iron, foras- A. M. 3401 much as thou sawest the iron mixed B. C. 603.
with miry clay.

42 And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly ¹⁷ broken.

43 And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with ¹⁷ Or, brittle.

is applicable, but the Romans. The Romans succeeded to the Macedonians, and therefore, in course, were next to be mentioned. And as the two arms of silver denoted the two kings of the Medes and Persians, so the two legs of iron seem equally to have signified the two Roman consuls. The iron was mixed with clay ; and the Romans were defiled with a mixture of barbarous nations. The Roman empire was at length divided into ten lesser kingdoms, answering to the ten toes of the image. These kingdoms retained much of the old Roman strength ;
so that the kingdom was partly strong and partly broken—It subdued Syria, and made the kingdom of the Seleucidæ a Roman province, in the year
sixty-five before Christ ; it subdued Egypt, and made the kingdom of the Lagidæ a Roman province, in the year thirty before Christ ; and, in the fourth century after Christ, it began to be torn in pieces by the incursions of the barbarous nations. Mr. Mede, who was as able and consummate a judge as any in these matters, observes, "That the Roman empire was the fourth kingdom of Daniel, was believed by the church of Israel, both before and in our Saviour's time ; received by the disciples of the apostles, and the whole Christian Church, for the first three hundred years, without any known contradiction. And,
I confess, having so good a ground in Scripture, it i with me tantum non articulus fidei, little less than an article of faith : " see his Works, book iv. ep. 6,
p. 735, and Bishop Newton.

Daniel seems to divide this kingdom into three periods. The first is its strongest and flourishing
state, which seems to be denoted by the iron legs :
the second is the same kingdom, weakened by civil wars and the divided state of the empire, denoted by the feet, which were part of potter's clay, and part of iron ; for which reason the prophet tells us the kingdom shall be divided, though there shall be in it something of the strength of iron, because the iron was mixed with the clay : the third is the same empire in a yet further state of declension, during which one part of it was to be absolutely destroyed, denoted
by the toes, the extremity of the image, and of consequence the last period of this fourth empire. As the toes of the feet were part of iron and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken—That is, one part of this divided empire shall remain, and the other part be entirely destroyed. And as the last period of this kingdom is denoted by the toes, this evidently intimates that the remaining part, which was not broken, should be

A. M. 3401. the seed of men : but they shall not
B. C. 603. cleave ¹⁸ one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay.

44 And in ¹⁹ the days of these kings ^r shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, ^s which shall never be destroyed : and the ²⁰ kingdom shall not be left to other people, ^t but it shall ¹⁸ Chald. this with this.—¹⁹ Chald. their days.—^r Verse 28.—^s Chapter iv. 3, 34; vi. 26; vii. 14, 27; Micah iv. 7; Luke i. 32, 33.

divided into ten distinct kingdoms or governments. And whereas thou savest iron mixed with clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men, &c.—The conjunction of the Romans with the conquered nations, and afterward with the Goths, Vandals, and other barbarians, who subverted the empire, seems to be here intended : in consequence of which these ten kingdoms became a medley of people, of different nations, laws, and customs. But they shall not cleave one to another—Although the kings of the several nations shall try to strengthen themselves by marriage alliances, yet reasons of state, the desire of empire, and the different interests which they pursue, will prove stronger than ties of blood, and often engage them in contentions and wars with each other, and thereby weaken the common strength. As Tacitus observes, “Dominandi cupido cunctis affectibus flagrantior erit.” The lust of ruling will be more powerful than all the affections. “It is especially observable,” says Wintle, “that in the declining state of the Roman empire, intermarriages with the barbarians were frequent and distinguished, as may be learned from the histories of the times ; but yet the cement would not hold so as to form any great kingdom, or even to prevent the impending fate of the empire.” But some explain the verse of the commotions and clashings that took place between the secular and ecclesiastical powers, after the kingdom was divided into ten parts, answerable to the ten toes of the image.

Verses 44, 45. And in the days of these kings—That is, kingdoms, or during the succession of these four monarchies ; and it must be during the time of the last of them, because they are reckoned four in succession, and consequently this must be the fifth kingdom. Shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom—This can only be understood with propriety, as the ancients understood it, of the kingdom of Christ. Accordingly, his kingdom was set up during the days of the last of these kingdoms, that is, the Roman. The stone was totally a different thing from the image ; and the kingdom of Christ is totally different from the kingdoms of this world. The stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, as our heavenly body is said (2 Cor. v. 1) to be a building of God, a house not made with hands, that is, spiritual, as the phrase is used in other places. This the fathers generally apply to Christ himself, who was miraculously born of a virgin, without the concurrence of man : but it should be rather understood of the kingdom of Christ, which was formed out of the break in pieces and consume all A. M. 3401.

these kingdoms, and it shall stand B. C. 603.
for ever.

45 ^u Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain ²¹ without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron,
the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold ;

²⁰ Chald. kingdom thereof.—^t Psa. ii. 9; Isa. lx. 12; 1 Cor. xv. 24.—^u Verse 35; Isa. xxviii. 16.—²¹ Or, which was not in hand.

Roman empire, not by number of hands, or strength of armies, but without human means, and the virtue of second causes. This kingdom was set up by the God of heaven, and from hence the phrase of the kingdom of heaven came to signify the kingdom of the Messiah ; and so it was used and understood by the Jews, and so it is applied by our Saviour in the New Testament. Other kingdoms were raised by human ambition and worldly power ; but this was the work not of man, but of God : this was truly, as it is called, the kingdom of heaven, and (John xviii. 36) a kingdom not of this world ; its laws, its powers were all divine. This kingdom was never to be destroyed, as the Babylonian, the Persian, and the Macedonian empires have been, and in a great measure also the Roman. This kingdom was not to be left to any other people ; it was to be erected by God in a peculiar manner, to extend itself over all the nations, and still to consist of the same people, without any alteration or change of their name. What this people were to be, and by what name to be called, the prophet expressly declares chap. vii. 17, 18 ; they were to be the saints of the Most High. Of such was this kingdom to consist, and never to depart from them ; a character which expressly determines the nature of the kingdom, and by whom it was to be erected and governed. This kingdom was to break in pieces and consume all kingdoms—To spread and enlarge itself, so that it should comprehend within itself all the former kingdoms. This kingdom was to fill the whole earth, to become universal, and to stand for ever. As the fourth kingdom, or the Roman empire, was represented in different states, first strong and flourishing, with legs of iron, and then weakened and divided, with feet and toes part of iron and part of clay ; so this fifth kingdom, or the kingdom of Christ, is described likewise in two states, which Mr. Mede rightly distinguishes by the names of regnum lapidis, the kingdom of the stone, and regnum montis, the kingdom of the mountain. The first commenced when the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, while the statue continued on its feet, and the Roman empire was in its full strength, with legs of iron : the second, when the stone began to increase into a mountain, and to fill the earth, the Roman empire being in its last and weakest state. The image is still standing upon its feet and toes of iron and clay ; and the kingdom of Christ is yet a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence. But the stone will one day smite the image upon the feet and toes,

A. M. 3401. the great God hath made known to
B. C. 603.

the king what shall come to pass
22 hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure.

46 ¶ * Then the king Nebuchadnezzar fell upon his face, and worshipped Daniel, and commanded that they should offer an oblation [†] and sweet odours unto him.

47 The king answered unto Daniel, and said, Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings, [‡] and a revealer and destroy it utterly, and will itself become a great mountain, and fill the whole earth: or, in other words, The kingdoms of this world will become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign for ever and ever. We have, therefore, seen the kingdom of the stone; but we have not yet seen the kingdom of the mountain. Some parts of this prophecy still remain to be fulfilled; but the exact completion of the other parts will not suffer us to doubt of the accomplishment of the rest also in due season: see Bishop Newton.

22 Chaldee, after this.—* Acts x. 25; xiv. 13; xxviii. 6.
† Ezra vi. 10.—‡ Verse 28.

Verse 46. Then the king Nebuchadnezzar fell upon his face and worshipped Daniel—He was so astonished at hearing his whole dream declared and interpreted by Daniel with such exactness, and at finding such wonderful events foretold by it, that he was ready to think him more than man, (just as the Lycaonians and barbarians thought of St. Paul, Acts xiv. 13, &c., and xxviii. 6,) and therefore prostrated himself before him, intending, as it should seem, to pay him some kind of adoration. It must be observed, however, that “doing reverence by prostration was not only an act of worship paid to God, but often given to kings and great men, in the times of the Old Testament: see 2 Sam. ix. 6, and xiv. 33. It was likewise an expression of reverence paid to prophets on account of the sanctity of their office, and not refused by them, 1 Kings xviii. 7. Of this kind, probably, was the worship paid by the leper to Christ, (Matt. viii. 2,) whom he took for a prophet. But when other circumstances were added to it, which made it look like divine worship, then it was refused to be accepted, as in the case of Peter, (Acts x. 25,) and of the angel, Rev. xix. 10. The adoration here described seems to have been of this latter kind, being joined with offering incense, an act of worship peculiar to God alone: see Ezra vi. 10. For this reason it is highly probable that Daniel refused the honours offered to him, and put the king in mind that he should give God the glory; as we find he does in the following verse.”—Lowth.

Verses 47, 48. Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods—Such a God as there is no other; above all gods in dignity, over all gods in dominion. And a Lord of kings—From whom they derive their power, and to whom they are accountable:

of secrets, seeing thou couldest reveal A. M. 3401.
this secret. B. C. 603.

48 Then the king made Daniel a great man, ^a and gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and ^b chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon.

49 Then Daniel requested of the king, ^c and he set Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, over the affairs of the province of Babylon: but Daniel ^d sat in the gate of the king.

a Verse 6.—b Chap. iv. 9; v. 11.—c Chap. iii. 12.—d Esth. ii. 19, 21; iii. 2.

the supreme Governor of the world, and Ruler of all the kings and kingdoms in it. And a revealer of secrets—One who sees and can bring to light what is most secret; seeing thou couldest reveal this secret—Couldest discover a matter, which it would have been impossible for thee to discover, if God had not revealed it to thee. Then the king made Daniel a great man—Or magnified him, as the original expression means. God made Daniel a great man indeed, when he took him into such intimate communion with himself, a much greater man than Nebuchadnezzar could make him; but because God had honoured him, therefore the king honoured him too. And gave him many great gifts—Which Daniel had no reason to refuse, since they put him into the greater capacity of doing good to his brethren in captivity. These gifts were no more than grateful returns from the king for the good services Daniel had done him, and were not desired or aimed at by Daniel, as the rewards of divination were by Balaam. And made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon—Which, no doubt, had a mighty influence upon the other provinces; and chief of the governors over all the wise men—Constituted him the chief ruler and inspector of them who were students and professors of learning and wisdom. We are not to suppose that this holy prophet, in the exercise of the office now assigned him, would give any countenance or encouragement to any who practised unlawful arts and divinations: rather he would do all in his power to abolish all such practices, and would instruct those of whom he had the oversight in the knowledge of the one living and true God, and in that wisdom which has him for its author and its end.

Verse 49. Then Daniel requested of the king, and he set Shadrach, &c.—He used his interest for his friends, as became a good man, and procured places in the government for them, that they might be assisting to him in his office, and sharers in his honour, by whose intercessions, united with his own, so important a secret had been revealed to him: such a grateful sense had he even of that service! This preferring of them would not only be a great help to Daniel in his place and business, but would afford them many and great opportunities of being useful to their brethren in captivity. But Daniel sat in the gate of the king—Was a constant attendant at the king's court: and as the expression may probably signify, was a kind of chief justice, hearing and determining such causes as were brought before him, and administering justice to the people.

CHAPTER III.

In this chapter we have an account of the extraordinary trial, wonderful deliverance, and further advancement of Daniel's three friends. (1,) Nebuchadnezzar erects a golden image, and requires all his subjects to worship it, 1-7. (2,) He is informed that the Jewish princes refuse to worship it, 8-12. (3,) They resolutely persist in their refusal, 13-18. (4,) They are cast into a fiery furnace, 19-23. (5,) They are miraculously preserved unhurt, and the king is convinced of his error, 24-27. (6,) He gives glory to God, and shows favour to his servants, 28-30.

A. M. 3424.
B. C. 580. NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king made an image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits: he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.

2 Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the princes, the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

3 Then the princes, the governors, A. M. 3424.
B. C. 580. and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up; and they stood before the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up.

4 Then a herald cried ¹ aloud, To you ² it is commanded, ^a O people, nations, and languages,

5 That at what time ye hear the sound of the

¹ Chald. with might.—² Chald. they command.

^a Chap. iv. 1; vi. 25.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verse 1. Nebuchadnezzar made an image of gold—How soon this image was erected, after the dream in his second year, is uncertain. The Greek and Arabic interpreters suppose it to have been in the eighteenth year of his reign, and Dr. Prideaux agrees with them. But whether it was then, or, as some think, later, the design of it probably was, to frustrate the exposition, and defeat the end of the dream: on which account, perhaps, the image was made wholly of gold, and not of different metals, to make an ostentatious display of the abundance of his wealth, and to obviate the jealousies of his people, excited by his favours to Daniel and his friends. Some or all of these motives might influence this haughty and inconstant monarch to desert the true God, whom he had so lately acknowledged, and to yield again to the force of those inveterate habits, from which he had been so miraculously recovered: see Wintle. The height thereof was threescore cubits—The proportion of the height of this image seems very unequal to the breadth, unless the pedestal, on which it was placed, be included therein. Houbigant, and some others, on account of this disparity, think it was rather a column or pyramid than an image of the human form: but Diodorus, lib. ii. § 9, giving an account of the plunder Xerxes had taken out of the temple of Belus, mentions an image of massy gold that was forty feet high, which Prideaux conjectures to have been this statue made by Nebuchadnezzar. The statue of Jupiter also, made by Lysippus, at Tarentum, is said to have been forty cubits high. It is probable that the plain of Dura, here mentioned, was some extensive plain near Babylon, and that the image set up in it was erected in honour of Bel, the chief idol of the Babylonians.

Verses 2, 3. Then Nebuchadnezzar sent to gather together the princes, &c.—It would be very difficult, and perhaps impossible, at this distance of time, to ascertain the proper titles and offices of the several characters that are here mentioned, and certainly would answer no valuable end to any reader. It may be sufficient to observe, that it is probable only those were summoned to attend on this occasion who held places under the government. Thousands of others, no doubt, would be present, and, when present, were required to comply with the king's injunction respecting worshipping the image, though they had not been summoned. And they came and stood before the image—They made their personal appearance, and showed themselves ready to perform the worship required of them.

Verses 4-6. Then a herald cried aloud—Made proclamation in the languages of the several nations assembled; To you it is commanded, O people, nations, and languages—Whatever parts of the empire you come from, and whatever language you speak. This form of speech was doubtless designed to set forth the largeness and extent of the Babylonish empire. That at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, &c.—That is, of wind and stringed instruments of various sorts. It is justly

A. M. 3424. cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery,
B. C. 580. ³dulcimer,⁴ and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up.

6 And whoso falleth not down and worship-
peth shall the same hour ^bbe cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.

7 Therefore, at that time, when all the people heard the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of music, all the people, the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

8 ¶ Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans ^ccame near, and accused the Jews.

³ Or, singing.—⁴ Chald. symphony.—^b Jer. xxix. 22; Rev.
xiii. 15.—^c Chap. vi. 12.

observed by Mr. Scott here, that "the several words by which the several kinds of musical instruments are enumerated in this chapter, do not seem to admit of any satisfactory explanation:" certainly, "without distinctly referring to ancient usages," and going to a great length of explication, "they cannot be made intelligible, except to those few who are fully acquainted with those usages, and perhaps scarcely even to them:" and if the reader could attain correct ideas of the forms and powers of them all, he would from this derive but little edification. Ye fall down and worship the golden image—Let all take notice, 1st, That the king strictly charges and commands all manner of persons, whatever other gods they worship at other times, now to worship this. 2d, That all do this just at the same time, in token of their communion with each other at this service. And whosoever falleth not down and worshippeth—St. Jerome observes, that falling down is applied, in Scripture, rather to idols than the true God; (see Matt. iv. 9;) shall the same hour, &c.—This is the first place in the Old Testament where we meet with the division of time into hours. The Greeks ascribe the invention of them to Anaximander, who, perhaps, received it from the Chaldees. The mode of punishment here mentioned was common among this people: compare Jer. xxix. 22. It has been said, that Abraham was exposed to this punishment before his departure from Chaldea: see Gen. xi. 31; and Calmet. Similar methods has mystical Babylon followed, to compel those she denominates heretics to embrace her creed, and join in her anti-christian worship.

Verse 7. All the people, &c., fell down and worshipped—And what wonder, considering that all the charms of music were made use of to allure them to a compliance on the one hand, and the terrors of the fiery furnace to frighten them into it on the other? Thus beset with the double temptation of allurements and terror, they all yielded to the will of the idolatrous king. Observe, reader, there is 9 They spake and said to the A. M. 3424.

king Nebuchadnezzar, ^dO king, live B. C. 580.
for ever.

10 Thou, O king, hast made a decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, shall fall down and worship the golden image:

11 And whoso falleth not down and worship-
peth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.

12 ^e There are certain Jews whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; these men, O king, ^fhave not regarded thee: they

^d Chap. ii. 4; v. 10; vi. 6, 21.—^e Chap. ii. 49.—^f Chaldee, have set no regard upon thee.

nothing so unreasonable, or sinful, which the careless world will not be drawn to by pleasure, or driven to by pain, and fear of torture and death. By such methods as these, false worship has been set up and maintained in different ages.

Verses 8–12. At that time certain Chaldeans came near, and accused the Jews—It is not improbable that these Chaldeans were such as envied these friends of Daniel their preferments, having perhaps themselves expected the places to which they had been advanced. They spake and said, O king, live for ever—They approached the king with a great show of loyalty, and concern for his life, honour, and interest. Thou, O king, hast made a decree, &c.—They put him in mind of the law he had lately made, that all manner of persons, without exception, should fall down and worship his golden image: they put him in mind also of the penalty which was to be inflicted upon recusants. There are certain Jews, &c.—It is likely that Nebuchadnezzar had no particular design to insnare Shadrach and his companions in making this law; for then he would himself have had his eye upon them, and would not have needed this information; but their enemies, who sought an occasion against them, laid hold on this, and were forward to accuse them. To aggravate the matter, and incense the king more against them, they, 1st, Put him in mind of the dignity to which the criminals had been preferred; that though they were Jews, foreigners, captives, and men of a despised nation and religion, yet the king had set them over the affairs of the province of Babylon—It was, therefore, they suggested, very ungrateful, and an insufferable piece of insolence in them, to disobey the king's command, who had shared so much of the king's favour. And, besides, the high station they were in would give their refusal the greater influence, and render it of the worse consequence. 2d, They suggest, that it was done maliciously, contumaciously, and in contempt of him and his authority. These men, say they, have

A. M. 3424. serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

13 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury commanded to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Then they brought these men before the king.

14 Nebuchadnezzar spake and said unto them, Is it ⁶ true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up?

15 Now if ye be ready that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp,

⁶ Or, of purpose, as Exod. xxi. 13.—^f As Ex. xxxii. 32; Luke

not regarded thee, they serve not thy gods, &c.—Thus princes, who are wont to be incensed enough against innocent people, seldom want those about them who do all they can to excite them to greater wrath. If it be asked here, Where was Daniel on this occasion? It may be answered, He was probably absent, either because the king's business called him elsewhere, or because he had leave of absence from the king; unless we suppose that he stood so high in the king's favour that none durst complain of him for his non-compliance. But why did not his companions keep out of the way? Surely, because they would obey the king's orders as far as they could conscientiously, and wished to be present to bear a public testimony against this gross idolatry. God also, no doubt, inclined them to attend, that they might glorify him by a noble confession, made in face of the most extreme danger; and that he might honour and reward them, by a most extraordinary and wonderful deliverance.

Verse 13. Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage, &c.—How little was it to the honour of this mighty prince that he had rule over so many nations, when, at the same time, he had no rule over his own spirit! How unfit was he to rule reasonable men, who would not himself be ruled by reason! Surely it did not need to surprise him to hear that these three men did not now serve his gods, for he knew very well they never had done it, and that their religion, to which they had always adhered, forbade them to do it. Nor had he any reason to think they acted thus in contempt of his authority, since they had in all instances showed themselves respectful and dutiful to him as their prince.

Verses 14, 15. Nebuchadnezzar said, Is it true, O Shadrach? &c.—Or, of purpose, as the margin reads it, and as the word is used, Exod. xxi. 13. Is it designedly and deliberately done, or was it only through inadvertency, that you have not served my gods? What! you that I have nourished and brought up; that have been educated and maintained at my charge; that I have been so kind to, and done so much for; you that have been in such reputation for wisdom, and therefore should better have known your duty to your prince; what! do not you serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of music, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made; ^f well: but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace; ^g and who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?

16 Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, answered and said to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, ^h we are not careful to answer thee in this matter.

17 If it be so, our God whom we serve is

xiii. 9.—^g Exod. v. 2; 2 Kings xviii. 35.—^h Matt. x. 19.

set up? Observe, reader, the faithfulness of God's servants to him has often been the wonder of their enemies and persecutors, who think it strange that they run not with them to the same excess of riot. Now if ye be ready, &c.—He is willing to admit them to a new trial; if they did purpose before not to worship his gods, yet it may be, upon second thoughts, they will change their minds; it is therefore repeated to them upon what terms they now stand: 1st, The king is willing that the music should play again, for their sakes only, to soften them into a compliance; and if they will not, like the deaf adder, stop their ears, but will hearken to the voice of the charmers, and will worship the golden image, well and good, their former omission shall be pardoned. But, 2d, The king is resolved, if they persist in their refusal, that they shall immediately be cast into the fiery furnace, and shall not have so much as an hour's reprieve. Thus does the matter lie in a little compass; Turn or burn, is the king's language. And because he knew they buoyed themselves up in their refusal with a confidence in their God, he insolently sets him at defiance, saying, And who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands? Let him deliver you if he can. Now he forgot what he himself once owned, that their God was a God of gods, and a Lord of kings, chap. ii. 47. Proud men are still ready to say, as Pharaoh, Who is the Lord, that I should obey his voice?

Verse 16. Shadrach, Meshach, &c., said, We are not careful to answer thee, &c.—In so plain a case there is no room for deliberation: we have an answer ready at hand, that we ought to obey God rather than man. Admirable example this of a true faith in God, and ready obedience to his will! How worthy of our imitation! It is such an instance of fortitude and magnanimity as is scarce to be paralleled. They did not break out into any intemperate heat, or passion, against those that worshipped the golden image, did not insult or affront them, nor did they rashly thrust themselves upon the trial, or go out of the way to court martyrdom; but when they were duly called to the fiery trial, they quitted themselves with a conduct and courage that became sufferers for so good a cause.

Verses 17, 18. If it be so—If we are brought into

A. M. 3424. able to deliver us from the burning
B. C. 580. fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thy hand, O king.

18 But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

19 ¶ Then was Nebuchadnezzar ⁷ full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego: therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace one seven times more than it was wont to be heated.

⁷ Chald. filled.—⁸ Chald. mighty of strength.—⁹ Or, mantles.

this strait: if we must be thrown into the fiery furnace unless we serve thine image; our God whom we serve is able to deliver us, &c.—As we are firmly persuaded of the power of our God to deliver us, so we trust in his mercy and goodness, that he will deliver us out of this imminent danger. This they spake out of a well-grounded hope, not from a certain foresight of being delivered; for such an assurance would have detracted much from the worth of their courage and constancy, in despising the danger which threatened them. And it appears, from what follows, that they were firmly fixed in their resolution, not to dishonour the true God by worshipping this image, or any of the gods of Babylon, although they should perish in the flames, for so they declare in the following words. But if not, &c., we will not serve thy gods—It was, therefore, all one to them which way God would honour himself; they were resolved to suffer rather than sin, and leave their cause to God. Indeed, if God be for us, we need not fear what man can do unto us. Let him do his worst: God will deliver us either from death, or in death.

Verses 19–21. Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury—Nebuchadnezzar had himself known and owned so much of the true God, that one would have thought, though his pride and vanity had induced him to make this golden image, and set it up to be worshipped, yet that what these young men now said (whom he had formerly found to be wiser than all his wise men) would have revived his convictions, and at least have engaged him to forbear proceeding to extremities against them; but it proved quite otherwise. 1st, Instead of being convinced by what they said, he was exasperated, and made more outrageous. 2d, Instead of mitigating their punishment, in consideration of their quality and the honourable offices they were in, he ordered it to be heightened, commanding the heat of the furnace to be increased seven-fold; which, though it would not make their death more grievous, but rather despatch them the sooner, yet was designed to signify, that the king looked upon their crime as seven times more heinous than the crimes of others, and so made their death more ignominious. But God brought glory to himself out of this foolish instance of the mighty men that were in his army ^{B. C. 580.}

20 And he commanded the ⁸ most ^{A. M. 3424.}
to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego,
and to cast them into the burning fiery furnace.

21 Then these men were bound in their ⁹ coats, their hosen, and their ¹⁰ hats, and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

22 Therefore because the king's ¹¹ commandment was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the ¹² flame of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

¹⁰ Or, turbans.—¹¹ Chald. word.—¹² Or, spark.

tyrant's rage; for though it would not have made their death the more grievous, yet it made their deliverance much the more illustrious. 3d, He ordered them to be bound in their clothes, which was done accordingly. They were bound, that they might not struggle, or make any resistance; were bound in their clothes for haste, or that they might be consumed the more slowly and gradually: but God's providence ordered it for the increase of the miracle, in that their clothes were not so much as singed. What a terrible death was this, to be cast bound into the midst of a burning fiery furnace! It makes one's flesh tremble to think of it, and horror to take hold of one. It is amazing that the tyrant was so hard-hearted as to inflict such a punishment, and the confessors possessed of such fortitude as to submit to it, rather than sin against God. But what is this to the second death? to the furnace into which the tares shall be cast in bundles? to that lake which burns eternally with fire and brimstone? Let Nebuchadnezzar heat his furnace as hot as he can, a few minutes will finish the torment of those who are cast into it; but hell-fire tortures, and doth not kill; the pain of damned sinners is more exquisite, and the smoke of their torments ascends for ever and ever, and they have no rest, no intermission, no cessation of their pains, who have worshipped the beast and his image, Rev. xiv. 10, 11; whereas their pain would be soon over that were cast into this furnace, for not worshipping this Babylonian beast and his image.

Verses 22, 23. Because the king's commandment was urgent—That they should despatch them quickly, and be sure to do it effectually; and they therefore resolved to go to the very mouth of the furnace, that they might throw them into the midst of it; and were hasty and precipitate in executing their orders, and did not take proper care for themselves against the violence of the heat. The flame of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, &c.—The apocryphal additions to the book of Daniel say, that the flame ascended forty-nine cubits above the mouth of the furnace. Probably God ordered it so, that the wind blew the flame directly upon them. Thus did God immediately plead the cause of his injured servants, and take vengeance for them on their persecu-

A. M. 3424. 23 And these three men, Shadrach,
B. C. 580. Meshach, and Abed-nego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace.

24 ¶ Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonied, and rose up in haste, and spake,
and said unto his ¹³ counsellors, Did not we cast

¹³ Or, governors.—^k Isa. xliii. 2.—¹⁴ Chald. there is no hurt

tors, whom he punished not only in the very act of their sin, but by their sin. But these men were only the instruments of this cruelty: he that commanded them to do this had the greater sin; yet they suffered justly for executing an unjust decree: a decree which, it is very likely, they executed with pleasure. As to Nebuchadnezzar himself, he was referred for a future reckoning. There is a day coming when proud tyrants will be punished, not only for the cruelties they have been guilty of, but for employing those about them in their cruelties, and so exposing them to the judgments of God. It is probable, the noise occasioned by what befell these men drew Nebuchadnezzar to the place where the furnace was, where he beheld what is related in the following verses. These three men fell down bound, &c.—All this is expressed with emphasis, to make the power of God more glorious in their preservation; for that flame which slew the executioners, might much more easily have killed them, even before they fell down.

Verses 24, 25. Then Nebuchadnezzar was astonished, and rose up in haste—Some have thought there is something wanting between this and the preceding verse, expressive of the reason of Nebuchadnezzar's astonishment. Hence Houbigant inserts two verses, which are found in the Vulgate to this purpose: "But an angel of the Lord descended to Azariah and his companions into the furnace, and drove the flame of the fire from the furnace. And they walked in the midst of the flame, praising and blessing the Lord." The LXX. and Arabic read the beginning of this verse thus: Then Nebuchadnezzar heard them singing praise, and was astonished, &c. But it is probable that either the slaying of the men who executed his sentence was that which astonished Nebuchadnezzar, or rather, his unexpectedly seeing at a distance the young men walking at liberty, and apparently in comfort, in the fiery furnace. He said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire—1st, They were loose from their bonds: the fire, which did not so much as singe their clothes, burned the cords with which they were tied. 2d, They had no hurt, felt no pain or uneasiness in the least; the flame did not scorch them, the smoke did not stifle them: they were alive, and as well as ever in the midst of the flames. See how the God of nature can, when he pleases, control the powers of nature, to make them serve his purposes! Now was fulfilled in the letter that gracious promise, Isa. xliii. 2, When thou walkest through the fire thou shalt not be burned, neither three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. A. M. 3424.

B. C. 580.

25 He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, ^k walking in the midst of the fire, and ¹⁴ they have no hurt: and the form of the fourth is like ¹ the Son of God.

in them.—¹ Job i. 6; xxxviii. 7; Psa. xxxiv. 7; Verse 28.

shall the flame kindle upon thee. By faith they quenched the violence of fire. 3d, They walked in the midst of the fire: the furnace was large, so that they had room to walk; they were unhurt, so that they were able to walk; their minds were easy, so that they were disposed to walk as in a paradise, or garden of pleasure. Can a man walk upon hot coals, and his feet not be burnt? Prov. vi. 28. Yes; they did it with as much pleasure as the king of Tyrus walked up and down in the midst of his precious stones, which sparkled as fire, Ezek. xxviii. 14. 4th, There was a fourth seen with them in the fire, whose form, says Nebuchadnezzar, is like the Son of God—Or rather, like a son of God, or, of the gods; in agreement with the Hebrew, LXX., and Syriac; that is, "Like a divine and glorious person, sent from the powers above to rescue and deliver these men." For as Nebuchadnezzar was an idolater, it is scarce to be conceived that he should know any thing concerning the Son of God, the Messiah, and much less of his form and likeness; whereas all the heathen had a notion, which runs through their theology, of the sons of the deities, as powerful beings, sent often to the aid and protection of mankind. But though we can scarce suppose Nebuchadnezzar to have called or known this person to have been the Son of God, the promised Redeemer; yet it is extremely probable, (and so the best Jewish as well as Christian commentators have understood it,) that he was indeed the Son of God, who often appeared in our nature, in a human form, before he assumed that nature for our salvation; the great angel, or messenger of the covenant, who under that character frequently revealed himself to the patriarchs of old; and accordingly, in a subsequent verse, he is called the angel of God, the messenger sent to deliver these servants of the Lord; the same who was afterward sent to Daniel, to preserve him from the rage of the lions. Moreover, we may observe, that as angels are often called sons of God, and as most nations had high ideas of their power, perhaps Nebuchadnezzar might only mean an angel, a celestial delegate; and this seems the more probable from his own words, verse 28, Blessed be God, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants, &c.—That angel, or son of God, whom I saw in the furnace, &c.: see Christian Mag., vol. ii. page 613. Observe, reader, those that suffer for Christ, have his gracious presence with them in their sufferings, even in the fiery furnace, even in the valley of the shadow of death, and therefore even there they need fear no evil. Hereby Christ showed that what is

A. M. 3424. 26 Then Nebuchadnezzar came
B. C. 580. near to the ¹⁵ mouth of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither.
Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego,
came forth of the midst of the fire.

27 And the princes, governors, and captains,
and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, ^m upon whose bodies
the fire had power, nor was a hair of their head singed, neither were their coats A. M. 3424.

changed, nor the smell of fire had B. C. 580.
passed on them.

28 Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said,
Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that ⁿ trusted in him, and have changed the king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god, except their own God.

29 ^o Therefore, ¹⁶ I make a decree, That

¹⁵ Chald. door.—^m Heb. xi. 34.—ⁿ Psalm xxxiv. 7, 8; Jer.
xvii. 7; Chap. vi. 22, 23.

^o Chap. vi. 26.—¹⁶ Chald. a decree is made by me.

done against his people, he takes as done against himself: whoever throw them into the furnace, do in effect throw him in; I am Jesus, whom thou persecutest, Acts ix. 5.

Verses 26, 27. Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth of the furnace—As near as he durst
come; and spake—With a milder tone than before,
God having abated the fire of his fury; and said,
Ye servants of the most high God, &c.—The miracle calls to his mind the confession which he had formerly made of the true God, chap. ii. 47. And he can now at once both acknowledge him to be most high above all gods, and the three worthies, who had been condemned to the flames, to be his faithful servants. Observe, reader, sooner or later God will convince the proudest of men, that he is the most high God, and above them, and too hard for them, even in those things wherein they deal proudly and presumptuously, Exod. xviii. 11. He will likewise let them know who are his servants, and that he owns them, and will stand by them. Nebuchadnezzar now embraces those whom he had abandoned
to destruction, and is ready to show them every possible kindness, perceiving them to be the favourites of Heaven. How the fourth, whose form was like the Son of God, withdrew, and whether he vanished away or visibly ascended, we are not told; but of the other three we are informed, that they *came forth
out of the midst of the fire*—As Abraham their father out of Ur, that is, the fire, of the Chaldees, into which, says the tradition of the Jews, he was cast for refusing to worship idols, and out of which he was delivered, as those his three descendants were.
When they had their discharge, they did not tempt
God by staying any longer, but came forth as brands
out of the burning. And the princes, governors, &c., being gathered together, saw those men—All the great men came together to view them, and were amazed to find that they had not received the least damage by the fire; that it had no power over their bodies, &c.—Several expressions are here used,
which rise in fine order one above another, and the climax is beautiful. The fire not only had no prevailing power over their bodies, but neither was a hair
of their head burned, nor their flowing robes singed,
nor even the smell of fire had passed on them.

Verse 28. Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, &c.—So Darius offers up his acknowledgments to the God of Daniel, chap. vi. 26, looking upon him as superior to other gods, but not as the only true God. Who hath sent his angel—Thus Daniel ascribes his deliverance from the lions to an angel, chap. vi. 22;
and delivered his servants that trusted in him—That confided in his power, love, and faithfulness, that he would stand by and support them in their time of trial, and either bring them out of the fiery furnace back to their place on earth, or lead them through it forward to their place in heaven; and in this confidence became fearless of the king's wrath, and regardless of their own lives. And have changed the king's word—Have rendered his command of none effect,
God having himself suspended the execution of it;
and yielded their bodies—To expected torture and death; that they might not serve, &c.—That is, rather than they would consent to serve any god, except their own God—Or, any false god: all gods, but Jehovah, being false pretenders to divinity. By this miracle Nebuchadnezzar was plainly given to understand, that all the great success which he had had, and should yet have against the Jews, and in which he gloried, as if he had therein overpowered their God, was purely owing to their sin; that if the body of that nation had faithfully adhered to their own God,
and the worship of him only, as these three men
did, they would all have been delivered out of his hands, as these three men were. And this was a necessary instruction for him at this time.

Verse 29. Therefore, I make a decree, &c.—He issues a royal edict, strictly forbidding any to speak evil of the God of Israel. We have reason to think that both the sins and the troubles of Israel had given great, though no just occasion to the Chaldeans to blaspheme the God of Israel, and it is likely Nebuchadnezzar himself had encouraged them to do it; but now, though he is no true convert, nor is influenced to worship him, yet he resolves never to speak evil of him again, nor to suffer others to do so.
If any should presume to do it, he decrees that they should be counted the worst of malefactors, and should be dealt with accordingly. The miracle now wrought by the power of this God, in defence of his

A. M. 3424. every people, nation, and language,
B. C. 580. which speak ¹⁷ any thing amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be ¹⁸ cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill: ¹⁹ because there is no other god that can deliver after this sort. A. M. 3424.

B. C. 580.

30 ¶ Then the king ¹⁹ promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, in the province of Babylon.

¹⁷ Chald. error.—p Chap. ii. 5.—¹⁸ Chald. made pieces.

¹⁹ Chap. vi. 27.—¹⁹ Chald. made to prosper.

worshippers, and that publicly, in the sight of the thousands of Babylon; was a sufficient justification of this edict. And it would contribute much to the ease of the Jews in their captivity, to be, by this law, screened from the fiery darts of reproach and blasphemy, with which, otherwise, they would have been continually annoyed. Observe, reader, it is a great mercy to the church, and a good point gained,
when its enemies, though they have not their hearts turned, yet have their mouths stopped, and their tongues tied. If a heathen prince laid such a restraint upon the proud lips of blasphemers, how much more should Christian princes do it. Nay, in this thing, one would suppose that men should be a law to themselves; and that those who have so little love to God that they care not to speak well of him, yet should never find in their hearts, for we are sure they can never find cause, to speak any thing amiss of him.

Verse 30. Then the king promoted Shadrach, &c.—He not only reversed the attainder of these three men, but restored them to their places in the government, nay, and preferred them to greater and more advantageous trusts than they had held before;
or, as the margin reads it, He made them to prosper.
The LXX., add at the end of the verse, And he advanced them to be governors over all the Jews who were in his kingdom. Their promotion, which was much to their own honour, would be still more to the comfort of their brethren in captivity in those parts.

CHAPTER IV.

Daniel, having finished the history respecting his three friends being cast into the fiery furnace, for refusing to worship Nebuchadnezzar's golden image, here adds another history relating to that king, which he gives in the very words of the public edict which had been made on the occasion, that every one might be convinced of the truth of the story, having the testimony of a public edict for it. In this edict, after solemnly acknowledging the power and dominion of God, 1-3, Nebuchadnezzar relates at large a dream which he had had, which none of his magicians could interpret, but for the interpretation of which he had applied to Daniel, 4-18. Daniel interprets it, as foretelling Nebuchadnezzar's fall, unless he should prevent it by his speedy repentance and reformation, 19-27. The accomplishment of it, when he was in the height of his pride, in his being suddenly deprived of his senses for seven years, and then recovering his reason and government, 28-34, 36. His solemn acknowledgment of God's absolute supremacy and almighty power, 34, 35, 37.

A. M. 3434. NEBUCHADNEZZAR the king,
B. C. 570. ^a unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; Peace
be multiplied unto you.

2 ¹ I thought it good to show the signs and wonders ^b that the high God hath wrought toward me.

3 ^c How great are his signs! and ^d how mighty are his wonders! his kingdom ^e is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion ^f is from generation to generation.

4 ¶ I Nebuchadnezzar was at rest in my house, and flourishing in my palace:

5 I saw a dream which made me afraid, ^g and

^a Chapter iii. 4; vi. 25.—¹ Chaldee, It was seemly before me.
^b Chap. iii. 26.

^c Chap. vi. 27.—^d Verse 34; Chap. ii. 44; vi. 26.—^e Chap.
ii. 28, 29.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verses 1-3. Nebuchadnezzar the king, unto all people, &c.—He addresses the proclamation, not only to his own subjects, but to all to whom the writing should come. Peace be multiplied unto you—May all things prosperous happen unto you.
The Chaldee is, Your peace be multiplied: a usual form of addressing the subjects of this vast empire.
I thought it good to show the signs, &c., that the high God hath wrought toward me—Namely, by signifying to him future things of so extraordinary

a kind, as could not naturally have been supposed to happen; and in bringing to pass some of them upon himself in a most wonderful manner. How great are his signs, &c.—"The king's repeated experience
had extorted from him the sublime confession contained in this verse; the latter part of which is a fine display of the infinite power and dominion of the true God."—Wintle.

Verses 4, 5. I Nebuchadnezzar was at rest, &c.— Nebuchadnezzar, "for the extent of his dominion,
and the great revenues it supplied; for his unrivalled

A. M. 3434. the thoughts upon my bed and the
B. C. 570. visions of my head ^ftroubled me.

6 Therefore made I a decree to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the interpretation of the dream.

7 ^gThen came in the magicians, the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers: and I told the dream before them; but they did not make known unto me the interpretation thereof.

8 ¶ But at the last Daniel came in before me, ^hwhose name was Belteshazzar, according to the name of my god, ⁱand in whom is the spirit of the holy gods: and before him I told the dream, saying,

^f Chap. ii. 1.—^g Chap. ii. 2.—^h Chap. i. 7.—ⁱ Isa. lxiii. 11; Verse 18; Chap. ii. 11; v. 11, 14.—^k Chap. ii. 48; v. 11.

success in war; for the magnificence and splendour of his court; and for his stupendous works and improvements at Babylon, was the greatest monarch, not only of his own times, but incomparably the greatest the world had ever seen. At a time when he was at rest in his house, and flourishing in his palace; having lately subjected to his empire Syria, Phœnicia, Judea, Egypt, and Arabia, and returned to Babylon inflated with his success and victories, and being in the meridian of his glory, and thinking of nothing but enjoying in peace the fruit of his conquests, he was unexpectedly alarmed, and thrown into trouble and distress, by a prophetic dream which he here records. Thus God's particular judgments often resemble the general one in their coming suddenly and unexpectedly, when men indulge themselves in carnal security.

Verses 6, 7. Therefore made I a decree to bring in the wise men—As he did before, on a like occasion; but they did not make known unto me the interpretation—Though they had promised with great confidence, when consulted before, respecting his former dream, that if it were told them they would, without fail, interpret it. But the key of this dream was in a sacred prophecy, with which they were not acquainted, namely, Ezek. xxxi. 3, &c., where the Assyrian monarch is compared, as Nebuchadnezzar is here, to a tree cut down for his pride. Had they read and considered that divine record, they might perhaps have discovered the mystery of this dream. But Providence ordered it so, that they should be first puzzled with it, that Daniel's interpreting of it afterward might redound to the glory of Daniel's God.

Verses 8, 9. But at the last Daniel came in before me—Whether sent for by the king, or brought by another, appears not, but he was last, that it might appear that he only, or rather, his God, who revealed them to him, had the true understanding of these secrets: for if he had come first, or before the rest

9 O Belteshazzar; ^kmaster of the A. M. 3434.
magicians, because I know that the B. C. 570.

spirit of the holy gods is in thee, and no secret troubleth thee, tell me the visions of my dream that I have seen, and the interpretation thereof.

10 Thus were the visions of my head in my bed; ^lI saw, and behold ^la tree in the midst of the earth, and the height thereof was great.

11 The tree grew, and was strong, and the height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth:

12 The leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all: ^mthe beasts of the field had shadow under it, and the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed of it.

² Chald. I was seeing.—¹ Ezek. xxxi. 3; Verse 20; Isa. x. 34; Zech. xi. 2; Psa. xxxvii. 35.—^m Ezek. xvii. 23; Lam. iv. 20.

had tried all their skill in vain, they would have been ready to affirm they understood the interpretation of the dream as well as he, and so God would not have had the glory of it; but now it was evident that the interpretation was from the Spirit of God enlightening the prophet. In whom is the spirit of the holy gods—Who is enlightened by the gods, or heavenly powers, with a supernatural degree of knowledge, such as none of the wise men of Babylon can attain to. The original words, however, may be rendered, the holy God, as they are in the Greek and Arabic: and it is probable that this king had now the one true God in his mind. O Belteshazzar, master—Or, chief, of the magicians, as Wintle translates the words. That he was superior to, or placed as a governor over, all the magicians, or wise men, see on chap. i. 20, and ii. 48. Because I know that the spirit of the holy gods—Or rather, of the holy God, is in thee, and that no secret troubleth thee—Or, is difficult to thee. The LXX. read, αδυνατει σε, is not impossible to thee. Thou art not at a loss to find out any secret thing whatsoever. Tell me the visions of my dream, and the interpretation thereof—Nebuchadnezzar tells the dream himself in the following words; so that the meaning of this sentence must be, Tell me the interpretation of the dream. The LXX. translate it thus: Hear the vision of my dream, which I saw, and tell me the interpretation thereof.

Verses 10–16. I saw, &c.—The substance of what the king relates is, that he saw in a dream “a tree, strong and flourishing; [in the midst of the earth, or of his empire;] its summit pierced the clouds, and its branches overshadowed the whole extent of his vast dominions: it was laden with fruit, and luxuriant in its foliage: the cattle reposed in its shade, and the fowls of the air lodged in its branches, and multitudes partook of its delicious fruit. But the king saw a celestial being, a watcher, and a holy one, come down from heaven; and heard him give orders,

A. M. 3434. 13 I saw in the visions of my head
B. C. 570. upon my bed, and behold, ^a a watcher

and ^o a holy one came down from heaven;

14 He cried ³ aloud, and said thus, ^p Hew down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit: ⁴ let the beasts get away from under it,* and A. M. 3434.

the fowls from his branches. B. C. 570.

15 Nevertheless, leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let

^a Psalm ciii. 20; Verses 17, 23.—^o Deut. xxxiii. 2; Chapter viii. 13; Zech. xiv. 5; Jude 14.

³ Chaldee, with might.—^p Matthew iii. 10.—⁴ Ezekiel xxxi. 12.

with a loud voice, that the tree should be hewn down, its branches lopped off, and its fruit scattered, and nothing left of it but the stump of its roots in the earth, which was to be secured, however, with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field. Words of menace follow, which are applicable only to a man, and plainly show, that the whole vision was typical of some dreadful calamity, to fall for a time, but for a time only, on some one of the sons of men.”—Bishop Horsley. The whole of this allegorical dream is explained in the subsequent part of the chapter; and therefore it will only be necessary to notice here two or three of the singular expressions and particulars found in it.

1st, By the terms watcher and holy one, or, as the expression is, verse 17, watchers and holy ones, has generally been understood some principal angel, or angels, the angelical orders being described as always attending upon God’s throne to receive and execute his commands: see Psa. ciii. 20; Matt. xviii. 10; and notes on Ezek. i. 11, 24. For which reason they are called the eyes of the Lord, Zech. iv. 10. But Bishop Horsley, in his sermon on the 17th verse, strongly combats, and seems to have fully confuted this opinion. His train of reasoning is too long to be inserted here, and indeed it is not necessary to insert it, the following short extract being quite sufficient to clear up the point. “Those who understand the titles of watchers and holy ones of angelic beings, agree, that they must be principal angels—angels of the highest orders; which, if they are angels at all, must certainly be supposed: for it is to be observed, that it is not the mere execution of the judgment upon Nebuchadnezzar, but the decree itself, which is ascribed to them. The whole matter originated in their decree; and at their command the decree was executed. The holy ones are not said to hew down the tree, but to give command for the hewing of it down. Of how high order, indeed, must these watchers and holy ones have been, on whose decrees the judgments of God himself are founded, and by whom the warrant for the execution is finally issued? It is surprising, that such men as Calvin among the Protestants of the continent—such as Wells and the elder Lowth in our own church—and such as Calmet in the Church of Rome, should not have their eyes open to the error, and impiety indeed, of such an exposition as this which makes them angels, especially when the learned Grotius, in the extraordinary manner in which he recommends it, had set forth its merits, as it should seem, in a true light, when he says, that it represents God as acting like a great monarch ‘upon a decree of his senate:’ and when another of the most learned of its advocates imagines something might pass in the celestial senate, bearing some analogy to the forms of legislation used in the assemblies of the people at Rome, in the times of the republic. It might have been expected that the exposition would have needed no other confirmation, in the judgment of men of piety and sober minds, than this fair statement of its principles by its ablest advocates.

“The plain truth is, that these appellations, Watchers and Holy Ones, denote the persons in the Godhead; the first describing them by the vigilance of their universal providence, the second by the transcendent sanctity of their nature. The word rendered Holy Ones is so applied in other texts of Scripture, which make the sense of the other word, coupled with it here, indisputable. In perfect consistency with this exposition, and with no other, we find, in the 24th verse, that this decree of the Watchers and the Holy Ones is the decree of the Most High God; and in verse 13, God, who in regard to the plurality of the persons, is afterward described by these two plural nouns, Watchers and Holy Ones, is, in regard to the unity of the essence, described by the same nouns in the singular number, Watcher and Holy One. And this is a fuller confirmation of the truth of this exposition: for God is the only being to whom the same name in the singular and in the plural may be indiscriminately applied: and this change from the one number to another, without any thing in the principles of the language to account for it, is frequent in speaking of God in the Hebrew tongue, but unexampled in the case of any other being. The assertion, therefore, is, that God had decreed to execute a signal judgment upon Nebuchadnezzar for his pride and impiety, in order to prove, by the example of that mighty monarch, that ‘the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men.’ To make the declaration the more solemn and striking, the terms in which it is conceived distinctly express that consent and concurrence of all the persons in the Trinity, in the design and execution of this judgment, which must be understood indeed in every act of the Godhead.”

2d, The command given by these watchers and holy ones may be considered as addressed to any of those creatures, animate or inanimate, that are to fulfil the Creator’s will; or the expression may be understood as being merely a prediction that the tree should be cut down, and its leaves shaken off, &c.: and the hewing down of the tree signified only the removal of it for a time, not its entire destruc-

A. M. 3434. his portion be with the beasts in the
B. C. 570. grass of the earth.

16 Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him; and let seven ² times pass over him.

17 This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones: to the intent ³ that the living may know ⁴ that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men.

18 This dream I King Nebuchadnezzar have seen. Now thou, O Belteshazzar, declare the ^{*} Chap. xi. 13; xii. 7.—² Psa. ix. 16.—³ Chap. ii. 21; v. 21; Verses 25, 32.

tion, because while the root remained in the ground new shoots might break forth, and so the tree grow up again. When it is added, let the beasts get away from under it, the meaning evidently is, let not his subjects rely upon him for protection, for he shall not be in a condition to afford them any, or to be the author of any good to them. Nevertheless (it is further commanded) leave the stump of his roots in the earth—By which is signified, that Nebuchadnezzar's kingdom should be preserved to him, and that no one should seize upon it during his exile, or affliction. The words, with a band of iron and brass, were meant to give still further assurance that his kingdom should remain unshaken and sure to him, like things held firm and immoveable by iron or brass. The next expression, in the tender grass of the field, either alludes to the circumstance of the stump of a tree lying buried and neglected in the field, till it is overgrown with grass and herbs, and so is not noticed; or it is a transition from the sign to the thing signified, from the tree to Nebuchadnezzar, represented by it, the tree with its stump being lost sight of, and a person coming in its stead, to whom only what follows is applicable. Let his heart be changed from man's—"It is hard to say what the real nature of this transformation was. The Syriac seems to incline to a change of the mind, and probably it means no more than that his heart, or the nature of his constitution, was made savage and brutish, either by a real madness, or by such a slovenly neglect of himself, or deprivation of the proper use of his speech and limbs, as might reduce him to a state like the beasts. There is a kind of madness called lycanthropy, wherein men have the fury of wolves."—Wintle. See Univ. Hist., p. 964. Scaliger thinks this madness of Nebuchadnezzar is obscurely hinted at in a document of Abydenus, produced by Eusebius; wherein, having represented the king, from the Chaldean writers, to have fallen into an ecstasy, and to have foretold the destruction of that empire by the Medes and Persians, the author adds, that immediately after uttering this prophecy he disappeared; which Scaliger expounds of the king's being driven from his kingly state, and the interpretation thereof, ⁵ forasmuch as A. M. 3434.

B. C. 570. all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation: but thou art able: ⁶ for the spirit of the holy gods is in thee.

19 ¶ Then Daniel, ⁷ whose name was Belteshazzar, was astonished for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king spake, and said, Belteshazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee. Belteshazzar answered, and said, My lord, ⁸ the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies.

⁵ Gen. xli. 8, 15; Chapter v. 8, 15.—⁶ Verse 8.—⁷ Verse 8.
⁸ 2 Sam. xviii. 32; Jer. xxix. 7.

society of men: see Scaliger's notes upon the Ancient Fragments in the appendix to his work de Emendatione Temporum. See also Houbigant and Calmet on the metamorphosis of Nebuchadnezzar. And let seven times pass over him—Literally, Till seven times be changed upon him, that is, seven years, for so the expression evidently signifies in several parts of this book, as we shall see hereafter.

Verses 17, 18. This matter is by the decree of the watchers, &c., to the intent that the living may know, &c.—The intent of the matter was to give mankind a proof, in the fall and restoration of this mighty monarch, that the fortunes of kings and empires are in the hand of God; that his providence perpetually interposes in the affairs of men, and that he distributes crowns and sceptres according to his will, but always for the good of the faithful primarily, and ultimately of his whole creation. And setteth over it the basest of men—If this be applied to Nebuchadnezzar, it must be understood, either with respect to his present condition, whose pride and cruelty rendered him as despicable in the sight of God as his high estate made him appear honourable in the eyes of men; and, therefore, was justly doomed to so low a degree of abasement: or else it may be interpreted of his wonderful restoration and advancement after he had been degraded from his dignity.

Verse 19. Then Daniel was astonished for one hour—"Stood in silent astonishment for nearly an hour," both at the surprising circumstances of the judgment denounced against the king, and likewise out of a tender regard and respect for his person, who had bestowed so many favours upon him. The Vulgate renders it, capit intra seipsum tacitus cogitare, he began to consider in silence within himself, or silently reflected on the particulars of the dream just related. But the LXX. read ἀννέωδν, obstupescens fuit, he was amazed, or confounded. The king said, Let not the dream trouble thee—Whatever it be that thou understandest from the dream, tell it freely without fear. Daniel answered, The dream be to them that hate thee—May the ill it portends happen to thy enemies. The words are spoken by the figure called euphemismus, according to

A. M. 3434. 20 ^a The tree that thou sawest, which grew, and was strong, whose height reached unto the heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth;

21 Whose leaves were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all; under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation:

22 ^b It is thou, O king, that art grown and become strong: for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, ^c and thy dominion to the end of the earth.

23 ^d And whereas the king saw a watcher and a holy one coming down from heaven, and saying, Hew the tree down, and destroy it; yet leave the stump of the roots thereof in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, ^e and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him;

24 This is the interpretation, O king, and this is the decree of the Most High, which is come upon my lord the king:

25 That they shall ^f drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee ^g to eat grass as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee, ^h till thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and ⁱ giveth it to whomsoever he will.

26 And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree roots; thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the ^k heavens do rule.

27 Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and ^l break off thy sins by which any displeasing or ungrateful thing is signified by a more soft and agreeable mode of expression: see a like instance, 1 Sam. xxv. 22. "Such rhetorical embellishments are pointed at no individuals, have nothing in them of malice or ill-will, and may be presumed to be free from any imputation of a want of charity."—Wintle. Daniel thus expresses his dutiful concern for the safety of the king's person and government. For though Nebuchadnezzar was an idolater, a persecutor, and oppressor of the people of God, yet he was Daniel's prince, and therefore, though he foresees, and is now going to foretell, ill concerning him, he dares not wish ill to him. Thus Jeremiah had before exhorted the Jewish captives at Babylon to wish and pray for the prosperity of the government under which they lived.

^a Verses 10, 11, 12.—^b Chapter ii. 38.—^c Jer. xxvii. 6, 7, 8.
^d Verse 13.—^e Chap. v. 21.—^f Verse 32; Chap. v. 21, &c.

^g Psalm cvi. 20.—^h Verses 17, 32; Ps. lxxxiii. 18.—ⁱ Jer. xxvii. 5.—^k Matt. xxi. 25; Luke xv. 18, 21.—^l 1 Pet. iv. 8.

Verses 20–22. The tree that thou sawest is thou, O king, that art grown and become strong—Princes and great men are frequently represented in Scripture by fair and flourishing trees. So the king of Assyria is described, Ezekiel xxxi. 3–8; compare Isa. x. 34; Zech. xi. 2. Thy greatness is grown and reacheth unto heaven—As near as human greatness can do. He shows the king his present prosperous state in the glass of his own dream: see verse 11. And thy dominion to the end of the earth—To the Caspian sea, to the Euxine sea, and to the Atlantic ocean.—Grotius. See note on chap. ii. 38.

Verses 24–26. This is the interpretation, O king, &c.—We may observe that Daniel informs the king with the greatest tenderness, and most respectful terms, of the sad reverse of condition that was to happen to him. They shall drive thee from men—In the Chaldee and Hebrew the plural active, they shall do, signifies no more than, thus it shall be, be the cause what it may. The meaning seems to be, that Nebuchadnezzar should be punished with insanity, which should so deprave his imagination, while he yet retained his memory, and, perhaps, his reason in some intervals, as that he should fancy himself to be a beast, and should live as such, till his heart, that is, his apprehension, appetite, or likings, should be changed from those of a man to those of a beast. To eat grass as oxen signifies to live upon the herbs of the field; for the original word signifies any kind of field-herb as well as grass. Till thou know that the most high God ruleth, &c.—It appears from what is here said, that this judgment was inflicted on Nebuchadnezzar on account of his pride or haughtiness, and his making no acknowledgment of a Divine Providence ordering and governing the affairs of the world; but attributing the acquisition of all his great power and vast dominion to his own prudence and valour, instead of acknowledging it as the gift of the most high God. And whereas they commanded to leave the stump, &c., thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee—There shall be no other king chosen during thy affliction, but thou shalt again receive thy kingly power, and reign as before. After that thou shalt have known that the heavens do rule—The heavens are here put for the God of the heavens.

Verse 27. Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee—These words Daniel adds out of love to the king, if perhaps his complying with the advice given might turn away this dreadful stroke from him, or at least might give the king some hopes of a mitigation of the calamity. And break off thy sins by righteousness—Cease to do evil, and learn to do well. Change thy principles and practices; do justly and love mercy; and instead of oppressing the poor, have compassion upon them, and be kind and bountiful to them. Give this evidence of thy true repentance and reformation.

A. M. 3434. righteousness, and thine iniquities by B. C. 570. showing mercy to the poor; ^m if it may be ^a a lengthening of thy tranquillity.

28 ¶ All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar.

29 At the end of twelve months he walked ^s in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon.

30 The king ^o spake, and said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?

31 ^p While the word was in the king's mouth, there fell ^q a voice from heaven, saying, O King Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken; The kingdom is departed from thee:

32 And ^r they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field: they shall make thee to eat A. M. 3434. grass as oxen, and seven times shall B. C. 570. pass over thee, until thou know that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will.

33 The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar: and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws.

34 And ^a at the end of the days I B. C. 587. Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the Most High, and I praised and honoured him ^t that liveth for ever, whose dominion is ^u an everlasting dominion,

^m Psalm xli. 1, &c.—^q Or, a healing of thine error.
ⁿ 1 Kings xxi. 29.—^s Or, upon.—^o Prov. xvi. 18; Chap. v. 20.—^p Chap. v. 5; Luke xii. 20.

^r Verse 24.—^s Verse 25.—^t Verse 26.—^u Chap. xii. 7; Rev. iv. 10.—^v Psa. x. 16; Chap. ii. 44; vii. 14; Mic. iv. 7; Luke i. 33.

Though the word פָּרַק, here used, properly signifies to break off, as it is here translated, yet many of the versions render it, to redeem, and read the clause, Redeem thy sins by righteousness, that is, as they explain it, by almsgiving; and thus the passage is alleged as favouring the doctrine of expiatory merit, and purchase of absolutions and pardons: but, it must be observed, sins are not said to be redeemed in Scripture, but persons; and the plain sense of the words is as it is given in our translation. If it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity—Daniel was not certain of pardon for him, nor did he altogether despair of it. With what wisdom and tenderness does he speak, and yet with what plainness!

Verses 28–33. All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar—With what admirable propriety is the person changed here! the six following verses being delivered in the third person. But in the 34th, Nebuchadnezzar, having recovered his reason, speaks in the first person again. At the end of twelve months—God deferred the execution of his threats against this impious prince for a whole year, giving him that time wherein to repent and return to him; but seeing that he persevered in his crimes, the measure of his iniquities being full, he put his menaces in execution.—Calmet. “Strange as it may seem,” says Bishop Horsley, “notwithstanding Daniel’s weight and credit with the king,—notwithstanding the consternation of mind into which the dream had thrown him, the warning had no permanent effect. He was not cured of his overweening pride and vanity till he was overtaken by the threatened judgment. At the end of twelve months, he was walking in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon—Probably on the flat roof of the building, or perhaps on one of the highest terraces of the hanging gardens, where the whole city would be in prospect before him; and he said, in the exultation of his heart, Is not this great Babylon, which I have built for the seat of empire, by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?—The words had scarcely passed his lips, when the might of his power and the honour of his majesty departed from him. The same voice, which in the dream had predicted the judgment, now denounced the impending execution; and the voice had no sooner ceased to speak than it was done.”

Of the extent, glory, and splendour of Babylon, see note on Isa. xiii. 19. Although Babylon was one of the oldest cities in the world, being built by Nimrod a little after the erection of the famous tower of Babel, and considerably augmented by Semiramis, yet Nebuchadnezzar had very much improved it, and made it one of the wonders of the world, on account of the largeness and height of the walls which he built round it, the temple of Belus, his own palace, and the famous hanging gardens belonging to it, all of which were the works of this king. Bochart thinks that Babylon was as much indebted to Nebuchadnezzar as Rome was to Augustus Cesar, who used to boast, that he received the city of brick, and left it of marble. But Herodotus says, it was built gradually by several other Assyrian kings; and he relates, that the wealth of the Babylonian state was so great, that it was equal to one-third part of all Asia; and that, besides the tribute, if the other supplies for the great king were divided into twelve parts, according to the twelve months of the year, Babylon would supply four, and all Asia the other eight.

Verses 34, 35. At the end of the days, I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes, &c.—The first indication of his recovery is noted by a reverse of the cause of his fall. At the expiration of the term, or at the end of seven years, he lifted up his eyes unto heaven, and his understanding returned; that is, he

A. M. 3434. and his kingdom is from generation to generation :
B. C. 570.

35 And ^aall the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing : and ^vhe doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth : and ^anone can stay his hand, or say unto him, ^aWhat doest thou ?

36 At the same time my reason returned unto me : ^band for the glory of my kingdom, mine

^a Isa. xl. 15, 17.—^v Psa. cxv. 3 ; cxxxv. 6.—^a Job xxxiv. 29.
^a Job ix. 12 ; Isa. xlv. 9 ; Rom. ix. 20.—^b Verse 26.

recovered the use of his reason, and became sensible of his dependance upon God ; he acknowledged against whom he had transgressed by his pride ; he humbled himself before him ; acknowledged the greatness of his power, and the justice of his wrath ; applied to him in prayer, and obtained mercy. And I blessed the Most High, &c.—I rendered praise to that supreme, infinite, and eternal God, the Maker of heaven and earth, and the upholder, preserver, and sovereign Lord of the universe, on whom all creatures are dependant, and to whom all intelligent creatures are accountable for their conduct ; the highest angels not being above his command, nor the meanest of the children of men beneath his cognizance. And all the inhabitants of the world are reputed as nothing—The greatest monarchs, as well as persons of an inferior rank, are as nothing in his sight ; and he disposes all things in heaven and earth by an irresistible power and authority. Observe, reader, a due consideration of God's infinite greatness makes the creature appear as nothing ; creatures are nothing to help, nothing to hurt, nothing in duration, nothing solid and substantial, nothing without dependance upon, and influence and support from God. God is I AM, and there is none else ; verily, every man in his best estate is altogether vanity, Psa. xxxix. 5 ; yea, less than vanity, and nothing, Psa. lxii. 9 ; Isa. xl. 17. And he doth according to his will—Being the Lord of hosts, and the only absolute and universal monarch of the honour and brightness returned unto me ; and my counsellors and my lords sought unto me ; and I was established in my kingdom, and excellent majesty was ^cadded unto me.

37 Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise, and extol, and honour the King of heaven, ^dall whose works are truth, and his ways judgment : ^eand those that walk in pride he is able to abase.

^e Job xlii. 12 ; Prov. xxii. 4 ; Matt. vi. 33.—^d Psa. xxxiii. 4 ; Rev. xv. 3 ; xvi. 7.—^e Exod. xviii. 11 ; Chap. v. 20.

world ; none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou ?—He is irresistible and uncontrollable.

Ver. 36, 37. And for the glory—Or rather, And the glory of my kingdom, and mine honour and brightness—Or countenance, (as the word יָד, here used, is translated, chap. v. 6, and vii. 28,) returned to me—I recovered my former looks, was possessed of the same outward glory and majesty, and was honoured with the same attendance and retinue, as I was before. Now I, Nebuchadnezzar, praise, and extol, and honour, &c.—The number and variety of the words here used are meant to express the vehemence of the king's zeal and affectionate devotion. All whose works are truth, and his ways judgment—Who governs the world with equity and justice. And those who walk in pride he is able to abase—Of which Nebuchadnezzar himself was a remarkable instance. This doxology seems evidently to have proceeded from his heart ; and it is very probable, from the confession that he makes, and the glory and praise which he gives to God, that his conversion was real, and that he was a true proselyte to the Jewish religion. This great king, it appears, lived only one year after his recovery ; and it may be hoped that, during that term, he continued in the faith and worship of the true God. His death happened in the thirty-seventh year of Jehoiachin's captivity, after he had reigned sole monarch forty-three years.

CHAPTER V.

In this chapter we have an account, (1.) Of Belshazzar's profane feast, and of his polluting the sacred vessels taken from the temple of God, 1-4. (2.) Of the handwriting on the wall, denouncing his consequent punishment, 5-9. (3.) The interpretation of that handwriting by Daniel, 10-29. (4.) The accomplishment of it in the death of the king, and the transferring of the kingdom to another people, 30, 31.

A. M. 3466. BELSHAZZAR the king ^amade
B. C. 538. a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand. A. M. 3466.

B. C. 538.

^a Esther i. 3.

NOTES ON CHAPTER V.

Verse 1. Belshazzar—The son of Evil-merodach, and grandson of Nebuchadnezzar ; made a great feast to a thousand of his lords—To the principal officers and great men of his court, and was himself present at it. This feast was made at a time of pub-

A. M. 3466. 2 Belshazzar, while he tasted the
B. C. 538. wine, commanded to bring the golden and silver vessels ^b which his ¹ father Nebuchadnezzar had ² taken out of the temple which was in Jerusalem; that the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, might drink therein.

3 Then they brought the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of the house of God which was at Jerusalem; and the king,
and his princes, his wives, and his concubines,
drank in them.

4 They drank wine, ^c and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone.

5 ¶ ^d In the same hour came forth fingers of ^b Chapter i. 2; Jeremiah lii. 19.—¹ Or, grand-father, as Jeremiah xxvii. 7; 2 Sam. ix. 7; 2 Chronicles xv. 16; Verses 11, 13.—² Chald. brought forth.—^c Rev. ix. 20.—^d Chap.

iv. 31.—^e Chald. brightnesses, Verse 9.

lic rejoicing, being an annual festival, when the whole night was spent in revelling; of which season Cyrus took the advantage to make himself master of the city, as Herodotus and Xenophon relate,
and as was foretold by Jeremiah, chap. i. 24, and li.
39, 57, where see the notes.

Verses 2-4. Belshazzar, while he tasted the wine
—When he grew warm with wine, Houb. Com- manded to bring the golden and silver vessels, &c.
Triumphing thereby over God and his people.
They drank wine—Made themselves merry with wine. And praised the gods of gold, &c.—Praised,
as gods, senseless images of gold, silver, brass, iron, &c.; thus insulting the great God of heaven and earth, as if these images were more powerful than he, and had enabled them to prevail against him and his people. This their conduct was the more sinful, because Nebuchadnezzar had, not long before, prohibited, by a solemn decree, that any one should speak lightly of the God of the Jews. The Alexandrine and Coptic versions, after mentioning their praising their false gods, add, “But the everlasting God they praised not.” Such a wanton and sacrile-gious insult deserved and called for exemplary punishment.

Verses 5, 6. In the same hour—At the very time;
came forth fingers of a man's hand—The likeness of a man's hand; and wrote over against the candlestick—The angel Gabriel, say the rabbins, directing this hand, and writing by it. Belshazzar
seems to have filled up the measure of his iniquity,
by this act of gross impiety and dishonour done to the true God. And the king saw—It seems, first saw; the part of the hand that wrote—It is probable this candlestick was a hanging sconce, near the king, and that the light it cast made him see the hand while it was writing, as well as the writing which remained on the wall. His seeing the hand, but not the person whose hand it was, made the

A. M. 3466. a man's hand, and wrote over against
B. C. 538. the candlestick upon the plaster of the wall of the king's palace: and the king
saw the part of the hand that wrote.

6 Then the king's ³ countenance ⁴ was changed,
and his thoughts troubled him, so that the ⁵ joints ⁶ of his loins were loosed, and his ^e knees smote one against another.

7 ¶ The king cried ⁷ aloud to bring in ⁸ the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers.
And the king spake and said to the wise men
of Babylon, Whosoever shall read this writing, and show me the interpretation thereof, shall be clothed with ⁸ scarlet, and have a chain of gold about his neck, ^h and shall be the third ruler in the kingdom.

⁴ Chald. changed it.—⁵ Or, girdles, Isaiah v. 27.—⁶ Chald.
bindings, or, knots.—^c Nahum ii. 10.—^f Chapter ii. 2; iv.
6.—⁷ Chald. with might.—^g Isaiah xlvii. 13.—^h Or, purple.
^b Chap. vi. 2.

thing more frightful. Then the king's countenance
was changed, &c.—His face became pale with terror: for although he could not read the writing, and therefore did not know what was its purport, yet a sense of guilt made him forebode that the words had some dreadful meaning; and his thoughts troubled
him—His remorse of conscience respecting the past,
and his fearful apprehensions with regard to the future; so that the joints of his loins were loosed—
He discovered the disorder of his mind by the trembling which seized his whole body. And his knees
smote one against another—So soon can the terrors
of God shake the loftiest cedars, and terrify the tyrants of the earth! Thus can the Lord spoil the mad mirth of drunken atheists in a moment! “The expressions in this verse, in a collected view, contain such a description of terror as is rarely to be met with; the dead change of the countenance, the per-turbation of the thoughts, the joints of the loins becoming relaxed, and the knees smiting against each other, are very strong indications of horror. Horace has, ‘Et corde et genibus tremit;’ and Virgil, ‘Tarda trementi genua labant;’ but these are far inferior to the picturesque description of Daniel.”— Wintle.

Verse 7. The king cried aloud—Manifesting at once great fear and great impatience; to bring in the astrologers, &c.—In this he imitated Nebuchadnezzar his grandfather: it seems indeed to have been the general practice of these heathen kings, in all unexpected emergencies, to apply to these their wise men for help. But the ill success of Nebuchadnezzar, in such applications, might have taught Belshaz-zar a better lesson. The king said, Whosoever
shall read this writing, &c.—To engage these wise men to exert the utmost of their skill in this matter,
he promises that whosoever would give him a satisfactory account of this writing should be dignified with the highest honours of the court; and be the

A. M. 3466. 8 Then came in all the king's wise
B. C. 538.

men: ¹ but they could not read the writing, nor make known to the king the interpretation thereof.

9 Then was King Belshazzar greatly ^ktroubled, and his ^ocountenance was changed in him, and his lords were astonished.

10 ¶ Now the queen, by reason of the words of the king and his lords, came into the banquet-house: and the queen spake and said, ¹O king, live for ever: let not thy thoughts trouble thee, nor let thy countenance be changed:

11 ^mThere is a man in thy kingdom, in

¹ Chapter ii. 27; iv. 7.—^k Chap. ii. 1.—^o Chald. bright-nesses, Verse 6.—¹ Chapter ii. 4; iii. 9.—^m Chapter ii. 48; iv. 8, 9, 18.—¹⁰ Or, grandfather, Verse 2.

third ruler in the kingdom—"Grotius considers the king as the first, the king's son as the second, and the interpreter of the vision to be the third. Or it may mean, that there should be a triumvirate appointed to govern the kingdom, as was the case in the beginning of the reign of Darius, and the interpreter should be one of these. Mr. Bruce (vol. iv. p. 32) speaks of a person who was suddenly advanced to a command, the third in the kingdom of Abyssinia for rank, power, and riches; and that, at his public investiture, he had a circle of gold put upon his head, was clothed with a white and blue mantle, and made the king's lieutenant-general in the provinces allotted to him."—Wintle.

Verses 8, 9. Then came in all the king's wise men—Ambitious of the honour, and desirous to gratify the king. But they could not read the writing—Because, says Houbigant, it was written in the ancient Samaritan characters, which were very unlike the Chaldean letters. Or perhaps only the initial letters, M. T. P. were written. But God, for his own glory, reserved the honour of reading and interpreting it for his servant Daniel. Mr. Wintle renders the clause, "They were unable to read the writing, so as to make known the interpretation to the king." Then was King Belshazzar greatly troubled—His consternation and distress were renewed and increased, his last hope having failed him; and his lords were astonished—His associates in sin shared in the consternation; and notwithstanding their number, mirth, and wine, were dismayed and terrified exceedingly.

Verses 10-12. Now the queen, &c.—The king's wives and concubines sat with him at the feast, verse 2; therefore the person here called the queen, and said to come into the banqueting-house on this solemn occasion, must have been the queen-mother, the widow of Evil-merodach, named Nitocris, a lady, according to Herodotus, eminent for her wisdom, and who had the chief direction of public affairs. The queen said, Let not thy thoughts trouble thee—

whom is the spirit of the holy gods; A. M. 3466.
and in the days of thy ¹⁰father light B. C. 538.

and understanding and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, was found in him; whom the king Nebuchadnezzar thy ¹¹father, the king, I say, thy father, made ⁿmaster of the magicians, astrologers, Chaldeans, and soothsayers:

12 ^oForasmuch as an excellent spirit, and knowledge, and understanding, ¹²interpreting of dreams, and showing of hard sentences, and ¹³dissolving of ¹⁴doubts, were found in the same Daniel, ^pwhom the king named Belshazzar: now let Daniel be called, and he will show the interpretation.

¹¹ Or, grandfather, Verse 2.—ⁿ Chapter iv. 9.—^o Chapter vi. 3.—¹² Or, of an interpreter, &c.—¹³ Or, of a dissolver.
¹⁴ Chald. knots.—^p Chap. i. 7.

Be not so distressed, nor yield to terror and despondency. There is a man in thy kingdom—Some persons are apt to wonder that Daniel was unknown to Belshazzar, which others have accounted for from the abandoned and indolent character of this prince; but there is a further reason, which Mr. Harmer, vol. i. p. 166, has hinted, from Sir John Chardin, namely, that he had been mazouled, as they express it in the East, that is, displaced at the death of a prior king; since, in the East, when the king dies, the physicians and astrologers are removed: the former for not having driven away death, and the latter for not having predicted it. It is probable, however, that Daniel was not totally unknown to the king; but being perhaps in no esteem, or not employed in any considerable department of the state, in the early part of his reign, he was not readily recollected. In whom was the spirit of the holy gods—See note on chap. iv. 8. And in the days of thy father—That is, of thy grandfather, Nebuchadnezzar, light and understanding, &c.—That is, an enlightened understanding, or supernatural illumination, as the next words show. Such an insight he had into things secret, and such a foresight of things to come, that it was evident he was divinely inspired, and possessed of extraordinary wisdom, given him from above. Forasmuch as an excellent spirit and knowledge, &c., were found in the same Daniel—His excellent disposition, his humble, holy, heavenly spirit, was both a great ornament to his wisdom, and fitted him for the reception and increase of that extraordinary gift of God. Now let Daniel be called, and he will show the interpretation—She speaks with confidence; for, being aged, and Nebuchadnezzar having been dead not above twenty-four years, she no doubt well remembered the extraordinary events which had occurred in the latter part of his life, and the supernatural inspiration, and extraordinary wisdom, which Daniel had manifested on these occasions. And she speaks as if she knew where to find Daniel, though Belshazzar probably did not.

A. M. 3466.
B. C. 538.

13 Then was Daniel brought in before the king. And the king spake and said unto Daniel, Art thou that Daniel, which art of the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the king my ¹⁵ father brought out of Jewry?

14 I have even heard of thee, that ^a the spirit of the gods is in thee, and that light and understanding and excellent wisdom is found in thee.

15 And now ^r the wise men, the astrologers, have been brought in before me, that they should read this writing, and make known unto me the interpretation thereof: but they could not show the interpretation of the thing:

¹⁵ Or, grandfather.—^a Verses 11, 12.—^r Verses 7, 8.
¹⁶ Chald. interpret.

Verses 13-17. Then was Daniel brought in before the king—Daniel was now near ninety years of age; so that his years and honours, and former preferences, might have entitled him to a free admission into the king's presence; yet he was willing to be introduced, as a stranger, by the king's servants. The king said unto Daniel, Art thou that Daniel—This question of the king shows, that if he was at all acquainted with Daniel, it was very imperfectly; and that in however high esteem that extraordinary man had been held in the days of Nebuchadnezzar, and whatever offices of trust and honour he had then filled, he was now sunk into neglect, Belshazzar being a weak and vicious prince, according to the character historians give of him, and one who interested himself very little in public affairs, leaving the care of them to his mother, and himself minding nothing but his pleasures. Now if thou canst read the writing, &c., thou shalt be clothed with scarlet—He promises him the same rewards if he could read and interpret the writing as he had promised his wise men on condition of their doing it. Then Daniel answered, Let thy gifts be to thyself—As Daniel was now in years, and Belshazzar young, he therefore seems to take a greater liberty, and to deal more plainly with him, than he had done upon the like occasions with Nebuchadnezzar. He addresses him as a very aged and eminent person would address one much younger than himself. When he was consulted by Nebuchadnezzar, and was allowed the liberty of conversing with him and giving him counsel, he foresaw that the Chaldean monarchy would continue for some time, and that his being preferred would give him an opportunity of being useful to his brethren; but he now knew that that empire was about to terminate, and Belshazzar's reign and life to come to a period. Nebuchadnezzar, though an idolater and a tyrant, yet had great abilities, attended to the affairs of his kingdom, and was, in many respects, very eminent as a monarch; but Belshazzar was every way base, odious, and contemptible. "Above all, he had that night been insulting the God

A. M. 3466.
B. C. 538.

16 And I have heard of thee, that ^a thou canst ¹⁶ make interpretations, and dissolve doubts: ^a now if thou canst read the writing, and make known to me the interpretation thereof, thou shalt be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold about thy neck, and shalt be the third ruler in the kingdom.

17 ¶ Then Daniel answered and said before the king, Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy ¹⁷ rewards to another; yet I will read the writing unto the king, and make known to him the interpretation.

18 O thou king, ^t the most high God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father a kingdom, and majesty, and glory, and honour:

^a Verse 7.—¹⁷ Or, fee, as Chap. ii. 6.—^t Chap. ii. 37, 39; iv. 17, 22, 25.

of heaven in the most daring manner, by profaning the sacred vessels in his revels, and extolling his own idols. Daniel therefore knew that his doom was irreversible, and immediately to be put in execution; and he did not speak to him as a subject to his prince, but as the delegate of heaven he denounced sentence against him as a condemned criminal."—Scott. Some commentators have been puzzled to account for Daniel's rejecting the king's presents here, and afterward accepting them, as is mentioned verse 29; but his intention in what he now says is only modestly to decline the honours, and to intimate that they could have no influence on his mind, which yet, at the king's command, afterward he could not but accept. In other words, he means to say, that he was ready to do whatever the king enjoined, without any respect to a recompense: see Calmet. Yet will I read the writing unto the king—Daniel seems to have made this declaration in consequence of a persuasion wherewith he was inspired of God, before he even cast his eye upon the writing.

Verses 18, 19. O thou king—Before Daniel reads the writing, he judges it proper to remind the king of God's dealings with Nebuchadnezzar, his progenitor, and of those remarkable instances of divine providence, both in mercy and in judgment, which were intended to be an instructive lesson, as to all princes that should hear of them, so especially to all the descendants of that great monarch. He also, with great fidelity and seriousness, sets Belshazzar's profane conduct before him, that he might be humbled and brought to repentance. The most high God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father a kingdom, &c.—His great power, and vast extent of empire, were the gifts of God to him, and were not acquired by his own policy or bravery, or those of his generals and armies. Grotius explains the different terms of this verse thus: A kingdom, that is, a widely-extended empire; majesty, or magnificence among his subjects; glory from his victories; and honour from the enlargement of the city, the building of its walls, temple, and palace. And for the majesty that he

A. M. 3466. 19 And for the majesty that he gave
B. C. 538, him, "all people, nations, and languages, trembled and feared before him: whom he would he slew; and whom he would he kept alive; and whom he would he set up; and whom he would he put down.

20 * But when his heart was lifted up, and his mind hardened ¹⁸ in pride, he was ¹⁹ deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him:

21 And he was [†] driven from the sons of men; and ²⁰ his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses: they fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven;
* till he knew that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men, and that he appointeth
over it whomsoever he will.

22 And thou his son, O Belshazzar, ^a hast not humbled thy heart, though thou knewest
all this;

^a Jeremiah xxvii. 7; Chapter iii. 4.—^{*} Chapter iv. 30, 37.
¹⁸ Or, to deal proudly, Exodus xviii. 11.—¹⁹ Chaldee, made to come down.—[†] Chap. iv. 32.—²⁰ Or, he made his heart equal.
^{*} Chap. iv. 17, 25.

gave him—For the vast power, riches, and victorious
hand which he gave him; all people, nations, &c., trembled and feared before him, &c.—We have here
a strong picture of the absolute and independent power of these princes; they regarded their subjects
only as slaves. Xerxes, having assembled the great men of his kingdom, when he had determined to undertake the war against Greece, said to them, "I have assembled you that I might not seem to act solely by my own counsel; but remember that I expect obedience, not advice from you."—Calmet.

Verses 20-23. But when his heart was lifted up—
The expressions here have a peculiar force, in marking the haughty insolence of King Nebuchadnezzar.
His authority, as mentioned in the last verse, had been raised to the highest pitch; and on that account
we find here that his mind was elated, and his spirit grown obdurate in pride and arrogance; instead of his ascribing all his honours and advantages to the real giver of them, the true God, whom he had been brought to acknowledge, and to the neglect of whom,
and of improving by his grandfather's sufferings, the prophet justly and judiciously attributes Belshaz-zar's fate. Thou his son, &c., hast not humbled thy heart—Thou hast not been made sensible of thy own utter weakness, and thy absolute dependance on Jehovah, the true God, who thus abased thy father in the midst of his power and pride. But hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven—As if thou hadst been equal, or even superior to him in wisdom and power. He instances in four particulars: 1st,
They have brought the vessels of his house before

23 ^b But hast lifted up thyself against ^{A. M. 3466.}
the Lord of heaven; and they have ^{B. C. 538.}
brought the vessels of his house before thee,
and thou, and thy lords, thy wives, and thy concubines, have drunk wine in them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver, and gold,
of brass, iron, wood, and stone, ^c which see not,
nor hear, nor know: and the God in whose hand thy breath is, ^d and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified.

24 Then was the part of the hand sent from him; and this writing was written.

25 ¶ And this is the writing that was written,
MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN.

26 This is the interpretation of the thing:
MENE; God hath numbered thy kingdom,
and finished it.

27 TEKEL; ^e Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting.

28 PERES; Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the ^f Medes and ^g Persians.

^a 2 Chron. xxxiii. 23; xxxvi. 12.—^b Verses 3, 4.—^c Psa.
cxv. 5, 6.—^d Jeremiah x. 23.—^e Job xxxi. 6; Psalm lxii. 9;
Jer. vi. 30.—^f Foretold, Isaiah xxi. 2; Verse 31; Chap. ix. 1.
^g Chap. vi. 28.

thee—To profane them in your idolatrous feasts: 2d,
Thou hast praised the gods of silver and gold, &c., which see not, &c. 3d, Thou hast not glorified
the true God, in whose hands thy breath is, and all thy ways: yea, 4th, Thou hast highly dishonoured, affronted, and reproached him.

Verses 24-28. Then was part of the hand sent from him—The LXX. read, Δια τούτο εκ προσώπου αυτού απε-σταλη αστραγαλός χειρός, και την γραφήν ταυτην ενεταξε. "On this account hath the joint, or part of a hand, been sent from his presence, and hath formed this writing." The reading in the Vulgate is to the same purpose. Houbigant translates the verse, "Therefore is the hand sent from him, the fingers whereof have formed this writing." And this is the writing, MENE, &c.
—In the Arabic the three words are considered as participles, Mensuratum, Appensum, Divisum, "Measured, Weighed, Divided." The words are fully explained by Daniel in the following verses. MENE; God hath numbered thy kingdom, &c.—God hath numbered the days of thy reign, and put an end to it.
The word MENE is doubled in the foregoing verse, to show that the thing was certain, and established by God, as Joseph tells Pharaoh in a like case, Gen. xli.
32. TEKEL; Thou art weighed in the balances, &c.
—The reason that an end is put to thy reign so soon
is, that thou art found light in the scales of divine equity. Wicked men are often compared to silver adulterated, and alloyed with baser metals, which makes it too light when weighed in the balances:
such was Belshazzar when weighed in the scales of divine justice. The same comparison is used by

A. M. 3466. 29 Then commanded Belshazzar,
B. C. 538. and they clothed Daniel with scarlet, and put a chain of gold about his neck, and made a proclamation concerning him, ^h that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom.

^h Verse 7.—ⁱ Jer. li. 31, 39, 57.—^k Chap. ix. 1.

Homer, when Hector's fatal day approaches, Iliad, xxii., and by Virgil, at the death of Turnus, Æn. xii.
And so Milton, in the war of the angels,

"————— Long time in even scale "

The battle hung." Par. Lost, b. vi. l. 245.

PERES; Thy kingdom is divided—Or broken from thee. The word PERES signifies broken; and it also signifies the nation of the Persians, for they were called Paros, by the Chaldeans: so that this word
not only signified that the Babylonish kingdom
should be broken, but also by whom it should be broken. UPHARSIN, the other word in the writing, is a participle of the same verb from whence PERES
is derived, and literally signifies, And they divide it.
Concerning Belshazzar's destruction, see notes on Isa. xiv.

Verse 29. Then commanded Belshazzar, and they clothed Daniel—The king was so struck with his superior wisdom, and conceived himself so bound by the promise he had made before his nobles, that he ordered the prophet to be rewarded immediately with the hogours he had promised him, which he was forced to accept, and which probably prepared him for a more easy reception by the succeeding monarch. "Nor let it be matter of wonder that Daniel is said to be clothed as it were immediately,
for these habits were always at hand for the eastern monarchs to reward their friends or favourites with;
and Mr. Harmer tells us, from Sir John Chardin, that the kings of Persia have great wardrobes, where there are always many hundreds of habits ready,
designed for presents, and sorted.—Obs., vol. ii. p. 87.
It seems likewise that, on some occasions, the great men of the East were accustomed to carry with them, on their journeys, a variety of habits and vestments, in order to distribute them as presents to those whom they wished to honour and reward.
And this will account for the changes of garments,
which Naaman the Syrian had with him, when he returned from the Prophet Elisha, some of which were given to his perfidious servant, 2 Kings v."— Wintle.

Verses 30, 31. In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain—He and all his nobles
were slain together, in the midst of their feasting

30 ¶ ⁱ In that night was Belshazzar A. M. 3466.
the king of the Chaldeans slain. B. C. 538.

31 ^k And Darius the Median took the kingdom, ²¹ being ²² about threescore and two years old.

²¹ Chald. he as the son of.—²² Or, now.

and revelling, as Herodotus, lib. i., and Xenophon, inform us. The latter relates the story thus, Cyropæd.,
lib. vii.—"That two deserters, Gadatas and Gobryas, having assisted some of the Persian army to kill the guards, and seize upon the palace, they entered into the room where the king was, whom they found standing up in a posture of defence; but they soon despatched him, and those that were with him." It seems not improbable, likewise, that they burned the houses of the city, or at least the advanced buildings, in their progress, and forced the citizens to quit them in the greatest consternation;
for they came upon them with such surprise, that,
according to Herodotus, "they had passed through the gates, which were left open in this riotous night,
and had taken the extreme parts of the city, before those who inhabited the middle parts knew of the capture," lib. i. p. 77. Thus the prophecy of Jeremiah was accomplished, that Babylon should be taken at the time of a public feast, while her princes and great men, &c., should be drunken, and should sleep a perpetual sleep, and not awake: see notes on Jer. li. 32, 39, 57. Respecting the method practised by Cyrus to surprise the city, by draining that part of the Euphrates which ran through it, together with many other curious particulars relating to Babylon, see notes on Isa. xiii. And Darius the Median took the kingdom—This Darius is said to be one of the seed of the Medes, chap. ix. 1, and is supposed, by the most judicious chronologers, to be the same with Cyaxares, the son of Astyages; him Cyrus made king of the Chaldeans, as being his uncle by the mother's side, and his partner in carrying on the war against the Babylonians; and left him the palace of the king of Babylon, to live there whenever he pleased, as Xenophon relates, Cyropæd., lib. viii. As Darius succeeded to the empire through Cyrus's permission, or appointment, and was dependant upon him for it, Ptolemy's canon supposes Cyrus to be the immediate successor of Nabonnedus, or Belshazzar, and allots nine years to his reign; whereas Xenophon reckons two of these years to Darius, and seven to Cyrus. The Chaldee phrase, rendered here took, the kingdom, is translated, possessed the kingdom, chap. vii. 18, and means the same with succeeding in the kingdom.—Lowth.

CHAPTER VI.

This chapter contains the history, (1.) Of Daniel's preferment under Darius, 1-3. (2.) Of the envy which it excited in the principal officers of the state 4, 5. (3.) Of their conspiracy against him on that account, and the decree they obtained from the king against prayer, 6-9. (4.) Daniel's continuance and constancy in prayer, notwithstanding that decree, 10

(5.) He is informed against and cast into the den of lions, 11–17. (6.) His miraculous preservation in the lions' den, and deliverance out of it, 18–23. (7.) The punishment is retorted upon his accusers, who are torn to pieces, 24. (8.) The king is brought to the acknowledgment and praise of the true God, and publishes a decree in honour of him, 25–27. (9.) Daniel's subsequent prosperity, 28.

A. M. 3466.
B. C. 538. IT pleased Darius to set ^a over the kingdom a hundred and twenty princes, which should be over the whole kingdom;

2 And over these three presidents; of whom Daniel was first: that the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage.

3 Then this Daniel was preferred above the presidents and princes, ^b because an excellent spirit was in him; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm.

^a Esth. i. 1.—^b Chap. v. 12.—^c Ecces. iv. 4.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VI.

Verse 1. It pleased Darius—That this Darius was the Cyaxares of Xenophon, as has been observed in note on chap. v. 31, St. Jerome not only asserts, but proves by the testimony of Josephus, Trogus Pompeius, and other historians; so that it appears to have been the generally received opinion in his time, as it probably was also in the time of Josephus, which was not more than five or six hundred years after Cyrus. He was the son of Astyages, or Ahasuerus, or Assuerus, as he is called Dan. ix. 1, and Tobit xiv. 15; namely, that king of Media who concurred with the Assyrian monarch in the destruction of Nineveh. To set over the kingdom a hundred and twenty princes—According to the number of the provinces, which were subject to the Medo-Persian empire. These were afterward enlarged to a hundred and twenty-seven, by the victories of Cambyzes and Darius Hystaspis: see Est. i. 1. Darius acts here as the absolute master of the Babylonish state. He distributes the employments; he divides the kingdom, and orders that an account of the whole should be rendered to three principal officers, to whom he gives the superintendence over the rest. Several writers have thought, that after Darius had conquered Babylon, he returned to Media, and took Daniel with him, and that it was there that the establishments here spoken of were made. But if this was not done at Babylon, it is much more likely to have been done at Shushan than in Media: see chap. viii. 2. See Lowth and Calmet.

Verses 2, 3. And over these three presidents; of whom Daniel was first—He had been appointed one of the principal officers of state by Belshazzar, chap. v. 29. The office to which he was now advanced seems to have been of the same sort with that conferred on Joseph by Pharaoh, Gen. xli. 41. Grotius thinks these eparchs were like the præfecti prætorio in the latter part of the Roman empire. That the princes might give accounts unto them—Night lay before them the state of the public accounts.

4 ¶ Then the presidents and A. M. 3467.
B. C. 537. princes sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom; but they could find none occasion nor fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him.

5 Then said these men, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God.

6 Then these presidents and princes ¹ assembled together to the king, and said thus unto him, ^d King Darius, live for ever.

¹ Or, came tumultuously.—^d Neh. ii. 3; Verse 21; Chap. ii. 4.

They doubtless also received appeals from the princes, or complaints against them, in case of maleadministration. And the king should have no damage—That he might not sustain any loss in his revenue, and that the power he delegated to the princes might not be abused to the oppression of the subjects; for by that a king, whether he thinks so or not, receives real damage; both as it alienates the affections of his people from him, and provokes the displeasure of God against him. Daniel was preferred, because an excellent spirit was in him—Besides that spirit of uncommon wisdom and sagacity which was in Daniel, he had great experience in public affairs, it being now sixty-five years since he was first advanced by Nebuchadnezzar, chap. ii. 48. It is no wonder, therefore, that Darius should have thoughts of putting the chief management of the whole empire into his hands.

Verses 4–6. Then the presidents and princes sought to find occasion against Daniel—We may judge, from what is here said, how blameless Daniel was in his conduct, and of how great advantage it is to act with virtue and integrity. All the spite and malice of his enemies could not so much as find out a pretence for accusing him, because he conducted himself in all affairs with uprightness, and established his credit by his virtuous behaviour. Then said these men, We shall not find, &c.—They concluded, at length, that they should not find any occasion against him, except concerning the law of his God—By this it appears that Daniel kept up the profession of his religion, and held it fast in that idolatrous country, without wavering or shrinking; and yet that was no bar to his preferment. There was no law requiring him to be of the king's religion, or incapacitating him to bear office in the state unless he were. It was all one to the king what God he prayed to, so long as he did the business of the state faithfully and well. In this matter, therefore, his enemies hoped to insnare him. It is observable, that when they found no occasion against him con-

A. M. 3467.
B. C. 537.

7 All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the counsellors, and the captains, have consulted together to establish a royal statute, and to make a firm ²decree, that whosoever shall ask a petition of any god or man for thirty days, save of thee, O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions.

8 Now, O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according ² Or, interdict.—^c Esther i. 11; viii. 8; Verses 12, 15.

³ Chald. passeth not.

cerning the kingdom, they had so much sense of justice left, that they did not suborn witnesses against him to accuse him of crimes he was innocent of, and to swear treason against him; wherein they shame many that were called Jews, and many now called Christians.

Verses 7-9. All the presidents, &c., have consulted to make a firm decree.—As Daniel's adversaries could have no advantage against him by any law now in being, they therefore contrive a new law, by which they hope to ensnare him, and in such a matter as they knew they would be sure of doing it. They pretended that this law, which they wished to have enacted, was the result of mature deliberation; that all the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, princes, &c., had consulted together about it, and that they not only agreed to it, but advised it, for divers good causes and considerations; nay, they intimate to the king that it was carried nemine contradicente. All the presidents, say they, are of this mind, and yet we are sure that Daniel, the chief of the three presidents, did not agree to it; and we have reason to think that many more excepted against it, as absurd and unreasonable. Observe, reader, it is no new thing for that to be represented, and with great assurance too, as the sense of the nation, which is far from being so; and that which few approve of, is sometimes confidently said to be that which all agree to! These designing men, under colour of doing honour to the king, but really intending the ruin of his favourite, urge him to make one of the most absurd decrees that can well be imagined; a decree which would not only suspend by law all the exercise of every kind of religion through that vast empire, for the space of a month, (except any chose to worship the king, who thus inconsiderately, or impiously, suffered himself to be regarded as the only deity of his subjects,) but would prohibit under pain of death, to be inflicted in the most barbarous manner, any request being made from one man to another: "nay, the edict was so framed, that a child might have been condemned for asking bread of his father, or a starving beggar for craving relief."—Scott. And now, O king, say they, establish the decree, &c., according to the law of the Medes and Persians.—There was a law in this monarchy, that no ordinance or edict, made with the necessary formalities, and with the consent of the king's counsellors, could be revoked: the king himself had no

to the ^alaw of the Medes and Persians, which ³altereth not.

A. M. 3467.
B. C. 537.

9 Wherefore King Darius signed the writing and the decree.

10 ¶ Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his windows being open in his chamber ^ftoward Jerusalem, he kneeled upon his knees ^gthree times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime.

^f 1 Kings viii. 44, 48; Psa. v. 7; Jonah ii. 4.—^g Psa. lv. 17; Acts ii. 1, 2, 15; iii. 1; x. 9.

power in this case. Diodorus Siculus tells us, lib. iv., that Darius, the last king of Persia, would have pardoned Charidemus after he was condemned to death, but could not reverse the law that had passed against him. We may observe the difference of style between this text and that of Est. i. 19. Here the words are, the law of the Medes and Persians, out of regard to the king, who was a Mede; there it is styled, the law of the Persians and Medes, the king being a Persian at that time: see Calmet and Lowth. Chardin says, that in Persia, when the king has condemned a person, it is no longer lawful to mention his name, or to intercede in his favour. Though the king were drunk, or beside himself, yet the decree must be executed; otherwise he would contradict himself, and the law admits of no contradiction. Wherefore King Darius signed the writing—It is not much to be wondered at that Darius, who seems to have been a weak man, should sign the decree, as it appeared to be proposed in order to do him the highest honour, and to set him, as it were, upon an equality with the gods.

Verse 10. Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house, &c.—He did not retire to the country, or abscond for some time, though he knew that the law was levelled against him; but because he knew it was so, therefore he stood his ground, knowing that he had now a fair opportunity of honouring God before men, and showing that he preferred his favour, and his own duty to him, before life itself. And his windows being open in his chamber—The LXX. read, ἐν τοῖς ὑπερωίοις αὐτοῦ, in his upper rooms. It seems to have been a custom among the devout Jews to set apart some upper room, or rooms, in their houses, for their oratories, as places the farthest from any noise or disturbance. So we read, Tobit iii. 17, that Sarah came down from her upper chamber: and, the apostles assembled in an upper room, Acts i. 13. Toward Jerusalem—According to the ancient custom of the Jews; for those who were in the country, or in foreign lands, turned themselves toward Jerusalem; and those who were in Jerusalem turned themselves toward the temple to pray, conformably to Solomon's consecration-prayer, 1 Kings viii. 48, 49. He prayed, it seems, with his windows quite open to view, the shutters being removed, since he chose to make his testimony to the exclusive worship of God, neglected by

A. M. 3467. 11 Then these men assembled, and
B. C. 537. found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God.

12 ^h Then they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree; Hast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any god or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true, ⁱ according to the others, as public as might be, that he might show he was neither ashamed of worshipping Jehovah, the God of his fathers, nor afraid of any thing he might suffer on that account; and he had them open toward Jerusalem, to signify his affection for the holy city, though now in ruins, and the remembrance he had of its concerns daily in his prayers. He kneeled upon his knees—The most proper posture in prayer, most expressive of humility before God, of reverence for him, and submission to him; three times a day—Morning, noon, and evening, the hours of prayer observed by devout men of former times, Psa. lv. 17; which religious custom was continued by the apostles, with whom the third, the sixth, and the ninth hours were times of prayer; and prayed, and gave thanks before his God—He joined prayer and thanksgiving together in all his devotions, in which he is an example for our imitation. Thanksgiving ought to make a part of every one of our prayers; for when we pray to God for the mercies we want, we ought to praise him for those we have received. Observe, reader, though Daniel was a great man, he did not think it below him to be thrice a day upon his knees before his Maker; though he was an old man, and it had been his practice from his youth up, he was not weary of this kind of well-doing; and though he was a man of business, of great and important business, and that for the service of the public, he did not think this would excuse him from the daily exercises of prayer and praise. How inexcusable then are they who have but little to do in the world, and yet will not do thus much for God and their souls! As he did aforetime—He did not abate his prayers because of the king's command, and through fear of death by the lions; nor did he break the law purposely: for he did no more than he had been wont to do aforetime, he only persevered in his former long-continued course.

^h Chap. iii. 8.—ⁱ Verse 8.—^k Chap. i. 6; v. 13.

Verses 11, 12. Then these men assembled and found Daniel praying—Their design being laid, they watched narrowly, and found, as they expected, Daniel upon his knees, making supplication, not to Darius, but to Jehovah, in flat opposition to the law signed by the king, and not to be violated without suffering its penalty. Then they came near, and spake before the king—Having now got what they wanted, an unanswerable plea against Daniel, they came with open mouth, and urged that the king's law was broken, a law which he had solemnly signed law of the Medes and Persians, which A. M. 3467.

altereth not. B. C. 537.

13 Then answered they and said before the king, That Daniel, ^k which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, ^l regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day.

14 Then the king, when he heard these words, ^m was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him: and

^l Chap. iii. 12.—^m So Mark vi. 26.

and ratified, and so rendered unalterable; pleading that the king's authority, and the honour of the nation, lay at stake. The king answered, The thing is true, &c.—He owned such a law had been made, and signed by him, and that therefore it must be put in force.

Verse 13. Then answered they, That Daniel—Thus they expressed themselves by way of contempt; which is of the children of the captivity of Judah—This was added to aggravate his fault; that one who was a foreigner, and brought thither a captive, should offer a public affront to the laws of the king, whose favour and protection he enjoyed. One cannot easily find a more striking instance than this relation affords of the power of inveterate malice and bitter envy. He regardeth not thee, O king, say they, nor the decree that thou hast signed—Thus it often happens, that what is done faithfully, and out of conscience toward God, is misrepresented as done obstinately, and in contempt of the civil powers. In other words, the best saints are frequently reproached as the worst men. Daniel regarded God, and therefore prayed, and doubtless prayed for the king and government; and yet this is construed as not regarding the king. And the excellent spirit with which Daniel was endued, and that established reputation which he had gained, could not protect him from these poisonous darts. They do not say, He makes his petition to his God, lest Darius should interpret that to his praise, but only, He makes his petition; which was the thing forbidden by the law.

Verses 14, 15. Then the king, when he heard these things, was sore displeased with himself—Having too late discovered that the princes, in procuring him to sign this decree, had no other end or aim, but to take advantage of it to the prejudice of Daniel. The word דאס, here rendered displeased, which in Hebrew signifies to be rotten, is used in Chaldee for such great distress as preys upon the mind, and occasions rottenness in the bones. The meaning is, that the king was very much troubled, and exceedingly vexed with himself. And set his heart on Daniel to deliver him—The LXX. render it, και περι τον Δανιηλ αγωνισατο το εξελθαι αυτον, a very strong expression, implying that his anxiety to save him was so great as to throw him into an agony. And he laboured till the going down of the sun—Endeavouring to find out some exception for him from the law, and being in a great strait through the necessity

A. M. 3467. he laboured till the going down of the
B. C. 537. sun to deliver him.

15 Then these men assembled unto the king, and said unto the king, Know, O king, that ^athe law of the Medes and Persians is, That no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed.

16 Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.

17 ^o And a stone was brought, and laid upon

^a Verse 8.—^o Lam. iii. 53.

he was under to have the law executed, and the regard he had for Daniel. Then these men assembled unto the king—These were bold men, and resolved to pursue their point and have their will, rather than the king should have his, in this case. The king wished to retrieve an evil act, and to retract, or at least to mitigate, a rigid and rash decree, which was acting an honourable and princely part; but they insist that the law must have its course, and its sentence be fully executed on him, who, they urged, had violated it, because it was a fundamental maxim in the constitution of the government of the Medes and Persians, that no decree or statute which the king established should be changed.

Verse 16. Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, &c.—The king at last, though with great reluctance, and against his conscience, yields to the violence of Daniel's enemies, and signs the warrant for his execution: and that venerable, grave man, who carried such a mixture of majesty and sweetness in his countenance, who had so often shewn himself great upon the bench, and at the council-board, but was greater upon his knees; that had power with God and man, and had prevailed, is, purely for worshipping his God, brought, as if he had been one of the vilest malefactors, and thrown into the den of lions to be devoured by them. Thus the best man in the kingdom is made a sacrifice to the vilest! Who can think of it without the utmost compassion for the sufferer, and the utmost indignation against the malicious persecutors? Now the king spake unto Daniel—Partly, perhaps, to encourage him, but chiefly, it seems, to excuse himself for giving his consent to so palpable an act of injustice and cruelty, which he ought to have resisted, whatever had been the consequence; Thy God, whom thou servest continually—Here the king bears testimony to Daniel's integrity and fidelity to his God, notwithstanding that it had influenced him to disobey the new law; he will deliver thee—So the Chaldee, the Greek, and Vulgate; but the Syriac and Arabic render the words optatively, May he deliver thee, which seems best, as it is not likely the king, after consenting to so wicked an act, should be inspired with a persuasion from God (and he could the mouth of the den; ^p and the king ^{A. M. 3467.}

sealed it with his own signet, and ^{B. C. 537.}
with the signet of his lords; that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel.

18 ¶ Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting: neither were ^qinstruments of music brought before him: ^aand his sleep went from him.

19 Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions.

20 And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel: and the

^p So Matt. xxvii. 66.—^a Or, table.—^q Chap. ii. 1.

have it no other way) of Daniel's deliverance. He might, indeed, have heard of the miraculous preservation of Daniel's three friends in the fiery furnace, by the power of their God, in the days of Nebuchadnezzar; but he could have no assurance that a similar miracle would now be wrought by the same God. All, therefore, that his words were intended to express, seems to be only a wishful hope, but no certain persuasion.

Verse 17. And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den—Because, perhaps, it was seen that the lions did not seize on him immediately; and therefore, that they might have full opportunity to satisfy their rage and hunger, Daniel's enemies were determined he should be confined all night among them. And the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords—That neither the one nor the other of the parties might separately do any thing for or against Daniel. We may observe here, with Mr. Wintle, that the design of the king and of the nobles was probably different; the latter feared the king, lest he should release Daniel; the former was apprehensive that some other injury might be done to him, beyond the power of the wild beasts. Hence the Vulgate renders the conclusion of the verse, Ne quid fieret contra Danielelem, That nothing might be done against Daniel; indicating the king's desire, that the lions' den might be closed with a sealed stone, lest the lords should put Daniel to death when they found him not slain by the lions. The king's sealing the stone, "must naturally remind us of the like circumstances which happened at the interment of our Saviour, of whom Daniel, in this case at least, has by many been considered as a type:" see Matt. xxvii. 60, 66.

Verses 18-20. Then the king went to his palace—Vexed at himself for what he had done, and calling himself unwise and unjust for not adhering to the laws of God and nature, notwithstanding the law of the Medes and Persians; and passed the night fasting—His heart was so full of grief and fear, that he could eat no supper, nor take any kind of refreshment. Neither were instruments of music brought before him—In which, amidst his present distress and trouble, he could take no pleasure. "No doubt

A. M. 3467. king spake and said to Daniel, O
B. C. 537.

Daniel, servant of the living God, ^r is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?

21 Then said Daniel unto the king, ^s O king, live for ever.

22 ^t My God hath sent his angel, and hath ^u shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency

^r Chap. iii. 15.—^s Chap. ii. 4.—^t Chap. iii. 28.

Daniel spent a far more pleasant night among the lions, while employed in fervent prayer, and admiring, grateful praise, than either his malicious persecutors, or the king himself," whose solicitude about Daniel made him very unhappy, and effectually prevented him from closing his eyes in sleep. The king arose very early in the morning—Full of anxiety about Daniel; and went in haste unto the lions' den—Concerned to know whether the faint hope he entertained of his preservation had been realized. And when he came to the den—The LXX. render it, εν τω εγγειν αυτον τω λακκω, in his approaching the den, or, when he came near to the den, as Wintle renders it; he cried with a lamentable, or doleful, voice unto Daniel—Longing to know whether he was yet alive, and yet trembling to ask the question, lest he should be answered by the roaring of the lions after more prey; O Daniel, servant of the living God—Here Darius makes an acknowledgment, that the God whom Daniel served was the true and living God, not an imaginary and fictitious deity. Nebuchadnezzar made the same confession more than once; but neither of these kings had courage to renounce the worship of the false and fictitious deities of their country. Is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee, &c.—That is, has he been able to deliver thee, or has he thought fit in this case to exert his power? What he doubted of, we are sure of, that the servants of the living God have a master who is well able to deliver and protect them; and who will assuredly do both the one and the other, as far as he sees will be for their good and for his glory.

Verses 21-23. Then said Daniel—Daniel knew the king's voice, though it was now a doleful voice, and spake to him with all the deference and respect that was due to him. O king, live for ever—He does not reproach him for his unkindness to him, and his easiness in yielding to the malice of his persecutors; but, to show that he has heartily forgiven him, he meets him with his good wishes. Observe, reader, we must not upbraid those with the unkindnesses they have done us, who, we know, did them with reluctance, for they are very ready to upbraid themselves with them. My God hath sent his angel—The same bright and glorious being that was seen with Shadrach and his companions in the fiery furnace, (see note on chap. iii. 25,) had visited Daniel; and, it is likely, in a visible appearance, had enlightened the dark den, kept Daniel company all night, was found in me; and also before ^{A. M. 3467.}

^{B. C. 537.} thee, O king, have I done no hurt.

23 Then was the king exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, ^z because he believed in his God.

24 ¶ And the king commanded, ^y and they

^u Heb. xi. 33.—^x Heb. xi. 33.—^y Deut. xix. 19.

and had shut the lions' mouths that they had not in the least hurt him. This heavenly being made even the lions' den Daniel's strong hold, his palace, his paradise; he never had a better night in his life. See the power of God over the fiercest creatures, and confide in his power to restrain the roaring lion, that goes about continually seeking to devour, from hurting those that are his! See the care God takes of his faithful worshippers, especially when he calls them out to suffer for him. If he keep their souls from sin, comfort their souls with his peace, and receive their souls to himself, he doth, in effect, stop the lions' mouths that they cannot hurt them. Forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me—Daniel, in what he had done, had not offended either against God or the king. Before him, to whom he had prayed, he had been continually upright and conscientious in the discharge of his duty, endeavouring to walk unblameably before him. And also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt—He was represented to the king as disaffected to him and his government, because he had not obeyed the new law; but he could appeal to the Searcher of hearts, that he had not disobeyed it out of contumacy or stubbornness, but purely to preserve a good conscience, which is the only true principle of loyalty and obedience: see Rom. xiii. 5. On this subject, as far as we find, Daniel had said nothing before in his own vindication, but had left it to God to clear up his integrity as the light, and God had now done it effectually, by working a miracle for his preservation. Then was the king exceeding glad—To find him alive and well; and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den—As Jeremiah was taken out of the dungeon: for as the decree had now been complied with, and its penalty suffered, even Daniel's persecutors could not but own that the law was satisfied, though they were not; or, if it were altered, it was by a power superior to that of the Medes and Persians. And no manner of hurt was found upon him—He was nowhere crushed, or torn, or scared, or hurt in any way whatever; because he believed in his God—In God's power, and love, and faithfulness; because he confided in him for protection, while he lived in obedience to his commandments.

Verse 24. And the king commanded, and they brought those men, &c.—Darius, being animated by this miracle wrought for Daniel, now begins to take courage and act like himself: those that would not suffer him to show mercy to Daniel, now God has

A. M. 3467. brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions, them, ² their children, and their wives; and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den.

25 ¶ ^a Then King Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; Peace be multiplied unto you.

26 ^b I make a decree, That in every dominion of my kingdom men ^c tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: ^d for he is the living God, and steadfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be ^e destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end.

27 He delivereth and rescueth, ^f and he worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the ^g power of the lions.

28 So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, ^h and in the reign of ⁱ Cyrus the Persian.

^a Esth. ix. 10; Deut. xxiv. 16; 2 Kings xiv. 6.—^b Chap. iv. 1.
^c Chap. iii. 29.—^d Psa. xcix. 1.—^e Chap. iv. 34.

^f Chap. ii. 44; iv. 3, 34; vii. 14, 27; Luke i. 33.—^g Chapter iv. 3.—^h Heb. hand.—ⁱ Chap. i. 21.—^j Ezra i. 1, 2.

done it for him, shall be made to feel his resentments, and he will do justice for God, who hath showed mercy for him. Daniel's accusers, now his innocence is cleared, and Heaven itself is become his compurgator, have the same punishment inflicted on them which they designed against him, according to the law of retaliation made against false accusers, Deut. xix. 11, 19. Such they were now reckoned, Daniel being proved innocent; for though the fact of his praying was true, yet it was not a fault. They were cast into the den of lions, which perhaps was a punishment newly invented by themselves; it was, however, that which they maliciously designed for Daniel. And now Solomon's observation was verified, The righteous is delivered out of trouble, and the wicked cometh in his stead. Them, their children, and their wives—According to the cruel laws and customs which prevailed in those countries, of involving whole families in the punishment due to particular persons; in opposition to which that equitable law was ordained by Moses, that the fathers should not be put to death for their children, nor the children for the fathers, Deut. xxiv. 16. And the lions had the mastery of them—This verified and magnified the miracle of their sparing Daniel; for hereby it appeared, that it was not because they were not fierce, or had not appetite, but because they were not permitted to touch him. The Lord is known by those judgments which he executeth.

Verses 25–27. Then King Darius wrote to all people—He wrote to all the several nations in his extensive empire. Darius here studies to make some amends for the dishonour he had done both to God and Daniel, by now doing honour to both. I make a decree, that men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel—This decree goes further than Nebuchadnezzar's upon the like occasion, for that only restrained people from speaking amiss of this God; but this requires them to fear before him, to maintain and express awful and reverent thoughts of him. And well might this decree be prefaced, as it is, with Peace be multiplied unto you; for the only foundation of true peace and happiness is laid in the fear of God. But though this decree goes far, it does not go far enough: had he done right, and acted according to his present convictions, he would have commanded all men, not only to tremble and fear before this God, but to trust in, love, and obey him, to forsake the service of their idols, and to call upon and worship him only, as Daniel did. But idolatry had been so long and so deeply rooted, that it was not to be extirpated by the edicts of princes, nor by any power less than that which accompanied the glorious gospel of Christ. For he is the living God, &c.—Darius here mentions the considerations which moved him to make this decree; and, in doing this, he presents us with a very just and sublime character of the true God,—a character suited to his nature, and probably such as the king had learned of Daniel. Some think he was a convert to the true religion; if so, this, together with the favours shown to the prophet, may in some measure account for the notice taken of his reign. Certainly the reasons on which he here grounds his decree, were sufficient to have justified one for the total suppression of idolatry. He delivereth and rescueth, &c.—He has an ability sufficient to support his authority and dominion, delivering his faithful servants from trouble, and rescuing them out of the hands of their enemies. He worketh signs and wonders, quite above the power of nature to effect, both in heaven and earth—By which it appears that he is sovereign Lord of both: who hath delivered Daniel from the lions—This miracle, and that of delivering Shadrach and his companions, were wrought in the eye of the world; were seen, published, and attested, by two of the greatest monarchs that ever existed: and were illustrious confirmations of the first principles of religion, abstracted from the narrow scheme of Judaism, effectual confutations of all the errors of heathenism, and very proper preparations for pure catholic Christianity.

Verse 28. So this Daniel prospered—Observe, reader, how God brought good to him out of evil! The bold stroke which his enemies made at his life became the occasion of taking them off, and their children also, who otherwise would have stood in the way of his preferment, and have been, upon all occasions, vexatious to him; and now he prospered more than ever, was more in the favour of his prince, and in reputation with the people, which gave him a great opportunity of doing good to his brethren.

CHAPTER VII.

The historical part of the book of Daniel was finished with the last chapter; the remaining part of it acquaints us with the visions which at different times were communicated to the prophet himself. The interval of time, from the first to the last of these visions, is about one or two and twenty years; that is, from the first year of Belshazzar, mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, to the third year of Cyrus, at the beginning of chap. x. The first vision, or dream, is contained in this chapter, and is the only one that is written in the Chaldee language; and perhaps the similarity of it to the dream of Nebuchadnezzar, which the prophet had related and expounded in chap. ii., might have been one reason why this same language was here adopted, and the benefit designed by it for the impious king, in whose reign it was delivered, another. What was there prefigured by a large statue, composed of various metals, is here pointed at by a very different sort of emblems, each suited to the disposition or character of the persons to whom the communications were made. The chapter contains, (1.) Daniel's vision of the four ravenous beasts successively rising out of a tempestuous sea, 1-8. (2.) His vision of God's throne or government and judgment, 9-14. (3.) The interpretation of these visions given by an angel that stood by, 18-28.

A. M. 3449. IN the first year of Belshazzar king
B. C. 555. of Babylon, ^a Daniel ¹ had a dream and ^b visions of his head upon his bed: then he wrote the dream, and told the sum of the ² matters.

2 Daniel spake and said, I saw in my vision
by night, and behold, the four winds of the heaven strove upon the great sea.

^a Num. xii. 6; Amos iii. 7.—¹ Chald. saw.—^b Chap. ii. 28.
² Or, words.—^c Rev. xiii. 1.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VII.

Verse 1. In the first year of Belshazzar, &c.—The prophet, having related some remarkable passages concerning himself and his brethren in captivity, and having given proof of his supernatural illumination in interpreting other men's dreams, proceeds to give an account of his own visions; and thereupon goes back to the first year of Belshazzar's reign, which was seventeen years before the history contained in the last chapter. This vision concerns the same events with those referred to in Nebuchadnezzar's dream, chap. ii., with some enlargements and additions, and different images.

Verses 2, 3. Behold, the four winds strove upon the great sea—This denotes those commotions in the world, and that troublesome state of affairs, out of which empires and kingdoms commonly take their rise. And four great beasts came up from the sea—Signifying the four great monarchies, or kingdoms, that should successively arise in the world, and have their origin from wars and commotions, which generally end in setting up the conqueror to be a great monarch over those whom he hath subdued: compare Rev. xiii. 1. The reason why these monarchies, which were represented to Nebuchadnezzar in the form of a great image, formed of gold and silver, brass and iron, are here exhibited by fierce and savage beasts, has been observed in the note on chap. ii. 31.

Verse 4. The first was like a lion—The Chaldean or Babylonian empire, compared to the head of gold, the chief of metals, in the image represented to Nebuchadnezzar in his dream, chap. ii. 32, 37, 38, is here represented as a lion, the king of beasts. Instead of a lion, the Vulgate, Greek, and Arabic read, a lioness, signifying, says Jerome, the cruelty of that

3 And four great beasts ^c came up from the sea, diverse one from another. A. M. 3449. B. C. 555.

4 The first was ^d like a lion, and had eagles' wings; I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, ³ and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it.

5 ^e And behold another beast, a second, like

^d Deut. xxviii. 49; 2 Sam. i. 23; Jer. iv. 7, 13; xlviii. 40; Ezek. xvii. 3; Hab. i. 8.—³ Or, wherewith.—^e Chap. ii. 39.

empire, lionesses, according to naturalists, being fiercer than lions. It is represented as having eagles' wings, to denote the extent and rapidity of its conquests, that empire being advanced to its height within a few years, by the conduct and arms of one single person, namely, Nebuchadnezzar. I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked—Or, torn out, as מריטו may be rendered: that is, it was checked in its progress by frequent defeats, and rendered unable to make further conquests. Its wings were beginning to be plucked at the time of the delivery of this prophecy; for at this time the Medes and Persians were encroaching upon it. Belshazzar, the king now reigning, was the last of his race; and in the seventeenth year of his reign Babylon was taken, and the kingdom transferred to the Medes and Persians. And it was lifted up from the earth—Removed from its foundation, and lost its stability: or, as some render the clause, the wings thereof were plucked, wherewith it had been lifted up from the earth, that is, had been enabled to fly swiftly, in extending its conquests; and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it—When it was thus curtailed and humbled, it became more peaceable and humane, agreeably to the idea of the psalmist, Ps. ix. 20, Put them in fear, O Lord, that the nations may know themselves to be but men. The minds of the people were humbled by their misfortunes, and by the calamities coming more and more upon the empire; and they who vaunted as if they had been gods, now felt themselves to be but men.

Verse 5. And behold another beast like a bear—This is the kingdom of the Medes and Persians, who, for their cruelty and greediness after blood, are compared to a bear, which is a most voracious and cruel

A. M. 3449. to a bear, and ⁴ it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it: and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh.

6 After this I beheld, and lo, another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also ^f four heads; and dominion was given to it.

^a Or, it raised up one dominion.—^f Chap. viii. 8, 22.

animal. Bochart recounts several particulars wherein the Persians resembled bears; but the chief likeness consisted in what has been just mentioned, and this likeness was principally intended by the prophet, as may be inferred from the words of the text, Arise, devour much flesh. A bear, saith Aristotle, is an all-devouring animal; and so the Medo-Persians were great robbers and spoilers, according to Jeremiah, chap. li. 48, 56: see Bishop Newton and the note on Isaiah xiii. 18. And it raised up itself on one side—Some think the allusion is to the eastern quarter of the world, from whence the Persians came; others, to the elevation of the Persians above the Medes and Babylonians, which three powers are conceived to be meant by the three ribs in the mouth of the bear: but Sir Isaac Newton and Bishop Chandler, with great propriety, explain them as signifying the kingdoms of Babylon, Lydia, and Egypt, which were conquered by it, but were not properly parts and members of its body. They might be called ribs, as the conquest of them much strengthened the Persian empire; and they might be said to be between the teeth of the bear, as they were much grinded and oppressed by the Persians.

Verse 6. After this I beheld, and lo, another like a leopard—“This third kingdom is that of the Macedonians, or Grecians, who, under the command of Alexander the Great, overcame the Persians, and reigned next after them: and it is fitly compared to a leopard upon several accounts. The leopard is remarkable for swiftness, and Alexander and the Macedonians were amazingly swift and rapid in their conquests. The leopard is a spotted animal, and so was a proper emblem, according to Bochart, of the different manners of the nations which Alexander commanded; or, according to Grotius, of the various manners of Alexander himself, who was sometimes merciful, and sometimes cruel; sometimes temperate, and sometimes drunken; sometimes abstemious, and sometimes incontinent. The leopard, as Bochart observes, is of small stature, but of great courage, so as not to be afraid to engage with the lion and the larger beasts; and so Alexander, a little king, in comparison, of small stature too, and with a small army, dared to attack the king of kings, that is, Darius, whose kingdom was extended from the Ægean sea to the Indies. Which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl—The Babylonian empire was represented with two wings, but this is described with four. For, as Jerome says, nothing was swifter than the victories of Alexander, who ran through all

7 After this I saw in the night A. M. 3449. visions, and behold ^a a fourth beast, B. C. 555. dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; ^b and it had ten horns.

^a Chap. ii. 40; Verses 19, 23.—^b Chap. ii. 41; Rev. xiii. 1.

the countries from Illyricum and the Adriatic sea to the Indian ocean and the river Ganges, not so much fighting as conquering; and in six years (he should have said in twelve) subjugated part of Europe and all Asia to himself. The beast had also four heads—To denote the four kingdoms into which this same third kingdom should be divided, as it was after the death of Alexander, among his four captains; Cassander reigning over Macedon and Greece, Lysimachus over Thrace and Bithynia, Ptolemy over Egypt, and Seleucus over Syria. And dominion was given to it—Which shows, as Jerome observes, that it was not owing to the fortitude of Alexander, but proceeded from the will of the Lord. And, indeed, unless he had been directed, preserved, and assisted by the mighty power of God, how could Alexander, with thirty thousand men, have overcome Darius with six hundred thousand, and in so short a time have brought all the countries, from Greece as far as to India, into subjection.”—Bishop Newton.

Verse 7. Behold a fourth beast—This fourth kingdom can be no other than the Roman empire, which answers this emphatical description better than any of the former kingdoms. Dreadful, and terrible, and strong exceedingly—And therefore compared to iron, chap. ii. 40. It devoured and brake in pieces—It spread its arms and its terrors to a much greater extent than any of the preceding powers, and entirely subdued all the remains of the former kingdoms, and all the nations that had been subject to them. It reduced Macedon into a Roman province about one hundred and sixty-eight years, the kingdom of Pergamus about one hundred and thirty-three years, Syria about sixty-five years, and Egypt about thirty years, before Christ. And besides the remains of the Macedonian empire, it subdued many other provinces and kingdoms; so that it might, by a very usual figure, be said to devour the whole earth, to tread it down and break it in pieces; and become, in a manner, what the Roman writers delighted to call it, “The empire of the whole world.” The words of Dionysius Halicarnassus are very apposite to this subject. “The city of Rome,” says he, “ruleth over all the earth as far as it is inhabited, and commands all the sea, not only that within the Pillars of Hercules, but also the ocean, as far as it is navigable; having first and alone, of all the celebrated kingdoms, made the east and west the bounds of its empire, and its dominion hath continued longer than that of any other city or kingdom.” And it

A. M. 3449. 8 I considered the horns, and be-
B. C. 555. hold, ⁱ there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots:
and behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes ^k of man, ^l and a mouth speaking great things.

9 ¶ ^m I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and ⁿ the Ancient of days did sit, ^o whose gar-

ⁱ Verses 20, 21, 24; Chap. viii. 9.—^k Rev. ix. 7.—^l Psa.
xii. 3; Verse 25; Rev. xiii. 5.—^m Rev. xx. 4.—ⁿ Psa. xc. 2; Verses 13, 22.—^o Psa. civ. 2; Rev. i. 14.

was diverse from all the beasts that were before it—This is intimated by its having no name, being more cruel and horrid than any sort of beast whatever; and the Roman power was so multiform, that it could not be pointed out by any one species of resemblance. And it was different from all kingdoms in its republican form of government, its greatness, length of duration, and extent of dominion. But its chief distinction consisted in its having ten horns, which we find at verse 24 are ten kings or kingdoms: see also Rev. xvii. 12. And these answer to the ten toes of the image, chap. ii. 42. The empire continued in its greatness till the reign of Theodosius the Great, and soon afterward the partition happened, and the broken form remained, for the ten kingdoms were to be no more united, till the Ancient of days should come.

Verse 8. I considered the horns—Viewed and observed them exactly, otherwise he could not have observed the little horn, whose rise was scarce discernible at first; and behold there came up among them—Much about the same time, Rev. xvii. 12; another little horn—Distinct from the ten horns, and of a different constitution. Some have understood by this the Turkish empire, and consider Egypt, Asia, and Greece as being the three horns torn up or reduced thereby; but the more generally received and probable opinion refers it to antichrist, or the Papal hierarchy, which rose to the height here described from very small beginnings: see on verse 24. The eyes, like human eyes, indicate the perspicacity, foresight, and cunning of this power; and the mouth speaking great, or presumptuous things, is not unlike the man of sin, described by St. Paul, “whose coming should be after the working of Satan with all deceivableness of unrighteousness,” 2 Thess. ii. 9, 10: see also Rev. xiii. 5, 6.

Ver. 9, 10. I beheld till the thrones were cast down—Till all these earthly kingdoms were brought to an end, and all enemies and opposite powers were destroyed. But the word רָמַי, here used, may be rendered, were pitched, or placed, namely, for the reception of God, and his assessors in judgment, the saints and angels. Thus the LXX., εως οτις οι θρονουι ερεθησαν, till the thrones were placed, or set, or fixed; and so the Vulgate. And the verb in the text is used in the same sense in the Chaldee paraphrase on Jeremiah i. 15; where our translation

ment was white as snow, and the A. M. 3449.
hair of his head like the pure wool: B. C. 555.
his throne was like the fiery flame, ^p and his wheels as burning fire.

10 ¶ ^q A fiery stream issued and came forth
from before him: ^r thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: ^s the judgment was set, and the books were opened.

^p Ezek. i. 15, 16.—^q Psa. l. 3; xcvi. 3; Isa. xxx. 33; lxvi.
15.—^r 1 Kings xxii. 19; Psa. lxxviii. 17; Heb. xii. 22; Rev. v.
11.—^s Rev. xx. 4, 12.

reads, They shall set every one his throne, &c. The following words justify this translation: And the Ancient of days did sit—That is, the eternal Judge of the world, who has been from everlasting, who is at present, and who shall always be: and whom the prophet thus describes, to adapt himself to human apprehensions, and to make the following part of his description more intelligible; but no similitude is pointed out, nor ought we from hence to attempt to represent the invisible God by any figure. The metaphors here used, says Bishop Newton, “are borrowed from the solemnities of earthly judicatories, and particularly of the great sanhedrim of the Jews, where the father of the consistory sat, with his assessors seated on each side of him, in the form of a semicircle, with the people standing before him: and from this description again was borrowed the description of the day of judgment in the New Testament.” Whose garment was white as snow—Signifying the unspotted righteousness of his proceedings. He is elsewhere described as covering himself with light as with a garment, Psa. civ. 2: see also 1 John i. 5. Kings and princes used anciently to wear white garments, as an emblem of perfect justice. And the hair of his head like the pure wool—To denote the eternity and maturity of his counsels, and that his decisions are all perfectly right and true, without the least mixture of any partial affections. His throne was like the fiery flame—Denoting his awful majesty, and the severity of his judgments on the ungodly; and his wheels of burning fire—Emblematical of the revolutions and dispensations of his providence, Ezek. i. 15, being dreadfully severe and destructive to the wicked. The reader will observe, God’s throne is here described in the nature of a triumphal chariot, supported by angels as so many fiery wheels. Grotius remarks, that the ancient thrones and sellæ curules had wheels. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him—Signifying his justice and wrath in giving forth and executing sentence against the ungodly. Thousand thousands ministered unto him—His retinue was an innumerable company of angels; and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him—To receive their sentence from his lips. The judgment was set—That is, the court, namely, God the supreme judge, and the saints as his assessors, made their public appearance. And the books were opened

A. M. 3449. 11 I beheld then because of the voice
B. C. 555. of the great words which the horn spake: 'I beheld even till the beast was slain,
and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame.

12 As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet ⁵ their lives were prolonged for a season and time.

13 I saw in the night visions, and behold,
^a one like the Son of man came with the clouds

¹ Rev. xix. 20.—⁵ Chald. a prolonging in life was given them.
^a Ezek. i. 26; Matt. xxiv. 30; xxvi. 64; Rev. i. 7, 13; xiv. 14.
² Verse 9.—⁷ Psa. ii. 6, 7, 8; viii. 6; ex. i. 2; Matt. xi. 27;

That is, "those evidences which contained the laws and will of God, whether natural or revealed; those in which the actions of men, with all their circumstances of aggravation or extenuation were recorded; those from which the clearest and completest conviction might be adduced, in order to render the judgment such as that all should be obliged to acknowledge it to be the result of the most perfect truth and consummate justice: see Rev. xx. 12."—Wintle.

Verses 11, 12. I beheld then—Chaldee, וזה הייתי, I was attentive, spectabam attentus, I beheld attentively, as Grotius renders it; because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake—See on verse 25. I was desirous of knowing, and looked carefully to see what would be the end of this matter, more particularly on account of the arrogant and boasting words which the horn spake. I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed—This signified, that no other earthly kingdom should succeed to this, but that when an entire end should be put to it, and the ten kingdoms included in it, then the kingdom of Christ should succeed, as is more fully set forth toward the end of this chapter. We may observe, that it is not only said of this fourth beast, that he was slain, but that his body was destroyed and given to the burning flame; that is, made entirely extinct, as every thing is that is burned in the fire; whereas it is said, concerning the rest of the beasts, that though they had their dominion taken away, their lives were prolonged for a season and time. Their bodies were not destroyed, as that of the fourth beast, but they were suffered to continue still in being; that is, other kingdoms of the same nature, though different in some particulars, succeeded to them. The destruction of the beast, it must be observed, will be the destruction of the horn also, and consequently the horn is a part of the fourth beast, or of the Roman empire.

Verse 13. I saw in the night visions, &c.—Here is described by what means these changes were to be brought about; behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven—One in the shape and likeness of a man, but clothed with such ensigns of majesty and honour, (signified here by the clouds of heaven), as showed him to be an extraordinary person, (compare Rev. i. 13, and xiv. 14,) indeed no

of heaven, and came to ^a the Ancient A. M. 3449 of days, and they brought him near B. C. 555.
before him.

14 ^v And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all ² people, nations,
and languages, should serve him: his dominion
is ^a an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom, that which shall not be destroyed.

15 ¶ I Daniel ^b was grieved in my spirit in xxviii. 18; John iii. 35; 1 Cor. xv. 27; Eph. i. 22.—² Chap.

iii. 4.—^a Psa. cxlv. 13; Chap. ii. 44; Verse 27; Mic. iv. 7; Luke i. 33; John xii. 34; Heb. xii. 28.—^b Verse 28.

less than the Messiah, as the following description of him declares. As the two foregoing verses declare why the fourth beast was destroyed, this part of the vision shows by whom it was done; setting Christ forth in his judicial capacity, and describing him by that title, which, in allusion to this place, he often gave himself, namely, the Son of man. He particularly alludes to this text, Matt. xxvi. 64, where he speaks of his coming in the clouds of heaven; by which expression he acknowledged himself to be the true Messiah here described, and gave a direct answer to the question there proposed to him, Art thou the Christ, the Son of the blessed? Compare Mark xiv. 61, 62; Rev. i. 7. Whereupon they condemned him as guilty of blasphemy. A learned prelate, in his Defence of Christianity from the ancient Prophecies, p. 131, observes, that אנני, anani, the clouds, was a known name of the Messiah among the Jewish writers, which shows that they understood this text as spoken of him.

Verse 14. There was given him dominion, &c.—"All these kingdoms shall in their turns be destroyed, but the kingdom of the Messiah shall stand for ever. It was in allusion to this prophecy that the angel said of Jesus, before he was conceived in the womb, Luke i. 33, He shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end. After what manner these great changes will be effected, we cannot pretend to say, as God hath not been pleased to reveal it. We see the remains of the ten horns which arose out of the Roman empire. We see the little horn still subsisting, though not in full strength and vigour, but as we hope upon the decline, and tending toward a dissolution. And having seen so many of these particulars accomplished, we can have no reason to doubt that the rest also will be fulfilled in due season; though we cannot frame any conception how Christ will be manifested in glory; how the little horn, with the body of the fourth beast, will be given to the burning flame; or how the saints will take the kingdom, and possess it for ever and ever. It is the nature of such prophecies, not to be perfectly understood till they are fulfilled. The best comment upon them will be their completion."—Bishop Newton.

Verses 15–18. I Daniel was grieved in my spirit—Upon account of the extraordinary changes which

A. M. 3449. the midst of my ^ebody, and the vi-
B. C. 555. sions of my head troubled me.

16 I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things.

17 ^e These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth.

18 But ^d the saints of the ⁷ Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

19 Then I would know the truth of ^e the fourth beast, which was diverse ^e from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet;

20 And of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before

^e Chald. sheath.—^c Verse 3.—^d Isa. lx. 12, 13, 14; Verses 22, 27; 2 Tim. ii. 11, 12; Revelation ii. 26, 27; iii. 21; xx. 4.
⁷ Chaldee, high ones, that is, things, or, places.—^e Verse 7.
^e Chald. from all those.

seemed to be signified by the vision, the particulars of which troubled me, though I had not a perfect apprehension of their meaning. I came near unto one of them that stood by—Namely, to one of the angels who were attending as ministering spirits. And asked him the truth, &c.—Desired him to give me a clear understanding of all this. So he told me, &c.—Explained to me the true and plain meaning of these things. These great beasts are four kings—Four kingdoms, or monarchies. So the word king is used Isa. xxiii. 15. Which shall arise out of the earth—Which shall raise themselves merely upon carnal, worldly grounds and considerations, and that by wars and troubles, and which shall think of and concern themselves with only earthly things; whereas the kingdom of Christ is described, in the next verse, as a heavenly, spiritual kingdom, fitting men for heaven. But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom—When the earthly kingdom shall be destroyed, the heavenly, or spiritual kingdom of the saints shall commence; they shall enter upon it on earth, but shall retain it in heaven for ever. The Chaldee word מְלִיכֵי, rendered Most High, is literally high ones, as it is translated in the margin: and these saints are indeed high ones, being children and heirs of God, and joint-heirs with Christ. Sometimes, however, the one true God is spoken of in the plural number by way of eminence, as Josh. xxiv. 19, where it is in the Hebrew, He is the holy Gods. The expression may therefore mean as we have it rendered.

Verses 19–22. Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast—Namely, what was intended to be signified by it. And of the ten horns that were in his head—Of what they were emblems; and of the whom three fell; even of that horn A. M. 3449.

that had eyes, and a mouth that B. C. 555.
spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows.

21 I beheld, ^f and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them;

22 ^g Until the Ancient of days came, ^h and judgment was given to the saints of the Most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.

23 Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be ⁱ the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces.

24 ^k And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings.

^f Chapter viii. 12, 24; xi. 31.; Revelation xi. 7; xiii. 7, xvii. 14; xix. 19.—^g Verse 9.—^h Verse 18; 1 Corinthians vi. 2; Rev. i. 6; v. 10; xx. 4.—ⁱ Chapter ii. 40.—^k Verses 7, 8, 20; Rev. xvii. 12.

other which came up, &c.—See verse 8; whose look was more stout than his fellows—Or more great and magnificent; or, who was more arrogant, and claimed a superiority over the rest: for though this horn, or power, was small at first, it at length exceeded all other powers in pomp and pre-eminence, exalting itself not only above all temporal authorities, but above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, 2 Thess. ii. 4. I beheld—Chaldee, I was seeing, or considering attentively; and the same horn made war with the saints—By the saints here is to be understood the servants of Christ. So antichrist is described as making war with the saints, and overcoming them for a time: see the margin. Until the Ancient of days came—To vindicate their cause, to crush the idolaters, and to extirpate the dominion of antichrist: or until the final judgment, when the saints shall sit as assessors with Christ, shall be seated on thrones, and reign as kings and priests with God and Christ, and possess the kingdom for ever. And judgment was given to the saints, &c.—Power to judge and rule over their enemies. And the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom—See on verse 14.

Verses 23, 24. The fourth beast shall be diverse from all kingdoms—As being managed under different forms of government; having a form of commonwealth at the beginning of its greatness, and afterward governed by kings and emperors; and in process of time being divided into ten kingdoms, or principalities; and all of them under the direction of one spiritual head. And the ten horns are ten kings—Or, kingdoms. A horn is an emblem of strength, so it comes to signify power and authority; and from thence it is applied to denote sovereignty,

A. M. 3449. 25 ¹ And he shall speak great words
B. C. 555. against the Most High, and shall ^m wear out the saints of the Most High, and ⁿ think to change times and laws: and A. M. 3449.

^o they shall be given into his hand B. C. 555.
^p until a time and times and the dividing of time.

¹ Isaiah xxxvii. 23; Chap. viii. 24, 25; xi. 28, 30, 31, 36; Rev. xiii. 5, 6.—^m Rev. xvii. 6; xviii. 24.

ⁿ Chapter ii. 21.—^o Revelation xiii. 7.—^p Chapter xii. 7; Revelation xii. 14.

or dominion. The ten horns, or kingdoms, were to arise out of the dissolution of the Roman empire, which came to pass accordingly. There are various enumerations of these ten kingdoms in the division of the Roman empire, none of which are reckoned to commence earlier than the latter end of the fourth, or the beginning of the fifth century. Bishop Newton, in his fourteenth Dissertation, has given several lists, by Machiavel, by Mr. Mede, by Bishop Lloyd, and by Sir Isaac Newton; and at last has added one which he has selected from the others, and which he has placed in the eighth century. His words are, "The principal states and governments then were, 1. The senate of Rome, who revolted from the Greek emperors, and claimed and exerted the privilege of choosing a new western emperor; 2. The Greeks in Ravenna; 3. The Lombards in Lombardy; 4. The Huns in Hungary; 5. The Alemannes in Germany; 6. The Franks in France; 7. The Burgundians in Burgundy; 8. The Goths in Spain; 9. The Britons; 10. The Saxons in Britain. Not that there were constantly ten kingdoms, they were sometimes more and sometimes fewer; but, as Sir Isaac Newton says, 'whatever was their number afterward, they are still called the ten kingdoms, from their first number.'"

And another shall arise after them—Greek, ομιω αυτω, behind them, as the words may be rendered; that is, either unperceived by them, or whose height, or dominion, should not acquire its summit till long after their establishment. This is generally agreed, by all Protestant interpreters, to be the kingdom of the pope, which was certainly of a very different nature from any of the former, being first ecclesiastical, or spiritual, and afterward claiming a temporal or civil jurisdiction. The LXX. add, that it should be distinguished from the former, κακους, in evils, or malignancies. And the kings, or kingdoms, which it should pluck up by the roots, or humble, as καταρρινωσκει, the word used by the LXX., signifies, (which is also the reading of the Vulgate,) are pointed out by the same prelate to be the exarchate of Ravenna, the kingdom of the Lombards, and the state of Rome. These states were reduced in the eighth century; and the epistles and bulls issued by the pope are, after that time, dated from the years of the commencement of the pope's temporal jurisdiction, or advancement to the papal chair; and the pope, by wearing his triple crown, hath in a manner pointed himself out for the person here intended: see Bishop Newton and Mr. Wintle.

And what still more fully characterizes this power, and proves it to be intended of the Papacy, is, that it is said, in verse 8, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of a man; which denotes cunning and foresight, exercised in looking out and watching all opportunities of promoting one's interest. "And the policy of the Roman hierarchy hath almost passed into a proverb. The pope is properly called an overlooker, or overseer; an επισκοπος, or bishop, in the literal sense of the word. In verses 8, 20, it is said, He had a mouth speaking great things: and who hath been more noisy and blustering than the pope, especially in former ages; boasting of his supremacy, thundering out his bulls and anathemas, excommunicating princes, and absolving subjects from their allegiance? His look was more stout than his fellows, verse 20. And the pope assumes a superiority, not only over his fellow-bishops, but even over crowned heads: and requires his foot to be kissed, and greater honours to be paid to him than to kings and emperors themselves."

Verse 25. He shall speak great words against the Most High—Symmachus reads, He shall speak great words, as the Most High; "setting himself above all laws, divine and human: arrogating to himself godlike attributes, and titles of holiness and infallibility; exacting obedience to his ordinances and decrees, in preference to, and in open violation of, reason and Scripture; insulting men and blaspheming God. In Gratian's Decretals, the pope has the title of God given to him. And shall wear out the saints—By wars, and massacres, and inquisitions, persecuting and destroying the faithful servants of Jesus, and the true worshippers of God; who protest against his innovations, and refuse to comply with the idolatry practised in the Church of Rome. He shall think to change times and laws—Appointing fasts and feasts, canonizing saints, granting pardons and indulgences for sins, instituting new modes of worship, imposing new articles of faith, enjoining new rules of practice, and reversing at pleasure the laws of God and man."—Bishop Newton.

And they shall be given, &c.—"A time, all agree, signifies a year; and a time, and times, and the dividing of time, or half a time, are three years and a half; and the ancient Jewish year, consisting of twelve months, and each month of thirty days, a time, and times, and half a time, or three years and a half, are reckoned in the Revelation, chap. xi. 2, 3, and xii. 6, 14, as equivalent to forty-two months, or twelve hundred and sixty days; and a day, in the style of the prophets, is a year; (see Ezek. iv. 4;) and it is confessed that the seventy weeks, in Dan. ix. are weeks of years, and consequently twelve hundred and sixty days are twelve hundred and sixty years. So long antichrist, or the little horn, will continue: but from what point of time the commencement of these twelve hundred and sixty years is to be dated, is not easy to determine. It should seem that they are to be computed from the full establishment of the power of the pope, and no less is implied in the expression, given into his hand. Now the power of the pope, as a horn, or tempora!

A. M. 3449. 26 ^a But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion to consume and to destroy it unto the end.

27 And the ^r kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints prince, it hath been shown, was established in the eighth century; and twelve hundred and sixty years from that time, will lead us down to about the year of Christ 2000, or the year of the world 6000; and there is an old tradition, both among Jews and Christians, that at the end of 6000 years the Messiah shall come, and the world shall be renewed; the reign of the wicked one shall cease, and the reign of the saints upon earth shall begin. But, as Irenæus says in a like case, it is surer and safer to wait for the completion of the prophecy than to conjecture and divine about it. When the end shall come, then we shall know better whence to date the beginning.”—Bishop Newton.

^a Verses 10, 22.—^r Verses 14, 18, 22.—^a Chap. ii. 44; Luke i. 33; John xii. 34; Rev. xi. 15.

Verses 26, 27. But the judgment shall sit, &c.—God, in the course of his providence, will sit (speaking after the manner of men) in judgment on this usurping, tyrannical, and persecuting power, which shall be judged, condemned, degraded, consumed, and destroyed, and his authority never more revived, to the end of the world: see note on verses 10, 11. And the kingdom and dominion, &c., shall be given to the saints of the Most High—True religion shall universally prevail under the countenance and protection of Christian princes; and the kingdom of Christ shall be erected in power and glory in all parts of the earth. In other words, The stone cut out of the mountain without hands shall become itself a mountain, and fill the whole earth: see of the Most High, ^a whose kingdom ^a is an everlasting kingdom, ^t and all ^a dominions shall serve and obey him.

28 Hitherto is the end of the matter. ^a As for me Daniel, ^a my cogitations much troubled me, and my countenance changed in me: but I ^x kept the matter in my heart.

^t Isaiah lx. 12.—^a Or, rulers.—^a Verse 15; Chap. viii. 27; x. 8, 16.—^x Luke ii. 19, 51.

note on chap. ii. 44, 45, and on verse 14 of this chapter. If the reader will be at the pains to compare this vision of Daniel, concerning the four great wild beasts, and the exposition of it by the angel, with Nebuchadnezzar's dream of the great image, as explained by Daniel, he will be struck with their perfect agreement with each other, and find the one illustrative of the other.

Verse 28. Hitherto is the end of the matter—Here the angel that spoke to me concerning these matters finished his discourse. As for me, my cogitations much troubled me—The extraordinary circumstances of the vision made a great impression upon my mind; and it was matter of great trouble to me, to foresee the profanation of God's laws and worship, and the persecutions and calamities which should come upon his church and people. And my countenance changed in me—The impression which this vision made upon me, weakened my spirits, and altered my complexion, as if I had had a fit of sickness. But I kept the matter in my heart—I laid the matter up in my memory and heart, and meditated frequently upon it, and by that means was enabled to give an exact account of the vision, and its interpretation, in writing, for the use and benefit of others as well as myself; and that after ages might have this great proof of the Almighty's governing all the affairs of the world, and of his foreknowledge of future events.

CHAPTER VIII.

Hitherto the prophecies of Daniel, that is, from verse 4 of the second chapter to the 8th, are written in Chaldee. As they greatly concerned the Chaldeans, so they were published in that language. But the remaining prophecies are written in Hebrew, because they treat altogether of affairs subsequent to the times of the Chaldeans, and no ways relate to them, but principally to the church and people of God. In this chapter we have, (1.) Daniel's vision of the ram and he-goat, and of the little horn of the latter, which should become very mischievous to the people of God for a time, 1-14. (2.) The interpretation of this vision by an angel, showing that the ram signified the Medo-Persian empire; the he-goat, the Grecian monarchy; and the little horn, a king of that monarchy, who should terribly persecute the Jews and their religion, profane the temple, and take away the daily sacrifice there offered, 15-25: which events he attests as certain, and charges Daniel, who was much affected thereby, to conceal them, 26, 27.

A. M. 3451. IN the third year of the reign of King Belshazzar a vision appeared unto me, even unto me Daniel, after that which appeared unto me ^a at the first.

^a Chap.

vii. 1.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VIII.

Verse 1. In the third year of King Belshazzar—Daniel's former vision of the four great beasts, representing the four great empires of the world, took place in the first year of Belshazzar; now, in the third year of that king's reign, he had another vision,

A. M. 3451.
B. C. 553.

2 And I saw in a vision; and it came to pass, when I saw, that I was at ^bShushan in the palace, which is in the province of Elam; and I saw in a vision, and I was by the river of Ulai.

3 Then I lifted up mine eyes, and saw, and which chiefly respected two of those empires. Thus God showed the same things to Daniel at different times, and under different symbols; doubtless in order that they might be more deeply impressed on his mind, and that he might more distinctly understand them in all their circumstances. We find God acting in the same manner with some of the other prophets, particularly Ezekiel, to whom he showed the destruction of Jerusalem by a great many different types, or symbols. This vision was communicated to Daniel about the year before Christ 553, according to Usher, Prideaux, and other chronologers.

^b Esther i. 2.

Verse 2. I saw in a vision—When I was awake, and had my bodily senses: see verse 3, and compare chap. x. 4, 5. This was accounted a more perfect degree of revelation than the having a representation of things imprinted on the imagination during sleep. When I saw, I was at Shushan in the palace—This circumstance shows that Daniel continued in some post of honour, at least during the former part of the reign of Belshazzar. Which is in the province of Elam—The province of Elam, or Persia, properly so called, was taken from Astyages, king of Media, by Nebuchadnezzar, according to the prophecy of Jeremiah against Elam, chap. xlix. 34. And it was subject to the king of Babylon when Daniel saw this vision; though afterward the viceroy of that country revolted to Cyrus, and joined with him in taking Babylon. And I was by the river Ulai—Or, Eluæus, as it was called by the Greeks and Romans. This river divided Susiana from the province of Elam, properly so called: see Plin., lib. vi. cap. 27. Elam, however, is often taken in a larger sense, so as to comprehend Susiana under it. It was usual for the prophets to see visions by river sides, of which Daniel gives us another instance, chap. x. 4; and Ezekiel likewise saw visions by the river Chebar, Ezek. i. 3; as if the Holy Spirit delighted to manifest himself in such retired scenes. And the gifts and graces of the Spirit are often, in Scripture language, described by the metaphors of springs and streams of water, than which nothing is more agreeable and refreshing in hot and dry countries.

Verse 3. I saw, and behold, a ram with two horns—In the former vision there appeared four beasts, because there four empires were represented; but in this two only, because here we have a representation of what was transacted chiefly within two empires. The first of the four empires, that is, the Babylonian, is wholly omitted here; for its fate was sufficiently known, and it was now drawing very near to a conclusion. The second empire in the

804

A. M. 3451.
B. C. 553.

behold, there stood before the river a ram which had two horns: and the two horns were high; but one was higher than ¹ the other, and the higher came up last.

4 I saw the ram pushing westward, and northward, and southward; so that no beasts might

¹ Heb. the second.

former vision is the first in this; and what is there compared to a bear, is here prefigured by a ram. This ram had two horns; and, according to the explication of the angel Gabriel, verse 20, it was the empire of the Medes and Persians. The source of this figure of horns for kingdoms, must be derived from the hieroglyphics of Egypt, from which most of the metaphors and figures in the oriental languages were originally derived; and in these languages the same word signifies a horn, a crown, power, and splendour, whence a horn was an ensign of royalty among the Phenicians; and the Hebrew word קֶרֶן, keren, signifying a horn, is several times by the Chaldeans rendered כַּלְחֻתָּא, malchutha, or a kingdom; and horns are frequently used for kings and kingdoms in the Old Testament. This empire, therefore, which was formed by the conjunction of the Medes and Persians, was not unfitly represented by a ram with two horns. Cyrus, the founder of this empire, was the son of Cambyses, king of Persia, and, by his mother Mandane, was grandson of Astyages, king of Media; and afterward marrying the daughter and only child of his uncle Cyaxares, king of Media, he succeeded to both crowns, and united the kingdoms of Media and Persia. It was a coalition of two very formidable powers, and therefore it is said that the two horns were high; but one, it is added, was higher than the other, and the higher came up last. The kingdom of Media was the more ancient of the two, and more famous in history. Persia was of little note or account till the time of Cyrus; but under him the Persians gained and maintained the ascendant. But a question remains, why that empire, which was before likened to a bear for its cruelty, should now be represented by a ram? Now the Hebrew word for a ram, which is אֵיל, ail, and עֵילָא, eelam, which is the Hebrew word for Persia, both sprang from the same root; and both implying something of strength, the one is not improperly made the type of the other. The propriety of it appears further from hence, that it was usual for the king of Persia to wear a ram's head made of gold, and set with precious stones, instead of a diadem. We may add, that a ram's head with horns, one higher and the other lower, was the royal ensign of the Persians, and is still to be seen on the pillars of Persepolis: see Bishop Newton.

Verse 4. I saw the ram pushing westward, &c.—Under Cyrus himself the Persians pushed their conquests westward, as far as the Ægean sea, subduing Babylonia, Syria, and Asia Minor; and extended them to part of Greece under his successors, Darius the son of Hystaspes, and Xerxes: northward they subdued the Lydians, Iberians, Albanians, Armenians

A. M. 3451. stand before him, neither was there
B. C. 553. any that could deliver out of his hand; ° but he did according to his will, and became great.

5 And as I was considering, behold, a he-goat came from the west on the face of the whole earth, and ² touched not the ground: and the goat had ³a ⁴notable horn between his eyes.

• Chap. v. 19; xi. 3, 16.—² Or, none touched him in the earth.

Cappadocians, and the adjacent countries: southward
they conquered Arabia, Egypt, and Ethiopia, if not under Cyrus, as Xenophon affirms, yet most certainly under Cambyzes, the son and successor of Cyrus.
Under Darius they subdued India; but in the prophecy no mention is made of their conquests in the East, because those countries lay very remote from the Jews, and were of little concern or consequence to them.

Verse 5. As I was considering, behold, a he-goat,
&c.—This is interpreted, verse 21, to be the king, or kingdom, of Grecia. “A goat is very properly
made the type of the Grecian or Macedonian empire; because the Macedonians at first, about two hundred years before Daniel, were denominated Ægeadæ, or the goats’ people; and upon this occasion, as heathen authors report: Caranus, their first king, going with a great multitude of Greeks to seek new habitations in Macedonia, was commanded by the oracle to take the goats for his guides to empire:
and afterward, seeing a herd of goats flying from a violent storm, he followed them to Edessa, and there fixed the seat of his empire, made the goats his ensigns, or standards, and called the city Ægeæ, or,
The Goats’ Town, and the people Ægeadæ, or,
The goats’ people. And to this may be added, that the city Ægeæ, or Ægæ, was the usual burying-place of the Macedonian kings. It is also very remarkable, that Alexander’s son, by Roxana, was named Alex- ander Ægus, or the son of the goat; and some of Alexander’s successors are represented on their coins with goats’ horns. This he-goat came from the west; and who is ignorant that Europe lies westward of Asia? He came on the face of the whole earth,
carrying every thing before him in all the three parts of the world then known; and he touched not the ground—His marches were so swift, and his conquests so rapid, that he might be said, in a manner, to fly over the ground without touching it. For the same reason, the same empire, in the former vision,
was likened to a leopard, which is a swift, nimble
animal; and, to denote the greater quickness and impetuosity, to a leopard with four wings. “He flew,” says Dean Prideaux, “with victory, swifter than others can travel; often with his horse pursuing his enemies upon the spur whole days and nights;
and sometimes making long marches for several days one after the other, as once he did in pursuit of Darius, of near forty miles a day, for eleven days together. So that, by the speed of his marches, he came upon his enemies before they were aware of

6 And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing before
the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power.

7 And I saw him come close unto the ram,
and he was moved with choler against him,
and smote the ram, and brake his two horns:
and there was no power in the ram to stand

³ Heb. a horn of sight.—⁴ Verse 21.

him, and conquered them before they could be in a posture to resist him.” The goat had a notable horn between his eyes—“This horn, says the angel, is the first king, or kingdom, of the Greeks in Asia,
which was erected by Alexander the Great, and continued for some years in his brother, Philip Ari-dæus, and his two young sons, Alexander Ægus and Hercules.”—Bishop Newton.

Verses 6, 7. And he came to the ram that had two horns, &c.—“The ram had before pushed westward,
and the Persians, in the reign of Darius Hystaspes
and Xerxes, had poured down with great armies
into Greece; but now the Grecians, in return, carried their arms into Asia, and the he-goat invaded the ram that had invaded him. And he came to the ram &c., which I had seen standing before the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power. One can hardly read these words without having some image of Darius’s army standing and guarding the river Granicus, and of Alexander on the other side, with his forces plunging in, swimming across the stream, and rushing on the enemy with all the fire and fury that can be imagined. And I saw him
come close unto the ram—He had several close engagements, or set battles, with the king of Persia,
and particularly at Granicus in Phrygia, at the straits of Issus in Cilicia, and in the plains of Arbela, in Assyria. And he was moved with choler against him—For the cruelties which the Persians had exercised toward the Grecians; and for Darius’s attempting to corrupt sometimes his soldiers to betray him, and sometimes his friends to destroy him: so that he would not listen to the most advantageous offers of peace, but determined to pursue the Persian king, not as a generous and noble enemy, but as a poisoner and a murderer, to the death which he deserved. And smote the ram, and brake his two horns—He subdued Persia and Media, with other provinces and kingdoms of the Persian empire; and it is remarkable, that in Persia he barbarously sacked
and burned the royal city of Persepolis, the capital of the empire; and in Media Darius was seized and made prisoner by some of his own treacherous subjects, who not long afterward basely murdered him.
And there was no power in the ram to stand before him, &c.—He conquered wherever he came; routed
all the forces, took all the cities and castles, and entirely subverted and ruined the Persian empire.
And there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand—Not even his numerous armies could defend the king of Persia, though his forces in the

A. M. 3451. before him, but he cast him down to
B. C. 553. the ground, and stamped upon him:

and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand.

8 Therefore, the he-goat waxed very great: and when he was strong, the great horn was broken; and for it came up ^e four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven.

9 ^f And out of one of them came forth a little horn which waxed exceeding great, ^g toward battle of Issus amounted to 600,000 men, and in that of Arbela, to 10 or 1100,000, whereas the whole number of Alexander's was not more than 47,000 in either engagement."—Bishop Newton.

^e Chapter vii. 6; xi. 4; Verse 22.—^f Chap. vii. 8; xi. 21. ^g Chap. xi. 25.—^h Psa. xlviii. 2; Ezek. xx. 6, 15; Chap. xi. 16, 41, 45.—ⁱ Chap. xi. 28.—^k Or, against the host.—^k So Isaiah xiv. 13.

Verse 8. Therefore the he-goat waxed very great—See note on chap. ii. 39. The empire of the goat was in its full strength when Alexander died. He was succeeded by his natural brother Philip Aridaeus, and by his own two sons before mentioned; but in the space of about fifteen years they were all murdered, and the firstborn, or kingdom, was entirely broken.

And for it came up four notable ones—The royal family being thus extinct, the governors of provinces, who had usurped the power, assumed the title of kings, and by the defeat and death of Antigonus in the battle of Ipsus they were reduced to four, Cassander, Lysimachus, Ptolemy, and Seleucus; who parted Alexander's dominions between them, and divided and settled them into four kingdoms, which are the four notable horns that came up in the room of the first great horn, and are the same as the four heads of the leopard, chap. vii. Toward the four winds of heaven—In the partition of the empire Cassander held Macedonia and Greece, and the western parts; Lysimachus had Thrace, Bithynia, and the northern regions; Ptolemy possessed Egypt and the southern countries; and Seleucus obtained Syria and the eastern provinces. Thus were they divided toward the four winds of heaven.

Verse 9. And out of one of them—Namely, out of one of the four notable horns, mentioned in the preceding verse, came forth a little horn—The reader will be pleased particularly to observe this, as being a key to the right interpretation of the subsequent prophecy. The little horn proceeded from one of the four kingdoms just mentioned, into which Alexander's empire was divided after his death: therefore to look for it elsewhere, or to interpret it of any power, king, or kingdom, which had not its origin in one of them, must be a misinterpretation of the prophecy. From one of the four successors of Alexander, namely, from Antiochus the Great, came forth Antiochus, afterward called Epiphanes, or Illustrious, by his flatterers; but by Polybius termed more properly Epimanes, or the madman. He was the south, and toward the east, and A. M. 3451.

toward the ^h pleasant land. B. C. 553.

10 ⁱ And it waxed great, even ^k to ^k the host of heaven; and ^l it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them.

11 Yea, ^m he magnified himself even ⁿ to ⁿ the prince of the host, ^o and ^o by him ^p the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down.

ⁱ Rev. xii. 4.—^m Jer. xlviii. 26, 42; Chapter xi. 36; Verse 25.—ⁿ Or, against.—ⁿ Josh. v. 14.—^o Chapter xi. 31; xii. 11.—^o Or, from him.—^p Exodus xxix. 38; Num. xxviii. 3; Ezek. xlv. 13.

indeed a vile person, as the angel characterizes him, chap. xi. 21, to whom the honour of the kingdom did not belong, Demetrius, his eldest brother's son, being the rightful heir. He is here called a little horn, as he was originally of no great fortune or dignity, a younger brother, a contemptible person, and a sort of captive at Rome. Some have objected, that the word horn, in these visions, never signifies a single king, but always a kingdom or empire; but this is evidently a mistake, as the notable horn, mentioned verse 5, which the goat had between his eyes, manifestly means Alexander the Great. This little horn belonging to the third, or Macedonian monarchy, must not be confounded with the little horn belonging to the fourth, mentioned chap. vii. 8–20, although this here spoken of may be allowed to be a type or figure of the latter. Which waxed exceeding great toward the south—He extended his dominion toward the south, when, taking advantage of the youth of Ptolemy Philometer, (see 1 Mac. i. 16–19,) he made himself master of Egypt, called the south, in several places of chap. xi. of this prophecy. And toward the east—Where he conquered Armenia, and penetrated into Persia. And toward the pleasant land—Or, the land of Judea, called the pleasant land, by the holy writers, as being chosen by God for the place of his people's habitation, and of his house or temple; where also the Messiah was to appear, called elsewhere the glory of all lands, Ezek. xx. 6, 15. The cruelties which Antiochus Epiphanes exercised in Judea seem to be the primary subject of the following verses. In which, however, he may be considered as a type of antichrist, exercising still greater cruelties on the Christian Church.

Verses 10, 11. And it waxed great, even to the host of heaven—By the host of heaven, seems to be here meant the Jewish priesthood, so called from their continual attendance on God's service in the temple, as the angels do in heaven. The word צבא, here rendered host, is applied to the attendants in the sanctuary, Exod. xxxviii. 8; Num. iv. 23. And it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground—Persons of principal dignity and high offices are often called stars in the Scriptures. In Isa. xxiv. 21, The host of the high ones that are on high, is explained by Vitringa of the Jewish rulers and peo-

A. M. 3451. 12 And ^a a ⁷ host was given him
B. C. 553. against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression, and it cast down ^s the truth to the ground; and it ^t practised, and prospered.

13 ¶ Then I heard ^u one saint speaking, and another saint said unto ^s that ⁹ certain saint which spake, How long shall be the vision

^a Ch. xi. 31.—⁷ Or, the host was given over for the transgression against the daily sacrifice.—^s Psa. cxix. 43, 142; Isa. lviii. 14.
^t Verse 4; Chap. xi. 28, 36.—^u Ch. iv. 13; xii. 6; 1 Pet. i. 12.

ple: see chap. xii. 3, and Rev. i. 20, where the angels, or governors of the church, are called stars. The words here seem to import, either that Antiochus should put an end to the services of the temple, by taking away the daily sacrifice, verse 12; or else that he should seduce some of the priests and rulers, by threats and flatteries, to turn apostates. And stamped upon them—Utterly subdued and destroyed them: see chap. vii. 7. Yea, he magnified himself even to [or against] the prince of the host—This may be understood of the high-priest Onias, (compare chap. xi. 22,) whom Antiochus deprived of his office, putting Jason in his place, an ungodly wretch, who set up heathen rites in God's temple, 2 Mac. iv. 13-17. But Jerome and Theodoret understand it of God himself, as do many others; or of Christ, the High-Priest over the house of God, whose sanctuary the temple is called in the following words. Antiochus erected in the temple a statue to Jupiter Olympus, deservedly esteemed the abomination of desolation, and thus magnified himself against God, to whom the sanctuary and its services were appropriated. And by him the daily sacrifice was taken away—The sacrifice which was offered, in the name of the whole nation, every morning and evening: see Num. xxviii. 3. This was taken away by Antiochus, together with the whole customary worship, and both altar and temple profaned: see 1 Mac. i. 44-64. And the place of his sanctuary was cast down—Or cast out, or rendered profane: comp. Rev. xi. 2. It was deprived of the honour and privileges that belonged to a holy place, as if the enclosures had been thrown down which separated it from common ground. It may include also the profanation of the high-priesthood, which Antiochus set up to sale, and let men of the most profligate lives have it; so that both the sanctuary itself, and the priesthood, might truly be said to be rendered profane.

Verse 12. And a host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression—Antiochus prospered so far in his attempts against the Jews and their religion, that he built a citadel in the city of David, and placed a garrison of soldiers there, to disturb those that should come to worship God at the temple: see 1 Mac. i. 33-36. This God permitted, as a just punishment for the sins of the people, and particularly of those who professed a willingness to forsake the worship of God, and to join with the heathen in their idolatry, 1 Mac. i. 11; 2 Mac. iv. 13-17. Some translate the words, And a set time was appointed against the daily sacrifice;

concerning the daily sacrifice, and A. M. 3451.
the transgression of ¹⁰ desolation, to B. C. 553.
give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot?

14 And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred ¹¹ days; then shall the sanctuary be ¹² cleansed.

⁸ Or, the numberer of secrets, or, the wonderful numberer.
⁹ Heb. Palmoni.—¹⁰ Or, making desolate, Chap. xi. 31; xii. 11.
¹¹ Heb. evening morning.—¹² Heb. justified.

for the word נֶצַח, rendered host, signifies likewise a set time: see chap. x. 1. And it cast down the truth to the ground, and prospered—The book of the law, or the divine ordinances delivered to the Jews by Moses, is here called the truth. He prospered so far in his attempts against the true religion, as to suppress it for a time, and hinder the open profession of it: see verse 24, and chap. xi. 28-32. We read, 1 Mac. i. 56, that Antiochus ordered the copies of the law to be cut in pieces and burned.

Verses 13, 14. Then I heard one saint speaking—The word saint here is equivalent to angel: see ch. iv. 13. What this saint or angel said, is not expressed; no more than the words spoken by that illustrious person who appeared to Daniel, chap. x. 5, are recorded. And another saint said to that certain saint which spake—Several angels are introduced in Daniel's visions, and so in Zechariah's. This appears to be spoken of one of a higher rank, as being able to unfold those secrets which were hid from the other angels; and is therefore justly supposed to mean the Son of God, called the Wonderful Counsellor, Isa. ix. 6, as being acquainted with all God's purposes and designs. How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice? &c.—The words, says Lowth, may be translated more agreeably to the Hebrew thus: For how long a time shall the vision last, the daily sacrifice be taken away, and the transgression of desolation continue? Since, however, there are no words in the Hebrew for taken away and continue, Mr. Wintle rather thinks the inquiry respects only the duration of the vision, and that the other words are by way of explaining what the vision is, namely, "of the daily sacrifice, and of the transgression of desolation, and of the sanctuary and host," or its attendant ministers, "being suppressed and trampled on." He therefore translates the clause thus: How long will be the term of the vision of the daily sacrifice, and the transgression that maketh desolate, exposing both the sanctuary and the host to be trampled on? The plain meaning of the verse is, that one of the angels asked the superior personage, distinguished here by the title of that certain saint, How long the evils signified in this vision, and particularly the taking away, or interruption, of the daily sacrifice, &c., should last. By the transgression of desolation seems to be meant the harassing and ravaging of the city by the garrison of Antiochus, setting up an idol to be worshipped in God's temple, and, by that and other heathenish superstitions, profaning it, and also the host,

A. M. 3451. 15 ¶ And it came to pass, when I, B. C. 553. even I Daniel, had seen the vision, and sought for the meaning, then behold, there stood before me ^a as the appearance of a man.

16 And I heard a man's voice ^a between the banks of Ulai, which called, and said, ^b Gabriel,

^y Ch. xii. 8; 1 Pet. i. 10, 11. — ^z Ezek. i. 26. — ^a Ch. xii. 6, 7.

or the Levites; persuading them, either by threats or enticements, to quit the worship of Jehovah, the true God, or to mix it with the worship of idols, contrary to the divine law. And he said, Unto two thousand and three hundred days—Hebrew, Until the evening [and] morning two thousand and three hundred. This signifies a space of about six years, and is to be taken from the first invasion of Judea by Antiochus, when he profaned the priesthood, and includes his second coming into that country, when he forbade the worship of God in the temple, and set up an idol there. After this time of two thousand three hundred days, or about six years from the first coming of Antiochus, it is here declared that the temple should be purged, or cleansed from the polluted or unclean things which Antiochus had brought into it, or from those things in it which he had defiled, by using them for idolatrous rites: see 1 Mac. iv. It must, however, be remembered, that many interpreters understand these days in the same sense in which days are generally understood by this prophet, namely, for years; and thus refer the prophecy to antichrist, of whom Antiochus was a type. This will carry us on to a still distant time in the church of God, to the completion of that opposition to the church of Christ which has been wished for long since, when the sanctuary will be perfectly cleansed, and to which the twelve hundred ninety and thirteen hundred thirty-five years of chap. xii. must have a reference. Sir Isaac Newton, Obs., chap. ix., not only reckons the days to be years, but will have the horn to be Rome, and does not refer it at all to Antiochus; and in this he is followed, in a great measure, by Bishop Newton, who makes the years commence from the time of Alexander's invading Asia, three hundred thirty-four years before Christ, and thus to end with near the sixth millennium of the world. With this interpretation of Bishop Newton, Mr. Faber (a late writer) finds great fault, and endeavours to prove that the Mohammedan delusion, and not that of the Papacy, is intended here by the little horn. His reasonings, calculations, and quotations on this subject, cannot possibly be inserted here, nor even an abstract of them. The reader that wishes to be acquainted with his scheme, must necessarily be referred to the book itself. There seems, however, to be one insuperable objection, both to Bishop Newton's and this interpretation, and that is, that they are utterly irreconcilable with verse 9, where it is expressly said, that this little horn came forth from one of the four notable horns, or kingdoms, into which Alexander's empire was

make this man to understand the A. M. 3451 vision. B. C. 553.

17 So he came near where I stood: and when he came, I was afraid, and ^c fell upon my face: but he said unto me, Understand, O son of man: for at the time of the end shall be the vision.

^b Chap. ix. 21; Luke i. 19, 26. — ^c Ezek. i. 28; Rev. i. 17.

divided. Now it cannot be said that either the Papacy, which arose in the west of Europe, or Mohammedanism, which had its rise and first prevailed in Arabia, sprang from any of the four branches of the Macedonian empire.

Verses 15, 16. When I had seen the vision, and sought for the meaning—Here we are informed of Daniel's earnest desire to have the vision explained to him. For those that rightly know the things of God, cannot but desire to be led still further into the mystery of them. And those who desire to know the meaning of what they have seen or heard from God, must seek it, and that diligently, namely, by earnest prayer and close meditation. Then there stood before me as the appearance of a man—The Scriptures frequently represent the angels as appearing in human forms, which it is likely they do, because, perhaps, there is nothing visible to us that so much resembles what they really are, as the human form does. And I heard a man's voice between the banks of Ulai—That is, between me and the river Ulai. Which said, Gabriel, make this man understand the vision—Explain it more clearly to him, if there be any thing in it which he does not perfectly understand. He who spake this seems to be the same angel who is spoken of verse 13, and called there that certain saint, by way of distinction; for he here speaks as one that had authority over the angel Gabriel.

Verse 17. So he came near where I stood—That he might speak more familiarly with him. And when he came, I was afraid—This fear was probably occasioned by the effulgent brightness of the heavenly messenger, which quite amazed Daniel upon his drawing near to him. And I fell upon my face—Not to worship the angel, but because he could not bear the lustre of his glory. But he said unto me, Understand, O son of man—We find this is a title given to none of the prophets but Ezekiel and Daniel, who had more frequent converse with angels than any of the rest; and it is given to the prophet here, either to put him in mind that he was but flesh and blood, that he might not be exalted for having these heavenly visions imparted to him; or else it was used as a mark of honour, implying that he was something more than an ordinary man, even one highly favoured and beloved of God. For at the time, or, to the time, of the end shall be the vision—That is, there is a precise time determined for the accomplishment of the vision, when it shall certainly be fulfilled. Or the meaning may be, that the fulfilling of the vision should not come to pass for a con-

A. M. 3451. 18 ^d Now as he was speaking with
B. C. 553. me, I was in a deep sleep on my face toward the ground: ^e but he touched me, and ¹³ set me upright.

19 And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation: ^f for at the time appointed the end shall be.

20 ^g The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia.

^d Chap. x. 9, 10; Luke ix. 32.—^e Ezekiel ii. 2.—¹³ Heb. made me stand upon my standing.—^f Chap. ix. 27; xi. 27, 35, 36; xii. 7; Hab. ii. 3.

siderable space of time; that it was concerning matters at a distance, namely, at the distance of almost four hundred years.

Verses 18, 19. Now as he was speaking, I was in a deep sleep—I was as one that faints away, and falls into a swoon through fear and astonishment. But he touched me, and set me upright—By only a touch of him my strength revived, and I came to myself. And he said, Behold, I will make thee know—I will inform thee, and give thee to understand, what shall be in the last end, or, to the last end, of the indignation—I will acquaint thee with the whole series of God's judgments upon his people, to the end and conclusion of them. "The prophet had doubtless a regard to the captivity in the first place; and therefore, beginning from this, the angel hints at a sort of epitome of the evils which would fall upon the posterity of God's chosen people, till their iniquity was taken away, and their sin purged, when the indignation would be overpast, Isa. xxvi. 20."—Wintle.

Verses 20–22. The ram, &c., having two horns, are the kings, or kingdoms rather, of Media and Persia. And the rough goat is the king, or kingdom, of Grecia. And the great horn, &c., is the first king—Namely, Alexander the Great, the first Grecian king that reigned over Asia. Now that being broken—That is, this first king being deceased; four kingdoms shall stand up, &c.—Shall arise from it, under the rule of the same nation that the first king was of, namely, the Grecian. But not in his power—They were to be kingdoms of Greeks, not of Alexander's own family, but only of his nation; neither were they to be equal to him in power and dominion, as an empire united is certainly more powerful than the same empire divided, and the whole is greater than any of its parts.

Verse 23. And in the latter end of their kingdom—When their power was diminishing, and the Roman empire beginning to be established in Greece, from whence the Grecian kingdoms in Asia had their origin: for the bringing of Greece into subjection to the Roman power was a manifest indication of the declension of the Macedonian, or third monarchy, with its four heads, and the advancement of the fourth monarchy. Now this was remarkably brought to pass when Æmilium, the Roman consul, vanquished Perseus, king of Macedonia, and thereby brought all of Grecia: and the great horn that B. C. 553.

21 ^h And the rough goat is the king A. M. 3451.
is between his eyes ⁱ is the first king.

22 ^k Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power.

23 And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors ¹⁴ are come to the full, a king ^m of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, ⁿ shall stand up.

^g Verse 3.—^h Verse 5.—ⁱ Chapter xi. 3.—^k Verse 8; Chapter xi. 4.—¹⁴ Hebrew, are accomplished.—^m Deuter. xxviii. 50.—ⁿ Verse 6.

Greece under the power of the Romans, which happened one hundred and sixty-six years before Christ, and about the time when Antiochus profaned the temple, and set up therein the abomination of desolation. It must be observed likewise, that, before that time, the four horns, or kingdoms, had been reduced to two principal ones, Syria and Egypt. Antiochus had attempted to gain the latter, and had marched toward Alexandria to besiege that city, the conquest of which would have made him absolute master of the whole kingdom; but in order to prevent his success, Ptolemy Euergetes and his sister Cleopatra had sent ambassadors to the Romans, to beg their relief; and when Popilius was deputed by the senate to go into Egypt, he proposed terms to Antiochus which he was obliged to accept, and obey the commands of the senate. Thus both Syria and Egypt became, in some sort, vassals to Rome. When the transgressors are come to the full—Here the reason is assigned why God permitted these calamities to fall on his people, namely, their wickedness had risen to a very great height: of which Bishop Newton gives the following account. "The high-priesthood was exposed to sale. Good Onias was ejected for a sum of money, to make room for wicked Jason; and Jason again was supplanted for a greater sum of money, by a worse man, if possible, than himself, his brother Menelaus; and the golden vessels of the temple were sold, to pay for the sacrilegious purchase. At the same time, the customs of the heathen nations were introduced among the Jews; the youth were trained up and exercised after the manner of the Greeks; the people, apostatized from the true religion, and even the priests, (2 Mac. iv. 14,) despising the temple, and neglecting the sacrifices, hastened to be partakers of unlawful diversions. Nay, the temple was profaned under the conduct of the high-priest Menelaus, was defiled with swine's blood, and plundered of every thing valuable; and in the same year that Paulus Æmilium vanquished Perseus, the last king of Macedonia, and thereby put an end to that kingdom, the Jewish religion was put down, and the heathen worship was set up in the cities of Judea, and in Jerusalem; and the temple itself was consecrated to Jupiter Olympus, and his image was erected upon the very altar." So evident it is that the transgressors were come to the

A. M. 3451. 24 And his power shall be mighty,
B. C. 553. ° but not by his own power: and he shall destroy wonderfully, ° and shall prosper,
and practise, ° and shall destroy the mighty
and the ° holy people.

25 And ° through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand; ° and he

° Rev. xvii. 13, 17.—° Verse 12; Chap. xi. 36.—° Verse
10; Chap. vii. 25.—° Heb. people of the holy ones.—° Chap.
xi. 21, 23, 24.—° Verse 11; Chap. xi. 36.

full, and that it was in the latter time of the Macedonian empire, when what follows took place. A king of fierce countenance shall stand up—This is a very just character of Antiochus, according to Diodorus, Polybius, and all the historians. And such a character may be presumed to belong to antichrist, who would be acquainted with all the depths of Satan, Rev. ii. 24. "I must confess," says Mr. Wintle, "that this part of the interpretation appears to me to agree better with Antiochus than with the Romans: when interpreted of the latter, it is understood to mean a warlike and politic state." Understanding dark sentences—One practised in craft and policy, particularly in the arts of seducing men from their religion. In this Antiochus was too successful with the Jews. Michaelis renders the clause, rex omnis doli peritus, a king skilled in every kind of deceit. Mr. Wintle reads, penetrating in mysterious craft.

Verse 24. And his power shall be mighty—His power shall increase more and more, namely, in Judea; but not by his own power—This shall not be owing so much to himself, as to the wickedness and factions among the Jews. "Antiochus," says Mr. Wintle, "was certainly much favoured in his designs by a factious party of the Jews themselves, by the treachery of the Jewish people, according to Josephus, and, according to Appion, the perfidy of others. Eumenes, king of Pergamus, and his brother Attalus, being jealous of the Romans, desired to make the king of Syria their friend, and supported Antiochus in his kingdom. The divine displeasure also against the Jews operated to the furtherance of his designs, who was herein an agent of the vindictive justice of God." And he shall destroy wonderfully—He shall cause a very great and scarcely credible desolation in Judea. Wintle renders it, He shall make astonishing havoc, and shall be successful: which prediction was accomplished when Jerusalem was taken by Antiochus, 40,000 Jews were slain, and as many were sold into slavery. And shall destroy the mighty and the holy people—Or, the people of the holy God, as עַם קְדוֹשׁ may be rendered, the noun plural being sometimes applied to the Deity. Or the expressions may mean, that he should destroy many of the principal and chief men, and many of the common sort, termed the holy people, as being good men, and sincere worshippers of God. With regard to the former, Grotius observes, from Josephus, that men of the greatest reputation, and of the most generous spirit, among the Jews, paid no regard to Antiochus, shall magnify himself in his heart, A. M. 3451.

and by ° peace shall destroy many: B. C. 553.

° he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes; but he shall be ° broken without hand.

26 ° And the vision of the evening and the morning which was told is true: ° wherefore

° Or, prosperity.—° Verse 11; Chap. xi. 36.—° Job xxxiv. 20; Lam. iv. 6; Chap. ii. 34, 45.—° Chap. x. 1.—° Ezek. xii. 27; Chap. x. 14; xii. 4, 9; Rev. xxii. 10.

and therefore were harassed daily, and died under the most bitter torments. Antiochus, in his first invasion of Judea, slew and led captive 80,000 Jews; and two years afterward sent Apollonius, with an army of 22,000 men, to destroy those that assembled in their synagogues on the sabbath, 2 Mac. v. 14, 24; and 1 Mac. i. 29.

Verse 25. Through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper—His craft and cunning shall succeed. And he shall magnify himself in his heart—Elated by his successes, he will always be aiming at more and more, and making further attempts; and by peace shall destroy many—Without making war, and without being a declared enemy, or receiving injuries from them, he shall destroy many. Under pretence of peace and friendship, he invaded and spoiled both Egypt and Judea. The character which Grotius gives of Antiochus may serve to throw light on these clauses of the verse. "He had no regard to piety or integrity, to any true or false God, but measured all things by the rule of his own convenience. He certainly deceived many nations, and by his flatteries and frauds obtained, as well as enlarged his dominion; and under the colour of peace, or pretended tranquillity, he oppressed the unwary, and destroyed multitudes;" see 1 Mac. i. 30. He shall also stand up against the Prince of princes—He shall exalt himself against the true God, the Lord of heaven and earth, abolishing his worship, and setting up idolatry in its stead. But he shall be broken without hand—By an immediate judgment of God. God struck him with a noisome disease, attended with horrible torments both of body and mind: see 1 Mac. vi. 8–13; 2 Mac. ix. 5–29. It is observable, that Polybius and Josephus both confirm the account which the authors of the books of Maccabees give of his death, in a state of madness, from the apparitions and reproaches of spectres and evil spirits.

Verse 26. And the vision of the evening and the morning, &c., is true—The vision of the 2300 evenings and mornings, mentioned verse 13, is certain. The angel here tells him, that these calamities would certainly last during the time expressed by that number of days, and then would have an end. Wherefore shut thou up the vision, for it shall be for many days—Some consider these words as expressing the same thing that is meant by shutting up the words, and sealing the book, chap. xii. 4. The sense in both places, they think, is, that the full meaning of the prophecy should be concealed from people in

A. M. 3451. shut thou up the vision ; for it shall
B. C. 553. be for many days.

27 ^a And I Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days ; afterward I rose up, ^b and A. M. 3451.

^a Chap. vii. 28 ; x. 8, 16.

did the king's business ; and I was as- B. C. 553.
tonished at the vision, ^c but none understood it.

^b Chap. vi. 2, 3.—^c Verse 16.

general, till the accomplishment of the events foretold. Thus we find that shutting and opening, sealing and unfolding, are opposed in the prophetic language, and import the same as concealing and revealing. Thus taken the words imply, that prophecies are never fully understood till they are accomplished: and the nearer the time approaches of their accomplishment, the more light shall diligent inquirers have for the explaining them. But the words may also imply a command to Daniel to commit this vision to writing, and then to take such care of the copy as would ensure its preservation, even till the things spoken of in it should be fulfilled; that so the prophecies might be compared with the events accomplishing them, and it might be seen how exactly they had been foretold. And in order that Daniel might take proper measures for preserving the account of these visions, and that posterity might take the same care, the angel concludes with observing, that the vision should be for many days; that is, that the accomplishment of it would not take place till after a long space of time; it being a term of near four hundred years from the first intimation of the vision, in the third of Belshazzar, to the cleansing of the sanctuary by Judas, in the time of Antiochus. It is of importance to observe here, that in remembrance of this great mercy which God had showed to his people, in delivering them from the tyranny and idolatry of Antiochus, a solemn feast was instituted, called Εγκαίνια, or the feast of dedication, which was annually observed, in consequence of cleansing the sanctuary, and the consecration of the altar, by Judas Maccabeus, for the space of eight days, from the 25th day of the month Casleu, 1 Mac. iv. 59. And to this St. John alludes, chap. x. 22, where he speaks of the feast of dedication.

Verse 27. And I Daniel fainted—Rather, languished, or pined, being overwhelmed with grief at the calamities which I learned by the vision were to come upon my countrymen, and also for the profanation of the temple in those days. And I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it—The meaning of this clause seems to be, that though Daniel was greatly troubled at this vision, even after he rose and went about the king's business, yet he took care to conceal it, so that none might take notice of it.

In the explication of this vision, the usurpations of Antiochus have been referred to, for the primary sense of the ravages committed by the little horn; yet, at the same time, it has been hinted, that there are some strong features in the vision, which favour the opinion of those who refer it to later times, particularly to the rule and dominion of antichrist. "I am of opinion," says Mr. Wintle, "that, in the spirit of prophecy, both applications were meant to be comprehended; and I see no reason for not extending the prophetic visions, or revelations, to events, to which, by the rules of fair and just interpretation, they shall be found applicable. The only sure way of knowing the meaning of a prophecy is, by comparing it with the accomplishment; and if successions of events shall, in more than one instance, be found to agree, and square exactly with a single series of predicted circumstances, I should be inclined to make the improvement as extensive as may be, consistently with truth and justice; and to acknowledge the wisdom and prescience of the Divine Contriver, who is acquainted with all his works from the foundation of the world, and who could adapt human language, in one form, to such an admirable variety of purposes, thus making his own strength perfect in weakness."

CHAPTER IX.

This chapter contains, (1.) A most affecting and ardent prayer of Daniel for the restoration of Israel, on a near view of the expiration of the seventy years allotted for Judah's captivity, 1-19. (2.) The answer sent him by an angel, implying the restoration of the Jews to their own land, and containing one of the clearest prophecies of the Messiah to be found in all the Old Testament; of the time and design of his appearing, and of the dreadful and lasting ruin, dispersion, and miseries of the Jewish nation, for their obstinate rejection of him, 20-27.

A. M. 3466. IN the first year ^a of Darius the son
B. C. 538. of Ahasuerus, of the seed of the

^a Chap. i. 21 ; v. 31 ; vi. 28.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IX.

Verses 1, 2. In the first year of Darius—That is, immediately after the overthrow of the kingdom of Medes, ¹ which was made king over A. M. 3466.

the realm of the Chaldeans; B. C. 538.

¹ Or, in which he, &c.

Babylon, which was the year of the Jews' deliverance from captivity. This Darius was not Darius the Persian, under whom the temple was built, as

A. M. 3466. 2 In the first year of his reign I
B. C. 538.

Daniel understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the LORD came to ^b Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem.

3 ¶ And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplications, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes:

4 And I prayed unto the LORD my God, and made my confession, and said, O ^d Lord, the

^b 2 Chron. xxxvi. 21; Jer. xxv. 11, 12; xx. 10.—^c Neh. i. 4; Chap. vi. 10; Jeremiah xxix. 12, 13; James iv. 8, 9, 10.
^d Exod. xx. 6; Deut. vii. 9; Neh. i. 5; ix. 32.

some have asserted, to invalidate the credibility of this book; but Darius the Mede, who lived in the time of Daniel, and is called Cyaxares, the son of Astyages, by the heathen historians: see note on chap. vi. 1. In the first year of his reign, I Daniel understood by books, &c.—Namely, by the several prophecies of Jeremiah, chap. xxv. 11, 12, and xxix. 10, which are called so many books: see Jer. xxv. 13, and xxx. 2. We may learn from hence, that the later prophets studied the writings of those prophets who were before them, especially for the more perfect understanding of the times when their prophecies were to be fulfilled. The same they did by several of their own prophecies. That he would accomplish seventy years, &c.—Concerning the time from whence these seventy years are to be dated, see note on Jer. xxv. 11, 12. Daniel saw a part of Jeremiah's prediction fulfilled, by the vengeance which the Lord had taken upon the house of Nebuchadnezzar; but he saw no appearance of that deliverance of the Jews which the prophet foretold. This was the cause of his uneasiness, and the motive of his prayers.

Verse 3. I set my face unto the Lord God—This expression does not merely mean, that he directed his face to the place where the temple had stood: it signifies also his resolution to apply to God with the utmost seriousness, fervency, importunity, and perseverance, for the accomplishment of his promises respecting the restoration of his people. It denotes, says Henry, "the intenseness of his mind in this prayer, the fixedness of his thoughts, the firmness of his faith, and the fervour of his devout affections in the duty." To seek by prayer and supplication, &c.—God's promises, in general, are conditional, and intended, not to supersede, but to excite and encourage our prayers: this was especially the case with regard to God's promise of restoring the Jews from captivity after seventy years, and this condition was particularly expressed when the promise was made by Jeremiah, chap. xxix. 10–14, where God says, Ye shall call upon me, and I will hearken unto you, &c., and will turn away your captivity, &c. Here we see Daniel complied with the condition; he sought unto the Lord with all his heart, (and un-great and dreadful God, keeping the A. M. 3466.

covenant and mercy to them that love B. C. 538.

him, and to them that keep his commandments;

5 ° We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments:

6 ^f Neither have we hearkened unto thy servants the prophets, which spake in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land.

^e 1 Kings viii. 47, 48; Nehemiah i. 6, 7; ix. 33, 34; Psalm cvi. 6; Isaiah lxiv. 5, 6, 7; Jer. xiv. 7; Verse 15.—^f 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15, 16; Verse 10.

doubtedly excited others to do the same,) and the Lord was found of him. With fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes—In token of humiliation, sorrow for their sins, and grief for the duration of their captivity.

Verse 4. I prayed unto the Lord my God—Daniel could approach God with confidence, knowing him to be his God in covenant, his reconciled God and Father. Observe, reader, we must know God to be our God, if we would pray in faith, and with success, when we apply to him for any blessing. And made my confession—Both acknowledging his justice and holiness, and my own and my people's iniquity. The more pious men are, and the better they are acquainted with themselves and God, the greater is the sense they have of their past guilt and present unworthiness, and the deeper is their humiliation: see Job xlii. 6; and 1 Tim. i. 15. Observe, reader, in every prayer we must make confession, not only of the sins we have committed, (which is what we commonly call confession,) but of our faith in God, and dependance upon him; our sorrow for sin, and our resolutions against it. It must be our confession, the language of our own convictions, and what we ourselves do heartily subscribe to. And said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God—A God of whom it is our duty always to stand in awe, and who art well able to deal with the greatest and most terrible of thy church's enemies; keeping covenant and mercy to them that love him—Fulfilling his promises to his people, and showing them mercy and loving-kindness, even beyond what he hath promised.

Verse 5. We have sinned, and have committed iniquity—Daniel uses the same confession here that is prescribed, in Solomon's consecration prayer, to be used by the Jews in the land of their captivity; with a promise subjoined, of a favourable answer that God would make to their supplications presented to him on such an occasion: see the margin. And being one of the Jewish nation, he speaks of their sins as his own; and, though certainly a most holy man, puts himself among the greatest sinners. There seems to be a kind of gradation in the prophet's confessions here, beginning with sins in general, and rising to rebellion and apostacy.

A. M. 3466. 7 O Lord, ^g righteousness ² belong-
B. C. 538. eth unto thee, but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day; to the men of Judah,
and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto
all Israel, that are near, and that are far off,
through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their trespass that they have trespassed against thee.

8 O Lord, to us belongeth ^h confusion of face,
to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers,
because we have sinned against thee.

9 ⁱ To the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against him;

10 ^k Neither have we obeyed the voice of the LORD our God, to walk in his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets.

^g Neh. ix. 33.—² Or, thou hast, &c.—^h Verse 7.—ⁱ Neh.
ix. 17; Psalm cxxx. 4, 7.—^k Verse 6.—^l Isaiah i. 4, 5, 6;
Jeremiah viii. 5, 10.—^m Lev. xxvi. 14; Deut. xxvii. 15, &c.;
xxviii. 15, &c.; xxix. 20, &c.; xxx. 17, 18; xxxi. 17, &c.;
xxxii. 19, &c.; Lam. ii. 17.

Verses 7-10. O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto thee—Thou hast done us no wrong in any of the calamities which thou hast brought upon us; but hast shown thyself to be just and holy, nay, merciful and gracious, punishing us far less than our iniquities deserved. But unto us confusion of faces—But ignominy and shame belong to us; and the contempt and ill treatment we have met with has been no more than we justly deserved. To the men of Judah, and unto all Israel that are near, &c.—To the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, that are near, by the rivers of Babylon; and to the ten tribes, that are afar off, in the land of Assyria. Confusion belongs not only to the common people of our land, but to our kings, our princes, and to our fathers, who ought to have set a better example, and to have used their authority and influence for the checking of the threatening torrent of vice and profaneness. Neither have we obeyed the voice of the Lord—Though we were under infinite obligations to obey him; to walk in his laws—Which were all holy, just, and good; which he set before us by his servants the prophets—By Moses, and the succession of prophets that followed him; who re-enforced the law of Moses, and gave the people new instructions from God upon emergent occasions.

Verses 11-14. Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy law—Not here and there one, but the generality of them; the body of the people have transgressed, by departing, and taking themselves out of the way, that they might not hear, and so might not obey thy voice; therefore the curse is poured upon us, and the oath, &c.—That is, the curse that was ratified by an oath in the law of Moses. This further justified God in their troubles, that he only inflicted the penalty of the law, of which he had given them fair notice. It was necessary for preserving the honour

11 Yea, ¹ all Israel have transgressed ^{A. M. 3466.}
thy law, even by departing, that they ^{B. C. 538.}
might not obey thy voice; therefore the curse
is poured upon us, and the oath that is written in the ^m law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him.

12 And he hath ⁿ confirmed his words, which he spake against us, and against our judges that judged us, by bringing upon us a great evil: ^o for under the whole heaven hath not been done as hath been done upon Jerusalem.

13 ^p As it is written in the law of Moses, all this evil is come upon us: ^q yet ³ made we not our prayer before the LORD our God, that we might turn from our iniquities, and understand thy truth.

14 Therefore hath the LORD ^r watched upon

ⁿ Zechariah i. 6.—^o Lamentations i. 12; ii. 13; Ezekiel
v. 9; Amos iii. 2.—^p Leviticus xxvi. 14; Deut. xxviii. 15;
Lam. ii. 17.—^q Isaiah ix. 13; Jeremiah ii. 30; v. 3; Hosea
vii. 7, 10.—³ Hebrew, entreated we not the face of the, &c.
^r Jeremiah xxxi. 28; xlv. 27.

of God's veracity, and saving his government from contempt, that the threatenings of his word should be executed; otherwise they would have looked but as bugbears, nay, they would have had no terror in them. And he hath confirmed his words against us—Because we broke his laws. And against our judges that judged us—Because they did not, according to the duty of their places, punish the breach of God's laws. He informed them frequently, that if they did not execute justice, as terrors to evil-doers, he must and would take the work into his own hands; and now, says Daniel, he has confirmed what he said, by bringing upon us a great evil—In which the princes and judges themselves have deeply shared. For under the whole heaven hath not been done, &c.—See note on Lam. i. 12, and ii. 13; Ezek. v. 9. As it is written, &c., all this is come upon us—This is a devout acknowledgment, that, from the very beginning of their state, they had been forewarned that such evils as they now suffered would come upon them, when they forsook the Lord their God, and turned aside from the observation of his law. And it is an humble confession of God's justice and providence, in making his judgments exactly fulfil the threatenings denounced many ages before by Moses. Yet we made not our prayer before the Lord our God—Not in a right manner, as we should have made it, with a lowly, penitent, and obedient heart; we have been smitten, but have not returned to him that smote us; literally, we have not entreated the face, or, as Wintle translates it, have not deprecated the wrath, of the Lord our God. We have taken no care to make our peace with God, and reconcile ourselves to him. Daniel set his brethren a good example of praying continually, but he was sorry to see how few there were that followed his example; in their affliction it was expected they

A. M. 3466. the evil, and brought it upon us : for B. C. 538. ^a the LORD our God is righteous in all his works which he doth : ^t for we obeyed not his voice.

15 And now, O Lord our God, ^a that hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and hast ^t gotten thee ^x renown, as at this day ; ^y we have sinned, we have done wickedly.

16 ¶ O Lord, ^z according to all thy righteousness, I beseech thee, let thine anger and thy fury be turned away from thy city Jerusalem, ^a thy holy mountain : because for our sins, ^b and for the iniquities of our fathers, ^c Jerusalem and thy people ^d are become a reproach A. M. 3466. to all that are about us. B. C. 538.

17 Now therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications, ^e and cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary ^f that is desolate, ^g for the Lord's sake.

18 ^h O my God, incline thine ear, and hear ; open thine eyes, ⁱ and behold our desolations, and the city ^k which ^l is called by thy name : for we do not ^m present our supplications before thee for our righteousnesses, but for thy great mercies.

19 O Lord, hear ; O Lord, forgive ; O Lord, hearken and do ; defer not, ¹ for thine own

^a Neh. ix. 33 ; Ver. 7. — ^t Ver. 10. — ^u Exod. vi. 1, 6 ; xxxii. 11 ; 1 Kings viii. 51 ; Neh. i. 10 ; Jer. xxxii. 21. — ^v Heb. made thee a name. — ^x Exodus xiv. 18 ; Neh. ix. 10 ; Jer. xxxii. 20. ^y Verse 5. — ^z 1 Sam. xii. 7 ; Psalm xxxi. 1 ; lxxi. 2 ; Micah vi. 4, 5. — ^a Verse 20 ; Zechariah viii. 3. — ^b Exodus xx. 5. — ^c Lam. ii. 15, 16.

^d Psalm xlv. 13, 14 ; lxxix. 4. — ^e Numbers vi. 25 ; Psalm lxvii. 1 ; lxxx. 3, 7, 19. — ^f Lam. v. 18. — ^g Verse 19 ; John xvi. 24. — ^h Isaiah xxxvii. 17. — ⁱ Exodus iii. 7 ; Psalm lxxx. 14, &c. — ^k Jeremiah xxv. 29. — ^l Heb. whereupon thy name is called. — ^m Heb. cause to fall, Jeremiah xxxvi. 7. — ¹ Psalm lxxix. 9, 10 ; cii. 15, 16.

would seek God early, but they sought him not, so as to turn from their iniquities and understand his truth. Therefore hath the Lord watched upon the evil—Hebrew, watched over the evil ; namely, hath taken care that his threatenings should be fulfilled, as a just judge takes care that execution be done, according to the sentence pronounced ; because we have not been melted, he hath kept us still in the furnace, and watched over it to make the heat yet more intense ; for when God judges he will overcome, and will be justified in all his proceedings.

Verse 15. And now, O Lord, who hast brought thy people forth, &c.—A form of supplication used in several places of Scripture, whereby devout persons entreat God to continue his favours, by recounting his former mercies toward them. And hast gotten thee renown, or, made thee a name, as at this day—That is, even to this day, namely, by bringing Israel out of Egypt ; and wilt thou lose the credit of that, by letting them perish in Babylon ? Didst thou get renown by that deliverance which we have so often commemorated, and wilt thou not now also get thee renown by this which we have so often prayed for, and so long waited for ? We have sinned, we have done wickedly—Here Daniel confesses again God's being just and good in all his ways ; and that it was owing to themselves only that all these evils were come upon them.

Verses 16, 17. According to all thy righteousness let thine anger be turned away—The word righteousness here, as in many other places of Scripture, is equivalent to mercy ; (see the margin ;) from thy holy mountain—The place whereon thy temple stood. Jerusalem and thy people are become a reproach—Our conquerors and others, who know into what a miserable condition we are brought, mock at us, and say, See to what a state the people are reduced, who boasted themselves to be the chosen people of the Lord of heaven and earth ! Now, therefore, cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary—Return in mercy to us, and show that thou art reconciled to us, by repairing the desolations of thy sanctuary. For the Lord's sake—That is, as some interpret the expression, for thine own sake ; that is, do this that thou mayest do honour to thyself. Or rather, as most Christian interpreters understand the words, for the Lord Christ's sake ; for the sake of the Messiah promised, who is Lord. The Hebrew word, here rendered Lord, is אדני, Adonai, the word used for the Messiah Psa. cx. 1, where David calls him his Lord. It is for Christ's sake, and because of the atonement he has made for sin, that God causes his face to shine upon sinners, when they repent and turn to him. In all our prayers, therefore, that must be our plea ; we must make mention of his righteousness, even his only. He himself has directed us to pray in his name.

Verses 18, 19. O my God, incline thine ear and hear—The prophet's importunity, in these verses, is very remarkable and affecting, and shows how exceedingly he had it at heart to have his request granted. Open thine eyes, and behold our desolations—Especially the desolations of thy city and temple : or, look with pity upon a most distressing and piteous case. For we do not present our supplications before thee for our righteousness—That is, our righteous acts. We do not hope to have success for the sake of any thing we have done, do, or ever can do as if we were worthy to receive thy favour, as if we could merit it by any good in us, or could demand any thing as a debt ; but for thy great mercies—The only sources of all our blessings. Grant what we ask, to make it appear thou art a merciful God. Observe, reader, the good things we request of God we call mercies, because we expect them purely from God's mercy. And because misery is the proper object of mercy, therefore the prophet here spreads the deplorable condition of God's church and people before him, as it were, to move his compassion. O Lord, hear ; O Lord, forgive ; defer

A. M. 3466. sake, O my God: for thy city and
B. C. 538. thy people are called by thy name.

20 ¶ ^m And while I was speaking, and praying, and confessing my sin, and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the LORD my God for the holy mountain of my God;

21 Yea, while I was speaking in prayer, even the man ⁿ Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly

^m Psa. xxxii. 5; Isa. lxx. 24.—ⁿ Chap. viii. 16.—⁷ Heb. with weariness, or, flight.—⁸ Chapter viii. 18; x. 10, 16. ^p 1 Kings xviii. 36.

not—Forgive our sins, and then hasten our deliverance. That the mercy which we ask may be granted, let the sin, that stands in the way of our receiving it, be removed; O Lord, hearken and do—Not hearken and speak only, but hearken and do: do that for us which none else can do, and that speedily. As he now sees the appointed day approaching, he could pray in faith that God would make haste to them, and not defer the expected blessing.

Verses 20, 21. And while I was speaking and praying, &c.—We have here the answer that was immediately sent to Daniel's prayer, and it is a very remarkable one; as it contains the most illustrious prediction of Christ, and gospel grace, that is extant in any part of the Old Testament. Daniel here observes, and lays a great emphasis on, the time when this answer was given; While I was speaking, says he, verse 20, yea, while I was speaking in prayer, verse 21. Before he rose from his knees, and while there was yet more which he intended to say if the answer was not given. He mentions the two heads which he chiefly insisted on in prayer, and which, perhaps, he designed yet further to enlarge upon. 1st, He was confessing sin, his own sin, and the sin of his people Israel. 2d, He was making supplication before the Lord his God, and presenting petitions to him as an intercessor for Israel. Now while Daniel was thus employed, he had both a grant made him of the mercy he prayed for, and had a discovery communicated of a far greater and more glorious redemption, which God could work out for his church in the latter days. He further observes, that as this answer was given him at the very moment when he was requesting it, and before he had concluded his petitions, so it was about the time of the evening oblation—The altar was in ruins, and there was no oblation offered upon it; but, it seems, the pious Jews, in their captivity, daily thought of the times when it should have been offered, and at those hours endeavoured to set forth before God their prayers as incense, and the lifting up of their hands as a morning or evening sacrifice, Psa. cxli. 2. The evening oblation was a type of the great sacrifice which Christ was to offer in the evening of the world; and it was in virtue of that sacrifice that Daniel's prayer was accepted, and this glorious discovery of redeeming love was made to him: the time of the evening oblation. B. C. 538.

⁷ swiftly, ^o touched me ^p about the A. M. 3466.

22 And he informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth ^s to give thee skill and understanding.

23 At the beginning of thy supplications the ⁹ commandment came forth, and ^q I am come to show thee; ^r for thou art ¹⁰ greatly beloved: therefore ^s understand the matter, and consider the vision.

⁹ Heb. to make thee skilful of understanding.—⁹ Heb. word.
^q Chap. x. 12.—^r Chap. x. 11, 19.—¹⁰ Heb. a man of desires.
^s Matt. xxiv. 15.

Lamb opened the seals of prophecy in the virtue of his own blood, Rev. v. 5.

Daniel informs us here also by whom this answer was sent. It was not communicated to him in a dream, or by a voice from heaven; but, for the greater certainty and solemnity of it, an angel was sent from heaven to bring it to him. The man Gabriel—That is, the angel Gabriel, appearing in a human shape, whom I had seen in the beginning—Or, before, see chap. viii. 16; being caused to fly swiftly—An expression used to signify the haste he made to bring Daniel an answer to his prayer. Angels are winged messengers, quick in their motions, and delay not a moment to execute the orders they receive. But, it would seem; that at some times they are directed to use more expedition, and make a quicker despatch than at others, as, it appears, was the case with Gabriel now; touched me—Probably to infuse additional strength and courage into him, that he might be perfectly recollected, have the proper use and exercise of all his faculties at this important season, and might at once understand and retain a perfect remembrance of the whole message which the angel was commissioned to bring him from God.

Verses 22, 23. And he informed me—Namely, on what errand he came; and talked with me—That is, familiarly, as one friend talks with another. And said, O Daniel, I am come to give thee skill and understanding—To reveal to thee things of infinite importance, and to make thee understand them. Mr. Wintle reads this verse in connection with the preceding, as follows: "Even as I was yet speaking—the man Gabriel—reached me, about the time of the evening oblation; when he brought information, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to improve thee in understanding." At the beginning of thy supplication the commandment came forth—God's command to me, to instruct thee further in what should hereafter befall the city and temple of Jerusalem, in the behalf of which thou didst pour forth thy supplications. Here was a remarkable completion of that promise, Isa. lxx. 24, While they are yet speaking I will hear. For thou art greatly beloved—Learned men have observed a near affinity between the prophecy of Daniel and the Revelation of St. John; and we may take notice

A. M. 3466. 24 ¹¹ Seventy weeks are determined
B. C. 538. upon thy people and upon thy holy city, ¹² to finish the transgression, and A. M. 3466.

¹³ to make an end of sins, ¹ and to B. C. 538.

¹¹ They begin from the seventh of Artaxerxes; Num. xiv. 34; Ezekiel iv. 6.

¹² Or, to restrain.—¹³ Or, to seal up, Lamentations iv. 22. ¹ Isaiah liii. 10.

that much the same title is given to both. Daniel is styled here, and chap. x. 11, 19, a man greatly beloved; and the character given to St. John is, that of the disciple whom Jesus loved, John xxi. 20, 24. Therefore, understand the matter, and consider the vision—Apply thy mind carefully to what is said, for this prophecy contains in it truths of the greatest importance. Our Saviour plainly refers to these words, which are repeated verse 25, when, explaining the latter part of this prophecy of the final destruction of Jerusalem, he adds, Let him that readeth understand, Matt. xxiv.

Verse 24. Seventy weeks, &c.—Weeks not of days, but of years, or, seventy times seven years, that is, four hundred and ninety years, each day being accounted a year according to the prophetic way of reckoning, (see note on chap. vii. 25.) a way often used in Scripture, especially in reckoning the years of jubilee, which correspond with these numbers in Daniel: see Lev. xxv. 8. See also Gen. xxix. 27, where, to fulfil her week, is explained by performing another seven years' service for Rachel; and Num. xiv. 34, where we read, that according to the number of the days which the spies employed in searching out the land of Canaan, even forty days, the Israelites were condemned to bear their iniquities, even forty years. Thus God says likewise to Ezekiel, cotemporary with Daniel, I have laid upon thee the years of their iniquity, according to the number of the days three hundred and ninety days. I have appointed thee each day for a year. Nor was this mode of expression in use only among the Jews; for Varro, speaking of himself, says, he was entered into the twelfth week of his age, at the close of which he would have been eighty-four years old. In these instances, the days evidently denote solar years, which were in use throughout the Jewish history; so that there is no probability that the angel should here intend any such singularity, as counting by lunar years. Are determined upon, or concerning, thy people—Hebrew נחנך, are decided. The great event specified was not to be protracted beyond this period, fixed and determined in the counsels of God.

To finish the transgression—The reader will observe, the expression is not, to finish transgressions, but הפשע, the transgression; a word which is derived from a theme which signifies, "to revolt, to rebel, to be contumacious, to refuse subjection to rightful authority, or obedience to a law which we ought to observe." To finish such transgression, is expressed by a word (לכלא) which denotes universality, to cancel, or annihilate. Dr. Apthorp, in his Discourses on Prophecy, vol. i. p. 262, justly observes, that the diversity of expression respecting the several benefits here promised to the world by the Messiah, may be well supposed to intend so many distinct and determinate ideas. "In a prophesy of such moment," says he, "we cannot suppose a mere coacervation of synonymous terms, but each word is emphatic, and proper to its subject. The appropriate sense of each may be investigated, from their use and significance in other passages of Holy Scripture." Accordingly, by the word transgression, he here understands man's first disobedience, with its direful effects, the depravation and mortality of human nature. And by finishing this transgression he understands, "cancelling the primeval guilt of Adam's apostacy, and reversing the sentence of mortality then passed on all the human race." In other words we may properly understand by the expression, the abolishing the guilt and fatal effects of that disobedience, in such a manner that no man shall perish eternally merely on account of the sin of our first parents, or the depravity entailed upon us thereby; to counteract the influence of which, sufficient grace is procured for us, and offered to us in the gospel of Christ. Concerning this first benefit of our redemption, the apostle treats explicitly Rom. v. 12–21, a passage which the reader is particularly requested carefully to consider, as containing a full justification of the exposition here given of the first clause of this verse; man's first disobedience, termed by the apostle the one offence, and the offence of one, being represented by him as introducing death into the world, and all our misery; and the obedience, or righteousness of one, and the free gift, procured for all mankind, and actually conferred on all penitent believers, as the one meritorious cause and source of our salvation. "No words can express, or thought conceive, the greatness of this redemption. Imagination faints under the idea of a Divine Benefactor effacing sin, annihilating death, and restoring eternal life."

And to make an end of sins—"As, in the appropriate sense of the words, the transgression denotes one original act of apostacy and rebellion against a positive command of God; sins, in the plural, emphatically express all the vices [offences] against conscience, all the crimes against civil society, and all sins against God, which have ever reigned among men. The redemption by Christ hath abolished all the fatal effects of moral evil, with respect to such as believe and obey the gospel;" not only cancelling their actual guilt by a gracious remission, but even renewing their fallen nature, stamping them with the divine image, and thus both entitling them to, and preparing them for, the immortality lost by the fall.

And to make reconciliation for iniquity—In these words is expressed the manner in which our redemption from death and sin hath been effected. "The word כפר, rendered reconciliation here, is the etymon of our English word, to cover. Its primary meaning is, to hide, or conceal, the surface of any substance, by inducing another substance over it.

A. M. 3466. make reconciliation for iniquity, ^a and
B. C. 538. to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and ¹⁴ pro- A. M. 3466 phesy, ^a and to anoint the Most Holy. B. C. 538.

^a Isaiah liii. 11; Jeremiah xxiii. 5, 6; Heb. ix. 12; Revelation xiv. 6.

¹⁴ Heb. prophet.—^x Psalm xlv. 7; Luke i. 35; John i. 41; Heb. ix. 11.

Thus the ark is commanded to be pitched, or covered, within and without, to secure it from the waters of the deluge. Sin, when grievous, and ripe for punishment, is said to be before God, or in his sight: a propitiation is the covering of sin, [procuring] God's hiding his face from our sins, and blotting out our iniquities: see Rom. iii. 23, 25. The word redemption implies a price paid for those who are set at liberty: the price is the blood of Christ; that blood a sacrifice; and the sacrifice an expiation for sinners, that is, for all mankind. This is the first and leading notion of the divine expedient for saving sinners, the sacrifice and blood of Christ. The second principal idea under which this redemption is represented, is that of substitution, and satisfaction, by another's suffering for our guilt; and in this way of stating the doctrine, still the principal and leading idea is that of a sacrifice, and the blood of a victim; namely, Christ's dying for the ungodly: see Rom. v. 6-9. Inasmuch as Christ, by dying in our stead, "hath prevented either the extinction or [eternal] misery of a whole species, and hath obtained for us a positive happiness, greater than we lost in Adam; every considerate man must think it fit, that to effect such a redemption, some great expedient should be proposed by God himself, to vindicate his wisdom and moral government, in suffering so much vice and confusion to end so happily." Add to this, that "so congenial to the most generous sentiments of the human mind is the idea of one devoting himself for another, for many, and for all, that all antiquity abounds with such examples and opinions. Not that the Scripture doctrine of Christ's satisfaction, in itself so luminous, needs any support from foreign testimony; but it is certain that a general consent, founded in nature, or divine institution, or both, hath led men to seek expiation of conscious guilt, in the way of voluntary substitution, and vicarious devotion. The chief reason of that prejudice, which is by some entertained against a doctrine so essential to peace of conscience, is founded on inattention to ancient religious customs. By the sacrifice of Christ, victims and sacrifices are abolished; but all the ancient religions abounded with them to a degree which we should think astonishing, and scarcely credible. Oceans of blood flowed round their altars; and the Levitical rites were instituted on purpose to adumbrate Christ's expiation, and to introduce all that admirable spirituality and [pious] devotion, which is now the distinguishing excellence of Christianity."—Dr. Apthorp.

To bring in everlasting righteousness—The three former particulars already considered import the removing the greatest evils; this, and the two following, imply the conferring of the greatest benefits, and all by Jesus Christ. This clause, says Dr. Apthorp, "may admit of two interpretations, which both concur in Christ, and are consistent with each other: our justification by faith in him, and our subsequent study [practice] of personal virtue. The first is a gratuitous act of Christ; the second is characteristic of his true disciples. In the former sense, Jeremiah styles him by his divine title, JEHOVAH OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS. And in both senses Christ Jesus is made unto us wisdom and righteousness, sanctification and redemption." To speak a little more distinctly: to bring in everlasting righteousness, according to the gospel, evidently includes three things: 1st, To bring in Christ's righteousness, or his obedience unto death, as the ground of our justification and title to eternal life, he being the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth. 2d, To bring holiness, the divine nature, or the Spirit of God, with his various graces, into our souls, making us conformable to his image, as our meetness for that future felicity. And, 3d, For our direction in the way that leads to it; to lay before us, for our observation, a complete rule of life and manners. Of this last particular, which Dr. Apthorp includes in the everlasting righteousness here spoken of, as being immutable in its obligations, and eternal in its sanctions, he speaks as follows: "When we consider the Christian morality in its ground of obligation, [namely, the will of God,] its principle of charity, and in its detail of special duties, we are struck with admiration at the simplicity and perfection of a rule of life, which, without any artificial system, extended the Jewish law, and combined all the excellences of Gentile philosophy; the elevation of Plato, without his mysticism; the reasonableness of Aristotle, without his contracted selfishness, and worldly views; tempering the rigour of Zeno with the moderation of Epicurus; while, by the greatness of its end, it reforms, refines, and elevates human nature from sense to spirit, from earth to heaven."

And seal up the vision and prophecy—Hebrew, וְלִחְתָּם חֹזֶן וְנָבִיא, to seal vision and prophet; prophet being put for prophecy. The words are a Hebraism, and when expressed in modern language signify, 1st, The accomplishing, and thereby confirming, all the ancient predictions relating to the most holy person here intended. God had spoken of the Messiah, by the mouths of his holy prophets, from the foundation of the world; had foretold his coming, pointed out the place of his birth, and specified the extraordinary circumstances of it; described the manner of his life, the nature of his doctrine, and the variety and splendour of his miracles, with the treatment he should receive from his countrymen; had foretold repeatedly, and set forth at large, his humiliation, sufferings, and death, his resurrection, ascension, and the glory that should follow. Now by making the events exactly to answer the predictions, he confirmed them, as the setting of a seal to any writing confirms its authenticity. 2d, To seal implies, to finish, conclude, and put an end to any

A. M. 3466. 25 ^v Know therefore and understand,
B. C. 538. that ^z from the going forth of the commandment ¹⁶ to restore and to A. M. 3466 build Jerusalem unto ^a the Messiah B. C. 538.

^v Verse 23; Matt. xxiv. 15.—^z Ezra iv. 24; vi. 1, 15; vii. 1;
Neh. ii. 1, 3, 5, 6, 8.

¹⁶ Or, to build again Jerusalem, as 2 Sam. xv. 25; Psa. lxxi. 20
^a John i. 41; iv. 25.

thing. Thus also were the vision and prophecy sealed among the Jews. They were shut up and finished. The privilege and use of them were no longer to be continued in their church. And this also happened accordingly; for, by their own confession, from that day to this they have not enjoyed either vision or prophet. But, 3d, To seal, is to consummate and perfect; and to seal the vision and prophecy here, may include the adding the New Testament revelations and predictions to those of the Old, and thereby supplying what was wanting to perfect the book of God, and render it a complete system of divine revelation. It is only necessary to add, 4th, That as things are frequently sealed in order to their security, the preservation of the divine records and oracles included in both Testaments may be also here intended by the expression.

And to anoint the Most Holy—Hebrew, קֹדֶשׁ קֳדָשִׁים, literally, the holy of holies; an expression often used of holy places, or things, especially of the most holy place of the Jewish tabernacle and temple. It is here very properly applied to the Messiah, whose sacred body was the temple of the Deity; agreeable to his own declaration, Destroy this temple, pointing to himself by some expressive action, and in three days I will raise it up; and who was greater than the temple. Now this most holy person, in whom dwelt the fulness of the Godhead bodily, and who, even as man, had the Holy Spirit without measure, was by that divine unction (which is here principally intended) at once designated and qualified for the sundry offices he was to sustain, especially the prophetic, sacerdotal, and kingly offices, for the various characters he was to bear, and the work he was to do on earth, and is now doing in heaven, and hence is properly termed the Messiah, or the Anointed One. To this may be added, that, as the Jewish temple was evidently a type of the church of God, especially the Christian Church, termed in the Psalms and Prophets the city of God, and the holy place of the tabernacle of the Most High; by anointing the holy of holies here, may be also intended the effusion of the Holy Spirit, in his rich variety of gifts and graces, upon the Christian Church, foretold in innumerable passages of the Prophets, and eminently fulfilled, as the Acts of the Apostles, the epistles contained in the New Testament, and the writings of the ancient fathers abundantly prove.

Verse 25. Know therefore and understand—Learn therefore and retain; from the going forth of the commandment—From the publication of the edict by the Persian king; to restore and to build Jerusalem—Or, to build again Jerusalem: so the verb שָׁב is translated in the latter part of the verse. Daniel had besought God to behold their desolations, and the ruins of the city which was called by his name, verse 18. In answer to this his supplication the angel acquaints him, that an order should be issued from the Persian king to rebuild both the city and its wall. Now when, after this, the commandment did actually go forth, the faith of God's people would be greatly confirmed, respecting the accomplishment of this wonderful prophecy of the coming of the Messiah, the prescience of the end being confirmed by that of all the intermediate events.

Four edicts of the kings of Persia, in favour of the Jews, mentioned in Scripture, are, 1st, That of Cyrus, Ezra i. 1. 2d, That of Darius Hystaspes, Ezra iv. 6; Hag. i. 1, 2. 3d, That of Artaxerxes Longimanus, in the seventh year of his reign, Ezra vii.; Esdras viii.; and, 4th, That in the twentieth year of Artaxerxes, Neh. ii. 1. The first of these edicts cannot be applied to this prophecy, inasmuch as from the first of Cyrus, before Christ 536, to the death of Christ, A. D. 34, are 570 years. It was, however, the basis of liberty to the Jews, for all the indulgences granted them afterward, by the following kings of Persia, were founded on the precedent of this great monarch. So that he might well be considered as fulfilling the prophecy of Isaiah: He shall build my city, he shall let go my captives, Isa. xlv. 13. In consequence of this decree 50,000 Jews returned under Zerubbabel, and partly dispersed themselves in their several tribes, and partly settled at Jerusalem, and began to build both the city and temple. But this was in a very rude and tumultuous manner, and they met with so many hindrances from the Samaritans and others, that the decree was not carried into effect. This therefore is not the period we are to reckon from. The second, namely, that of Darius Hystaspes, was made about fourteen years after, preceding the death of Christ 550 years. But neither was this efficacious. Besides, it related to the temple only, as appears from the letter of the Samaritan colony to Cambyes, Ezra iv. 11-16; neither therefore is this the period. The third decree, which was that of Artaxerxes Longimanus, recorded at large Ezra vii. 12-26, "was of great solemnity and efficacy, importing no less than the restoration of the Jewish constitution, both civil and ecclesiastical, providing in the first place for the re-establishment of divine worship with becoming order and magnificence, exempting the priesthood from all taxes; then, for the civil government of the people, the institution of tribunals, and the administration of justice, according to the law of Moses. This decree answers to all the characters of the prophecy, the restoring of the constitution, the rebuilding of the city, and the chronological periods distinctly specified," and is, no doubt, here chiefly intended.

"It is not unpleasing to conjecture the cause that moved the Persian monarch thus to emulate and transcend the magnanimity of Cyrus. Josephus

A. M. 3466. ^b the Prince shall be seven weeks,
B. C. 538. and threescore and two weeks: the street ¹⁶ shall be built again, and the ¹⁷ wall, ^c even ¹⁸ in troublous times. A. M. 3466.

B. C. 538.

^b Isaiah lv. 4.—¹⁶ Heb. shall return and be builded.—¹⁷ Or, breach, or, ditch.

^c Nehemiah iv. 8, 16, 17, 19.—¹⁸ Hebrew, in strait of times, Nehemiah vi. 15.

with great probability, supposes the famous Esther to have been the queen of Artaxerxes. By her influence both the edicts of the seventh and twentieth of his reign were obtained: which is almost demonstrable from Nehemiah's prayer, chap. i. 5–11; and relation, chap. ii. 1–11. Thus the providence of God raised a Jewish heroine to the throne of Persia, first to preserve his people from massacre and extermination, and afterward to facilitate and complete their resettlement. Under these auspices, Ezra, like another Moses, became a second founder of the Jewish state: and his return with the captives to restore Jerusalem is the glorious epoch, from which the seventy weeks begin. God was pleased to reward the heroic virtue of Esther with a long and uninterrupted prosperity, being in full favour with the king from the seventh to the twentieth year of his reign, and perhaps earlier and later: and she had the felicity, than which none on earth can be greater, of having restored her nation to the full possession of their religion, laws, and liberties."

"The fourth and last edict was that which the same Artaxerxes granted to Nehemiah, in the twentieth year of his reign, to repair and rebuild the walls of Jerusalem. Between the two edicts of the seventh and the twentieth, the rebuilding had met with so much opposition and hostility, that Nehemiah had much of the fortifications to begin again: the temple, which is the essential part of the completion, being finished, in consequence of the former edict. It is easy to solve the seeming difficulty respecting the thirteen years between the two edicts; for the archangel commences the seventy weeks, not from the actual rebuilding the walls and streets, but from the going forth of the commandment to restore and rebuild them. So that the date of the first edict, not the work itself, is the epoch from whence begins the period of four hundred and ninety years. The work itself, though interrupted and resumed, properly began with the permission to execute it. Ezra began the foundation of the temple; Nehemiah completed the walls on the old foundations, and celebrated the encania, keeping the dedication with gladness and with thanksgivings, Neh. xii. 27. Thus, of the four edicts, the first two are excluded because they were not efficacious, and prolong the term to near six hundred years: and the fourth was only a confirmation of the third. No other commencement of the four hundred and ninety years agrees with the event, than that of the seventh of Artaxerxes: and this system is perspicuous, and free from all difficulties."—Apthorp.

In order to manifest the perspicuity of this exposition, and give it the greater evidence, it may be well to examine the distinct characters of each of the three intervals into which the seventy weeks are divided; namely, seven weeks, threescore and two weeks, and one week. The reason of this distribution into three intervals, flowing in uninterrupted succession, is not so obscure as to elude discovery. The first and third of these intervals are marked by great events; the restoration of the Jewish polity, the expiation of Christ's passion, and his covenant with the Jews and Gentiles. The long interval which connects the two extremes, necessarily contains sixty-two weeks. "In our English version, the sense of the twenty-fifth verse is somewhat obscured by the punctuation. It is easily rectified thus: From the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem, unto Messiah the Prince, shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks—The angel then specifies the great events of each of these intervals. In the first, of seven weeks, the street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times. And thus it was; the city and the walls were rebuilt in forty-nine years, not without much opposition and various impediments. Nothing can be more exact than this period of the completion, both for the interval of forty-nine years, ending with the sixteenth of Darius; and for the troublous times in which the Jewish patriots restored and rebuilt their city."—Dr. Apthorp. It must be observed here, 1st, That the restoring and rebuilding Jerusalem, here spoken of, though it may chiefly respect the laws and constitution, is not so merely figurative as to exclude the literal sense: for though the city itself was in some degree rebuilt before this period, yet it was done so imperfectly, by reason of their poverty, and the opposition and envy of their neighbours, that the work was to be resumed in the seventh of Longimanus, whose long reign, and his favour to the nation of his queen, providentially effected its complete restoration. 2d, The troublous times mentioned, refer both to the seven weeks and the sixty-two weeks. "The peculiarity in the application of these times to the seven weeks, consists in the almost continual obstructions which the restored Jews met with, chiefly from the Samaritans, and also from their idolatrous neighbours the Moabites, Ammonites, and others, in the difficult work of rebuilding the temple and walls of the new city; inasmuch that the artificers were obliged to carry on their work with arms in their hands to repulse their assailants. But the troublous times here predicted have also an aspect on the long period of sixty-two weeks, in which the Jewish history abundantly verified this sad circumstance. Not to mention their general calamities and subjection to their potent neighbours of Syria and Egypt, their city was taken and their temple profaned by Ptolemy I., by Antiochus, by Crassus, by Pompey, by Herod: and their state was often so critical, that a particular providence was manifested in their preservation, especially in raising them up those illustrious patriots, who so nobly resisted the tyranny and persecution of Antiochus. Few periods of history are more savage

A. M. 3466. 26 And after threescore and two
B. C. 538. weeks^d shall Messiah be cut off,^e but¹⁹ not for himself:¹⁰ and^f the people of the prince that shall come^g shall destroy the city^h
and the sanctuary;ⁱ and the end thereof

^d Isaiah liii. 8; Mark ix. 12; Luke xxiv. 26, 46.—^e 1 Peter ii. 21; iii. 18.—¹⁹ Or, and shall have nothing, John xiv. 30.
²⁰ Or, and [the Jews] they shall be no more his people, Chapter xi. 17, or, and the Prince's [Messiah's, verse 25] future people.
^f Matt. xxii. 7.

and inglorious, more profligate and flagitious, than that of the successors of Alexander: and the Jewish government is not to be calumniated for their portion in the general calamities of those ages; while they are deserving of the highest admiration for their constancy, in being the only people on earth who adhered to the exclusive worship of the ONLY God.”—Apthorp.

Verse 26. After threescore and two weeks (counting from the expiration of the first interval) shall Messiah be cut off—“This long interval extends from the 93d Olympiad to the 202d Olympiad, or four hundred and thirty-four years; ending with the sixty-ninth [prophetic] week, and with the commencing of our Lord’s ministry. No prophetic characters are here given of the long interval; but they are supplied from other predictions of this great prophet, which respect the Roman people and empire, the Persian monarchy, Alexander and his successors; particularly by that circumstantial prophecy in the eleventh chapter, respecting the Lagidæ and Seleucidæ, and extending to the antichristian persecutions and idolatries typified by those of Antiochus Epiphanes. These four centuries include the most interesting periods of profane history, and their chronology is so well ascertained as to make the computation of Daniel’s weeks mathematically exact. For sixty-two weeks, or four hundred and thirty-four years, added to seven weeks, or forty-nine years, are equal to four hundred and eighty-three years. After which period, or in the last one week, containing seven years, the Messiah should be cut off. The title of MESSIAH is, by way of eminence, peculiar to Christ. It was first used in this prophecy in that appropriate sense. No other application of this title ever obtained among the ancient Jews. Nor can it, without absurdity, be applied to any civil or ecclesiastical prince, much less to a succession in the high-priesthood. It is here used personally, proper to some one anointed; and to whom it is proper is decided by that emphatic circumstance, Messiah shall be cut off, an expression used in Scripture to denote a judicial sentence and a violent death; BUT NOT FOR HIMSELF—Isaiah gives an exact comment on both these expressions, chap. liii. 8. HE WAS CUT OFF, out of the land of the living; FOR THE TRANSGRESSION OF MY PEOPLE WAS HE STRICKEN.”—Dr. Apthorp.

And the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city, &c.—Thus to the death of Christ the angel immediately subjoins the excision of Jerusalem. The people here spoken of are the Romans, shall be^k with a flood, and unto^l A. M. 3466.

the end of the war²¹ desolations are B. C. 538.
determined.

27 And he shall confirm²² the¹ covenant with^m many for one week: and in the midst

^g Luke xix. 44.—^h Matthew xxiv. 2.—ⁱ Matt. xxiv. 6, 14.
^k Isa. viii. 7, 8; Chap. xi. 10, 22; Nah. i. 8.—²¹ Or, it shall be cut off by desolations.—²² Or, a.—¹ Isaiah xlii. 6; lv. 3; Jer. xxxi. 31; Ezek. xvi. 60, 61, 62.—^m Isa. liii. 11; Matt. xxvi. 28; Rom. v. 15, 19; Heb. ix. 28.

and the prince that should come, may mean, as some think, the Messiah; the Romans being called his people, both on account of their present suberviency to his will, and their future conversion to his faith; He sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city, Matt. xxii. 7. Or, the prince that should come may be understood of Titus Vespasian, of whom the Roman writers speak as if his military glory chiefly resulted from the taking of Jerusalem. “The actions of this prince, in the conduct of this memorable siege, are related in the fifth and sixth books of Josephus; the most tragical event in history was effected by a prince whose clemency made him ‘the delight of human-kind,’ and who saw, with generous reluctance, the horrors of his own victory.—Jos., vii. 5. 2. It is thus Divine Providence distinguishes its counsels and instruments; and the victor himself acknowledged that ‘God was his assistant, that none but God could have ejected the Jews from so strong fortifications,’ vi. 9. 1. They shall destroy the city and the sanctuary—The specification is remarkable; as Jerusalem, in effect, sustained two separate sieges; one, of the lower city; the other, of the temple, or sanctuary of strength, as our prophet elsewhere styles it, chap. xi. 31, as being not only a magnificent temple newly rebuilt, but a strong fortress, which was consumed by their own fires, against the intention and efforts of their conqueror.—Jos., vi. 4, 7.” The end thereof shall be with a flood—The symbol of invading armies:

—Aggeribus ruptis cum spumeus amnis
Exit, oppositasque evicit gurgite moles,
Fertur in arva furens cumulo, camposque per omnes,
Cum stabulis armenta trahit. VIRG. ÆN. ii. 496.

Not with so fierce a rage the foaming flood
Roars, when he finds his rapid course withstood;
Bears down the dams with unresisted sway,
And sweeps the cattle and the cots away. DRYDEN.

And unto the end of the war desolations are determined—“Which marks the irrevocable decree of Heaven, and the completeness of the devastation, after a continued war of more than seven years.”—Dr. Apthorp.

Verse 27. And he shall confirm the covenant with many—“The covenant to be confirmed by the Messiah is not a civil, but a religious compact, as such, styled by Daniel himself, the holy covenant, chap. xi. 28, 30, 32, the covenant of grace; which, after the infraction of the first divine law of strict obedience, was, of mere clemency, granted to all man-

A. M. 3466. of the week he shall cause the sa-B. C. 538. crifice and the oblation to cease,²³ and for the overspreading of "abominations, he shall make it desolate, ° even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured²⁴ upon the desolate.

A. M. 3466.
B. C. 538.

²³ Or, and upon the battlements shall be the idols of the desolator.
²⁴ Matt. xxiv. 15; Mark xiii. 14; Luke xxi. 20.

²⁵ Isa. x. 22, 23; xxviii. 22; Chap. xi. 36; Luke xxi. 24; Rom. xi. 26.—²⁴ Or, upon the desolator.

kind by the mediation of Christ. He not only expiated the sins of the world by his death, which was the chief article of the federal system; but in person, by the energy of his miracles, by the efficacy of his doctrine, and, soon after his resurrection, by the gift of the Holy Spirit, he induced many myriads of the Jews to accede to this covenant, which the Prophet Jeremiah so admirably describes, chap. xxxi. 33, 34: compare Heb. viii. 6-13. He shall confirm this covenant with MANY, not with ALL, which marks the exclusion of the obstinate and impious Jews, whose fate is predicted in the preceding and following clause. By an obvious analogy, the Christian covenant, though offered to all, is still confirmed with many; namely, those only who, by a rational faith and moral subjection, having his law written in their hearts, attain to that exalted privilege."

For one week—"Christ's personal ministry continued to its fourth year. St. John (chap. ii. 13; v. 1; vi. 4; xi. 15;) distinctly reckons four passovers; the first, A. D. 30, Feb. 15, and the first year of his ministry; the second, A. D. 31; the third, A. D. 32; the fourth, A. D. 33. The half year precedes the first passover from his baptism. The first half week of Daniel is from the beginning of Christ's first preaching, Mark i. 15, Repent ye, and believe the gospel, A. 30, to his death, April 3, A. 33; or rather, to the pentecost following, when all the Christian mysteries were completed. The duration of Christ's ministry is so ascertained by St. John; and is so suitable to the great events of his life as well as to this prophecy, that, as it needs not to be protracted, so it cannot be shortened with any degree of probability. The second half week is from the feast of pentecost, (when St. Peter with so much energy converted three thousand of the Jews,) to the conversion of Cornelius, and the first-fruits of the Gentiles, by the same apostle. The best chronologers place the vision of St. Peter, and the conversion of Cornelius, in the fourth year after the passion; and in the same year we may place the foundation of the church of Antioch, where the disciples were first called CHRISTIANS, Acts x.; xi. 26. Thus a prediction, which began with the happy event of rebuilding the earthly Jerusalem, sublimely terminates with the structure of the heavenly, built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, JESUS CHRIST himself being the chief corner-stone, Eph. ii. 20-22. The confirmation of the Christian covenant in one week, or seven years, includes its full effect, both in the conversion of many myriads of the Jews, and in the first-fruits of the Gentile Church."

And in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease—"The sacrifice here specified, with its attendant bread-offering, was eucharistical, as well as propitiatory, being a slain victim, on which the offerers feasted in token of amity and reconciliation with God. When Christ, in the midst of the week, offered his own body, that great sacrifice for the expiation of sin, to reconcile sinners to God; by that most holy and acceptable victim, he completed and abolished all the typical sacrifices of the law. The legal sacrifices, indeed, continued to be offered at the temple, for thirty-six years after Christ's death; but, in effect, they ceased, at that instant their efficacy was no more, after that Christ had given himself for us an offering and a sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling savour, Eph. v. 2. Hence forward the Christian religion abrogated the Levitical sacrifices, as was accurately foretold by the psalmist, Ps. xl. 6, as commented by the inspired writer to the Hebrews, chap. x. 5-10."

And for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate—Or, more literally, And he shall be a desolator by the wing of abominations. Or, And being a desolator, he shall command over a wing of abominations. The desolator is the Roman army of sixty thousand men: Jos., B. J. iii. 4. 2. The wing, as well as the flood, is the Hebrew metaphor for great armies. Abominations, in the Jewish style, are idols. The word is so used by Daniel, chap. xi. 31, for the idol of the Olympian Jupiter, which Antiochus placed on God's altar, 1 Mac. i. 57. In this prophecy, it denotes the standards of the Roman legions. To every legion was a golden eagle with expanded wings, grasping a thunder-bolt. The eagles, with the standards of the cohorts, ten in each legion, adorned with the image of the reigning Cesar, were deified, adored, and sworn by; each eagle was placed in a little temple, or shrine; and there was a chapel in the camp where all the eagles were adored. At Rome they were deposited in the temple of Mars. Such deified ensigns were an abomination to the Jews: see Jos. xvii. 7, 2; xviii. 8. The prediction was minutely verified when the Romans, upon the flight of the seditious into the city, and upon the burning of the temple and adjacent buildings, brought the ensigns to the holy place, fixed them against the eastern gate, offered sacrifices to them, and hailed Titus Imperator, Jos. vi. 6. 1. The allusion to the Roman standards is observable in that prediction of Moses; The Lord shall bring a nation against thee from far, from the end of the earth, as the eagle flieth, a nation whose tongue thou shalt not understand, Deut. xxviii. 49: see also Matt. xxiv. 15, 16. The eagles, and the language, and the distance from Rome, discriminate the Romans from the Chaldeans, whose tongue was only a dialect of the Hebrew."

"The concluding clause, Even until the consummation, and that determined, shall be poured upon the desolate, is elliptical. It may be thus literally translated, and the ellipses supplied; Even until the consummation and excision, the divine wrath shall be poured on the desolate city, temple and people; which expresses so complete a devastation, as cannot be described but in the emphatic words of Christ, when his disciples beheld with admiration the recent magnificence of Herod's temple. See ye not all these things? Verily, I say unto you, there shall not be left one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down. And, verse 21, Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. Christ's own prediction was memorably verified against the attempt of the apostate emperor, Julian, expressly to defeat it: an attempt which confirms the principle of prophecy, that the designs and counsels of God are independent of the projects of men, either to frustrate or fulfil them." The war of Adrian, A. D. 133, may be also intended in this last clause of the prophecy; and the reduplication of images and expressions, rising one above another, may relate to the two completions. "It is worthy of attention, that the ancient prophecies, prior to this of Daniel, have no such exact specification of the time of their completion. Chronology was not reducible to historic certainty prior to the Olympiads. When that era became the authentic measure of time, God was pleased to give this singular credential to the Christian religion; whose author and original could not be more precisely ascertained than by a measure of time, adapted to the ideas of the Jewish law, including ten jubilees, or seventy sabbatic years, nearly commencing with the war of Peloponnesus [between the Athenians and Lacedemonians;] in the recital of which, the unexampled accuracy of Thucydides led the example of the most exact notation of time to other historians. If chronology for six hundred years after Cyrus had been as perplexed as it was for six hundred years before, it would not have been possible to ascertain the completion of a prophecy, specifying so many particular dates."—Dr. Aphthorp. The reader will observe, that several false and evasive systems have been advanced on the subject of this prophecy; but it has not been judged proper to embarrass this exposition of the passage with a refutation of them.

CHAPTER X.

This chapter contains the preparatory circumstances to the final revelation that was made to Daniel in the last two chapters of the book. The vision was to be of great extent, and is therefore ushered in with a preface of considerable length; in which are shown, (1.) The solemn humiliation and fasting of the prophet, before he received the vision, 1-3. (2.) A glorious appearing of a divine messenger to him, and the deep impression it made upon him, 4-9. (3.) The encouragement that was given him to expect a satisfactory and useful revelation of future events; and that he should be enabled both to understand the meaning of this discovery, though difficult, and to sustain the lustre of it, though dazzling and dreadful, 10-21.

A. M. 3470.
B. C. 534.

IN the third year of Cyrus king of Persia a thing was revealed unto

Daniel, ^a whose name was called Belteshazzar; ^b and the thing was true,

A. M. 3470.
B. C. 534.

^a Chap. i. 7.

^b Chap. viii. 26; Rev. xix. 9.

NOTES ON CHAPTER X.

Verse 1. In the third year of Cyrus king of Persia—That is, the third after the death of Darius. Daniel must now have been above ninety years of age. It is reasonable to suppose that, being a youth when he was carried captive, he must have been at least twenty years of age; and that was seventy-three years before the date of this vision, which was the last Daniel saw, and it is not likely he himself survived it long. A thing was revealed unto Daniel—A revelation of future things (namely, those contained in the two following chapters, to which this is as it were a preface) was made to Daniel. And the thing was true—Or plain, as the word truth, or true, is sometimes taken in the Hebrew. The meaning seems to be, that the things were not revealed to him enigmatically, or symbolically, under the types of a statue, or wild beasts, as they were before; but as it were by an historical recital, and with more particular circumstances than before. It is the usual method of the Holy Spirit, to make the latter proph-

cies explanatory of the former; and revelation is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. The four great empires of the world, which were shown to Nebuchadnezzar in the form of a great image, were again more particularly represented to Daniel in the shape of four great wild beasts. In like manner, the memorable events which were revealed to Daniel, in the vision of the ram and the he-goat, are here again more clearly and explicitly revealed, in this last vision, by an angel; so that this latter prophecy may not improperly be said to be a comment upon, and explanation of, the former. But the time appointed was long—That is, the time when the things revealed were to come to pass, was at a great distance; "and consequently," says Bishop Newton, "the prophecy must extend further than from the third year of Cyrus to the death of Antiochus Epiphanes, which was not above three hundred and seventy years. In reality," adds he, "it comprehends many signal events after that time to the end of the world." And he under

A. M. 3470. ^c but the time appointed was ¹ long :
B. C. 534. and ^d he understood the thing, and had understanding of the vision.

2 In those days I Daniel was mourning three ² full weeks.

3 I ate no ³ pleasant bread, neither came flesh
nor wine in my mouth, ^e neither did I anoint myself at all, till three whole weeks were fulfilled.

4 And in the four and twentieth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river which is ^f Hiddekel ;

^c Verse 14.—¹ Hebrew, great.—^d Chapter i. 17; viii. 16.
^e Heb. weeks of days.—³ Heb. bread of desires.—^e Matthew
vi. 17.—^f Gen. ii. 14.—^g Joshua v. 13.—^h Chap. xii. 6, 7.
^g Heb. one man.

stood the thing, &c.—He had a clear view of the succession of the Persian and Grecian monarchies, and of the series of the kings of Syria and Egypt
under the latter of them; although the remaining parts of the vision were obscure, especially with respect to their final event: see chap. xii. 8.

Verses 2, 3. I Daniel was mourning—The reason of Daniel's fasting and mourning might be, either because many of the Jews, through slothfulness and indifference, still remained in the land of their captivity, though they had liberty to return to their own land, not knowing how to value the privileges offered them; or, as Usher thinks, because he had heard that the adversaries of the Jews had begun to obstruct the building of the temple. Calmet, however, is of opinion, that his sorrow arose principally from
the obscurity which the prophet found in the prophesies revealed to him; which, indeed, may be partly collected from the angel's touching upon no other cause of mourning. In consequence of Daniel's fasting, &c., the angel appears, and explains to him,
in a clearer manner, what had been more obscurely
revealed in the preceding visions. Three full weeks
—Hebrew, three weeks of days. So we read of a month of days, Gen. xxix. 4; Num. xi. 20, where the English reads, a whole month. But the phrase may be used here to distinguish them from the weeks of years prophesied of in chap. ix. I ate no pleasant
bread—"There seems to have been two sorts of fasting among the Jews; either a total abstinence from food of all sorts for at least a whole day, which David observed at the funeral of Abner, 2 Sam. iii.
35; or a partial abstinence from the better kinds of food, which lasted for a considerable time, as in the case before us. The prophet made likewise an alteration in his dress, and did not anoint himself as usual after the eastern manner, 2 Sam. xii. 20; Matt.
vi. 17; for the Jews never anointed themselves in times of mourning and humiliation."

Verse 4. In the four and twentieth day of the first month—"Nisan, if the Jewish computation be admitted; that is, the month in which was the paschal solemnity. Hence commentators have observed, from this fact of the prophet, that the Jews did not

5 Then ^e I lifted up mine eyes, and A. M. 3470.
looked, and ^h behold ^a a certain man B. C. 534.
clothed in linen, whose loins were ⁱ girded with ^k fine gold of Uphaz :

6 His body also was ¹ like the beryl, and his face ^m as the appearance of lightning, ⁿ and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms ^o and his feet like in colour to polished brass, ^p and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude.

7 And I Daniel ^q alone saw the vision : for the men that were with me saw not the vision ;

ⁱ Rev. i. 13, 14, 15; xv. 6.—^k Jeremiah x. 9.—¹ Ezekiel
i. 16.—^m Ezek. i. 14.—ⁿ Rev. i. 14; xix. 12.—^o Ezekiel
i. 7; Rev. i. 15.—^p Ezek. i. 24; Rev. i. 15.—^q 2 Kings vi.
17; Acts ix. 7.

observe their festivals except in their own country,
and in the place which God had appointed; but if the Persian computation should be followed, which seems not improbable, as the prophet dates his vision from the third year of Cyrus the Persian, then the month will be different." I was by the side—Or, on the bank, of the great river Hiddekel—"Syriac, the Euphrates; but the Vulgate reads, the Tigris; the Greek and Arabic, Tigris-eddekel. It was probably near the junction of the two rivers, which was about Seleucia and Ctesiphon, in some part of Susi-ana, that the prophet was placed."—Wintle.

Verses 5, 6. I lifted up mine eyes—Being by the river-side, in deep contemplation, I looked up, and saw a person appear before me, clothed in linen, &c.—"Who this certain person was we may be at no loss to determine, if we consider him as described in the attire of the high-priest, and compare the passage with Exod. xxviii. and xxix., and the description of the Son of man by St. John in the Revelation, chap. i. 13. If, however, he were not the Son of God himself, he was probably an angel of the highest order."—Wintle. Concerning the fine gold of Uphaz, see note on Jer. x. 9. His body was like the beryl—That is, cerulean, or of a bluish-green colour;
his face as the appearance of lightning—See Matt.
xxviii. 3. By this was symbolically expressed his perspicacity, or quickness in discerning and knowing every thing; and his eyes as lamps of fire—To signify the comprehensiveness and piercing terribleness of his knowledge; his arms and feet like polished brass—Of a bright flaming colour: see Rev.
i. 15. As the arms and feet in men are the instruments of action, by them we are here to understand his actions, the purity of which is meant to be expressed by the shining brass; and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude—By which greatness or terribleness of his voice was signified his denouncing terrible judgments on kings and kingdoms.

Verses 7-9. The men that were with me saw not
the vision—This was just as it happened to the company who were with St. Paul, when he had a vision, going to Damascus, Acts ix. 7. God can cast a

A. M. 3470. but a great quaking fell upon them, B. C. 534. so that they fled to hide themselves.

8 Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision, ^r and there remained no strength in me: for my ^s comeliness ^s was turned in me into corruption, and I retained no strength.

9 Yet heard I the voice of his words: ^t and when I heard the voice of his words, then was I in a deep sleep on my face, and my face toward the ground.

10 ¶ ^u And behold, a hand touched me, which ^v set me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands,

11 And he said unto me, O Daniel, ^x a ^y man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and ^z stand upright: for unto cloud before the eyes of any one when he pleases, so that the organs may not be able to perform their usual functions; thus it is said, Luke xxiv. 16, of the two disciples going to Emmaus, that their eyes were hidden that they should not know him. But a great quaking fell upon them—Occasioned perhaps by their hearing some unusual and terrible sound. Thus the men with St. Paul heard a voice which struck them speechless, though they saw nothing. So that they fled to hide themselves—Through the terror and astonishment wherewith they were seized, they fled from the place, as from a place in which they were exposed to instant destruction. And there remained no strength in me—I fell into a swoon, or fainting-fit. My comeliness, or vigour, was turned in me into corruption—Houbigant reads it, The flower of my strength withered, and all my powers failed me. When I heard the voice of his words—The very sound of his words deprived me of all sense and power of motion. Then was I in a deep sleep—Then I lay lifeless, with my face prone upon the ground.—Houb.

^r Chap. viii. 27. — ^s Or, vigour. — ^t Chap. vii. 28. — ^u Chap. viii. 18. — ^v Jer. i. 9; Chapter ix. 21; Rev. i. 17. — ^w Heb. moved. — ^x Chap. ix. 23. — ^y Heb. a man of desires. — ^z Heb. stand upon thy standing.

Verses 10–12. And behold, a hand touched me—This was not the same angel, or personage, who is described verse 5, but some other of not so great brightness, probably the angel Gabriel in a human form, who had before been sent to Daniel on the like occasions. Whoever it was, his touch revived Daniel; and enabled him to stand upright. And when he had spoken, I stood trembling—Though Daniel was not so greatly disturbed and terrified as at the appearance described verse 5, yet he could not forbear trembling at the appearance of this angel, though of an inferior order, and probably in a human form. Then said he, Fear not, Daniel—And his word was with power: see Matt. xxviii. 5–10; Luke ii. 10. From the first day thou didst set thy heart to understand—As soon as thou didst set thy mind to consider concerning the state of thy people, and how, and in what degree, or time, their restorathee am I now sent. And when he ^{A. M. 3470} had spoken this word unto me, I stood ^{B. C. 534} trembling.

12 Then said he unto me, ^y Fear not, Daniel: for from the first day that thou didst set thy heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, ^z thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words.

13 ^a But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me one and twenty days: but lo, ^b Michael, ^c one of the chief princes, came to help me; and I remained there with the kings of Persia.

14 Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people ^d in the latter days: ^d for yet the vision is for many days.

^y Rev. i. 17. — ^z Chap. ix. 3, 4, 22, 23; Acts x. 4. — ^a Verse 20. — ^b Verse 21; Chap. xii. 1; Jude 9; Rev. xii. 7. — ^c Or, the first. — ^d Gen. xlix. 1; Chap. ii. 28. — ^e Chapter viii. 26; Verse 1; Hab. ii. 3.

tion would be; and to chasten thyself before thy God—When thou didst begin to testify the concern thou wast in upon that account, by fasting and mourning, and didst humble thyself before God; thy words were heard—As God graciously answered those prayers which thou didst address to him in thy former humiliation, (see chap. ix. 2–22,) so now God is pleased, in answer to thy repeated humiliation, and solicitous concern for thy people, to send me, to inform thee what shall be their state and condition in after times. What an encouragement is this to us, to spread our wants before God, and present to him our lawful requests; for we find twice in this book an angel assuring Daniel, that as soon as he began to pray, God began to grant his petitions.

Verses 13, 14. But the prince of the kingdom of Persia opposed me—Hebrew, עמר לנגר, stood before me.—Purver. And so Jun. and Tremel., referring it to an earthly prince. This is thought by some to be Cambyses, the son of Cyrus, intrusted with the management of affairs in the court of Persia when his father was absent on some expedition, and set against the Jews by their enemies, and now endeavouring to embarrass their affairs: over his designs the angel had been watching, in order to defeat them. Others have thought there is an allusion in this verse, and at verse 20, to the guardian, or tutelary angels, of different countries; which doctrine seems to be countenanced by some passages in Scripture, and especially by Zechariah, chap. vi. 5. Grotius is of this opinion; and Bishop Newcome, on the last-mentioned place, refers to the passage before us. "That there were such tutelar angels," says Lowth, "not only over private persons, Acts xii. 15, but likewise over provinces and kingdoms, was an opinion generally received. The four spirits, mentioned Zech. vi. 5, seem to be the guardian angels of the four great empires." This opinion supposes the presiding angels, here mentioned, to be good angels

A. M. 3470. } 15 And when he had spoken such
B. C. 534. } words unto me, ° I set my face toward the ground, and I became dumb.

16 And behold, [†]one like the similitude of the sons of men [‡] touched my lips: then I opened my mouth, and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, by the vision ^h my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength.

17 For how can ¹⁰ the servant of this my lord talk with this my lord? for as for me, straight-

• Verse 9; Chapter viii. 18.—[†] Chap. viii. 15.—[‡] Verse 10; Jeremiah i. 9.

but it is surely absurd to think that the holy angels are ever engaged in contending with each other; or that "one holy angel is set to oppose another holy angel."—Scott. Others suppose the contest to be between a good and an evil angel, as in Zech. iii. 1, and Jude, verse 9, "which latter opinion," says Wintle, "is perhaps the most just, as there should seem to be no dispute, or contest, between the ministering spirits of heaven, who are always obedient to the pleasure of their Lord. And when the Almighty sent a superior angel, Michael, whose name is sometimes given to Christ himself, Rev. xii. 7, his office probably was to assist Gabriel in subduing the prince of the power of the air, the powers of this darksome world, or the spirits that rule over the children of disobedience, Eph. ii. 2. The opposition was made twenty-one days; and as this was exactly the number of days that Daniel fasted, the contest may possibly have some allusion to this struggle. Daniel was certainly highly favoured, and the Almighty, who delights in hearing and answering the prayers of his servants, directs the angel to apologize (if I may so speak) for his delay in attending to the patient solicitations of the prophet: the angel also is represented as pleading the difficulty of his task, and another higher power, or chief, in the regal court of heaven, favours his business, and comes in to his assistance. In whatever light this is to be understood, it is a strong and affecting, though less gross, instance of the anthropopathia, or of the Deity's accommodating himself and his measures to the manners of men." See De Sacra Poes. Heb., Præl. 6. Houbigant is of opinion, that this prince of the kingdom of Persia was an evil angel, and in agreement with it renders the last clause of the verse, and I have now left him on the side of the kings of Persia. But it seems most proper to understand Cambyzes as meant. Now I am come to make thee understand, &c.—I am now come to inform thee of what shall befall thy people hereafter; for yet the vision is for many days—For it will be a long course of time before the things I shall inform thee of shall come to pass. Daniel, we find, was informed by this vision, that the empire should be translated from the Persians to the Greeks, chap. xi. 3; and then what should be the condition of the way there remained no strength in A. M. 3470.

me, neither is there breath left in me. B. C. 534.

18 Then there came again and touched me one like the appearance of a man, and he strengthened me,

19 [†] And said, O man greatly beloved, [‡] fear not: peace be unto thee, be strong, yea, be strong. And when he had spoken unto me, I was strengthened, and said, Let my lord speak; for thou hast strengthened me.

20 Then said he, Knowest thou wherefore I

^h Verse 8.—¹⁰ Or, this servant of my lord.—[†] Verse 11.
[‡] Judges vi. 23.

Jews under Alexander's successors, the kings of Syria and Egypt.

Verses 15–17. I set my face toward the ground—The fear with which Daniel had been struck at the sight of the angel Michael still continued in some degree, so that he was afraid to look up at this angel, or to speak to him. And behold, one like the similitude of the sons of men—Daniel, gathering courage to look up, perceived that the angel Gabriel had not that angelic form, or brightness, which Michael appeared in, verse 5, but that he was in a human form. Gabriel, then advancing, and touching Daniel's lips, gave him the power of utterance, as he had before (verse 11) of standing on his feet. Then I opened my mouth, and said unto him that stood before me—This angel stood upon the earth near Daniel, not above the waters of the river, as the person did whose appearance was so glorious, verse 5. By the vision my sorrows are turned upon me—By beholding thee, although in a human form, I am greatly affected, or terrified. For how can the servant of this my lord talk, &c.—How can thy servant, a poor mortal man, maintain a discourse with a person of such rank and dignity? see Noldius, p. 353. The words may be translated thus: How can the servant of this my lord talk with that my lord? that is, with the other person that first appeared to me with so majestic a presence, at whose sight I was perfectly confounded, verses 5–9. Straightway there remained no strength in me—As soon as ever I saw him, all my strength went from me, and I could not support myself. Neither is there—Or rather, was there, breath left in me—I fell breathless in a swoon.

Verses 18, 19. Then there came again, &c.—This seems to be spoken of the same angel, namely, the angel Gabriel, touching him again, whereby he was rendered more composed, and had his strength revived. And said, O man, &c., fear not—Thou needest not be under such terrible apprehensions, as if this vision did portend to thee some mischief; for it is a peculiar token of God's favour to thee.

Verse 20. Knowest thou wherefore I come unto thee?—Or, Thou knowest for what cause I am come, &c. "The angel, having strengthened the prophet, presumes that he also understood the

A. M. 3470. come unto thee? and now will I re-
B. C. 534. turn to fight ¹ with the prince of Persia: and when I am gone forth, lo, the prince of Grecia shall come.

¹ Verse 13.—¹¹ Heb. strengtheneth himself.

general design of his errand. The Greek is, Εὐ οἶδας, Surely thou knowest, according to a usual Hebrew idiom. And now will I return to fight with the prince of Persia—With the evil angel, who, under “the god of this world,” presides over Persia; or rather, with the present ruling prince of Persia, whether Cambyses or any other person then intrusted with the chief power, whose designs against the Jews this angel was employed in counteracting, and would continue to counteract, as also those of every future prince of that kingdom, till it should be overturned by the Greeks. And when I am gone forth—Hebrew, וְאֵתְּנִי, and I going forth, namely, to execute my commission; or, when I am gone forth, having executed it, and their monarchy is brought down for their unkindness to the Jews, lo, the prince of Grecia shall come—The Macedonian empire, under Alexander the Great and his successors, shall be established in Asia; and though favourable to the Jews at first, as the Persian was, yet will afterward become vexatious to them. “Such is the state of the church militant; when it has got clear of one enemy, it has another to encounter; and such a hydra’s head is that of the old serpent; when one storm is blown over, it is not long before another rises.”—Henry.

Verse 21. But I will show thee that which is noted in the Scripture, or writing, of truth—Namely, that which is certainly determined by God. God’s decrees are spoken of as if they were committed to writing, and registered in a book. And there is none that holdeth with me in these things, but Michael your prince—This may mean that the Jews had no

21 But I will show thee that which A. M. 3470
is noted in the Scripture of truth: and B. C. 534.
there is none that ¹¹ holdeth with me in these things, ^m but Michael your prince.

^m Verse 13; Jude 9; Rev. xii. 7.

friend in the court of Persia, who would co-operate with the angel, “to forward the prophet’s designs in behalf of his people, but Michael, their prince; and that Daniel must depend on him alone to disappoint the devices which were forming against them.”—Scott. As this chapter is intended as an introduction to the prophecies in the next two chapters, it may be observed that the sum of it is this: that the prayer of Daniel, in behalf of the Jews, had been heard; but that the Jews would be crossed in their design of building the temple; that nevertheless God would protect them; that the prince of Javan, or of the Greeks, that is, Alexander the Great, would come against the Persians; and that the principal angels, such as he was who talked with Daniel, and Michael the archangel, would be employed by God to defend and assist the Jews, and to strengthen the kings who were for the Jews, as, at the beginning of the following chapter, the angel who here speaks is said to have strengthened King Darius. The affliction and fasting of Daniel, who mourned for three weeks, should be considered as the effect of his zeal for the glory of God, to be manifested in the restoration of the Jews; it being the character of pious and zealous persons to afflict themselves when the glory of God is obstructed, and to offer up fervent prayers for the peace and prosperity of their country. With respect to what the angel said to Daniel, of his labouring and striving for the Jews against those who sought their ruin, it is a proof that God makes use of the ministry of angels to execute his designs, and for the protection and benefit of those whom he is pleased to bless.

CHAPTER XI.

This and the following chapter contain the substance of Daniel’s last vision, or a series of prophetic history, from the third year of Cyrus to the fall of Antiochus Epiphanes, if not also, as many suppose, to the final destruction of antichrist, and all the enemies of God’s church. To be more particular; here is, (1.) A brief prediction of the setting up of the Grecian monarchy, upon the ruins of that of the Persians, which had been but lately established, 1-4. (2.) A prediction of the affairs of the two Grecian kingdoms of Egypt and Syria, with reference to each other, 5-20. (3.) Of the rise of Antiochus Epiphanes, and his actions and successes, 21-29. (4.) Of the great mischief that he should do the Jewish nation and religion, typical of the mischief that antichrist should do to the Christian Church, 30-39. (5.) Of his fall and ruin at last, when in the heat of his pursuits, an emblem of the fall and ruin of antichrist, 40-45.

A. M. 3470.
B. C. 534.

ALSO I, ^a in the first year of ^b Darius the Mede, even I,

stood to confirm and to strengthen A. M. 3470.
him. B. C. 534.

^a Chap. ix. 1.

^b Chap. v. 31.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XI.

Verse 1. Also I, in the first year of Darius, &c.—This verse should have been joined to the last chapter. The meaning of what the angel here says is, that from the time that Daniel addressed those ardent prayers to God about the affairs of his people, men

A. M. 3470. 2 And now will I show thee the
B. C. 531. truth. Behold, there shall stand up yet three kings in Persia; and the fourth shall be far richer than they all; and by his strength through his riches he shall stir up all against the realm of Grecia.

^c Chap. vii. 6; viii. 5.

tioned chap. ix., which was in the first year of Darius, from that very time $\pi\epsilon$ (namely, the angel Gabriel) had strenuously co-operated with Michael, in working the deliverance of the Jewish nation. See here again the vast efficacy and power of prayer; it engages God and angels to our assistance.

Verse 2. And now I will show thee the truth—Now I will show thee future things plainly, not enigmatically, or under symbolical representations. Here this chapter should begin: what goes before should be added to the former chapter. Behold, there shall stand up yet three kings in Persia—"According to the Canon, there were nine kings of the Persian empire from Cyrus to Codomanus, besides others, who, falling within a year, are not therein mentioned. Interpreters have differed, therefore, in pointing out the kings that are here meant, or in fixing the commencement of the Scripture, or writing, of truth, mentioned chap. x. 21. But as the vision was revealed to Daniel in the third year of Cyrus, it is most natural to trace its beginning from that time; and then the three kings yet to stand up, or after the then reigning monarch, will be Cambyzes, or the Ahasuerus, and Smerdis, or the Artaxerxes, of Ezra, chap. iv. 6, 7, and Darius Hystaspes; the second of whom, being a magian usurper, that reigned scarce eight months, according to Herodotus, is not in the Canon."—Wintle. And the fourth shall be far richer than they all—That is, Xerxes, the son and successor of Hystaspes, who had inherited great riches from his father, according to Æschylus, and had amassed much more. Of him Justin truly remarks, "If you consider this king, you may praise his riches, not the general; of which there was so great abundance in his kingdom, that when rivers were dried up by his army, yet his wealth remained unexhausted." Pythius, the Lydian, (according to Herodotus, book vii. sec. 27,) was at that time the richest subject in the world. He generously entertained Xerxes and all his army, and proffered him two thousand talents of silver, and three millions nine hundred and ninety-three thousand pieces of gold, with the stamp of Darius, toward defraying the charges of the war. But Xerxes was so far from wanting supplies, that he rewarded Pythius for his liberality, and presented him with seven thousand darics, to make up his number a complete round sum of four millions. Each of these darics was worth better than a guinea of our money. Many great and rich provinces, as India, Thrace, Macedonia, and the islands of the Ionian sea, were added by Darius to the Persian empire. And by his strength he shall stir up all—Both subjects and allies; against the realm of Grecia—"Xerxes's

3 And ^e a mighty king shall stand up, that shall rule with great dominion, and ^d do according to his will. A. M. 3470.
B. C. 534.

4 And when he shall stand up, ^e his kingdom shall be broken, and shall be divided toward the four winds of heaven; and not to his posterity, expedition into Greece is one of the most memorable adventures in ancient history. Herodotus (book vii. sec. 20, 21) affirms, that Xerxes, in raising his army, searched every place of the continent, and it was the greatest army that ever was brought into the field; for what nation was there, says he, that Xerxes led not out of Asia into Greece? Herodotus lived in that age; and he, in the fore-mentioned place, recounts with great exactness the various nations of which Xerxes's army was composed, and computes that the whole number of horse and foot, by land and sea, out of Asia and Europe, soldiers and followers of the camp, amounted to five millions two hundred and eighty-three thousand two hundred and twenty men. Nor was Xerxes content with stirring up the East, but was for stirring up the West likewise, (see Diod. Sic., book xi.,) and engaged the Carthaginians in his alliance, that, while he and his army overwhelmed Greece, they might fall upon the Greek colonies in Sicily and Italy: and the Carthaginians, for this purpose, not only raised all the forces they could in Africa, but also hired a great number of mercenaries in Spain, and Gaul, and Italy; so that their army consisted of three hundred thousand men, and their fleet of two hundred ships. Thus did Xerxes stir up all against the realm of Grecia: and after him no mention is here made of any other king of Persia. 'It is to be noted,' says Jerome, 'that the prophet, having enumerated four kings of the Persians after Cyrus, slips over nine, and passes to Alexander; for the prophetic spirit did not care to follow the order of history, but only to touch upon the most famous events.' Xerxes was the principal author of the long wars and inveterate hatred between the Grecians and Persians; and as he was the last king of Persia who invaded Greece, he is mentioned last. The Grecians then, in their turn, invaded Asia; and Xerxes's expedition being the most memorable on one side, as Alexander's was on the other, the reigns of these two are not improperly connected together."—Bishop Newton.

^d Chap. viii. 4; Verses 16, 36.—^e Chap. viii. 8.

Verses 3, 4. And a mighty king shall stand up, &c.—Namely, from among the Grecians; that shall rule with great dominion—This is evidently descriptive of Alexander the Great; of the rapidity and success of whose conquests, see on chap. vii. 6, and viii. 5, 6. His success was indeed universal, none being able to put a stop to the progress of his victories. So great was his dominion, that he ruled not only over Greece and the whole Persian empire, but likewise added India to his conquests. And that he did according to his will, is a fact too well known to require any particular proof; for none, not even his

A. M. 3470. ^f nor according to his dominion which he ruled: for his kingdom shall be plucked up, even for others besides those.
B. C. 534.

5 ¶ And the king of the south shall be strong,

^f Chap. viii. 22.

friends, dared to contradict or oppose him, or if they did, like Clytus and Calisthenes, they paid for it with their lives. And when he shall stand up—When he shall be in the height of his prosperity. Wintle renders it, when he shall be established; his kingdom shall be broken—Alexander died in Babylon, having lived only thirty-two years and eight months, of which he reigned twelve years and eight months. In so short a time did this sun of glory rise and set! And shall be divided toward the four winds of heaven—This is very significantly expressive of the vast empire which Alexander had brought under subjection to himself, being divided at his death among his four chief captains: see note on chap. vii. 6, and viii. 8. And not to his posterity—For these, with all his family, were cut off in a few years after his death. “His wife Statira, the daughter of Darius, was murdered out of jealousy by his other wife Roxana; and her body was thrown into a well, and earth cast upon it. His natural brother Aridaeus, who succeeded him in the throne by the name of Philip, was, together with his wife Eurydice, killed by the command of Olympias, the mother of Alexander, after he had borne the title of king six years and some months: and not long after Olympias herself was slain in revenge by the soldiers of Cassander. Alexander Ægus, his son by Roxana, in the fourteenth year of his age was privately murdered, together with his mother, in the castle of Amphipolis, by order of Cassander. In the second year after this, Hercules, the other son of Alexander, by Barcine, the widow of Memnon, was also, with his mother, privately murdered by Polysperchon. Such was the miserable end of Alexander’s family! After which the governors assumed, each in his province, the title of king, from which they had abstained as long as any just heir of Alexander was surviving. Thus was Alexander’s kingdom broken and divided, not to his posterity, but it was plucked up even for others.”—Bishop Newton.

Verse 5. And the king of the south, &c.—“Though the kingdom of Alexander was divided into four principal parts, yet only two of them have a place in this prophecy, Egypt and Syria. These two were by far the greatest and most considerable, and at one time were, in a manner, the only remaining kingdoms of the four; the kingdom of Macedon having been conquered by Lysimachus, and annexed to Thrace, and Lysimachus again having been conquered by Seleucus, and the kingdoms of Macedon and Thrace annexed to Syria. These two, likewise, continued distinct kingdoms after the others were swallowed up by the power of the Romans. But there is a more proper and peculiar reason for enlarging on these two particularly; because Judea, lying between them, was sometimes in the possesand one of his princes; and he shall be strong above him, and have dominion; his dominion shall be a great dominion.

6 And in the end of years they ¹shall join

¹ Heb. shall associate themselves.

sion of the kings of Egypt, and sometimes of the kings of Syria; and it is the purpose of Holy Scripture to interweave only so much of foreign affairs as hath some relation to the Jews; and it is in respect of their situation to Judea, that the kings of Egypt and Syria are called the kings of the south and the north.”—Bishop Newton.

The king of the south shall be strong, and one of his princes—That is, of Alexander’s princes. “There is manifestly either some redundancy,” says Bishop Newton, “or some defect in the Hebrew copy, which should be rendered, as it is by the LXX., And the king of the south shall be strong, and one of his princes shall be strong above him.” The king of the south, Ptolemy, son of Lagus, called Soter, that is, saviour, the first king of Egypt, and the first founder of the famous library at Alexandria, was indeed very strong: for his dominion extended over Libya, Cyrene, Palestine, Cyprus, some Grecian islands, and Asiatic provinces. His wealth and strength are celebrated by Theocritus in one of his idyls, and by Appian the historian. But still the king of the north, or Seleucus Nicator, that is, the conqueror, was strong above him: for having annexed, as we have seen, the kingdoms of Macedon and Thrace to the crown of Syria, he had become master of three parts out of four of Alexander’s dominions. All historians agree in representing him, not only as the longest liver, but likewise as the most powerful of all Alexander’s successors. Appian in particular, enumerating the nations which he subdued, affirms that, after Alexander, he possessed the largest part of Asia; for that all was subject to him from Phrygia to the river Indus, and beyond it. He built Seleucia on the Tigris, and many other very considerable cities in India, Scythia, Armenia, and various parts of his wide empire; so that his dominion was indeed a great dominion. He was also, according to Appian, a person of such great strength, that, laying hold on a bull by the horn, he could stop him in his full career: the statuaries, for this reason, made his statue with two bulls’ horns on his head. This prince, “having reigned seven months after the death of Lysimachus, over the kingdoms of Macedon, Thrace, and Syria, was basely murdered; and to him succeeded, in the throne of Syria, Antiochus Soter; and to him his son, Antiochus Theus. At the same time, Ptolemy Philadelphus reigned in Egypt after his father, the first Ptolemy. There were frequent wars between the kings of Egypt and Syria, and particularly between Ptolemy Philadelphus, the second king of Egypt, and Antiochus Theus, the third king of Syria.” See Bishop Newton and Wintle.

Verse 6. And in the end of years—That is, after several years, for these wars lasted long. They

A. M. 3470. themselves together; for the king's
B. C. 534 daughter of the south shall come to the king of the north to make ²an agreement:
but she shall not retain the power of the arm;
neither shall he stand, nor his arm: but she shall be given up, and they that brought her,
and ³he that begat her, and he that strengthened her in these times.

7 But out of a branch of her roots shall one stand up ⁴in his estate, which shall come with an army, and shall enter into the fortress of the king of the north, and shall deal against them,
and shall prevail:

² Heb. rights.—³ Or, whom she brought forth.—⁴ Or, in his place, or, office, Verse 20.—⁵ Heb. vessels of their desire.

shall join themselves together—Shall enter into a league or confederacy with each other. For the king's daughter of the south, &c.—They agreed to make peace, upon condition that Antiochus Theus should put away his former wife, Laodice, and her two sons, and marry Berenice, the daughter of Ptolemy Philadelphus. Thus she came to the king of the north to make an agreement—For Ptolemy her father brought her to Antiochus Theus, and with her an immense treasure, so that he received the appellation of the dowry-giver. But she shall not retain the power of the arm—That is, her interest and power with Antiochus; for after some time, in a fit of love, he brought back his former wife, Laodice, with her children, to court again. Neither shall he stand, nor his arm—Or seed, for Laodice, fearing the fickle temper of her husband, lest he should recall Berenice, caused him to be poisoned; and neither did his seed by Berenice succeed him in the kingdom; but Laodice contrived to fix her eldest son, Seleucus Callinicus, on the throne of his ancestors. But she shall be given up—For Laodice, not content with poisoning her husband, caused also Berenice to be murdered. And they that brought her—Or, her Egyptian women and attendants, endeavouring to defend her, were many of them slain with her. And he that begat her—Or rather, as it is in the margin, he whom she brought forth; for the son was murdered as well as the mother, by order of Laodice. And he that strengthened her, &c.—Her husband Antiochus, as Jerome conceives; or rather, her father, who died a little before, and was so very fond of her that he took care continually to send her fresh supplies of the water of the Nile, thinking it better for her to drink of that than any other river, as Polybius relates. See Bishop Newton.

Verses 7, 8. But out of a branch of her roots shall one stand up—One of the same stock, or original, with Berenice, namely, her brother, Ptolemy Evergetes, shall succeed his father in the government of Egypt, and shall revenge his sister's quarrel, by invading the territories of Seleucus Callinicus, then

8 And shall also carry captives into A. M. 3470
Egypt their gods, with their princes, B. C. 534
and with ⁵their precious vessels of silver and of gold; and he shall continue more years than the king of the north.

9 So the king of the south shall come into his kingdom, and shall return into his own land.

10 But his sons ⁶shall be stirred up, and shall assemble a multitude of great forces: and one shall certainly come, ⁷and overflow, and pass through: ⁷ then shall he return, and be stirred up, ^heven to his fortress.

⁶ Or, shall war.—⁷ Isaiah viii. 8; Chap. ix. 26.—⁷ Or, then shall he be stirred up again.—^h Verse 7.

reigning in Syria with his mother Laodice; and shall deal, or act, against them, and shall prevail—According to Justin and other authors, he prevailed so far, that he made himself master of Syria and Cilicia, and the upper parts beyond Euphrates, and almost all Asia. And shall carry captive, &c.—Jerome relates, out of authors extant in his time, that Ptolemy carried back with him into Egypt vast plunder from all the conquered provinces, upon the whole not less than forty thousand talents of silver, with “precious vessels,” and two thousand five hundred “images of the gods:” among which were also those which Cambyzes, after he had taken Egypt, had carried into Persia. And for thus restoring their gods, after many years, the Egyptians complimented him with the title of Evergetes, or benefactor. “Polybius, lib. v., observes, that he took the city Seleucia, which was kept for some years after by the garrisons of the kings of Egypt; and Justin gives us to understand, that all the fortified cities that had revolted surrendered to him. Archbishop Usher observes, from Josephus against Appian, that after Ptolemy had gained all Syria he came to Jerusalem, and there offered many eucharistic sacrifices to God, and dedicated some presents suitable to his victory. And from hence we may collect a sufficient reason why he obtains a part in the angel's narrative, as it may in general be observed, that the history of the Jews is interwoven throughout the whole of it.”—Wintle. And he shall continue more years than the king of the north—He outlived Seleucus four or five years, the latter dying in exile of a fall from his horse.

Verse 10. But his sons shall be stirred up—“The sons of Seleucus Callinicus were Seleucus and Antiochus, the elder of whom, Seleucus, succeeded him in the throne, and, to distinguish him from others of the same name, was denominated Ceraunus, or the thunderer. He was indeed stirred up, and assembled a multitude of great forces, in order to recover his father's dominions: but, being destitute of money, and unable to keep his army in obedience, he was poisoned by two of his generals,

A. M. 3470. 11 And the king of the south shall
B. C. 534. be moved with choler, and shall come forth and fight with him, even with the king of the north: and he shall set forth a great multitude; but the multitude

shall be given into his hand. A. M. 3470.
12 And when he hath taken away B. C. 534.
the multitude, his heart shall be lifted up; and he shall cast down many ten thousands: but he shall not be strengthened by it.

after an inglorious reign of two or three years. Upon his decease, his brother, Antiochus the Great, was proclaimed king. The angel's expression is very remarkable, that his sons should be stirred up, &c.; but then the number is changed, and only one (he says) shall certainly come and overflow, &c.—Accordingly Antiochus came with a great army, retook Seleucia, and, by the means of Theodotus the Ætolian, recovered Syria. Then, after a truce, wherein both sides treated of peace, but prepared for war, Antiochus returned, and overcame in battle Nicolaus the Egyptian general, and had thought of invading Egypt itself." He was stirred up even to his fortress—He made an attack on Raphia, a strong fortified town near the borders of Egypt.

Verse 11. And the king of the south shall be moved with choler—The LXX. render it ἀγριανθησεται, shall be made wild, or frantic; namely, at the successes of Antiochus, and the revolt of his friends. This is spoken of Ptolemy Philopater, who was king of Egypt at that time, being advanced to the crown upon the death of his father Euergetes, not long after Antiochus the Great succeeded his brother on the throne of Syria. This Ptolemy was a most luxurious and vicious prince, but was nevertheless thus roused at length by the near approach of danger. And shall come forth and fight with him—He marched out of Egypt with a numerous army to oppose the enemy, and encamped not far from Raphia, which is the nearest town to Egypt from Rhinocorura. Thither likewise came Antiochus with his army, and a memorable battle was fought there between the two kings. And he—Namely, Antiochus; set forth a great multitude—Polybius hath recited the various nations of which his army was composed, and altogether it amounted to sixty-two thousand foot, six thousand horse, and a hundred and two elephants. But yet this multitude was given into his hand—That is, into the hand of Ptolemy, who obtained a complete victory. His forces, however, were still greater than those of Antiochus, namely, seventy thousand foot, five thousand horse, and seventy-three elephants. Of Antiochus's army there were slain not much fewer than ten thousand foot, more than three hundred horse, and above four thousand men were taken prisoners; whereas of Ptolemy's there were killed only one thousand five hundred foot and seven hundred horse. The author of the third book of the Maccabees ascribes this victory to the passionate importunity of Arsinoe, Ptolemy's sister, who ran about the army with her hair about her shoulders, and, by promises and entreaties, engaged the soldiers to fight with more than ordinary resolution. Upon this defeat, Raphia and the neighbouring towns contended who should be the most forward to submit to the conqueror; and Antiochus was forced to retreat with his shattered army to Antioch, and from thence sent ambassadors to solicit a peace.

Verse 12. When he hath taken away the multitude, his heart shall be lifted up—This is a description of the effect which this victory would have on Ptolemy, namely, to puff him up with pride and insolence: and so we are informed it did; for being freed by it from his fears, he now more freely indulged his lusts; and, after a few menaces and complaints, he granted peace to Antiochus, that he might be more at liberty to gratify his appetites and passions. He had before murdered his father, his mother, and his brother; and now he killed his wife, who was also his sister, and gave himself up entirely to the management of Agathoclea his harlot, and her brother, Agathocles, who was his catamite, and their equally vicious mother Oenanthé: and so, forgetful of the greatness of his name and majesty, he consumed his days in feasting, and his nights in lewdness; and became not only the spectator, but the master and leader of all wickedness. Alas! what availed it to have conquered his enemies, when he was thus overcome by his vices; he was so far from being strengthened by it, that even his own subjects, offended at his inglorious peace, and more inglorious life, rebelled against him.

After the retreat of Antiochus, Ptolemy visited the cities of Cœlosyria and Palestine, which had submitted to him; and, among others, in his progress, he came to Jerusalem, "where he took a view of the temple, and even offered sacrifices, &c., to the God of Israel. But, not being satisfied with viewing it only from the outer court, beyond which no Gentile was allowed to pass, he showed a great inclination to enter the sanctuary, and even the holy of holies itself. This occasioned a great uproar all over the city; the high-priest informed him of the holiness of the place, and the express law of God, by which he was forbid to enter it. But every sort of opposition only served to inflame his curiosity; he forced in as far as the second court, where, while he was preparing to enter the temple itself, he was struck by God with such terror, that he was carried off half dead. On this he left the city, highly exasperated against the whole Jewish nation, and loudly threatening future vengeance." At his return, therefore, to Alexandria, he began a cruel persecution against the Jewish inhabitants of that city, and cast down many ten thousands; for it appears from Eusebius, that, about this time, forty thousand Jews, or, according to Jerome, sixty thousand, were slain. The loss of so many of his Jewish subjects, and the rebellion of the Egyptians, added to the maleadministration of the state, must certainly have very much weakened, and almost totally ruined his kingdom:

A. M. 3470. 13 For the king of the north shall return, and shall set forth a multitude greater than the former, and shall certainly come ⁸ after certain years with a great army and with much riches.
B. C. 534.

14 And in those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south: also ⁹ the robbers of thy people shall exalt them-

⁸ Hebrew, at the end of times, even years, Chapter iv. 16; xii. 7.

⁹ Heb. the children of robbers.

see Bishop Newton, Wintle, and the Univ. Hist., vol. ix. p. 220.

Verse 13. For the king of the north shall return—It is here foretold that the war should be renewed between the two kings of the north and south, and that it should be begun by the former, who should attempt another invasion of Egypt. This came to pass accordingly, about fourteen years after. For Antiochus, having taken and slain the rebel Achæus, and put an end to the Asiatic war in which he had been engaged, and during which, by his martial exploits against the Medes, Parthians, and others, he had acquired a distinguished reputation throughout Asia and Europe; and having also reduced and settled the eastern parts in their obedience, he found himself at leisure to prosecute any enterprise he might think proper to undertake. And Ptolemy Philopater having died of intemperance and debauchery, and being succeeded by his son Ptolemy Epiphanes, now a child of only four or five years old, he judged it a favourable opportunity for recovering his lost provinces. Taking advantage, therefore, of the infancy of Ptolemy, he returned to invade Egypt, and set forth a multitude greater than the former, engaging Philip, king of Macedon, in his interest, and bringing with him powerful forces from the east; with much riches—With abundant supplies of all necessary provisions for his army; and especially with beasts of burden for removing their baggage, for that is the proper sense of the word רכוש, here rendered riches. Polybius informs us, that from the king of Bactria, and from the king of India, he received so many elephants as made up his number one hundred and fifty, besides provisions and riches. Jerome affirms, from ancient authors, that he gathered together an incredible army out of the countries beyond Babylon; and, contrary to the league, he marched with his army, Ptolemy Philopater being dead, against his son, who was then a child.

Verse 14. There shall many stand up against the king of the south—Antiochus was not the only one who rose up against young Ptolemy: others also confederated with him. Agathocles was in possession of the young king's person; and he was so dissolute and proud in the exercise of his power, that the provinces which before were subject to Egypt rebelled, and Egypt itself was disturbed by seditions; and the people of Alexandria rose up in a body against Agathocles, and caused him, his sister and selves to establish the vision; but A. M. 3470.

they shall fall. B. C. 534.

15 So the king of the north shall come, and cast up a mount, and take ¹⁰ the most fenced cities: and the arms of the south shall not withstand, neither ¹¹ his chosen people, neither shall there be any strength to withstand.

16 But he that cometh against him ¹ shall do

¹⁰ Heb. the city of munitions.—¹¹ Heb. the people of his choices.

¹ Chap. viii. 4, 7; Verses 3, 36.

mother, and their associates, to be put to death. Phillip too, the king of Macedon, entered into a league with Antiochus, to divide Ptolemy's dominions between them, and each to take the parts which lay nearest and most convenient to him.² Also the robbers of thy people—Hebrew, רבני פריצי ענך, literally, the sons of the breakers, or, of the revolters, the factious and refractory ones, of thy people. The LXX. read it, οι υιοι των λοιμων του λαου σου, the sons of the pestilent ones of thy people. In the Vulgate it is translated, the sons also of the prevaricators of thy people shall exalt themselves to establish the vision.—The Jews were at that time broken into factions, part adhering to the king of Egypt, and part to the king of Syria; but the majority were for breaking away from their allegiance to Ptolemy, and thereby contributed greatly, without their knowing it, toward the accomplishment of this prophecy concerning the calamities which should be brought upon the Jewish nation, by the succeeding kings of Syria. But they shall fall—For Scopas came with a powerful army from Ptolemy, and, Antiochus being engaged in other parts, soon reduced the cities of Cœlosyria and Palestine to their former obedience. He subdued the Jews in the winter season, placed a garrison in the castle of Jerusalem, and returned with great spoils to Alexandria.—Bishop Newton.

Verses 15, 16. So the king of the north shall come and take the most fenced cities—It was in the absence of Antiochus that these advantages were obtained by the arms of Egypt; but his presence soon turned the scale, and changed the whole face of affairs: for being concerned to recover Judea, and the cities of Cœlosyria and Palestine, which Scopas had taken, he came again into those parts. Scopas was sent again to oppose him, but was defeated near the sources of Jordan, lost a great part of his army, and was pursued to Sidon, where he was shut up with ten thousand men, and closely besieged. Three famous generals were sent from Egypt to raise the siege; but they could not succeed, and at length Scopas was forced by famine to surrender, upon the hard conditions of having life only granted to him and his men; they were obliged to lay down their arms, and were sent away stripped and naked. Antiochus took also Gaza, and then all the other cities of that district, namely, Abila, Samaria, and Gadara; and afterward became master of the whole country. The arms of the south could not withstand him, neither his chosen people, neither Scopas nor the

A. M. 3470. according to his own will, and ^k none
B. C. 534. shall stand before him: and he shall stand in the ¹² glorious ¹³ land, which by his hand shall be consumed.

17 He shall also ¹ set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom, and ¹⁴ up-

^k Josh. i. 5.—¹² Or, goodly land, Chap. viii. 9; Verses 41, 45.
¹³ Heb. the land of ornament.—¹ 2 Chron. xx. 3.

other great generals, nor the choicest troops who were sent against him; but he did according to his own will, and none was able to stand before him—Among others the Jews also readily submitted to him, went forth in solemn procession to meet him, received him splendidly into their city, supplied him with plenty of provisions for all his army and elephants, and assisted him in besieging the garrison which Scopas had left in the citadel. Thus he stood in the glorious land—And his power was established in Judea. Which by his hand shall be consumed—This clause, thus rendered, may be considered as referring to Antiochus's maintaining his army with the provisions he drew from Judea, and thereby exhausting it; and to the distresses the country suffered, by the marching and counter-marching of hostile armies through it. Thus Josephus: "While Antiochus the Great was reigning in Asia, both the Jews and the inhabitants of Cœlosyria, by the laying waste of their countries, suffered many things. For when he carried on war against Ptolemy Philopater, and against his son, surnamed Epiphanes, it happened, that whether he was conqueror or conquered, they suffered alike: so that they were like a ship at sea in a storm, tossed by the waves on both sides; for whether Antiochus prospered, or met with a reverse, their sufferings were the same." But then they could not be said to be consumed by the hand of Antiochus particularly; they were consumed as much, or more, by Scopas: and the Hebrew, כלל בידו, is capable of another interpretation; it may be translated, Which shall be perfected, or prosper, or flourish, in his hand; a sense which agrees as well with the truth of the text, and better with the truth of history. For Antiochus, to reward and encourage the Jews in their fidelity and obedience to him, gave orders that their city should be repaired, and the dispersed Jews should return and inhabit it; that they should be supplied with cattle and other provisions for sacrifices; that they should be furnished with timber and other materials for finishing and adorning the temple; that they should live all according to the laws of their country; that the priests and elders, the scribes and Levites, should be exempted from the capitation and other taxes; that those who then inhabited the city, or should return to it within a limited time, should be free from all tribute for three years, and that the third part of their tribute should be remitted to them for ever after; and also, that as many as had been taken and forced into servitude should be released, and their substance and goods be restored to them: see Bishop Newton.

right ones with him; thus shall he ^{A. M. 3470}
do: and he shall give him the daugh- ^{B. C. 534.}
ter of women, ¹⁵ corrupting her: but she shall not stand on his side, ^m neither be for him.

18 After this shall he turn his face unto the isles, and shall take many: but a prince ¹⁶ for ¹⁴ Or, much uprightness, or, equal conditions.—¹⁵ Hebrew, to corrupt.—^m Chap. ix. 26.—¹⁶ Heb. for him.

Verse 17. He shall also set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom—Or rather, He shall also set his face to enter, by force, the whole kingdom: and upright ones with him; thus shall he do—If this translation be right, the upright ones here intended are the Jews who marched under his banners, and are so denominated to distinguish them from the other idolatrous soldiers. But the LXX. read, καὶ εὐθεία πάντα μετ' αὐτοῦ ποιήσει, he shall make all things right, or straight, or make agreement with him, that is, with Ptolemy. So also the Vulgate. Antiochus would have seized upon the kingdom of Egypt by force; but fearing, according to Appian, if he did so, he should bring the Romans upon him, he judged it better to proceed by stratagem, and to carry on his designs by treaty rather than by arms. He therefore proposed a marriage between his own daughter Cleopatra and King Ptolemy, now sixteen years old, to be consummated when they should come of age; which offer, made by Eucles of Rhodes, was accepted, and a contract fully agreed between them. Thus the text, And he shall give him the daughter of women—His daughter, so called, as being one of the most eminent and beautiful of women. He himself afterward conducted her to Raphia, where they were married; and gave in dowry with her the provinces of Cœlosyria and Palestine, upon condition of the revenues being equally divided between the two kings. All this he transacted with a fraudulent intention, corrupting, or to corrupt, her, and induce her to betray her husband's interests to her father. But his designs did not take effect: for it is here said, she shall not stand on his part, neither be for him—Ptolemy and his generals were aware of Antiochus's artifices, and therefore stood upon their guard; and Cleopatra herself affected more the cause of her husband than of her father, insomuch that, as Livy relates, (lib. xxxvii. cap. 3.) she joined with her husband in an embassy to the Romans, to congratulate them upon their victories over her father, and to exhort them, after they had expelled him out of Greece, to prosecute the war in Asia, assuring them, at the same time, that the king and queen of Egypt would readily obey the commands of the senate.

Verse 18. After this shall he turn his face unto the isles, and shall take many—After entering into this alliance, Antiochus fitted out a formidable fleet of one hundred large ships of war, and two hundred other lesser vessels, with a view to reduce under his power the maritime places of Asia, Thrace, and Greece; and he took Samos, Eubœa, and many other islands, which was a great indignity and reproach

A. M. 3470. his own behalf shall cause ¹⁷ the re-
B. C. 534. proach offered by him to cease; without his own reproach he shall cause it to turn upon him.

19 Then he shall turn his face toward the

¹⁷ Heb. his reproach.—^a Job xx. 8; Psalm xxxvii. 36; Ezek. xxvi. 21.

offered to the Romans, when their confederates were thus oppressed; and the cities which they had lately restored to liberty were enslaved. But a prince, &c., shall cause the reproach to cease—This prince was Lucius Scipio, the Roman consul, who made the reproach, which Antiochus had offered to the Romans by invading their allies, to return upon his own head, by overthrowing him in battle at mount Sipylus, and forcing him to quit all the conquests he had made in the lesser Asia. In this battle Antiochus lost fifty thousand foot and four thousand horse; one thousand four hundred were taken prisoners, and he himself escaped with difficulty. From this great victory, whereby Asia was delivered out of the hands of Antiochus, Scipio obtained the surname of Asiaticus: see Livy, lib. xxxvii. cap 44. Antiochus, in consequence of this defeat, was obliged to sue for peace, and, to obtain it, was under the necessity of submitting to very dishonourable conditions; namely, not to set foot in Europe, and to give up all he possessed in Asia on this side mount Taurus; to defray the whole expenses of the war, &c., and to give twenty hostages for the performance of these articles, one of whom was his youngest son Antiochus, afterward called Epiphanes. By these means he and his successors became tributary to the Romans. So that nothing could be more fully accomplished than what is here said about the reproach he had brought upon others being turned upon himself.

Verse 19. Then he shall turn his face toward the fort of his own land—The word rendered fort, בִּצְרֹן, is plural, and would be more properly rendered, the fortresses. It is intended to signify, that he should return after the battle to some of his fortified towns. And accordingly we find that he fled away that night, first to Sardes, and from thence to Apamea, and the next day came into Syria to Antioch, a fortress of his own land; from whence he sent ambassadors to sue for peace; and within a few days after peace was granted, he sent part of the money demanded, and the hostages, to the Roman consul at Ephesus. Being under great difficulties how to raise the money which he had stipulated to pay to the Romans, he marched into the eastern provinces, to collect there the arrears of tribute, and amass what treasure he could; and attempting to plunder the rich temple of Jupiter Belus in Elymais, he was assaulted by the inhabitants of the country, and slain, together with his attendants. Such is the account given of the circumstances of his death by Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Justin, and Jerome. Aurelius Victor, however, reports it otherwise, affirming that he was slain by some of his companions, whom, in his liquor, he fort of his own land: but he shall A. M. 3470.

stumble and fall, ^a and not be found. B. C. 534.

20 Then shall stand up ¹⁸ in his estate ¹⁹ a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom: but within few days he shall be destroyed,

¹⁸ Or, in his place, Verse 7.—¹⁹ Hebrew, one that causeth an exacter to pass over.

had beaten at a banquet; but this account deserves not so much credit as the concurrent testimony of earlier historians. However it was, his death was inglorious; he stumbled, and fell, and was no more found.—Bishop Newton.

Verse 20. Then shall stand up in his estate—Hebrew, על כנו, on his base; Vulgate, in his place; or, shall succeed him; a raiser of taxes in the glory of his kingdom—Or, as in the margin, one that causeth an exacter to pass over, &c., that is, one who will send the tribute-gatherers through his kingdom. This was a very just description of Seleucus Philopater, the son and successor of Antiochus, who oppressed his people with most grievous taxes, that he might raise the tribute of one thousand talents, which he was obliged to pay annually to the Romans, as well as that he might support his own government. According to Jerome, he performed nothing worthy of the empire of Syria, and of his father, but reigned both idly and weakly, as Appian also testifies. He had an inclination, indeed, to shake off the Roman yoke, and therefore raised an army, with an intent to march over mount Taurus to the assistance of Pharnaces king of Pontus; but his dread of the Romans confined him at home within the bounds prescribed to him, and almost as soon as he had raised, he disbanded, his army. So that he was little more than a raiser of taxes all his days. He even sent his treasurer, Heliodorus, to seize the money deposited in the temple of Jerusalem. This was literally causing an exacter to pass over the glory of the kingdom, when he sent his treasurer to plunder that temple which even kings had honoured and magnified with their best gifts. But within a few days—Or rather, years, according to the prophetic style, he was to be destroyed—And accordingly his reign was of short duration in comparison of his father's, for he reigned only twelve years, and his father thirty-seven. Or perhaps the passage may mean, that within a few days, or years, after his attempting to plunder the temple at Jerusalem, he should be destroyed: and not long after that, as all chronologers agree, he was destroyed, neither in anger, nor in battle—Neither through rebellion at home, nor in war abroad; but by the treachery of his own treasurer Heliodorus; the same wicked hand that was the instrument of his sacrilege being also the instrument of his death. "For Seleucus having sent his only son Demetrius to be a hostage at Rome instead of his brother Antiochus, and Antiochus being not yet returned to the Syrian court, Heliodorus thought this a fit opportunity to despatch his master, and, in the absence of the next heir to the crown, to usurp it to himself. But he was disap

A. M. 3470. neither in ²⁰ anger, nor in battle.
B. C. 534.

21 ¶ And ²¹ in his estate ^o shall stand up a vile person, to whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom: but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by flatteries.

22 ^p And with the arms of a flood shall they be overflown from before him, and shall be broken; ^a yea, also the prince of the covenant.

23 And after the league made with him ^r he pointed in his ambitious projects, and only made way for another's usurped greatness instead of his own."—Bishop Newton.

²⁰ Heb. angers.—²¹ Or, in his place.—^o Chap. vii. 8; viii. 9, 23, 25.—^p Verse 10.—^a Chap. viii. 10, 11, 25.

Verse 21. And in his estate shall stand up a vile person—This is a description of Antiochus Epiphanes, the great persecutor of the Jewish nation and religion. He is here called a vile person, not for any want of wit or parts, but for the extravagance of his life and actions, which made many doubt whether he had more of the fool or the madman in him: see note on chap. viii. 9, 23–26. To whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom, &c.—The right of succession belonged to Demetrius, the son of Seleucus Philopater, and nephew to Antiochus; but he being a hostage at Rome when his father died by the treachery of Heliodorus, Antiochus, who was now returned from thence, took advantage of his absence, and by courting Eumenes king of Pergamus, and Attalus his brother, with flattering speeches, and great promises of friendship and assistance against the Romans, prevailed with them to assist him against the usurper Heliodorus. He also flattered the Syrians, and with great show of clemency obtained their concurrence. He flattered the Romans likewise, and sent ambassadors to court their favour, to pay the arrears of tribute, to present them besides with golden vessels of five hundred pounds' weight, and to desire their friendship and alliance. Thus he came in peaceably—And as he flattered the Syrians, the Syrians flattered him again, and bestowed upon him the title of Epiphanes, or Illustrious; but the epithet of vile, or rather despicable, here given by the prophet, agrees better with his true character.

Verses 22–24. And with the arms of a flood, &c.—By arms here is signified force, or strength, and by an inundation, or flood, a great army. By which is here to be understood the forces of Attalus and Eumenes, who favoured Antiochus: by these they should be overflown, and broken, who were his competitors for the crown, namely, Heliodorus, the murderer of Seleucus, and his partisans, as well as those of the king of Egypt, Ptolemy Philometor, who had formed some designs upon Syria. Yea, also the prince of the covenant—That is, the high-priest of the Jews was broken. Thus Theodoret: "He speaks of the pious high-priest, Onias, the brother of Jason, and foretels that even he should be turned out of his shall work deceitfully: * for he shall ^{A. M. 3470} come up, and shall become strong ^{B. C. 534.} with a small people.

24 He shall enter ²² peaceably even upon the fattest places of the province; and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his fathers' fathers; he shall scatter among them the prey, and spoil, and riches: yea, and he shall ²³ forecast his devices against the strong holds, even for a time.

* Chap. viii. 25.—* Fulfilled about B. C. 171.—²² Or, into the peaceable and fat.—²³ Heb. think his thoughts.

office." As soon as Antiochus was seated in his throne, he removed Onias from the high-priesthood, and preferred Jason, Onias's brother, to that dignity, not for any crime committed against him by the former, but for the great sums of money which were offered to him by the latter. For Jason offered to give no less than three hundred and sixty talents of silver for the high-priesthood, besides eighty more upon another account: and good Onias was not only displaced to make way for a wicked usurper, but after a few years, living at Antioch, he was, with as great treachery as cruelty, murdered by the king's deputy. But though Antiochus had made a league with Jason the new high-priest, yet he did not faithfully adhere to it, but acted deceitfully; and substituted his brother Menelaus in his room, by means of an armed force, because he offered him three hundred talents more than that which he had received from Jason. For—Or rather, And he shall come up, (for the words do not assign a reason for any thing that precedes,) and shall become strong with a small people—Antiochus had been many years a hostage at Rome; and, coming from thence with only a few attendants, he appeared in Syria little at first, but soon received a great increase. He shall enter peaceably into the fattest places of the province—By the friendship of Eumenes and Attalus he entered peaceably upon the upper provinces, and likewise upon the provinces of Cœlosyria and Palestine. And wherever he came he outdid his fathers, and his fathers' fathers, in liberality and profusion. He scattered among them the prey, and spoil, and riches—The prey of his enemies, the spoil of temples, and the riches of his friends, as well as his own revenues, were expended in public shows, and bestowed in largesses among the people. In the first book of Maccabees, chap. iii. 30, it is affirmed, that in the liberal giving of gifts he abounded above the kings that were before him. Polybius relates, that sometimes, meeting accidentally with people whom he had never seen before, he would enrich them with unexpected presents; and sometimes, standing in the public streets, he would throw about his money, and cry aloud, "Let him take it to whom fortune shall give it." His generosity was the more requisite, to fix the provinces of Cœlosyria and Palestine in his interest, because they were claimed as of right belonging to the king of Egypt. An

A. M. 3470. 25 * And he shall stir up his power
B. C. 534. and his courage against the king of the south with a great army; and the king of the south shall be stirred up to battle with a very great and mighty army; but he shall not stand:
for they shall forecast devices against him.

26 Yea, they that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him, and his army shall overflow: and many shall fall down slain.

27 And both these kings' ²⁴ hearts shall be to

* Fulfilled about B. C. 170.—† Verses 10, 22.—²⁴ Heb. their hearts.

tiochus rejected this claim, and foreseeing that these demands would prove the occasion of a new war between the two crowns, came to Joppa to take a view of the frontiers, and to put them into a proper posture of defence. In his progress he came to Jerusalem, and, as it was evening, he was ushered into the city by torch-light with great rejoicing. From thence he went to Phenicia to fortify his own strong holds, and to forecast his devices against those of the enemy; the LXX. and Arabic read, against Egypt. Thus he acted even for a time, and employed some years in his hostile preparations.

Verses 25, 26. For he shall stir up his power, &c., against the king of the south—By the king of the south is meant the king of Egypt, namely, Ptolemy Philometor, who demanded the surrender of Cælo-syria to him, as by right belonging to him, through virtue of the marriage articles between Ptolemy Epiphanes and Cleopatra; but Antiochus, instead of complying with his demand, invaded Egypt with a vast force both by sea and land. And the king of the south shall be stirred up, &c.—That is, the generals of Ptolemy were stirred up to war with very many and exceeding strong forces; and yet could not resist the fraudulent counsels of Antiochus. The two armies engaged between Pelusium and mount Cassius, and Antiochus obtained the victory. The next campaign he had greater success, routed the Egyptians, took Pelusium, ascended as far as Memphis, and made himself master of all Egypt except Alexandria. These transactions are recorded Maccabees i. 16–19. The misfortunes of Ptolemy are, by the prophet, ascribed to the treachery and baseness of his own ministers and subjects, verse 26: and it is certain that Eulæus was a very wicked minister, and bred up the young king in luxury and effeminacy, contrary to his inclination. Ptolemy Macon, too, who was governor of Cyprus, revolted from him, and delivered up that important island to Antiochus. Nay, even the Alexandrians, seeing the distress of Philometor, renounced their allegiance; and taking his younger brother Euergetes, or Physcon, proclaimed him king instead of his elder brother.

Verse 27. And both these kings' hearts shall be to do mischief, and they shall speak lies at one table—Antiochus and Ptolemy Philometor often met to-do mischief, and they shall speak lies A. M. 3470.

at one table; but it shall not prosper: B. C. 534.

for "yet the end shall be at the time appointed.
28 Then shall he return into his land with great riches; and ^γ his heart shall be against the holy covenant; and he shall do exploits, and return to his own land.

29 At the time appointed he shall return, and come toward the south; ^z but it shall not be as the former, ^a or as the latter.

^α Verses 29, 35, 40; Chap. viii. 19.—^γ Verse 22.—^z Verse 23.—^a Verse 25.

gether at Memphis, and frequently ate at the same table as friends, Antiochus pretending to take care of the interests of his nephew Philometor, especially after the Alexandrians had proclaimed his brother Euergetes king; and Philometor seemingly confiding in his uncle's protection. But herein they were both insincere, designing to impose upon each other; Antiochus's design being to seize the kingdom of Egypt to himself, and Philometor's to disappoint that design, by coming to an agreement with Euergetes and the Alexandrians. But still these artifices did not prosper on either side; for neither did Antiochus obtain the kingdom, nor did Philometor utterly exclude him; but at last the pretended friendship broke out into open wars, which were not to have an end till the time appointed, which was not yet come.

Verse 28. Then shall he return into his land with great riches—Namely, with the spoils taken in Egypt, which were of immense value. And his heart shall be against the holy covenant—"While he was absent in Egypt a false report was spread of his death; and Jason, thinking this a favourable opportunity for recovering the high-priesthood, marched to Jerusalem with a thousand men, assaulted and took the city, drove Menelaus into the castle, and exercised great cruelties upon the citizens. Antiochus, hearing of this, concluded that the whole nation had revolted; and being informed that the people had made great rejoicings at the report of his death, he determined to take a severe revenge, and went up with a great army, as well as with great indignation, against Jerusalem. He besieged and took the city by force of arms, slew 40,000 of the inhabitants, and sold as many more for slaves, polluted the temple and altar with swines' flesh, profaned the holy of holies by breaking into it, took away the golden vessels, and other sacred treasures, to the value of eighteen hundred talents, restored Menelaus to his office and authority, and constituted one Philip, by nature a Phrygian, in manners a barbarian, governor of Judea. When he had done these exploits he returned to his own land."—Bishop Newton.

Verses 29, 30. At the time appointed—Namely, by God. At the time determined by the divine providence, he shall return and come toward the south—He shall march into Egypt again. Antiochus per-

A. M. 3470. 30 ¶^b For the ships of Chittim shall
B. C. 534. come against him: * therefore he shall be grieved, and return, and have indignation
* against the holy covenant: so shall he do; he shall even return, and have intelli- A. M. 3470.

gence with them that forsake the B. C. 534.
holy covenant.

31 † And arms shall stand on his part, * and

* Ver. 28. —† Fulfilled about B. C. 168. —* Ch. viii. 11; xii. 11.

^b Num. xxiv. 24; Jer. ii. 10. —* Fulfilled about B. C. 169.

ceiving that his fine-woven policy was unravelled, and that the two brothers, Philometor and Euergetes, instead of wasting and ruining each other in war, had laid aside their mutual dissensions, and provided for their common safety and interest by making peace, and agreeing to reign jointly, was so offended, that he prepared war much more eagerly and maliciously against both than he had before against one of them. Early, therefore, in the spring he set forward with his army, and passing through Cœlosyria, came into Egypt; and the inhabitants of Memphis submitting to him, he came by easy marches down to Alexandria. But it shall not be as the former—That is, this expedition shall not be so successful as his former ones: for the ships of Chittim shall come against him—That is, the ships which brought the Roman ambassadors, namely, Popilius Lænas and his companions; who came from Italy, touched at Greece, and arrived in Egypt, at the supplication of the Ptolemies, to command a peace between the contending kings: see an account of this matter in the note on chap. viii. 23. The reason of the Romans acting in this imperious manner, and of Antiochus so readily obeying, was, as Polybius suggests, the total conquests that Æmilius the Roman consul had just made of the kingdom of Macedonia. Therefore he shall be grieved and return—It was a great mortification to Antiochus to be so humbled, and so disappointed of his expected prey. He led back his forces into Syria, says Polybius, grieved and groaning, but thinking it expedient to yield to the times for the present. And have indignation against the holy covenant—Or, the law of God. Antiochus being disappointed in his designs upon Egypt, vented all his fury upon the Jews; for he detached Apollonius with an army of twenty-two thousand men, who coming to Jerusalem slew great multitudes, plundered the city, set fire to it in several places, and pulled down the houses and walls round about it. Then they built, on an eminence in the city of David, a strong fortress, which might command the temple; and issuing from thence they fell upon those who came to worship, and shed innocent blood on every side of the sanctuary, and defiled it; so that the temple was deserted and the whole service omitted; the city was forsaken of its natives, and became a habitation of strangers. So shall he do, he shall even return, &c.—After his return to Antioch, he published a decree which obliged all persons, upon pain of death, to conform to the religion of the Greeks; and so the Jewish law was abrogated, the heathen worship was set up in its stead, and the temple itself was consecrated to Jupiter Olympus. In the transacting of these matters he had intelligence with them that forsook the holy covenant—Namely, Menelaus and the other apostate

Jews of his party, who were the king's chief instigators against their religion and country: see 1 Maccab. i. 41–64; 2 Maccab. vi. 1–9. “It may be proper to stop here, and reflect a little, how particular and circumstantial this prophecy is concerning the kingdoms of Egypt and Syria, from the death of Alexander to the time of Antiochus Epiphanes. There is not so complete and regular a series of their kings; there is not so concise and comprehensive an account of their affairs, to be found in any author of those times. The prophecy is really more perfect than any history. No one historian hath related so many circumstances, and in such exact order of time, as the prophet hath foretold them; so that it has been necessary to have recourse to several authors, Greek and Roman, Jewish and Christian; and to collect something from one, and something from another, for the better explaining and illustrating the great variety of particulars contained in this prophecy. The prophecy indeed is wonderfully exact, not only to the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, but beyond that time.” So that we may conclude in the words of the inspired writer; No one could thus declare the times and seasons but He who hath them in his own power: see Acts i. 7; and Bishop Newton.

Verse 31. And arms shall stand on his part—His arms shall so prevail as to make an entire conquest of the Jews, to profane the temple, and cause the daily service performed there to cease: see note chap. viii. 11; and compare 1 Maccab. i. 39; and 2 Maccab. v. 2–5. The temple is here called the sanctuary of strength, either because it was fortified after the manner of a castle, or else because it was a token of the divine protection, as being the place God had chosen to be worshipped in. We are informed by Josephus, by the author of the Maccabees, and others, that Antiochus's soldiers entered the temple and plundered it, and that afterward he ordered that the Jews should not be suffered to offer up the daily sacrifices, which, according to the law, they were accustomed to offer; that he compelled them also to omit their worship of the true God, and to pay divine honours to them whom he regarded as gods, and to make shrines in every city and village, and to build altars, and daily to sacrifice swine upon them: see Joseph. Antiq. lib. xii. cap. 5, sec. 4. And they shall place the abomination that maketh desolate—In the Scriptures, idols are commonly called abominations. This was a prediction of the great profanation Antiochus should cause to the temple, in placing an idol upon the altar of burnt-offerings: see 1 Maccab. vi. 54, 59. It is probable, that the idol was Jupiter, because we find that they dedicated the temple anew to Jupiter Olympus: see 2 Maccab. vi. 2. It is here called the abomina-

A. M. 3470. they shall pollute the sanctuary of
B. C. 534. strength, and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the abomination that ²⁵ maketh desolate.

32 And such as do wickedly against the covenant shall he ²⁶ corrupt by flatteries: but the people that do know their God shall be strong,
and do exploits.

33 ¹ And they that understand among the

²⁵ Or, astonisheth.—²⁶ Or, cause to dissemble.—¹ Mal. ii. 7.
^k Heb. xi. 35.

tion that maketh desolate, because it banished the true worship of God, and his worshippers, from the place.

Verse 32. Such as do wickedly shall he corrupt by flatteries—This is a declaration, that there would be many wicked persons who would be enticed to this idolatry by Antiochus's persuasions. Jason and Menelaus, who were made high-priests by Antiochus for a sum of money, afterward became his instruments, and consented to the setting up of this idol: see 1 Maccab. i. 52; 2 Maccab. iv. 13–15; and v. 15; and vi. 21. But the people that do know their God—That are savingly acquainted with him, and adhere to his true worship and service, shall be strong and do exploits—When others yield to the tyrant's demands, and surrender their consciences to his impositions, these shall bravely keep their ground, resist the temptation, and make the tyrant himself ashamed of his attempt upon them. Good old Eleazar, one of the principal scribes, was one of these, rather choosing to suffer torments and death than defile himself by eating any thing unclean: see 2 Mac. vi. 19. The mother and her seven sons resolutely adhered to their religion, though they knew they must be put to death for so doing, 2 Maccab. vii. This might well be called doing exploits; for to choose to suffer rather than to sin is a great exploit. And it was by being strong in faith that they did those exploits; and bore to be tortured, not accepting deliverance, as the apostle speaks, Heb. xi. 25. "And many in Israel were fully resolved and confirmed in themselves not to eat any thing unclean, whereupon they chose rather to die, that they might not be defiled with meats, and that they might not profane the holy covenant," 1 Mac. i. 62, 63. Or, it may refer to the military courage and achievements of Judas Maccabeus and others, in opposition to Antiochus. Observe, reader, the right knowledge of God is and will be the strength of the soul, and through it gracious persons do exploits. They that know his name will put their trust in him, and by that trust will do great things.

Verse 33. They that understand, &c., shall instruct many—They that know their duty, and are zealous in doing it, that are holy in heart and life, shall instruct many in the righteous ways of God, and keep them from apostacy when others fall off. Such were Mattathias and his family, 1 Mac. ii. 1, &c., the good old scribe Eleazar, and the mother and her people shall instruct many: ^k yet A. M. 3470.

they shall fall by the sword, and by B. C. 534.
flame, by captivity, and by spoil, many days.

34 Now when they shall fall, they shall be holpen with a little help: but many shall cleave
to them with flatteries.

35 And some of them of understanding shall fall, ⁿ to try ²⁷ them, and to purge, and to make them white, ^o even to the time of

ⁿ Chap. xii. 10; 1 Pet. i. 7.—²⁷ Or, by them.—^o Chap. viii.
17, 19; Verse 40.

seven children mentioned above. Yet they shall fall by the sword, &c.—This is descriptive of the sufferings which those who adhered to the divine law should undergo, through the persecution of Antiochus, who ordered them, as Josephus relates, to be put to death with most horrid torments; for some of them, when they had had their bodies torn to pieces by cruel scourgings, were nailed to crosses, to expire there in the most intolerable agonies. Other cruelties of different kinds, but not less severe, were executed upon others; many days—This cruel persecution continued three years and a half, as the time is computed by Josephus, reckoning from the first beginning of it till the sanctuary was cleansed.

Verse 34. Now when they shall fall—When they shall lie quite overcome and oppressed with these great miseries; they shall be holpen with a little help—This was fulfilled by Mattathias and his five sons, who, in the height of their misery, stood up with most wonderful zeal and courage, to oppose these cruelties of Antiochus by force of arms; and several times overthrew, with great slaughter, Antiochus's parties who were employed in harassing Judea. But many shall cleave to them with flatteries—That is, shall be pretended friends only. Such were Joseph and Azarias, who engaged in the common cause out of ambition and a desire of fame, 1 Mac. v. 56, 62. Such were they who, after their death, were found with idols consecrated under their clothes, 2 Mac. xii. 40. Such was Rhodocus, who disclosed their secrets to the enemy, chap. xiii. 21.

Verse 35. Some of them of understanding shall fall—Some of the principal men for piety and knowledge shall fall under this persecution, and suffer grievous miseries and torments: see verse 33. To try them, and to purge, &c.—For the trial of their faith and patience, and to purge them from those corruptions which are the usual effects of prosperity: compare 1 Pet. i. 7: and to make it the more evident how sincere they were in their profession, and that no temptations or sufferings could induce them to violate God's law, and act contrary to their duty. The persecutions which were to befall the church under antichrist were and are designed for the same purpose, as appears by comparing chap. xii. 10 with the words here; Antiochus's persecution being a type and figure of that under antichrist. Even to

A. M. 3470. the end: ^pbecause it is yet for a
B. C. 534. time appointed.

36 ¶ And the king ^qshall do according to his will; and he shall ^rexalt himself, and magnify himself above every god, and shall speak marvellous things ^sagainst the God of gods, and shall prosper ^ttill the indignation be accomplished: for that that is determined shall be done.

^p Verse 29.—^q Verse 16.—^r Chapter vii. 8, 25; viii. 25; 2 Thess. ii. 4; Revelation xiii. 5, 6.—^s Chap. viii. 11, 24, 25.
^t Chapter ix. 27.—^u 1 Timothy iv. 3.—^x Isaiah xiv. 13; 2 Thess. ii. 4.

the time of the end—Namely, the time appointed by God for the ending of these calamities. Because it is yet for a time appointed—It will be still some time before a deliverance will be granted: or, these calamities are appointed to last for some time. Mr. Mede refers the latter part of this sentence to the following verse, and so connects the following prophecy with what went before, thus: "This persecution shall last to the time of the end; for as yet, for a time appointed, a king shall do according to his will."

Verse 36. The king shall do according to his will—He shall act arbitrarily; or, all things shall succeed for a time according to his wish; and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god—Antiochus, as heathen authors have recorded, plundered almost all the temples of the gods which he came near, to whomsoever dedicated. And he shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods—Shall speak boasting and reproachful words against the true God. Antiochus is called a blasphemer, 2 Mac. ix. 28; and frequent mention is made in these books of blasphemies committed in Judea and Jerusalem at that time. Till the indignation be accomplished—Till the anger of God, namely, for the sins of the people, is at an end, and he sees fit to put a stop to those punishments which his wisdom and justice induced him to inflict. For that that is determined shall be done—For the time that these evils shall last is fixed by the divine providence; and they shall not be prevented, nor put an end to till that time. Many of the things that follow may be applied, by way of accommodation, to antichrist, of whom Antiochus was an eminent type; but they seem principally to refer to Antiochus himself.

Verse 37. Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers—The god or gods worshipped in his own native country, namely, Syria. He made laws to abolish the religion of his country, and to bring in the idols of the Greeks. And though his predecessors had honoured the God of Israel, and given great gifts to the temple at Jerusalem, (2 Mac. iii. 2, 3,) he did the greatest indignities to God and his temple. Nor the desire of women—This, as some think, means, nor the god that is loved and adored by women; and, taking the clause in connection with the context, this

37 Neither shall he regard the God ^{A. M. 3470.}
of his fathers, ^{B. C. 534.} nor the desire of women, ^xnor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all.

38 ²⁸ But ²⁹ in his estate shall he honour the god of ³⁰forces: ³¹and a god whom his fathers knew not shall he honour with gold, and silver, and with precious stones, and ³²pleasant things.

²⁸ Or, But in his stead.—²⁹ Heb. as for the almighty God, in his seat he shall honour, yea, he shall honour a god, whom.—³⁰ Or, munitions.—³¹ Heb. Mauzzim, or, God's protectors.—³² Heb. things desired, Isa. xlv. 9.

seems the most natural sense of it; for the whole verse speaks of the impiety, or irreligion, of Antiochus, that he had no regard to any god whatever. What god this was that was the desire of women, cannot be certainly said; it is probable it was the moon, (the queen of heaven, as they used to call her,) or some other of the heavenly luminaries; for the Syrian women are described in Scripture as particularly attached to these. Or the expression may refer to his barbarous cruelty, and be intended to signify that he should spare no age nor sex, and should have no regard to women, however lovely or amiable. In fact, the author of the Maccabees informs us, that by his command mothers were killed with their children; and that there was killing of young and old, men, women, and children, slaying of virgins and infants, 2 Mac. v. 13. Nor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all—He shall not regard the gods of any country whatsoever, but think himself above them, and treat them as if he were so. He was so proud, that he thought himself above the condition of a mortal man; that he could command the waves of the sea, and reach the stars of heaven, as his insolence and haughtiness are expressed 2 Mac. ix. 8, 10.

Verse 38. But in his estate—Or jurisdiction. The LXX. render it, ἐν τῷ ὅρῳ αὐτοῦ, in his place shall he honour the god of forces—Literally, the god Mahuz-zim. This seems to be either Jupiter Olympus, never introduced among the Syrians till Antiochus did it, or, as others rather suppose, Mars, the god of war, whom Antiochus ordered to be worshipped in his dominions: which latter opinion seems the more likely, as Antiochus was almost always engaged in some war or other, and appears to have depended most upon his sword for raising himself to power and dignity. The Greek version, the Vulgate, and several other translations, retain the original word, without interpreting it. The word imports protection, or a protector, and is often rendered by the LXX., ὑπερασπιστής, a defender, or champion. A god whom his fathers knew not—Nor worshipped; because he wished to be thought to excel his fathers in wisdom; shall he honour with gold, and silver, and pleasant things—The word חמדות, rendered pleasant things, is used by the Prophet Isaiah (chap. xlv. 9) to signify the costly ornaments with which

A. M. 3470. 39 Thus shall he do in the ³³ most
B. C. 534. strong holds with a strange god, whom he shall acknowledge and increase with glory:
and he shall cause them to rule over many,
and shall divide the land for ³⁴ gain.

40 ¶ ³⁵ And at the time of the end shall the ³³ Hebrew, fortresses of munitions.—³⁴ Hebrew, a price.

³⁵ Verse 35.

the heathen decked their idols; and of such ornaments it is to be understood here. And the god spoken of here, as honoured and ornamented by Antiochus, seems to have been Baal-Semon, the chief god of the Phenicians, who is with propriety said to be a god whom Antiochus's father knew not; because there was no god of such name, nor supposed with the same power and attributes, among the Greeks, till (probably by Antiochus's means) they followed the example of the Phenicians in worshipping such a god.

Verse 39. Thus shall he do in the most strong holds—Or, fortresses of Mahuzzim; with a strange god, whom he shall acknowledge—The temple of Jerusalem, called the sanctuary of strength, (verse 31, where the same word Mahuz is used; see also Psa. xxvii. 5,) seems to be here intended by the most strong holds, or fortresses of Mahuzzim, that is, of munitions, or protections, as it is signified that he should set up the strange god there. Some read it, He shall commit the munitions of strength, that is, the city of Jerusalem, to a strange god: or, he shall put it under the protection of Jupiter Olympus. This god he shall not only acknowledge, but shall increase with glory—Setting his image even upon God's altar. And he shall cause them—That minister to this idol; to rule over many—Shall put them into places of power and trust; and they shall divide the land for gain—Shall be maintained richly out of the profits of the country. Thus we find Antiochus's officers promising Mattathias, that if he would do according to the king's commandment, he and his house should be in the number of the king's friends, and should be honoured with silver and gold, and many rewards, 1 Mac. ii. 18. The learned Mr. Mede, Bishop Newton, and many other interpreters, think that St. Paul refers to this prophecy, 2 Thess. ii. 3–12; and 1 Tim. iv. 1–3. And it must be acknowledged that much of what is here said is very applicable to antichrist, or the Papacy, termed by the apostle, the man of sin, that exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped, forbidding to marry, pretending not to regard the desire of women, and honouring saints and angels, whom his followers take for their protectors, (as the heathen of old depended on their demons,) making them presidents of several countries. But however applicable this may be to the idolatry, superstition, and tyranny of the Church of Rome, and however Antiochus might be intended to be a type of that antichristian power, the prophecy does not appear to have been primarily designed to be understood of it, but to have been meant of Antiochus himself, that great enemy of God's king of the south push at him: and A. M. 3470.

the king of the north shall come B. C. 534.
against him ³⁶ like a whirlwind, with chariots, ³⁷ and with horsemen, and with many ships;
and he shall enter into the countries, ³⁸ and shall overflow and pass over.

³⁶ Isaiah xxi. 1; Zech. ix. 14.—³⁷ Ezek. xxxviii. 4, 15; Rev. ix. 16.—³⁸ Verses 10, 22.

ancient church. For it would be a vast transition, and not at all according to the regular series or order of time, for the prophecy to pass at once from Antiochus to antichrist. And as these prophecies, or visions, are expressly said by the angel who was sent to explain them, (verses 10, 14,) to relate to the Jewish people, or to be concerning what should befall them, and antichrist does not concern them in particular, therefore it seems most consistent with reason to interpret what is said here of Antiochus, as there is not the least appearance of the subject of the prophecy being changed. Every one, who reads this chapter without prepossession, must conclude, that the very same person is intended in this paragraph that is spoken of from verse 21; and that there is no intimation in any one of these verses that any other person is primarily intended.

Verse 40. And at the time of the end—At the determined time, or when the time shall approach that God will put an end to these miseries of the Jews; shall the king of the south push at him—The king of the south, through all this prophecy, appears evidently to signify the king of Egypt, and if it be so interpreted here, this must relate to some new contest between him and Antiochus. Historians, however, make no mention of this, nor of any third expedition of Antiochus into Egypt. But it is not improbable that the king of Egypt, between whom and Antiochus there was enmity in the heart, though there was outward friendship, might make some efforts, of one kind or other, to injure Antiochus, which might induce him to make a third expedition into Egypt. The want, however, of a certain knowledge of this transaction of Antiochus, has been considered by some as an additional reason for applying this, and the whole paragraph from the 36th verse, to antichrist, and the great apostacy of the middle ages of the Christian Church. Hence, by the king of the south here, Mr. Mede understands the Saracens, and by the king of the north, the Turks, who should both at different times afflict the western parts of the world, where he supposes the seat of antichrist to be. The Saracens he supposes to be called the king, or kingdom, of the south, because that people were inhabitants of Arabia Felix, which lay southward of Palestine, whereas the Turks were originally Tartars or Scythians. But the safest rule whereby to interpret the prophecies seems to be to apply them to events nearest to the times when they were uttered, unless they manifestly relate to more distant times; and there is nothing said here but what might very probably relate to Antiochus, though, through the scantiness of the history of those times,

A. M. 3470. 41 He shall enter also into the B. C. 534. ³⁵ glorious ³⁶ land, and many countries shall be overthrown: but these shall escape out of his hand, ° even Edom, and Moab, and the chief of the children of Ammon.

42 He shall ³⁷ stretch forth his hand also upon the countries: and the land of Egypt shall not escape.

43 But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the precious

³⁵ Or, goodly land, Verse 16.—³⁶ Heb. land of delight, or, ornament.—³⁷ Isa. xi. 14.—³⁸ Heb. send forth.—^d Exod. xl. 8; Judg. iv. 10.

we have not a knowledge of the facts to which some particular passages or expressions in the prophecy refer. And the king of the north—The king of Syria, Antiochus; shall come against him like a whirlwind—In a sudden and impetuous manner. And shall overflow and pass over—Shall overspread the land, breaking in and opening himself a passage everywhere by the vast power of his forces.

Verse 41. He shall enter into the glorious or pleasant land—By this title it is beyond a doubt Judea is signified, chap. viii. 9, and therefore it is reasonable to conclude Judea is meant here; and this seems to be spoken of Antiochus's sending his captains Apollonius, Lysius, and Gorgias into the land of Judea, of which we have an account in the books of the Maccabees; for a king is said to enter a country when he sends his armies into it, though he be not there in person. And many countries shall be overthrown—Many of the neighbouring nations shall be cut off. But these shall escape out of his hand—These shall not be destroyed. Edom and Moab, and the children of Ammon—Grotius expounds the words to this sense, That Antiochus did not make war upon these people, because they readily complied with his commands, and joined with him against the Jews: for which cause Judas Maccabees made war upon them: see 1 Mac. v. 3, 4.

Verses 42, 43. He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries—Namely, upon the countries near to Egypt, as well as upon Egypt itself. Some think that the occasion of Antiochus's coming into Egypt this third time was a quarrel between Ptolemy Philometor and his brother Physcon, who set up against him; and that Antiochus sided with Physcon, and assisted him to expel Ptolemy. He shall have power over the treasures, &c., of Egypt—In intestine broils, those who are called in to the assistance of either party, generally make their market of it, and pay themselves with the riches of the country. This, from the character of Antiochus, we may well suppose he would do; and if Physcon stood in need of his assistance, he could not gainsay him. Polybius giving an account of the wealth of Antiochus in gold, silver, and precious stones, adds, "Part of this he took from Egypt, breaking the covenant which things of Egypt: and the Libyans A. M. 3470. and the Ethiopians shall be ^d at his B. C. 534. steps.

44 But tidings out of the east and out of the north shall trouble him: therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many.

45 And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palaces between the seas in ° the ³⁸ glorious ³⁹ holy mountain: ^f yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him.

° Psalm xlviii. 2; Verses 16, 41; 2 Thess. ii. 4.—³⁸ Or, goodly.—³⁹ Heb. mountain of delight of holiness.—^f 2 Thess. ii. 8; Rev. xix. 20.

he had made with Ptolemy Philometor." This testimony seems strongly to confirm, that what is said here is spoken of Antiochus: for the historian relates exactly the same thing that Daniel here foretels. And the Libyans and the Ethiopians shall be at his steps—Or, follow him; that is, as captives, being overcome in war; for that seems to be the meaning of the expression, be at his steps. It is very probable that Antiochus, from Egypt, made an incursion against those people, and gained some victories over them.

Verses 44, 45. But tidings out of the east and out of the north shall trouble him—Historians relate, that the Parthians on the east, and the Armenians on the north, declared war against Antiochus about the same time; so that this may very reasonably be supposed to relate to this fact. And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palace—The word translated palace here, is a Syriac word, and therefore is very properly used when speaking of the Syrian king. The expression signifies, as we would speak now, his royal tent, or pavilion. By planting it between the seas, in the glorious holy mountain, is meant, his fixing it in Judea, called a mountain elsewhere, as well as here, because it is a mountainous country. The epithet glorious is the very same as Daniel generally uses in speaking of Judea as a peculiar mark of distinction. The epithet holy is also frequently applied to Judea, because the whole of it was dedicated to the true God, and was chosen by him for the residence of a nation which he intended to be a holy people. Judea is likewise situated between two seas, namely, the Mediterranean, and the sea of Sodom, or the Dead sea; which are its boundaries on each side. So the meaning of this sentence is, that Antiochus should place his royal pavilion in Judea, leaving there some of his principal generals, or officers, who should, by his command, keep up the pomp of majesty as if he himself were present. Yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him—God shall cut him off in the midst of his days, and none shall be able to prevent his fall. This is the same with what is foretold chap. viii. 25, He shall be broken without hand; where see the note. Observe, reader, when God's time is come to bring proud oppressors to their end, none shall be able, nor perhaps, inclined to help them, for those who, when they are in their grandeur, covet to be feared by all, will find, when they come to be in distress, that they are loved by none: none will lend them so much as a hand, or a prayer to help them: for if the Lord do not help, who shall? Of the kings that came after Antiochus nothing is here prophesied, for he was the most malicious, mischievous enemy to the church, and a type of the son of perdition, whom the Lord will consume with the breath of his mouth, and destroy with the brightness of his coming, and none shall help him. As a confirmation of the explanation of this prophecy given above, it may be proper to observe here, that Calmet, in like manner, confines the latter part of it to the persecutions of Antiochus against the Jews. He observes, however, at the close of the chapter, it is necessary to acknowledge that Antiochus was one of the most manifest, and most expressive figures of antichrist, and that these things which the angel foretold of Antiochus will receive a further accomplishment before the end of the world.

CHAPTER XII.

After the prediction of the calamities which the Jews should suffer under Antiochus, prefiguring the troubles of the Christian Church, under the antichristian power, we have here, (1.) Consolatory promises for the support of God's people in those times of trouble and calamity: and they are such as might serve both for those former times of trouble under Antiochus, and those latter, which were prefigured by them, 1-4. (2.) A conference between Christ and an angel, concerning the time of the continuance of these events, 5-7. (3.) Daniel's inquiry for his own satisfaction, and the answer he received to that inquiry, 8-13.

A. M. 3470. AND at that time shall ^a Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people: ^b and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time: and at that time thy people ^c shall be delivered, every one that shall be found ^d written in the book.

^a Chapter x. 13, 21.—^b Isa. xxvi. 20, 21; Jer. xxx. 7; Matt. xxiv. 21; Rev. xvi. 18.—^c Rom. xi. 26.

^d Exodus xxxii. 32; Psa. lvi. 8; lxi. 28; Ezek. xiii. 9; Luke x. 20; Phil. iv. 3; Rev. iii. 5; xiii. 8.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XII.

Verse 1. And at that time, &c.—It is usual with the prophets, when they foretel the troubles of the church, to furnish it, at the same time, with proper supports and consolations; and none are so sovereign, of such general application, so easily accommodated to every case, and of such powerful efficacy, as those that are fetched from Christ, and a future state revealed in his gospel. At that time—When the troubles are the greatest; shall Michael stand up—The word Michael signifies, Who is like God? which name, with the title here given him, The great prince which standeth for the children of thy people, manifestly points out the Messiah, and cannot properly be understood of a created angel. The angel had told Daniel, chap. x. 21, what a friend Michael was to the church of God, and he now informs him that he should interpose in a singular way, and work out deliverance for her. If this have any reference at all to the respite from trouble, and the deliverance wrought out for the Jews, after the death of Antiochus; yet that cannot be the primary intention of the prediction. It evidently relates to the incarnation of the Son of God, which was to take place soon after the days of Antiochus; in order to the eternal salvation of God's people. As if the angel had said, As after the signal judgment of God upon Antiochus, that persecutor of his people, they shall have some deliverance from their calamities; so there will be a yet far greater salvation wrought out for them, when Michael your prince shall appear for you. And there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation, &c.—This is not only applicable to, but evidently primarily intended of the calamities suffered by the Jews, before and during the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans; calamities brought upon them for their rejection and crucifixion of their own Messiah. Of this time of trouble Christ speaks in similar language, Matt. xxiv. 21, when he says, Then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to that time, no, nor ever shall be. Of which, see the notes on Deut. xxviii. 50-63. Of this the angel had spoken much, chap. ix. 26, 27; and it happened soon after the time in which Christ set up his gospel kingdom in the world. It may refer, however, also to the dreadful judgments which shall be executed on all antichristian powers, to make way for the universal spread of the gospel, and the final conversion and restoration of the Jews. Concerning which awful judgments, see Rev. xvi. 18-21, and xix. 17-21. The prediction may include likewise the judgments of the great and last day, the day that shall burn as an oven, when all the proud, and all that do wickedly, shall be as stubble, and shall be consumed; that will be such a day of trouble as never was, to all those against whom Michael our prince shall stand. And at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one found written in the book—By those found written in the book, or, as it is expressed, Isa. iv. 3, written among the living in Jerusalem, may be understood, 1st, The pious Jews who should be pre-

A. M. 3470. 2 And many of them that sleep in
B. C. 534. the dust of the earth shall awake,
* some to everlasting life, and some to shame
† and everlasting contempt.

3 And ‡ they that be ¹ wise, shall ^h shine as the brightness of the firmament; ⁱ and they

^e Matt. xxv. 46; John v. 28, 29; Acts xxiv. 15.—^f Isaiah lxxvi. 24; Rom. ix. 21.—^g Chap. xi. 33, 35.—¹ Or, teachers.
^h Prov. iv. 18; Matt. xiii. 43.

that turn many to righteousness, ^k as A. M. 3470.
the stars for ever and ever. B. C. 534.

4 ¹ But thou, O Daniel, ^m shut up the words,
and seal the book, even to ⁿ the time of the end:
many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.

ⁱ James v. 20.—^k 1 Corinthians xv. 41, 42.—¹ Chapter viii. 26; Verse 9.—^m Revelation x. 4; xxii. 10.—ⁿ Chapter x. 1; Verse 9.

served from the mischief and ruin designed them by Antiochus; but more especially, 2d, Such as should believe in Christ when he appeared, embrace his gospel, and become his true disciples, who should escape both the temporal calamities coming on their countrymen, and obtain spiritual and eternal salvation through him. It includes, 3d, Those who should be converted in the latter days, and restored to their own land; and lastly, All that should be found written in the book of life at the day of final judgment, that is, all truly justified, regenerated, and pious persons. Of the book of life, see notes on Exod. xxxii. 32; Psa. lxix. 28; Isa. iv. 3.

Verse 2. And many that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake—This may be understood, 1st, Of those saints who rose from the dead immediately upon the resurrection of Christ, spoken of Matt. xxvii. 52, 53, where we read that the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose, and came out of their graves after his resurrection, and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many. 2d, It may be interpreted figuratively of the mystical resurrection of Jews and Gentiles from spiritual death to spiritual life, by the preaching of the gospel, or of their conversion to true Christianity. Calmet thinks that this, without all question, is the primary sense of the verse, and that it is only in a secondary sense that it can be understood of the resurrection of men's bodies. Most commentators, however, are of a different opinion, and consider the words as being primarily intended of the general resurrection which will take place at the last day. And they think, that the next clause, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt, requires this application of the words, and does not admit of any other interpretation. The Lord Jesus certainly seems to have referred to this passage, John v. 28, where he speaks of the resurrection of life, and the resurrection of damnation; and upon the ground of it chiefly the Jews are said by St. Paul, Acts xxiv. 15, to expect a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust. And nothing could be brought in more seasonably than this doctrine is here; for under Antiochus's persecution some basely betrayed their religion, others bravely adhered to it. Now it would be a trouble to the upright and faithful among the Jews, that they could neither reward the one nor punish the other; this therefore would be a satisfaction to them, that they would both be recompensed at the general resurrection. And the apostle, speaking of the pious Jews that suffered martyrdom under Antiochus, tells us, that though they were tortured, yet they accepted not deliverance, (namely, deliverance offered them on terms they could not conscientiously comply with,) because they hoped to obtain a better resurrection. In accordance with this sense of the words, which seems evidently to be that primarily intended, it must be observed, that the word many in the first clause of the verse must include all mankind, as it does in Rom. v. 19, where St. Paul says, By one man's disobedience many were made sinners.

Verse 3. They that be wise—Namely, that are wise unto salvation through faith in Christ, that are truly godly and righteous, shall shine as the brightness of the firmament—Shall be clothed with glory and immortality; shall have bodies conformed to Christ's glorious body; shall shine forth, says Jesus, as the sun in the kingdom of their Father, Matt. xiii. 43; and especially those shall be thus glorious who are wise to win souls; who, being well instructed themselves in divine things, shall lay themselves out to instruct, reclaim, and save others; such shall shine as the stars—That is, with a splendour like that of the luminaries of heaven, for ever and ever—To all eternity. This seems chiefly to refer to the teachers of divine truth, and especially to those who confirm their doctrine by their sufferings and example: such shall undoubtedly receive a distinguished reward, though not procured by their own merit. The Judge of all the earth will certainly do right; and when he cometh, his reward is with him, to give to every man according as his work shall be, Rev. xxii. 12. And as he hath given the fullest assurance that there is a reward for the righteous; so he hath assured us also that it will be augmented, in proportion as men have laboured to be more extensively useful, and to advance the real and best interests of their fellow-creatures, namely, their spiritual and eternal interests.

Verse 4. But thou, shut up the words, and seal the book—By this was intimated, 1st, That the writing of truth (see chap. x. 21) was finished, and therefore the book that contained it is ordered to be closed; 2d, That the time of its full and final accomplishment was distant; for the prophecies which were shortly to be fulfilled are forbidden to be sealed, Rev. xxii. 10; 3d, That it would in a great measure remain obscure, and as a sealed book, till the events predicted were about to take place; 4th, That care was to be taken to preserve this prophecy safe and secure, as a treasure of great value, laid up for future ages, to which it should be of great service. Till the time of the end—Or, the appointed time; till the

A. M. 3470. 5 ¶ Then I Daniel looked, and be-
B. C. 534. hold, there stood other two, the one on this side of the ²bank of the river, and the other on that side of the bank ^o of the river.

6 And one said to ^p the man clothed in linen,
which was ³ upon the waters of the river, ^a How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?

² Heb. lip.—^o Chap. x. 4.—^p Chap. x. 5.—³ Or, from above.
^a Chap. viii. 13.—^r Deut. xxxii. 40; Rev. x. 5, 6.

things here foretold, begin to come to pass; that then thy prophecies may be compared with the events, and it may be seen how exactly they are fulfilled; and men may be struck with astonishment
at the wisdom and knowledge of that God who could, so long beforehand, reveal such a variety of things to thee so fully and clearly. Many shall run to and fro—Many shall diligently search into these prophecies, and make use of all the means in their power to arrive at a true knowledge of them;
shall improve all opportunities of getting their mistakes rectified, their doubts resolved, and their acquaintance with divine things in general, and with these and the other prophecies of God's word in particular, improved and perfected. And knowledge shall be increased—By these means great light shall be thrown on every part of divine revelation, and especially on the parts that are prophetic: the more the predictions are accomplished, the better will they be understood; and future ages will receive more instruction and edification from them than we do. The words have an especial reference to gospel days; and the expression of running to and fro,
doubtless points to the journeys, voyages, and labours of gospel ministers, whether apostles, evangelists, pastors, or teachers, who should traverse sea
and land, and travel from place to place, from country to country, to spread the knowledge of divine truth, and testify the gospel of the grace of God.

Verses 5, 6. Then I, Daniel, looked—Here begins
an account of a new vision that appeared to Daniel,
confirming and explaining the former; for Gabriel,
it seems, had finished his narrative, and what now follows is added by way of illustration. Some will have these other two angels to be the guardians of Persia and Greece; and from thence contend, that these two empires are the only ones concerned in the preceding scripture, or writing, of truth. But this is mere conjecture, unsupported by the relation here given. The one on this side of the bank of the river, &c.—Namely, the river Hiddekel, or Tigris, of which mention is made chap. x. 4. And one said—Hebrew, And he said, that is, one of the angels. But the Syriac, Arabic, some of the Greek copies, and the Vulgate, read, And I said, meaning Daniel, to the man clothed in linen—Mentioned chap. x. 5, (where see the note,) which was upon,
or rather, above, the waters of the river—Namely,
the Son of God, our High-Priest, who rules the nations, of which standing upon, or above, the waters,

7 And I heard the man clothed in A. M. 3470.
linen, which was upon the waters of B. C. 534.
the river, when he ^rheld up his right hand and his left hand unto heaven, and swore by him
^s that liveth for ever, ^tthat it shall be for a time, times, and ⁴a half; ^vand when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of ^xthe
holy people, all these things shall be finished.

^s Chap. iv. 34.—^t Chap. vii. 25; xi. 13; Rev. xii. 14.—⁴ Or, part.—^v Luke xxi. 24; Rev. x. 7.—^x Chap. viii. 24.

was an emblem: see Psa. xxix. 10. As a figure of this, Christ, in the days of his flesh, walked upon the waters, Matt. xiv. 25. How long shall it be to the end of these wonders—What is the time fixed in the divine counsels for the full accomplishment of these wonderful predictions? When shall these extraordinary events take place?

Verse 7. And he held up his right hand and his left unto heaven—It was the general custom, in swearing, to lift up one hand to heaven: see Gen.
xiv. 22; Deut. xxxii. 40; but here Christ is represented as holding up both his hands, as a greater confirmation of the truth and importance of what he was about to say; and swore by him that liveth for ever—By the self-existent and everlasting God.
Thus the mighty angel, whom St. John saw, Rev.
x. 5, 6, is brought in, with a plain reference to this vision here, standing with his right foot on the sea
and his left foot on the earth, and, with his hand lifted up to heaven, swearing that there should be no longer any delay of the execution of the divine counsels. That it should be for a time, times, and a half, or, the dividing of time, as it is expressed in Chaldee, chap. vii. 25, where see the note, which contains, understood literally, three years and a half, during which time the public sacrifices and worship were discontinued through the persecution of Antiochus, the type of antichrist. But this line of time is expressly applied to the antichristian persecution, Rev. xii. 14, and is further explained in that chapter, verse 6, by one thousand two hundred and sixty days, which is three years and a half,
reckoning three hundred and sixty days to a year:
see note on chap. ix. 24. And if we suppose each day to signify a year, which is the prophetic sense of the word day, this period of time denotes one thousand two hundred and sixty years: see note on chap. viii. 14. And when he shall have accomplished to disperse the power of the holy people—When the dispersions of the Jews shall be ended, then the most remarkable events contained in this prophecy shall be fulfilled. The restoration of the Jewish nation is foretold by the prophets, as one of those signal events to be brought to pass in the latter days, or times, of the world. Mr. Mede makes this parallel with those words of Christ, Luke xxi.
24; *Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles
until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled*; that is,
till the times of the fourth monarchy and the reign of antichrist be expired. Many commentators un-

A. M. 3470. 8 And I heard, but I understood
B. C. 531. not: then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things?

9 And he said, Go thy way, Daniel: for the words are closed up and sealed ^rtill the time of the end.

10 ^z Many shall be purified, and made white,

^r Verse 4.—^z Chap. xi. 35; Zech. xiii. 9.—^a Hosea xiv. 9;
Rev. ix. 20; xxii. 11.—^b Chap. xi. 33, 35; John vii. 17;

derstand this last clause, which speaks of accomplishing to scatter the power of the holy people, not of the termination of the time of their dispersions, but of the beginning of it; and suppose that it will be one thousand two hundred and sixty years, from the beginning to the end of that time. But then, by the power of the holy people, they do not understand the Jews, but the Christians. They do not, therefore, calculate this period from the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and the subsequent dispersion of the Jews; but from the time when the antichristian usurpers began to scatter the power of true Christians, by false doctrines, persecutions, massacres, and religious wars; and they extend it to the period when these powers shall be subverted.

Verses 8, 9. And I heard, but I understood not—I did not understand what time was allotted for bringing to pass this event, namely, the restoration of the Jewish nation, or the complete overthrow of all antichristian powers. The prophets, it must be observed, did not always receive the interpretation of what was revealed to them, as appears from 1 Pet. i. 11, 12. "Study and particular application were required, and often an immediate revelation. The evidence which appears to us so clearly, in the greater part of the prophecies which respect Jesus Christ, and the establishment of the church, was under an impenetrable obscurity before the event. It was the same with respect to those which concerned the persecutions of Antiochus. All this was most inexplicable to the Jews, before they saw the completion; and it is pretty nearly the same at present with us respecting some future events foretold by the prophets, particularly in the book of Revelation, which are yet to be accomplished, and which consequently are dark, and difficult to be understood."—Calmet. And he said, Go thy way, for the words are closed up, &c.—Be content with what has been made known to thee; (see verse 13); for the full explication is deferred, till the time of its accomplishment draws near.

Verse 10. Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried—See chap. xi. 35, where the same words are found, but in different order. They are words of general and ordinary use, expressive of the purification intended to be produced in the minds of men by afflictions. If we would ascertain their import, the first word is borrowed from wheat, which is cleansed from the chaff; the second from cloth, which is whitened by the fuller; and the third from metal, tried and separated from its dross by gold-and tried; ^a but the wicked shall do wickedly: and none of the wicked shall understand; but ^b the wise shall understand.

11 And from that time ^cthat the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and ^dthe abomination that ^emaketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days.

viii. 47; xviii. 37.—^c Chap. viii. 11; xi. 31.—^d Heb. to set the abomination.—^e Or, astonisheth.

smiths. I would refer the whole, says Wintle, to the righteous, who, it is here foretold, should be cleansed by various tribulations and trials; but the like discipline would have no effect on the wicked: see Rev. xxii. 11. Their wickedness would blind their minds, so that they would not understand, nor attend to these predictions, which the wise, that is, the considerate and divinely enlightened, should understand; should be fully instructed in themselves, and so should be able to teach them to others: see Wintle.

Verses 11, 12. And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away—It is here declared, that the whole time that these calamities would last, should run somewhat beyond a time, times, and half a time, namely, thirty days beyond it; for a time, times, and a half, signify only twelve hundred and sixty days, whereas here twelve hundred and ninety is mentioned as the term of duration; for which space of time, but not longer, the daily sacrifice should be taken away, or prohibited, and an idol be placed in the temple. Blessed is he that waiteth, or survives, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days—This period is forty-five days longer than the term last mentioned, or the twelve hundred and ninety days; and, if taken literally, and interpreted of the time of Antiochus's persecution, is supposed to be spoken of the time of his death, when the Jewish nation was not only delivered from their calamities, but also from all fear of their being renewed.

Those who extend these predictions to the times of Popery and Mohammedanism, suppose that the expressions made use of to describe Antiochus's persecutions are here applied to the desolations made by antichrist, of which those made by Antiochus were a figure: see note on chap. viii. 14, and xi. 36. And indeed they are expressions evidently applicable to different events, and have been accomplished at different times. "The setting up of the abomination of desolation," says Bishop Newton, "appears to be a general phrase, and comprehensive of various events. It is applied by the writer of the first book of Maccabees, chap. i. 54, to the profanation of the temple by Antiochus, and his setting up the image of Jupiter Olympus upon the altar of God. It is applied by our Saviour, Matt. xxiv. 15, to the destruction of the city and temple by the Romans, under the conduct of Titus. It may, for the same reason, be applied to the Emperor Adrian's building a temple to Jupiter Capitolinus, in the same place

A. M. 3470. 12 Blessed is he that waiteth, and
B. C. 534. cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days.

^d Verse 9.—⁷ Or, and thou.

13 But ^d go thou thy way till the A. M. 3470.
end ^{be}: ⁷ for ^e thou shalt rest, ^f and B. C. 534.
stand in thy lot at the end of the days.

^e Isa. lvii. 2; Rev. xiv. 13.—^f Psa. i. 5.

where the temple of God had stood; and to the misery of the Jews, and the desolation of Judea that followed. It may, with equal justice, be applied to the Mohammedans' invading and desolating Christendom, and converting the churches into mosques: and this latter event seems to have been particularly intended in this passage. If this interpretation be true, the religion of Mohammed will prevail in the East for the space of twelve hundred and sixty years, and then a great and glorious revolution will follow; perhaps the restoration of the Jews, perhaps the destruction of antichrist: but another still greater and more glorious will succeed; and what can this be so probably as the full conversion of the Gentiles to the church of Christ, and the beginning of the millennium, or the reign of the saints upon earth? For, verse 12, Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days. Here, then, are three different periods assigned, twelve hundred and sixty, twelve hundred and ninety, and thirteen hundred and thirty-five years; but what is the precise time of their beginning, and consequently of their ending, as well as what are the great and signal events which will take place at the end of each period, we can only conjecture, time alone can with certainty discover. It is, indeed, no wonder, that we cannot fully understand and explain these things: for, as the angel said to Daniel himself, though many should run to and fro, should inquire and examine into these things, and thereby knowledge should be increased; yet the full understanding of them is reserved for the time of the end, to which time the words are closed up and sealed. But, however, the great uncertainty of these events, which remain yet to be fulfilled, cannot shake the credit and certainty of those which have already been accomplished.

"Upon the whole, what an amazing prophecy is this! comprehending so many various events, and extending through so many successive ages, from the first establishment of the Persian empire, above five hundred and thirty years before Christ, to the general resurrection! And the farther it extends, and the more it comprehends, the more amazing and the more divine it must appear. What stronger and more convincing proofs can be given or required of a divine providence, and a divine revelation; that there is a God who directs and orders the transactions of the world; and that Daniel was a prophet divinely inspired by him, a man greatly beloved, as he is often addressed by an angel! Our blessed Saviour hath bestowed upon him the appellation of Daniel the prophet, Matt. xxiv. 15, and that is authority sufficient for any Christian; but, in the course of these notes, such instances and attestations of his being a prophet have been produced as an infidel cannot deny, or if he denies cannot disprove. In short, we see how well Daniel deserves the character which his contemporary, Ezekiel, hath given of him, chap. xiv. 14–20, and xxviii. 3, for his piety and wisdom; and these usually go together: for, as the angel says above, verse 10, None of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand. Happy are they who both know the will of God and do it."

Verse 13. But go thou thy way till the end be—The prophet had been making inquiries respecting the end of these wonders; and the angel, having given him all the information that was needful either for himself or future times, now dismisses him, with an encouraging declaration concerning the happiness which awaited him in the heavenly world. Thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of thy days—Daniel was now ninety years of age, at least, and so could not expect to live much longer: and the angel here tells him, that after his life was ended, he should rest in peace with the righteous, namely, with respect to his soul; (compare Isa. lvii. 2; Rev. xiv. 13;) and that at the resurrection, foretold verse 2, of this chapter, he should obtain a share of that inheritance which is reserved for the faithful servants of God, and which shall be actually conferred upon them at the conclusion of the times here specified, verse 12. Observe, reader, our time and days, yea, and all time and days, will soon have an end, and we must every one of us stand in our lot at the end of the days. In the judgment of the great day we must have our allotment according to what we were, and what we did, in the body, and we must stand for ever in that lot. It was a comfort to Daniel, and it is a comfort to all the saints, that whatever their lot is in the days of time, they shall have a happy lot in the end of the days. And it ought to be the great care and concern of every one of us, to secure a happy lot at that period; and then we may well be content with our present lot, whatever it may be, welcoming the will of God, in all things, and at all times.

THE BOOK OF HOSEA.

ARGUMENT.

THE Twelve Prophets, whose prophecies must now come under our consideration, are called the Minor, or Lesser Prophets: not because their writings are of less authority or usefulness than those of the four preceding, but only because they are shorter. Their prophecies, Josephus tells us, were put into one volume, by "the men of the great synagogue," in Ezra's time: of which learned and pious body of men, the last three of these twelve are supposed to have been themselves members. St. Stephen is thought to have referred to this volume, when, quoting a passage from Amos, Acts vii. 42, he says, "As it is written in the book of the prophets." And it is certain that, in the early ages of the Christian Church, both Jews and Christians, in enumerating the canonical books of the Old Testament, reckoned the twelve minor prophets to be one book. They are not arranged, either in the Hebrew or Greek copies, exactly in the order of time in which they lived; for Jonah, who was the oldest of them, is placed the sixth in order in these copies. Archbishop Newcome's arrangement of them, according to the time in which they prophesied, is as follows: Jonah, Amos, Hosea, Micah, Nahum, Joel, Zephaniah, Habakkuk, Obadiah, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi.

Hosea, whose prophecy first claims our attention, began his public ministry in the latter part of the reign of Jeroboam II. king of Israel, about 785 years before Christ, twenty before the Olympiads, and more than forty before the foundation of Rome; and he continued to prophesy till the reign of Hezekiah king of Judah. And since he was of age to choose a wife for himself when he first entered upon his office, he must have lived to extreme old age. If, as many commentators have supposed, he witnessed the accomplishment of the judgment which he denounced upon Samaria and the ten tribes, he must have attained his hundredth year at least. But it is more "probable that he was removed before that event took place. For in all his prophecies the kingdom of Samaria is mentioned, as sentenced indeed to excision; but as yet subsisting, at the time when they were delivered."

"Inasmuch as he reckons the time of his ministry by the succession of the kings of Judah, the learned have been induced to believe that he himself belonged to that kingdom. However this may be, it appears that he took a particular interest in the fortunes of the sister kingdom. For he describes, with much more exactness than any other prophet, the distinct destinies of the two great branches of the chosen people, the different judgments impending on them, and the different manner of their final restoration; and he is particularly pathetic in the exhortations he addresses to the ten tribes. It is a great mistake, however, to suppose that his prophecies are almost wholly against the kingdom of Israel; or that the captivity of the ten tribes is the immediate and principal subject, the destiny of the two tribes being only occasionally introduced. Hosea's principal subject is that which is the principal subject indeed of all the prophets, the guilt of the Jewish nation in general, their disobedient, refractory spirit, the heavy judgments that awaited them, their final conversion to God, their re-establishment in the land of promise, and their restoration to God's favour, and to a condition of the greatest national prosperity, and of high pre-eminence among the nations of the earth, under the immediate protection of Messiah, in the latter ages of the world. He confines himself more closely to this single subject than any other prophet. Comparatively, he seems to care but little about other people. He wanders not, like Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel, into the collateral history of the surrounding heathen nations. He meddles not, like Daniel, with the revolution of the great empires of the world. His own country seems to engross his whole attention; her privileges, her crimes, her punishment, her pardon. He predicts indeed, in the strongest and clearest terms, the ingrafting of the Gentiles into the church of God. But he mentions it only generally; he enters not, like Isaiah, into a minute detail of the business. He alludes to the calling of our Lord from Egypt; to the resurrection on the third day; he touches, but only in general terms, upon the final overthrow of the antichristian army in Palestine, by the immediate interposition of Jehovah; and he celebrates, in the loftiest strains of triumph and exultation, the Saviour's final victory over death and hell. But yet, of all the prophets, he certainly enters the least into the detail of the mysteries of redemption. His country, and his kindred, are the subject next his heart. Their crimes excite his indignation, their sufferings interest his pity, and their future exaltation is the object on which he fixes with delight."—Bishop Horsley. Very similar is the character given of this prophecy by Archbishop Newcome, though in few words: "He chiefly addresses Israel, but introduces frequent mention of Judah. He not only inveighs against the vices of the people, but sharply arraigns the conduct of their kings, princes, and priests. Like many of the Hebrew prophets, he tempers denunciations of God's vengeance against an idolatrous and vicious people with promises of abundant mercies in store for them; and his transitions from one of these subjects to the other are rapid and unexpected."

As to the style of Hosea, it indicates antiquity; it is nervous, acute, concise, strongly marked with the graces of poetry, and retains the sententious brevity of the more ancient prophets whose writings are handed down to us. Though this, doubtless, was at first esteemed a peculiar elegance, yet, in the present devastations of the Hebrew language, it is productive of obscurity; and though the general subject of the prophet be plain enough, yet there is scarce any other so difficult and intricate: see Bishop Lowth's Twenty-first Prelection. "He delights," says another acknowledged critic, "in a style which always becomes obscure when the language of the writer ceases to be a living language. He is commatic, to use St. Jerome's word, that is, concise, more than any other of the prophets. He writes in short, detached, disjointed sentences, not wrought up into periods, in which the connection of one clause with another is made manifest to the reader by an artificial collocation, and by those connective particles which make one discourse of parts which otherwise appear as a string of independent propositions. His transitions from reproof to persuasion, from threatening to promise, from terror to hope, and the contrary, are rapid and unexpected. His similes are brief, accumulated, and often introduced without the particle of similitude. Yet these are not the vices, but the perfections, of the holy prophet's style; for to these circumstances it owes that eagerness and fiery animation which are the characteristic excellence of his writings, and are so peculiarly suited to his subject." The same learned author observes elsewhere, "The style of Hosea is poetical in the very highest degree. In maxim, solemn, sententious, brief; in persuasion, pathetic; in reproof, severe; in its allusions, always beautiful and striking, often sublime; rich in its images; bold in hyperbole; artificial, though perspicuous, in its allegory; possessing, in short, according to the variety of the matter, all the characters by which poetry, in any language, is distinguished from prose. And there cannot be a doubt that the composition was originally in the metrical form. But as the division of the hemistichs [verses] is not preserved in the MSS. nor in any of the versions, I consider the metrical form as lost."—Bishop Horsley. We shall only add to the above, that, with respect to the alleged obscurity of Hosea's style, this may easily be accounted for from the duration of his ministry, which, being prolonged during the reigns of four kings of Judah, must, of course, include a very considerable space of time and a great variety of events, or matters, to which they refer, and we have now only a small volume of his principal prophecies; and these transmitted to us in a continued series, with no marks of distinction as to the times in which they were published, or the subjects of which they treat. There is, therefore, no cause to wonder if, in perusing these prophecies, we sometimes find ourselves in a similar predicament with those who consulted the scattered leaves of the sibyl.

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter, after the title of the book, Hosea, (1.) At the command of God, marries a woman who had been, or afterward became, a harlot, to represent to the Israelites their base and idolatrous apostacy from God, who had espoused them, and taken them into covenant with himself as his people, 2, 3. (2.) By naming her children Jezreel, Lo-ruhamah, and Lo-ammi, he represents God's cutting off the family of Jehu, and his wrathfully punishing the ten tribes of Israel, and casting them out from the covenant relation in which they had stood to him, 4, 6, 8, 9. (3.) He foretells the miraculous deliverance of the Jews from the Assyrians, and the restoration of the Israelites after the captivity under Zerubbabel, and especially in the apostolic and millennial periods under Jesus Christ, 7, 10, 11.

A. M. 3219.
B. C. 785.

THE word of the LORD that came unto Hosea, the son of Beeri, in the days of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and

A. M. 3219.
B. C. 785

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. The word of the Lord that came unto Hosea—The name of the prophet is the same with the original name of Joshua, and signifies a Saviour. The son of Beeri—This was the prophet's surname; for in those days they had their surnames either from their parents, as we have, or from the

places of their abode. Beeri signifies a well. In the days of Uzziah, &c.—"If we suppose," says Archbishop Newcome, "that Hosea prophesied during the course of sixty-six years, and place him from the year 790 before Christ, to the year 724, he will have exercised his office eight years in the reign of Jeroboam the Second, thirty-three years in the

A. M. 3219. in the days of Jeroboam the son of B. C. 785. Joash king of Israel.

2 ¶ The beginning of the word of the LORD by Hosea. And the LORD said to Hosea, ^a Go, reign of Uzziah, the entire reigns of Jotham and Ahaz, and three years in the reign of Hezekiah; but will not have survived the taking of Samaria." It is probable, however, that he begun his ministry as early as the year 785; and therefore that he prophesied at least seventy, if not more, years. The Jews, indeed, suppose him to have prophesied near ninety years, and that he uttered much more than he wrote. If he exercised his office such a number of years, many of the other prophets, as Isaiah, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, and Micah, must have lived and prophesied during his time.

^a So Chap. iñ. 1.

Verse 2. The beginning of the word of the Lord by Hosea—Or, as some render it, to Hosea; phrases however of different import; for to speak to a person, expresses that the discourse was immediately addressed to him. To speak by him, that through him it was addressed to others. And that the speech so addressed to others was not the person's own, but God's; God using him as his organ of speech to the people. This latter is evidently the meaning of the Hebrew phrase here used, which is אל הוֹשֵׁעַ, but בְּהוֹשֵׁעַ, and has been judiciously attended to by our translators, as it was also by the LXX., the Vulgate, the Chaldee, Luther's Latin translation, Calvin's, and Archbishop Newcome's. And the Lord said, Go, take unto thee a wife of whoredoms—Commentators differ much with respect to the meaning of this command. Maimonides, a noted Jewish writer, supposes, that what was enjoined was only to be transacted in a vision; and many learned men, both ancient and modern, have been of his opinion. Archbishop Newcome supposes, that the command refers to the spiritual fornication, or idolatry, of the Israelites: and that its meaning is only, "Go, join thyself in marriage to one of those who have committed fornication against me; and raise up children, who, by the power of example, will themselves swerve to idolatry:" see chap. v. 7. Some others suppose, that God only enjoins the prophet to marry one, who, he foresaw, would afterward be unfaithful to him, and become a harlot. Others again, and persons of great eminence for learning and Biblical knowledge, suppose the command implied, that he was to marry one who actually was at the time, or had been, a harlot. These different opinions, Bishop Horsley, in a preface to his translation of this prophecy, examines at large; and seems to have clearly proved, that the last-mentioned sense of the words is the true one. His train of reasoning on the subject is too long to find a place in these notes; a very short extract is all that can be inserted. "Here two questions arise, upon which expositors have been much divided; 1st. What is the character intended of the woman? What are the fornications by which she is charac-

take unto thee a wife of whoredoms A. M. 3219. and children of whoredoms; for ^b the B. C. 785. land hath committed great whoredom, departing from the LORD.

^b Deut. xxxi. 16; Psa. lxxiii. 27; Jer. ii. 13; Ezek. xxiii. 3.

terized? Are they acts of incontinence, in the literal sense of the word, or something figuratively so called? And, 2d, This guilt of literal or figurative incontinence, was it previous to the woman's marriage with the prophet, or contracted after it? The Hebrew phrase, a wife of fornications, taken literally, certainly describes a prostitute; and children of fornications are the offspring of a promiscuous commerce. Some, however, have thought, that the expression may signify nothing worse 'than a wife taken from among the Israelites, who were remarkable for spiritual fornication, or idolatry.' And that children of fornications may signify children born of such a mother, in such a country, and likely to grow up in the habit of idolatry themselves, by the force of ill example. But the words thus interpreted contain a description only of public manners, without immediate application to the character of any individual; and the command to the prophet will be nothing more than to take a wife. It is evident, that a wife of fornications describes the sort of woman with whom the prophet is required to form the matrimonial connection. It expresses some quality in the woman, actually belonging to the prophet's wife in her individual character. And this quality was no other than gross incontinence, in the literal meaning of the word. The prophet's wife was, by the express declaration of the Spirit, to be the type, or emblem, of the Jewish nation, considered as the wife of God. The sin of the Jewish nation was idolatry, and the Scriptural type of idolatry is carnal fornication; the woman, therefore, to typify the nation, must be guilty of the typical crime; and the only question that remains is, whether the stain upon her character was previous to her connection with the prophet, or afterward? I should much incline to the opinion of Diodati, that the expression may be understood of a woman that was innocent at the time of her marriage, and proved false to the nuptial vow afterward, could I agree to what is alleged in favour of that interpretation by Dr. Wells and Mr. Lowth, that it makes the parallel more exact between God and his blacksliding people, than the contrary supposition of the woman's previous impurity; especially if we make the further supposition, that the prophet had previous warning of his wife's irregularities. But it seems to me, on the contrary, that the prophet's marriage would be a more accurate type of the peculiar connection which God vouchsafed to form between himself and the Israelites, upon the admission of the woman's previous incontinence. God's marriage with Israel was the institution of the Mosaic covenant, at the time of the exodus, Jer. ii. 2; but it is most certain that the Israelites were previously tainted, in a very great degree, with the idolatry of Egypt, Lev. xvii. 7, and xviii. 3; Josh

A. M. 3219. 3 So he went and took Gomer the
B. C. 785. daughter of Diblaim; which conceived, and bare him a son.

° 2 Kings x. 11.

xxiv. 14; and they are repeatedly taxed with this by the prophets, under the image of the incontinence of a young unmarried woman: see Ezek. xxiii. To make the parallel, therefore, exact in every circumstance between the prophet and his wife, God and Israel, the woman should have been addicted to vice before her marriage. The prophet, not ignorant of her numerous criminal intrigues, and of the general levity of her character, should nevertheless offer her marriage, upon condition that she should renounce her follies, and attach herself, with fidelity, to him as her husband; she should accept the unexpected offer, and make the fairest promises, Exod. xix. 8, and xxiv. 3-7; Josh. xxiv. 24. The prophet should complete the marriage contract, (Deut. vii. 6, and xxvi. 17-19,) and take the reformed harlot with a numerous bastard offspring to his own house. There she should bear children to the prophet; (as the ancient Jewish Church, amidst all her corruptions, bore many true sons of God;) but in a little time she should relapse to her former courses, and incur her husband's displeasure, who yet should neither put her to death according to the rigour of the law, nor finally and totally divorce her. Accordingly, I am persuaded, the phrases אִשְׁתִּי נֹנִיָּם, and לְרִי נֹנִיָּם, are to be taken literally, a wife of prostitution, and children of promiscuous intercourse; so taken, and only so taken, they produce the admirable parallel we have described.

"If any one imagines, that the marriage of a prophet with a harlot is something so contrary to moral purity as in no case whatever to be justified; let him recollect the case of Salmon the Just, as he is styled in the Targum upon Ruth, and Rahab the harlot. If that instance will not remove his scruples, he is at liberty to adopt the opinion, which I indeed reject, but many learned expositors have approved, that the whole was a transaction in vision only, or in trance. I reject it, conceiving that whatever was unfit to be really commanded, or really done, was not very fit to be presented, as commanded, or as done, to the imagination of a prophet in his holy trance. Since this, therefore, was fit to be imagined, which is the least that can be granted, it was fit, (in my judgment,) under all the circumstances of the case, to be done. The greatness of the occasion, the importance of the end, as I conceive, justified the command in this extraordinary instance. The command, if it was given, surely sanctified the action: and, upon these grounds, till I can meet with some other exposition, which may render this typical wedding equally significant of the thing to be typified by it in all its circumstances, I am content to take the fact plainly, as it is related, according to the natural import of the words of the narration; especially as this way of taking it will lead to the true meaning of the emblematical act, even if it was commanded

4 And the LORD said unto him, A. M. 3219.
Call his name Jezreel; for yet a little B. C. 785.
while, ° and I will ¹avenge the blood of Jezreel

¹ Heb. visit.

and done only in vision. In taking it as a reality, I have with me the authority, not certainly of the majority, but of some of the most learned and cautious expositors; which I mention, not so much to sustain the truth of the opinion, as to protect myself, in the avowal of it, from injurious imputations."

Verse 3. So he went and took Gomer, &c.—The word Gomer signifies failing, or consuming, (see Psa. xii. 1,) so that the very name of the harlot, whom Hosea took, was symbolical, signifying that the kingdom of Israel would experience a great failing, consumption, or decrease of its people; which indeed it did, through the Assyrian kings' carrying away vast numbers of them, from time to time, into captivity. The daughter of Diblaim—Diblaim signifies heaps of figs; this name, therefore, may be considered as expressing symbolically, that, as some figs are good, others bad, (see Jer. xxiv.,) so there were some good people, although the major part were bad, among the Israelites. Which conceived, and bare him a son—This, it seems, was a legitimate son born to the prophet.

Verse 4. And the Lord said, Call his name Jezreel—This name, compounded of the nouns זֶרַע, seed, and אֵל, God, signifies the seed of God. The names, it must be observed, imposed upon the woman's children by God's direction, sufficiently declare what particular parts of the Jewish nation were severally represented by them. The persons signified by this the prophet's proper son, says Bishop Horsley, "were all those true servants of God, scattered among all the twelve tribes of Israel, who, in the times of the nation's greatest depravity, worshipped the everlasting God in the hope of the Redeemer to come. These were a holy seed, the genuine sons of God, begotten of him to a lively hope, and the early seed of that church which shall at last embrace all the families of the earth. These are Jezreel, typified by the prophet's own son, and rightful heir, as the children of God, and heirs of the promises. For yet a little while—And yet this little was a long while, through God's gracious forbearance. As bad as this people were, they should not perish without warning. Φίλει ο θεος προσημναιεν, God loves to premonish, or forewarn, says the heathen historian, Herodotus. I will avenge the blood—Hebrew, bloods of Jezreel: that is, says Bishop Horsley, "the blood of the holy seed, the faithful servants of God, shed by the idolatrous princes of Jehu's family in persecution, and the blood of the children shed in their horrible rites upon the altars of their idols." It must be observed further here, that this mystical name of the prophet's son, Jezreel, was the name of a city in the tribe of Issachar, and of a valley, or plain, in which the city stood: the city famous for its vineyard, which cost its rightful

A. M. 3219. upon the house of Jehu, ^d and will
B. C. 785. cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel.

^d 2 Kings xv. 10, 12.

5 ° And it shall come to pass at that A. M. 3219.
day, that I will break the bow of B. C. 785.
Israel in the valley of Jezreel.

° 2 Kings xv. 29.

owner Naboth his life; and, by the righteous judgment of God, gave occasion to the downfall of the royal house of Ahab: the plain, one of the finest parts of the whole land of Canaan. As it was here that Jehu shed the blood of Ahab's family with unsparing hand, many modern expositors, "forgetting the prophet's son, have thought of nothing in this passage but the place, the city or the plain." And by the blood of Jezreel, which God here threatens to avenge upon the house of Jehu, they have understood the blood of Ahab's posterity; because though, in shedding that blood, Jehu executed the judgment which God had denounced by Elijah against the house of Ahab, for the cruel murder of Naboth; yet, in doing that, he acted from a principle of ambition and cruelty, without any regard to God's glory, whose worship he forsook, maintaining in the country the idolatry which Jeroboam had first set up. Upon this exposition, Bishop Horsley remarks as follows: "It is true, that when the purposes of God are accomplished by the hand of man, the very same act may be just and good as it proceeds from God, and makes a part of the scheme of providence, and criminal in the highest degree as it is performed by the man, who is the immediate agent. The man may act from sinful motives of his own, without any consideration, or knowledge, of the end to which God directs the action. In many cases the man may be incited, by enmity to God and the true religion, to the very act in which he accomplishes God's secret, or even revealed purpose. The man, therefore, may justly incur wrath and punishment for those very deeds in which, with much evil intention of his own, he is the instrument of God's good providence. But these distinctions will not apply to the case of Jehu, in such manner as to solve the difficulty arising from this interpretation of the text. Jehu was specially commissioned by a prophet to smite the house of Ahab his master, to avenge the blood of the prophets, and the blood of all the servants of Jehovah, at the hand of Jezebel, 2 Kings ix. 7. And however the general corruption of human nature, and the recorded imperfections of Jehu's character, might give room to suspect, that in the excision of Ahab's family, and of the whole faction of Baal's worshippers, he might be instigated by motives of private ambition, and by a cruel, sanguinary disposition, the fact appears from the history to have been otherwise; that he acted, through the whole business, with a conscientious regard to God's commands, and a zeal for his service, insomuch that, when the work was completed, he received the express approbation of God; and the continuance of the sceptre of Israel in his family, to the fourth generation, was promised as the reward of this good and accepted service: see 2 Kings x. 30. And it cannot be conceived, that the very same deed, which was commanded, approved, and rewarded in Jehu, who performed it, should be punished as a crime in Jehu's posterity, who had no share in the transaction. For these reasons, I am persuaded that Jezreel is to be taken in this passage in its mystical meaning; and is to be understood of the persons typified by the prophet's son—the holy seed—the true servants and worshippers of God. It is threatened that their blood is to be visited upon the house of Jehu, by which it had been shed. The princes descended from Jehu were all idolaters; and idolaters have always been persecutors of the true religion. In all ages, and in all countries, they have persecuted the Jezreel unto death, whenever they have had the power of doing it. The blood of Jezreel, therefore, which was to be visited on the house of Jehu, was the blood of God's servants, shed in persecution, and of infants shed upon the altars of their idols, by the idolatrous princes of the line of Jehu. And so the expression was understood by St. Jerome and by Luther." This threatening, denounced against the house of Jehu, was executed in the days of his great-grandson, the son of Jeroboam II., during whose reign Hosea received this prophecy from the Lord. For Zechariah, as we find 2 Kings xv. 10, was killed by a conspiracy of Shallum, who made himself king in his stead; and, no doubt, many of his kindred, who were of the house of Jehu, were slain with him. And will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel.—In the family of Jehu. Or rather, this is a prophecy of the destruction of the whole kingdom of Israel, which was in a declining condition from the death of Jeroboam, and the history of which, from the usurpation of Shallum, is little else than an account of conspiracies, murders, and usurpations, till it was entirely subverted by the Assyrians; and the people were carried captives into Assyria, and were dispersed through the various provinces of that empire.

Verse 5. And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break, &c.—This entire abolition of the kingdom of the ten tribes shall take effect at the time when I break the bow, &c. Here the breaking of the bow in the valley of Jezreel is the event that marks the date; and to that date, so marked, the threatened excision of the kingdom of the ten tribes is referred. And it was of moment to give the people warning, that the advantages, which the enemy would gain over them in that part of the country, would end in the utter subversion of the kingdom. For had this timely warning produced repentance and reformation, the judgment, no doubt, would have been averted. St. Jerome says, the Israelites were overthrown by the Assyrians, in a pitched battle, in the plain of Jezreel. But of any such battle we have no mention in history, sacred or profane. But Tiglath-pileser took several of the principal

A. M. 3219. 6 ¶ And she conceived again and
B. C. 785. bare a daughter. And God said unto him, Call her name ²Lo-ruhamah: ¹for ³I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel; ⁴but I will utterly take them away.
7 ¶ But I will have mercy upon the house

²That is, Not having obtained mercy.—¹2 Kings xvii. 6, 23.
³Heb. I will not add any more to.

cities in that plain, in the reign of Pekah. And afterward in the reign of Hoshea, Samaria was taken by Shalmaneser, after a siege of three years; and this put an end to the kingdom of the ten tribes. And the taking of these cities successively, and, at last, of the capital itself, was a breaking of the bow of Israel, a demolition of the whole military strength of the kingdom, in the valley of Jezreel, where all those cities were situated. For the breaking of a bow was a natural image for the overthrow of military strength in general, at a time when the bow was one of the principal weapons. "Although the valley of Jezreel is here to be understood literally of the tract of country so named, yet perhaps there is an indirect allusion to the mystical import of the name. This being the finest spot of the whole land of promise, the name, the vale of Jezreel, describes it as the property of the holy seed, by whom it is at last to be possessed. So that, in the very terms of the denunciation against the kingdom of Israel, an oblique promise is contained, of the restoration of the converted Israelites. The Israel which possessed it, in the time of this prophecy, were not the rightful owners of the soil. It is part of the domain of the Jezreel, the seed of God, for whom it is reserved."—Bishop Horsley.

Verse 6. And she conceived again—It has been observed, that the children which the prophet's wife bore represent certain distinct parts, or descriptions, of the Jewish nation, of the whole of which the mother was the emblem. Of her three children here mentioned, the eldest and the youngest were sons, the intermediate child was a daughter. "The eldest," says Bishop Horsley, "I think, was the prophet's son; but the last two were both bastards. In this I have the concurrence of Dr. Wells, acutely remarking, that whereas it is said, verse 3, that the prophet's wife conceived and bare a son to him, it is said of the other two children, only that she conceived and bare them; implying that the children she then bare, not being born, like the first, to the prophet, were not begotten by him." Now, as the name imposed, by God's direction, upon the eldest child, the prophet's own son, typified the true children of God, and heirs of the promises among the Israelites; so the two bastard children, the bishop thinks, typified those parts of the Jewish people that were not Jezreel, or the seed of God. The first of these, the daughter, whose sex was the emblem of weakness, was called Lo-ruhamah, which signifies, unbeloved, or unpitied, or, as it is in the margin, in conformity with all the ancient visions, not having obtained mercy. "This daughter typified the people of Judah, and will save them by the LORD their God, and ^hwill not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen.

8 ¶ Now when she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, and bare a son.

⁴Or, that I should altogether pardon them.—²2 Kings xix. 35.
^hZech. iv. 6; ix. 10.

of the ten tribes, in the enfeebled state of their declining monarchy, torn by their intestine commotions and perpetual revolutions, harassed by powerful invaders, empoverished by their tyrannical exactions, and condemned by the just sentence of God to utter excision as a distinct kingdom, without hope of restoration: for so the type is explained by God himself," declaring, I will utterly take them away—That is, I will cause them to be carried into captivity, never to return again in a body; and will utterly put an end to them, considered as a kingdom, or people distinct from Judah.

Verse 7. But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah—Including Benjamin, and such of the Levites as adhered to God's law and worship, and as many of the other tribes as renounced the calves, Baal, and all idolatrous worship, and worshipped God alone as he required. On Judah, including all these, God had mercy in various respects, in which he had not mercy on Israel, prolonging that kingdom 132 years after Israel ceased to be a kingdom, preserving them from the combined powers of the king of Syria and the king of Israel, who united to destroy them, raising them up to greatness and glory in the reign of Hezekiah, in whose days the house of Judah was saved, by a wonderful miracle, from the power of Sennacherib the Assyrian king. Add to this, that Judah's captivity was only for seventy years, whereas Israel's continues to this day; Judah was restored to their own land, but Israel was not. By this, as the prophet would debase the pride of Israel, so possibly he intended to direct the well-disposed among them whither to go to find mercy. And will save them by the Lord their God, and not by bow, nor by sword, &c.—"These expressions," Bishop Horsley thinks, "are too magnificent to be understood of any thing but the final rescue of the Jews from the power of antichrist in the latter ages, by the incarnate God destroying the enemy with the brightness of his coming, (2 Thess. ii. 8,) of which the destruction of Sennacherib's army in the days of Hezekiah might be a type, but it was nothing more."

Verse 8. Now when she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, &c.—The last child is a son, and the daughter was weaned before the woman conceived him. "A child, when it is weaned," says St. Jerome, "leaves the mother; is not nourished with the parent's milk; is sustained with extraneous aliments." "This aptly represents the condition of the ten tribes, expelled from their own country, dispersed in foreign lands, no longer nourished with the spiritual food of divine truth by the ministry of the prophets,

A. M. 3219. 9 Then said God, Call his name
B. C. 785. ⁵ Lo-ammi: for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God.

10 ¶ Yet ¹ the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered; ² and it shall come to pass, that ³ in the place where it was said unto them, ⁴ Ye are not my

⁵ That is, Not my people.—¹ Gen. xxxii. 12; Rom. ix. 27, 28.
² Rom. ix. 25, 26; 1 Pet. ii. 10.—³ Or, instead of that.

and destitute of any better guide than natural reason and heathen philosophy. The deportation of the ten tribes, by which they were reduced to this miserable condition, and deprived of what remained to them, in their worst state, of the spiritual privileges of the chosen race, was, in St. Jerome's notion of the prophecy, the weaning of Lo-ruhamah. The child, conceived after Lo-ruhamah was thus weaned, must typify the people of the kingdom of Judah, in the subsequent periods of their history. Or rather, his child typifies the whole nation of the children of Israel, reduced, in its external form, by the captivity of the ten tribes, to that single kingdom. The sex represents a considerable degree of national strength and vigour, remaining in this branch of the Jewish people, very different from the exhausted state of the other kingdom previous to its fall. Nor have the two tribes ever suffered so total an excision. The ten were absolutely lost in the world soon after their captivity. They have been nowhere to be found for many ages, and know not where to find themselves; though we are assured they will be found of God, in the day when he shall make up his jewels. But the people of Judah have never ceased totally to be. In captivity at Babylon they lived a separate race, respected by their conquerors. From that captivity they returned. They became an opulent and powerful state; formidable at times to the rival powers of Syria and Egypt; and held in no small consideration by the Roman people, and the first emperors of Rome. And even in their present state of ruin and degradation, without territory, and without a polity of their own, such is the masculine strength of suffering with which they are endued, they are still extant in the world as a separate race, but not as God's people, otherwise than as they are reserved for signal mercy. God grant it may be in no very distant period! But at present they are Lo-ammi, not my people. And so they have actually been more than seventeen centuries and a half; and to this condition they were condemned, when this prophecy was delivered. That these are typified by the child Lo-ammi, appears from the application of that name, in the tenth verse, to the children of Israel generally; whence it seems to follow, that the degenerate people of Judah were implicated in the threatenings contained in the former part of the chapter. But in those threatenings they cannot be implicated, unless they are typified in some one, or more, of the typical children. But people, there it shall be said unto A. M. 3219 them, Ye are ^m the sons of the B. C. 785. living God.

11 ⁿ Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together, and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land: for great shall be the day of Jezreel.

¹ Chapter ii. 23.—^m John i. 12; 1 John iii. 1.—ⁿ Isa. xi. 12, 13; Jer. iii. 18; Ezek. xxxiv. 23; xxxvii. 16-24.

they are not typified in Jezreel; for the Jezreel is no object of wrath or threatening: not in Lo-ruhamah; for Lo-ruhamah typifies the kingdom of the ten tribes exclusively: of necessity, therefore, in Lo-ammi.—Bishop Horsley.

Verse 10. Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea—Though God casts off the ten tribes, yet he will, in due time, supply their loss, by bringing in great numbers of true Israelites into the church, not only of the Jews, but also of the Gentiles, and making them, who before were strangers to the covenants of promise, fellow-heirs with the Jews, Rom. ix. 25, 26; 1 Pet. ii. 10. "I think," says Bishop Horsley, "this is to be understood of the mystical Israel; their numbers, consisting of myriads of converts, both of the natural Israel, and their adopted brethren of the Gentiles, shall be immeasurably great." And in the place where it was said, Ye are not my people, &c.—"That is, at Jerusalem, or at least in Judea, where this prophecy was delivered, and where the execution of the sentence took place: there, in that very place, they, to whom it was said, Ye are no people of mine, shall be called, the sons of the living God. This must relate, at least principally, to the natural Israel of the house of Judah; for to them it was said, Ye are no people of mine. And since they are to be acknowledged again as the children of the living God, in the same place where this sentence was pronounced and executed, the prophecy clearly promises their restoration to their own land."

Verse 11. Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together—When the fulness of the Gentiles is come in, this will be a means of converting the Jews, and bringing them into the church. And when converts of the house of Judah shall have obtained a resettlement in the holy land, then a general conversion shall take place of the race of Judah, and the race of the ten tribes. They shall unite in one confession, and in one polity; and appoint themselves one head—The Lord Christ, called David their king, (chap. iii. 5,) shall become the chief and head of his church, composed of Judah and Israel, of Jews and Gentiles. This head is indeed appointed and set up over the church by God, Ps. ii. 6; Eph. i. 22. But the saints are said to appoint Christ their head, when they choose him and embrace him for their sovereign; when, with the highest estimation, most vigorous affections, and utmost endeavours of unfeigned obedience, they set him up in their hearts, and serve him in their lives, giving him the pre-eminence in all things. And they shall come up out of the land, &c.—That is, from all parts of the earth, to Jerusalem, there to join in the same way of worship (as once the twelve tribes did, before the schism under Jeroboam) with the Christian Church, and so proceed on the way to the kingdom of heaven. Jerusalem being situated upon an eminence, and in the heart of a mountainous region, which rose greatly above the general level of the country to a great distance on all sides, the sacred writers always speak of persons going to Jerusalem, as going up. For great shall be the day of Jezreel—That is, of the seed of God: see note on verse 4. “Great and happy shall be the day, when the holy seed of both branches of the natural Israel shall be publicly acknowledged of their God, united under one head, their King Messiah, and restored to the possession of the promised land, and to a situation of high pre-eminence among the kingdoms of the earth.”

It must be observed here, that although this is an express prophecy of the final conversion and restoration of the Jews, it contains also a manifest allusion to the call of the Gentiles. For, “the word Jezreel, though applied in this passage to the devout part of the natural Israel, by its etymology is capable of a larger meaning, comprehending all, of every race and nation, who, by the preaching of the gospel, are made members of Christ, and the children of God. All these are a seed of God, begotten of him by the Spirit to a holy life, and to the inheritance of immortality. The words Ammi and Ruhamah, (my people and beloved), and their opposites, Lo-ammi and Lo-ruhamah, (not my people and not beloved), are capable of the same extension; the two former to comprehend the converted, the two latter the unconverted, Gentiles. In this extent they seem to be used chap. ii. 23, which appears to be a prophecy of the call of the Gentiles, with manifest allusion to the restoration of the Jews.” Accordingly we find these prophecies of Hosea cited by St. Paul, to prove the indiscriminate call to salvation both of Gentiles and Jews. He affirms, that God has called us [that is, Christians] vessels of mercy afore prepared unto glory, ἡ μὲν ἐξ Ἰουδαίων ἅλλα καὶ ἐξ ἐθνῶν, not of the Jews only, but moreover of the Gentiles too, Rom. ix. 24.” “The allusion which is made to these prophecies by St. Peter, in his first epistle, (chap. ii. 10,) is not properly a citation of any part of them, but merely an accommodation of the expressions, not my people, my people, not having obtained mercy, having obtained mercy, to the case of the Hebrews of the Asiatic dispersion, before and after their conversion.” Bishop Horsley, who adds, “it is surprising that the return of Judah from the Babylonian captivity should ever have been considered, by any Christian divine, as the principal object of this prophecy, and an event in which it has received its full accomplishment. The fact is, that this prophecy has no relation to the return from Babylon in a single circumstance. What was the number of the returned captives, that it should be compared to that of the sands upon the sea-shore? The number of the returned, in comparison of the whole captivity, was nothing. And how was Zorobabel (under whom the Jews returned from Babylon) one head of the rest of Israel, as well as of Judah? To interpret the prophecy in this manner is to make it little better than a paltry quibble; more worthy of the Delphic tripod, than of the Scripture of truth.” Very judicious, upon this subject, are the remarks of the learned Houbigant “The prophet, in the tenth verse, passes from threatenings to promises, which is the manner of the prophets, that the Jews might not think that, after the accomplishment of the threatenings, God would concern himself no more about their nation. Those promises seem to respect the final condition of the Jews, when they should collect under one head, the Messiah; that it might properly be said of them, Ye are children of the living God. It is difficult to accommodate the words of this passage to the return from the Babylonian captivity. Those Jews, who returned from Babylon, were not so much as one-hundredth part of the whole Jewish race; so little were they to be compared with the sands of the sea: nor did they appoint themselves one head. Zorobabel was indeed their leader, but not their single leader; and their form of government henceforward was not monarchical, but an aristocracy. Nor had they kings till the very last, when they were become unworthy to be called children of the living God.”

CHAPTER II.

In this chapter, (1.) God charges the Israelites with their idolatries, their forgetfulness of him, and their obligations to him, 1, 2, 5, 8. (2.) He threatens to take from them that abundance of outward mercies wherewith they had served their idols, and to abandon them to certain ruin, 3-7, 9-13. But, (3.) He promises, at last, to return to them in mercy, after they should be gathered from their dispersions, 14; to cure them of their wonted idolatry and wickedness, 7, 16, 17; and, for their complete safety, to render them his people, and make them share the blessings of his covenant, 18-20, 23; and bestow upon them all necessary benefits and comforts, temporal and spiritual, 15, 21, 22.

A. M. 3220.
B. C. 784.

SAY ye unto your brethren, ¹ Ami ;
and to your sisters, ² Ruhamah.

2 Plead with your mother, plead ; for ^a she is not my wife, neither am I her husband : let her therefore put away her ^b whoredoms out of her sight, and her adulteries from between her breasts ;

3 Lest ^c I strip her naked, and set her as in the day that she was ^d born, and make her ^e as a wilderness, and set her like a dry ^f land, and slay her with ^g thirst. A. M. 3220

B. C. 784.

4 And I will not have mercy upon her children ; for they be the ^h children of whoredoms.

5 ⁱ For their mother hath played the harlot :
she that conceived them hath done shamefully :
for she said, I will go after my lovers, ^j that give me my bread and my water, my wool and my flax, mine oil and my ^k drink.

¹ That is, My people.—² That is, having obtained mercy.
^a Isa. i. 1.—^b Ezek. xvi. 25.—^c Jer. xlii. 22, 26 ; Ezek. xvi.
37, 39.—^d Ezek. xvi. 4.

^e Ezekiel xix. 13.—^f Amos viii. 11. 13.—^g John viii. 41.
^h Isa. i. 21 ; Jer. iii. 1, 6, 8, 9 ; Ezek. xvi. 15, 16.—ⁱ Verses
8, 12 ; Jer. xlii. 17.—^j Heb. drinks.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verses 1, 2. Say to your brethren—Many interpreters consider this verse as being connected with the preceding chapter, thus: When that general
restoration of the Jewish nation shall take place,
you may change your language in speaking to those of your brethren and sisters whom I had before disowned, and you may call them Ammi, my people, and Ruhamah, she that hath obtained mercy. The prophet alludes to the 6th and 9th verses of the preceding chapter. Other expositors, however, with more apparent reason, consider this verse as connected with the following words, and translate it
thus: "Ye that are my people, and have obtained mercy, speak to your brethren and sisters, and plead
with your mother," &c. "Although the Israelites, in the days of Hosea, were in general corrupt, and addicted to idolatry ; yet there were among them,
in the worst times, some who had not bowed the knee
to Baal. These were always Ammi and Ruhamah ; God's own people, and a darling daughter. God commissions these faithful few to admonish the inhabitants of the land in general, of the dreadful judgments that would be brought upon them by the gross idolatry of the Jewish Church and nation ;"
and to reprove, and use their best endeavours to reform that general corruption which the nation had contracted by its idolatry ; whereby the people had broken the covenant God had made with them, and had caused a separation, or divorce, between him
and them. Let her therefore put away her whore- doms, &c.—Let her leave off her idolatries. These are often expressed in the Scriptures by the fondness
and caresses which pass between unchaste lovers.

Verse 3. Lest I strip her naked, &c.—The punishment frequently inflicted upon harlots was, to strip them naked and expose them to the world. The punishment of adulteresses among the Germans is thus described by Tacitus, "Accisis crinibus nuda- tam coram propinguis expellit domo maritus." Or the allusion may be to the ignominy which brutal conquerors sometimes inflicted on the captives they took in war, by stripping them of their clothing and causing them to travel in that condition, exposed to the inclemency of the weather, and, which was yet
worse, to the intolerable heat of the sun: see note on Isaiah iii. 17. Thus God threatens to deal with the Israelites: to deliver them into the hands of their enemies, and carry them away naked into captivity, (see verse 9,) in as forlorn and desolate a condition as they were in during their bondage in Egypt. And make her as a wilderness—A state of captivity is fitly compared to being placed in a wilderness, in want of common necessities: compare Ezek. xix.

13. "It may seem harsh," says Bishop Horsley,
"to say of a woman that she shall be laid waste like a wilderness, and reduced to the condition of a parched land. But it is to be observed that the allegorical style makes an intercommunity of attributes between the type and the thing typified. So that when a woman is the image of a country or of a church, that may be said of a woman, which, in unfigured language, might be said of the country, or the church, which she represents. The country might literally be made a waste wilderness, by un-fruitful seasons, by the devastations of war, or of noxious vermin: a church is made a wilderness and a parched land, when the living waters of the Spirit are withheld."

Verses 4, 5. And I will not have mercy on her children, &c.—As an injured husband has no regard for the children which his wife has had by another man ; so neither will I have pity on thy children which are trained up to practise thy idolatries. For they be the children of whoredoms—Spurious children, not knowing their father: so those might fitly be called who worshipped a plurality of gods ; for
by worshipping a multiplicity of them, they declared plainly, that they did not know to whom their worship was due, or who was their Creator or original Father. For their mother hath played the harlot—
This proves the truth of the above charge, and justifies the severity of the punishment. She that con- ceived them hath done shamefully—Hath acted like an impudent and shameless harlot, sinning openly and avowedly. She said, I will go after my lovers
—By lovers here, are meant, first, The idols, with whom the Israelites committed spiritual adultery:
see Jer. iii. 1 ; and then the idolatrous nations, whose alliance the Israelites courted, and, in order thereto, practised their idolatries: the word may be understood here in both senses ; for they ascribed all the plenty they enjoyed chiefly to the favour of the idol-gods which they worshipped, Jer. xlii. 17 ; and then they placed their trust and confidence in the confederacies they had made with their neighbour-

A. M. 3220. 6 Therefore, behold, ^k I will hedge
B. C. 784.

up thy way with thorns, and ^l make a wall, that she shall not find her paths.

7 And she shall follow after her lovers, but she shall not overtake them; and she shall seek them, but shall not find them: then shall she say, ¹ I will go and return to my ^m first husband; for then was it better with me than now.

8 For she did not ⁿ know that ^o I gave her corn, and ^p wine, and oil, and multiplied her silver and gold, ^q which they prepared for Baal.

^k Job iii. 23; xix. 8; Lam. iii. 7, 9.—^l Heb. wall a wall.
¹ Chap. v. 15; Luke xv. 18.—^m Ezek. xvi. 8.—ⁿ Isaiah i. 3.
^o Ezek. xvi. 17, 18, 19.—^p Heb. new wine.—^q Or, wherewith

ing idolaters; and thought the peace and plenty they possessed were very much owing to their alliance and protection.

Verses 6, 7. Therefore I will hedge up thy way with thorns, &c.—That is, with difficulties and distresses; and make a wall—Hebrew, גדרה, a stone fence. I will effectually block up her way, and surround her with great calamities. That she shall not find her paths—That she shall not know which way to turn to extricate herself from them. And she shall follow after her lovers—She shall seek for help of her idols, and her idolatrous allies, but shall receive none. Or, as Archbishop Newcome paraphrases the words, “For some time she shall remain addicted to her Egyptian and Syrian idols, and to all her former idolatrous and immoral practices: but without carrying her evil wishes into execution.” She shall seek them, but not find them—A proverbial expression denoting lost labour. She shall seek for favour and succour at her lovers’ hands, but all in vain, they shall all forsake her, and change their ancient love into mortal hatred. “It is the usual practice of the devil and his instruments,” says an old writer, “to bring men into the briars and thorns, and there to leave them to shift as they can. Thus the Pharisees dealt by Judas; What is that to us, say they, see thou to that: they left him when they had led him to his ruin.” God deals very differently with his people. As in very faithfulness he afflicts them, that he may be true to their best interests: so when they follow hard after him, and seek him as David did, they are sure to find him; if they search for him with all their heart, Jer. xxix. 13. When they meet with disappointments it is in mercy, and they are chastened of the Lord, that they may not be condemned with the world. Then shall she say, I will return to my first husband, &c.—Her afflictions will bring her to a sense of her duty, and of the happiness she enjoyed as long as she cleaved steadfastly unto Jehovah the true God.

Verses 8, 9. For she did not know—Or, as Bishop Horsley renders it, But she would not know, that I gave her corn, &c.—She did not, or would not consider that all the necessities she enjoyed, as well as her riches and ornaments, were my gifts, which yet she ungratefully employed in the service of her

9 Therefore will I return, and ^p take away my corn in the time thereof, and my wine in the season thereof, and will ^r recover my wool and my flax given to cover her nakedness.

10 And now ^a will I discover her ^b lewdness in the sight of her lovers, and none shall deliver her out of my hand.

11 ^c I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her ^d feast-days, her new-moons, and her sabbaths, and all her solemn feasts.

they made Baal, Chap. viii. 4.—^p Verse 3.—^r Or, take away.
^a Ezek. xvi. 37; xxiii. 29.—^b Heb. folly, or, villany.—^c Amos viii. 10.—^d 1 Kings xii. 32; Amos viii. 5.

idols, and in making images of false gods to worship instead of me. Therefore—Or, for the punishment of her ingratitude; will I take away my corn in the time thereof—I will change my manner of acting toward her, and deprive her of the good things she hopes infallibly to enjoy. At the time when she expects to reap the fruits of the earth, her enemies shall invade her and destroy them, or unfavourable seasons shall entirely blast them, or other causes prevent her enjoying them; and will recover my wool and my flax—Will take back again the proper materials I gave for clothing her. This verse, according to Bishop Horsley, speaks “of calamities already begun, and the next describes the progress and increase of them. It appears from all the prophets, and particularly from Amos and Joel, that the beginning of judgment upon this refractory, rebellious people, was in unfruitful seasons, and noxious vermin, producing a failure of the crops, dearth, murrain of the cattle, famine, and pestilential diseases.”

Verses 10, 11. And now will I discover her lewdness, &c.—The folly and wickedness of her idolatries shall appear by the punishments which I will inflict upon her, which shall be so remarkable that they shall be taken notice of by the idolatrous nations round about her, which have pretended a friendship for her, and promised her great assistance and prosperity if she would worship the same gods that they worshipped; but neither they nor any of their false gods shall save her from the calamities I will bring upon her. And I will cause all her mirth to cease—The mirth and jollity of Israel were greatly damped when Tiglath-pileser took Ijon and other cities, and subdued Gilead and Galilee, and all the land of Naphtali, and carried the people away captive to Assyria, which he did but a few years after this prophecy was uttered. And surely all their joy must have ceased about ten or twelve years after, when Samaria was taken, and Hosea and all Israel made captives. Her feast-days, her new-moons, &c.—Though apostate Israel was fallen to idolatry, and had renounced the true worship of God, yet by this verse it appears they retained many of the rites and ceremonies that were used in Judah, or else they set up others like them. But God here threatens,

A. M. 3220. 12 And I will ⁹destroy her vines, and her fig-trees, ¹⁰whereof she hath said, These are my rewards that my lovers have given me: and ¹¹I will make them a forest, and the beasts of the field shall eat them.

13 And I will visit upon her the days of Baalim, wherein she burned incense to them, and she ¹²decked herself with her ear-rings and her jewels, and she went after her lovers, and forgot me, saith the LORD. A. M. 3220. B. C. 784.

⁹ Heb. make desolate.—¹⁰ Verse 5.—¹¹ Psa. lxxx. 12, 13; Isa. v. 5.—¹² Ezek. xxiii. 40, 42.—¹³ Ezek. xx. 35.

14 ¶ Therefore, behold, I will allure her, and ¹⁵bring her into the wilderness, and speak ¹⁶comfortably ¹⁷unto her.

15 And I will give her her vineyards from thence, and ¹⁸the valley of Achor for a door of hope: and she shall sing there, as in ¹⁹the days that in their captivity they should have no opportunity to celebrate them.

¹⁰ Or, friendly.—¹¹ Heb. to her heart.—¹² Josh. vii. 26; Isa. lxx. 10.—¹³ Jer. ii. 2; Ezek. xvi. 8, 22, 60.

Verses 12, 13. And I will destroy her vines—Those blessings, or fruits of the earth, which she has attributed to her false gods, I will give to the beasts of the field to eat, making the whole land only a wilderness for beasts. Among other objects of their false worship, the Israelites worshipped the celestial luminaries, and, it is likely, attributed the fruits of the earth to them, as self-sufficient, or producing them by their own power, and not as mere instruments in the hands of Jehovah. And I will visit upon her the days of Baalim—I will punish her for all the idolatries she has committed from the days of Jeroboam, who first set up the worship of false gods: see chap. xiii. 1. The chief god of every country was called by the name of Baal, which means lord: so Baal-peor was the god of the Moabites, Baal-zebub was the god of Ekron, (2 Kings i. 2,) Baal-berith the god of the Phenicians, Judges viii. 33. These several deities are in the plural number called Baalim, lords; for they had lords many, 1 Cor. viii. 5. And she decked herself with her ear-rings—She put on the richest ornaments on their idolatrous festivals.

Verses 14, 15. Therefore, behold, I will allure her—As there is a plain alteration of the style here from threatenings to promises, so the first word of this verse should be translated nevertheless, or notwithstanding. And bring her into the wilderness—Or, after I have brought her into the wilderness. The state of the Jews in captivity is elsewhere expressed by a wilderness state: see note on Ezek. xx. 35. It probably means here the dispersion of the ten tribes, after their first captivity by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xvii. 6. And speak comfortably to her—In these words, and the preceding, I will allure her, there is an allusion to the practice of fond husbands, who, forgetting past offences, use all the arts of endearment to persuade their wives, who have parted from them, to return to them again. So God will use the most powerful persuasions to bring the Israelites to the acknowledgment of the truth, notwithstanding all their former abuses of the means of grace. The Hebrew here, דברתי על לבה, is literally, I will speak to her heart, that is, speak what shall touch her heart, in her outcast state in the wilderness of the Gentile world, by the proffers of mercy in the gospel. “For the doctrine of the gospel,” says Luther on this place, “is the true soothing speech, with which the minds of men are taken. For it terrifies not the soul, like the law, with severe denunciations of punishment; but although it reproves sin, it declares that God is ready to pardon sinners for the sake of his Son; and holds forth the sacrifice of the Son of God that the souls of sinners may be assured that satisfaction has been made by that to God.” And I will give her her vineyards from thence—Or, from that time, as the word אשר may be rendered: then I will restore her vineyards and fruitful fields which I had taken from her, verse 12: or, from that place; or, in consequence of these things; in which senses also the original word is used. God declares that from and through the wilderness lies the road to a rich, fruitful country; that is, that the calamities of the dispersion, together with the soothing intimations of the gospel, by bringing the Jewish race to a right mind, will be the means of reinstating them in that wealth and prosperity which God hath ordained for them in their own land. And the valley of Achor—Or, of trouble, or tribulation, as the Hebrew word Achor signifies; for a door of hope—The passage alludes to “the vale near Jericho, where the Israelites, first setting foot within the holy land, were thrown into trouble and consternation by the daring theft of Achan. In memory of which, and of the tragical scene exhibited in that spot, in the execution of the sacrilegious peculator and his whole family, the place was called the vale of Achor, Josh. vii. And this vale of Achor, though a scene of trouble and distress, was a door of hope to the Israelites under Joshua; for there, immediately after the execution of Achan, God said to Joshua, Fear not, neither be thou dismayed, (chap. viii. 1,) and promised to support him against Ai, her king, and her people. And from this time Joshua drove on his conquests with uninterrupted success. In like manner the tribulations of the Jews, in their present dispersion, shall open to them the door of hope.” And there—That is, in the wilderness, and in the vale of tribulation, under those circumstances of present difficulty, mixed with cheering hope; she shall sing as in the days of her youth—She shall express her joy in God, as her forefathers did after their deliverance at the Red sea; when God espoused them for his peculiar people, and entered into a covenant with them at mount Sinai, where they solemnly promised an entire obedience to him. And, or rather, even, as in the day when she came up out of the land of Egypt—“This perpetual allusion to the exodus,” or coming out of Egypt, “to the cir-

A. M. 3220. of her youth, and ^bas in the day
B. C. 784. when she came up out of the land of Egypt.

16 And it shall be at that day, saith the LORD, that thou shalt call me ¹²Ishi; and shalt call me no more ¹³Baali.

17 For ^o I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth, and they shall no more be remembered by their name.

18 And in that day will I make a ^dcovenant for them with the beasts of the field, and with

^b Exod. xv. 1.—¹² That is, My husband.—¹³ That is, My lord.—^c Exodus xxiii. 13; Joshua xxiii. 7; Psalm xvi. 4; Zechariah xiii. 2.

cumstances of the march through the wilderness, and the first entrance into the holy land, plainly points the prophecy to a similar deliverance, by the immediate power of God, under that leader, of whom Moses was a type.—Horsley.

Verses 16, 17. And at that day thou shalt call me Ishi, &c.—Ishi, my husband, is an appellation of love; Baali, my lord, of subjection and fear. God hath not given his people, whom he justifies, accepts, and betroths to himself in righteousness, the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind, 2 Tim. i. 7. As the words ישׁי, ishi, and באלי, baali, in this verse, (both applicable to a husband, although in different views, the former signifying a husband simply, the latter a husband under the idea of a lord, or master;) are manifestly appellatives, and not proper names, they certainly ought to have been translated as appellatives; that is, the clause should have been rendered, Thou shalt call me my husband, thou shalt no more call me my lord, or master. Thus Houbigant, who adds, by way of explication, “because thou shalt love me, and serve me through affection, and not through fear.” For I will take away the names of Baalim—That is, Baals; out of her mouth—The Jews were forbidden to mention the names of the heathen idols, Exod. xxiii. 13; Josh. xxiii. 7; and therefore the name Baal, though capable of a good sense, as it signifies husband, or lord, must be avoided by them, because it was also the name of false gods, lest by using it they should be led into idolatry. And they shall be no more remembered—Or mentioned, as the Hebrew may be translated; by their name—“It is in vain,” says Bishop Horsley, “to look for a purity of religious worship, answerable to this prophecy, among the Jews returned from the Babylonian captivity. This part of the prophecy, with all the rest, will receive its accomplishment in the converted race in the latter days. It is said, indeed, that, after the return from Babylon, the Jews scrupulously avoided idolatry, and have continued untainted with it to this day. But, generally, as this is asserted by all commentators, one after another, it is not true. Among the restored Jews there was, indeed, no public idolatry, patronized by the government, as there had been in years before the captivity, particularly the fowls of heaven, and with the ^{A. M. 3220.} creeping things of the ground: and ^{B. C. 784.}

^o I will break the bow and the sword and the battle out of the earth, and I will make them to ^flie down safely.

19 And I will betroth thee unto me for ever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in loving-kindness, and in mercies.

20 I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness: and ^gthou shalt know the LORD.

^d Job v. 23; Isa. xi. 6-9; Ezek. xxxiv. 25.—^e Psa. xlv. 9; Isa. ii. 4; Ezek. xxxix. 9, 10; Zech. ix. 10.—^f Lev. xxvi. 5; Jer. xxiii. 6.—^g Jer. xxxi. 33, 34; John xvii. 3.

in the reign of Ahaz. But from the time of Antiochus Epiphanes to the last moments of the Jewish polity, there was a numerous and powerful faction, which in every thing affected the Greek manners; and this Hellenizing party were idolaters to a man. The Jews of the present times, as far as we are acquainted with them, seem indeed to be free from the charge of idolatry, properly so called. But of the present state of the ten tribes we have no certain knowledge; without which we cannot take upon us either to accuse or to acquit them.”

Verse 18. And in that day will I make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field, &c.—That is, a covenant of security from the evils which, in the days of my vengeance, arose from beasts, and birds of prey, and venomous creatures. Or the words may be understood figuratively, of the final conversion of the most ignorant and vicious of the heathen to the true faith; the effect of which will be, that they shall live in peace and friendship with the re-established nation of the Jews. In this sense the passage is understood by Bishop Horsley. And I will break the bow, &c.—I will cause that there shall be no more wars, either foreign or domestic. A universal peace, and freedom from all enemies, is mentioned by the prophets, as a concomitant of that flourishing state of the church which shall commence at the restoration of the Jews, and the coming in of the Gentiles: see Isa. xi. 6, 7. And will make them to lie down safely—Being gathered under the wings of my protection, they shall repose themselves upon my power and providence, committing themselves to my care in well doing. Observe, reader, all true and solid security, all real peace, whether inward or outward, flows from God's favour.

Verses 19, 20. I will betroth thee unto me for ever—I will treat thee, who hast been a harlot, like a wife, if hereafter thou become faithful to me. Yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, &c.—Bishop Horsley translates these verses thus: To myself, I say, I will betroth thee with justice, and with righteousness, and with exuberant kindness and with tender love. With faithfulness to myself, I say, I will betroth thee, and thou shalt know the Jehovah. The passage, it seems, may be paraphrased as follows: I will betroth, or take, thee unto me in a

A. M. 3220. 21 And it shall come to pass in that
B. C. 784. day, ^h I will hear, saith the LORD, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the
earth;

22 And the earth shall hear the corn, and the wine, and the oil; ⁱ and they shall hear Jezreel.

^h Zechariah viii. 12.—ⁱ Chapter i. 4.—^k Jeremiah xxxi. 27;
Zechariah x. 9.

way that shall display, or make manifest, my righteousness, or the regard I have to justice and holiness, my beneficence, or inclination to make my creatures happy, my mercy in forgiving offences committed against me, and my faithfulness in fulfilling my promises, and verifying my declarations. And thou shalt know the Lord—Experience the exuberant goodness of Jehovah; shalt find that he is and wilt be a gracious Lord to thee. One especial part of the new covenant consists in imparting to the faithful a more perfect knowledge of God as a sin-pardoning God, and of his will and their own duty: see Jer. xxxi. 31–34.

Verses 21, 22. I will hear the heavens—When they ask, as it were, to send their rain on the earth. And they shall hear the earth—When it supplicates, as it were, for rain. The earth shall hear the corn and the wine, &c.—When they wish, as it were, to supply the wants of man. And they shall hear Jezreel—All nature shall hear, and minister to, the people whom God shall restore to their own land. The Hebrew word, however, here rendered to hear, Dr. Waterland more properly renders to answer, thus: I will answer the heavens, and they shall answer the earth, &c. In other words, all creatures shall answer the desires and wants of my people: the heavens shall answer the wants of the earth, in sending down seasonable showers: and the earth shall answer the wants of mankind, in bringing forth corn, and wine, and other necessities of life: and the fruits of the earth shall answer the wishes of my restored people, by giving them due nourishment: see the same sense more plainly expressed, Zech. viii. 12. Bishop Horsley reads, I will perform my part, saith Jehovah, upon the heavens; and they shall perform their part upon the earth; and the earth shall perform her part upon the corn, &c.; and they shall perform their parts for the Jezreel [the seed of God.] “The primary and most proper meaning,” says he, “of the verb ענה, [rendered to hear,] I take to be to react. But more largely it predicates reciprocal, correspondent, or correlate action. Thus it signifies the proper action of one thing upon another, according to established physical sympathies in the material world; or, among intelligent beings, according to the rule of moral order.

23 And ^k I will sow her unto me in ^{A. M. 3220.}
the earth; ^{B. C. 784.} ^l and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I ^m will say to them which were not my people,
Thou art my people; and they shall say,
Thou art my God.

^l Chapter i. 6.—^m Chapter i. 10; Zech. xiii. 9; Rom. ix. 26;
1 Peter ii. 10.

And in this passage it is applied first to the action of God upon the powers of nature; and then to the subordinate action of the parts of nature upon one another; and, last of all, to the subservience of the elements, and their physical productions, to the benefit of man; and ultimately, by the direction of God's overruling providence, to the exclusive benefit of the godly.” The gradation of the prophet in the passage is very elegant, and admirably denotes the concert, the harmony, the intelligence, which shall be between all parts of the universe, co-operating for the good of God's people, who shall then no more see the heaven of iron and of brass withholding its dew and its rain; nor the earth burned up by the sun, unable to nourish the plants, nor the fruits denied the succour of the earth, nor men deprived of their necessary aliments. The words probably allude also to the spiritual blessings of the Christian Church.

Verse 23. And I will sow—Or plant, her unto me in the earth, &c.—The original word, rendered sow, or plant, alludes to and explains the word Jezreel, or seed of God, as used chap. i. 4, 11, and here in the foregoing verse. The prophet foretels a plentiful increase of true believers, like to that of corn sown in the earth; and represents the converted Jews as being the seed from which an abundant harvest of Gentile converts should arise. “The myriads of the natural Israel,” says Bishop Horsley, “converted by the preaching of the apostles, were the first seed of the universal church. And there is reason to believe, that the restoration of the converted Jews will be the occasion and means of a prodigious influx of new converts from the Gentiles in the latter ages, Rom. xi. 12, 15. Thus the Jezreel of the natural Israel, from the first have been, and to the last will prove, a seed sown of God for himself in the earth.” I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy—I will have mercy both on the Jews and Gentiles, who shall obey the gospel call, and become true converts to the Christian faith. This was in part fulfilled at the first preaching of the gospel, whether in Judea or in other countries: see Rom. ix. 24–26. But it shall receive a more perfect completion at the restoration of the Jews, and the coming in of the fulness of the Gentiles: compare chap. i. 10, 11.

CHAPTER III.

In this chapter we have, (1.) Another type of the spiritual whoredom of Israel, 1–3. (2.) The punishment of it, 4. (3.) Then reformation, 5.

A. M. 3221. B. C. 783. THEN said the LORD unto me, ^a Go yet, love a woman beloved of her ^b friend, yet an adulteress, according to the love of the LORD toward the children of Israel, who look to other gods, and love flagons ¹ of wine.

^a Chap. i. 2.—^b Jer. iii. 20.—¹ Heb. of grapes.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verse 1. Then said the Lord unto me, Go yet, love a woman—This is the literal meaning of the Hebrew עָדָה אִשָּׁה לִי, and is the sense in which it is understood by the LXX., who read, εἰ πορευθήτω, καὶ ἀγαπήσων γυναικα; and by the Vulgate, which renders it, Adhuc vade et dilige mulierem. A different woman from the person whom he had espoused before seems evidently to be intended. Thus St. Jerome and St. Cyril of Alexandria understand the words, considering the connection here spoken of as a new one, formed after the dismission of Gomer; in which opinion they are followed by Estius, Menochius, Tirinus, and many other expositors. The injunction, Archbishop Newcome supposes, was given after the death of Hosea's former wife. But if not, it was undoubtedly given after she was divorced for her unfaithfulness to her husband; in consequence of which, according to the law, he could not take her back again. Beloved of her friend—That is, her husband. But the LXX. render the words, ἀγαπῶσαν πονηρά, loving evil things; a reading which accords with that of the Arabic and Syriac, and is approved both by Archbishop Newcome and Bishop Horsley; the former of whom renders the clause, A lover of evil, and the latter, addicted to wickedness, observing, "I adopt the rendering of the LXX. and Syriac, which nothing opposes but the Masoretic pointing." And an adulteress—That is, who had been such, and that not only in the spiritual sense, of forsaking God, but according to the carnal meaning of the term. According to the love of the Lord toward the children of Israel—After the manner of Jehovah's love for the children of Israel, who look to other gods, or, although they look to other gods, and are addicted to goblets of wine. So Bishop Horsley, who observes, that "children of Israel, and house of Israel", are two distinct expressions, to be differently understood. The house of Israel, and sometimes Israel by itself, is a particular appellation of the ten tribes, a distinct kingdom from Judah. But the children of Israel, is a general appellation for the whole race of the Israelites, comprehending both kingdoms. Indeed it was the only general appellation, before the captivity of the ten tribes; afterward, the kingdom of Judah only remaining, Jews came into use as the name of the whole race, which before had been the appropriate name of the kingdom of Judah. It occurs, for the first time 2 Kings xvi., in the history of Ahaz. It is true, we read in Hosea, chap. i. 11, of the children of Judah, and the children of Israel; but this is only an honourable mention of Judah, as the principal tribe, not as a distinct kingdom. And the true exposition of the expression is, 'the children of Ju-

2 So I bought her to me for fifteen ^{A. M. 3221} ^{B. C. 783.} pieces of silver, and for a homer of barley, and a ² half homer of barley:

3 And I said unto her, Thou shalt ^c abide for me many days; thou shalt not play the harlot,

² Heb. lethech.—^c Deut. xxi. 13.

dah, and all the rest of the children of Israel.' We find Judah thus particularly mentioned, as a principal part of the people, before the kingdoms were separated: see 2 Sam. xxiv. 1; 1 Kings iv. 20, 25. And yet, at that time, Israel was the general name, 1 Kings iv. 1.⁷ The expression, And love flagons of wine, implies, that they loved to drink wine in the temples of their idols. They were wont to pour out wine to their false gods, and, it is probable, drank the remainder even to excess. The festivity, or rather dissoluteness, which was used by the heathen in the worship of their gods, seems to have been one principal thing that made the Israelites so fond of their rites of worship. Some think that the words, rendered here flagons, or goblets of wine, should be translated cakes of dried grapes. The expression, according to the love of the Lord, &c., means, Let this be an emblem of my love to the children of Israel; or, By this I intend to let Israel know how I have loved them, and what returns they have made for my love. How great and constant my love has been to them, and how inconstant and insincere theirs has been to me. The words seem, in general, to express their leaving the service of the true God, and imitating the idolaters, in following after false gods, bodily delights and pleasures, as gluttony, drunkenness, and the like, which the service of idols did not only permit, but require.

Verse 2. So I bought her to me for fifteen pieces of silver—That is, according to the ancient custom, I paid her dowry. It was usual among the Hebrews for men to purchase, or pay a consideration for, their wives, either by money or labour; thus Jacob agreed to serve Laban seven years for Rachael. And for a homer of barley, &c.—Sir John Chardin observed in the East, that, in their contracts for temporary wives, there is always the formality of a measure of corn mentioned, over and above the stipulated sum of money.—Harmer, vol. ii. 513. The low price at which the prophet purchased this woman, was significant how base and of little value the Israelites were, since their apostacy from the worship of God to idolatry. Or, according to Calvin, "the parsimonious gift, a sum of money which was but half the price of a female slave, and a pittance of black barley bread, typified the hard fare which the Israelites were to expect at the hand of God in their state of exile."

Verse 3. And I said, Thou shalt abide for me many days—The Vulgate renders this, Dies multos expectabis me, non fornicaberis, Thou shalt wait for me many days; thou shalt not commit fornication. The meaning is, that she should remain in a state of separation from the prophet, and every other man, sequestered and solitary, for many days, that

A. M. 3221. and thou shalt not be for another
B. C. 783. man : so will I also be for thee.

4 For the children of Israel shall A. M. 3221 abide many days ^d without a king, B. C. 783.

^d Chapter x. 3 ; Song of the three children, verse 15.

there might be proof of her reformation. Thou shalt not be for another man, so will I also be for thee—As there is nothing in the Hebrew for the word another, so the sentence may be more accurately translated thus, Thou shalt not have a husband, neither will I have thee, namely, for a wife. Bishop Horsley renders it, And thou shalt not have to do with a husband, neither will I with thee; that is, thou shalt continue for some time in a state of widowhood, or without commerce with man. The Hebrew phrase here used, לֹא תִהְיוּ לְאִשׁ, properly means, Thou shalt not have a husband, and is so rendered by our interpreters, Ezek. xlv. 25. And to the same sense, without the negative particle, Ruth i. 12. Thus the LXX. render it, οὐδε μὴ γυνή αὐτοῦ; (compare Rom. vii. 3;) and so also the Vulgate, et non eris viro. By these conditions, which the prophet makes with the woman whom he takes, that she should humble herself and not go after other men, as formerly, but remain separate from every man, must be meant, with respect to Israel, that though God should separate himself from them for a long time, and humble them by reducing them to a low condition, and restraining them from their idolatry and former luxury; yet he would not so utterly reject them, but that he would, in due time, upon their conversion, again receive them. This was intended, 1st, To be an emblem of the state of the Jews during the Babylonish captivity; when snatched, as it were by force, from the objects of their impure love, they continued in their exile equally separated from their God and their idols; but with this difference, that their God retained toward them sentiments of affection, expecting on their part true repentance. And, 2d, “The condition of the woman, restrained from licentious courses, owned as a wife, but without conjugal rites, admirably represents also the present state of the Jews, manifestly owned as a peculiar people, withheld from idolatry, but as yet without access to God, through the Saviour.”—Horsley.

Verse 4. For the children of Israel shall abide many days—Here begins a more plain and full explication of the symbolical action of the prophet, namely, that it signified what should befall the children of Israel; that they should continue many days in a state of captivity; without a king, as the woman continued without a husband; without the means of worshipping God according to the rites of their law; and yet refraining from idolatry, as the woman refrained from unfaithfulness to her betrothed husband. And this prediction was remarkably fulfilled upon the ten tribes, when made captives by Shalmaneser, (compare chap. ix. 4,) and upon the two remaining tribes, after the destruction of their temple and commonwealth by Nebuchadnezzar, and during their captivity in Babylon. This prophecy has also been fulfilled upon the whole nation of the Jews, from the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus unto this day. From that time, they have had no republic, or civil government of their own; but have lived everywhere like so many exiles, only upon sufferance; they have had neither priest nor sacrifice, their temple being destroyed where only they were to offer sacrifices: and yet the want of a place where to perform the most solemn parts of their public worship, does not tempt them to idolatry, or make them fond of image-worship, or any such idolatrous practice, which was the epidemical sin of their forefathers. This seems the general import of this remarkable prophecy; but the several expressions must be more particularly explained. Without a king—Namely of their own; and without a prince—Without any civil magistrate of their own with supreme authority. And without a sacrifice—Deprived of the means of offering the typical sacrifices of the law, and having, as yet, no share in the true sacrifice of Christ. And without an image—Or, as the LXX. and Vulgate read, without an altar. The Hebrew word, מִצְבָּה, here rendered image, seems properly to signify those pillars, which, in the patriarchal ages, were erected to the honour of God, and used as altars. Thus we read, Gen. xxviii. 18, that Jacob, after the divine vision he had had, took the stone that he had put for his pillow, and set it up for a pillar, (Hebrew, מִצְבָּה, the same word which is used here,) and poured oil upon the top of it; that is, he made an altar of it to pour out a libation upon it, as a token of gratitude for the vision with which he had been favoured, and to ratify, in a solemn manner, his resolution of serving Jehovah. And again, Gen. xxxv. 14, we find the same word rendered pillar twice, and used in the same sense. And without an ephod—The ephod being one principal part of the high-priest's garments of consecration and of service, the saying here, that the children of Israel should be without an ephod, seems to signify, that they should be without a high-priest to minister in the priest's office. And without teraphim—Those interpreters who suppose that the different words here used denote the several ways of lawful worship practised among God's ancient people, and the means they used of inquiring after the will of God, understand the word teraphim here as signifying the same with the Urim and Thummim, or the oracle placed in the breast-plate of the high-priest; which they think is fitly joined with the ephod, that being often put for the whole priestly habit, and used when there was occasion of consulting God by the high-priest: see 1 Sam. xxiii. 9, and xxx. 7. This interpretation is followed by the LXX., and it makes an easy and natural sense of the text, namely, that God would deprive the Jews of the principal offices, for the enjoyment of which they chiefly valued themselves, namely, that of the priesthood, and that of prophecy. The Jews had no succession of prophets, for a con-

A. M. 3221. and without a prince, and without
B. C. 733. a sacrifice, and without ³an image, and without an ^eephod, and without ^fteraphim:

³ Heb. a standing, or, statue, or, pillar, Isa. xix. 19.—^e Exod. xxviii. 6.—^f Judg. xvii. 5.—^g Jer. l. 4, 5; Chap. v. 6.—^h Jer.

siderable time before Christ's coming; and both kingdom and priesthood were taken away, within forty years after Christ's death.

The word teraphim, however, evidently signifies images, Gen. xxxi. 34, and, it seems, is used of idol-images, Judg. xvii. 5; and some commentators of great note understand it in the same sense here, and indeed interpret also the two preceding expressions as intended of the worship of idols. Thus Archbishop Newcome, "My opinion is, that the teraphim were objects of idolatrous worship; and such, in their state of captivity, the Israelites would not harbour." Thus also Bishop Horsley, "After much consideration of this passage, and of much that has been written upon it by expositors, I rest in the opinion strenuously maintained by the learned Pocock, in which he agrees with many that went before him, and has the concurrence of many that came after, Luther, Calvin, Vatablus, Drusius, Houbigant, and Archbishop Newcome, with many others of inferior note; I rest, I say, in the opinion, that statue, ephod, and teraphim, are mentioned as principal implements of idolatrous rites. And the sum of this 4th verse is this; that for many ages the Jews would not be their own masters; would be deprived of the exercise of their own religion, in its most essential parts; not embracing the Christian, they would have no share in the true service; and yet would be restrained from idolatry, to which their forefathers had been so prone." As a confirmation of this interpretation, the bishop observes, that this 4th verse is the exposition of the type of the prophet's conduct toward his wife; and that, if the restriction of the Jews from idolatry is not mentioned, we have nothing in the exposition answering to that article, Thou shalt not play the harlot." "This is surely a most astonishing prophecy of events directly contrary to all human probability; yet undeniably taking place, not on a particular occasion, or for a short time, but through very many

5 Afterward shall the children of Is- A. M. 3221.
rael return, and ^gseek the LORD their B. C. 733.
God, and ^hDavid their king; and shall fear
the LORD and his goodness in the ⁱlatter days.

xxx. 9; Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24; xxxvii. 22, 24.—ⁱ Isaiah ii. 2; Jer. xxx. 24; Ezek. xxxviii. 8, 16; Dan. ii. 28; Mic. iv. 1.

revolving centuries. How could Hosea have foreseen this, had not God inspired him? And does not this demonstrate the divine inspiration of this prophecy?"—Scott.

Verse 5. Afterward shall the children of Israel return—When they have lived a long time in this state, without any country or government of their own, without any temple or place of worship, and without the liberty and proper means for offering sacrifices; they shall be touched with a true remorse for their former errors, and weary of this forlorn and desolate condition, shall bethink themselves of Jehovah the true God, and shall seek unto him by prayer and supplication. And shall seek David their king—That is, the son of David, the Messiah, often called David by the prophets, as being not only descended from David, but the person in whom all the promises made to David were to receive their full and final accomplishment: see the margin. So the Chaldee paraphrase expounds this and the parallel texts. David was also a type of the Messiah, and therefore the latter is called by the name of David. Thus John the Baptist is called Elias, Mal. iv. 5, because he was to resemble him, and to succeed him in his office of reproving the people, and calling them to repentance. The expression cannot be literally understood here, David himself having been dead long before the uttering of this prophecy. And shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days—That is, they shall reverence the Lord, stand in awe of him, and fear to offend him, and shall put their trust in and be grateful for his goodness, manifested in their redemption, their illumination by the gospel, their conversion to God, and their restoration to their own land; and hence they shall yield an entire obedience to him, shall worship and serve him in spirit and in truth, and live to his glory. And this will come to pass in the latter days, or times, of the world: see notes on Isa. ii. 2; Dan. ii. 44.

CHAPTER IV.

In this chapter the prophet shows the numerous sins of the Israelites, and the judgments wherewith God would punish them.
1-19.

A. M. 3224. HEAR the word of the LORD, ye
B. C. 780. children of Israel: for the LORD

^a Isa. i. 18; iii. 13, 14; Jer.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verse 1. Hear the word of the Lord, ye children of Israel—"The prophet here begins a third dis-hath a ^acontroversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is A. M. 3224.

B. C. 780.

xxv. 31; Chap. xii. 2; Mic. vi. 2.

course, which is manifestly distinct from the preceding, both as to matter and manner. He was before predicting what should happen in future

A. M. 3224. no truth, nor mercy, nor ^b knowledge
B. C. 780. of God in the land.

2 By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and ¹ blood toucheth blood.

3 Therefore, ^c shall the land mourn, and ^d every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven; yea, the fishes of the sea A. M. 3224.

also shall be taken away. B. C. 780.

4 Yet let no man strive, nor reprove another: for thy people are as they ^e that strive with the priest.

5 Therefore shalt thou fall ^f in the day, and the prophet also shall fall with thee in the night, and I will ² destroy thy mother.

^b Jer. iv. 22; v. 4.—¹ Heb. bloods.—^c Jer. iv. 28; xii. 4; Amos v. 16; viii. 8.

^d Zeph. i. 3.—^e Deut. xvii. 12.—^f Jeremiah vi. 4, 5; xv. 8.
² Heb. cut off.

times, by way of prophetic vision; here he re-proves those of the present time for such sins as then reigned among them; such as provoked God to send on them and their posterity the judgments foretold in the former chapter." He seems to be addressing chiefly the Israelites of the ten tribes, though not exclusively, his reproofs and exhortations being so formed and expressed as to suit the case of the Jews also. For the Lord hath a controversy, &c.—Hebrew, רִיב, a cause, contention, or matter of debate. The LXX. render the word, κρισις, judgment, or dispute; and so the Vulgate. The expression is taken from the actions, or pleas, which one man brings against another, for injuries or damages received: so here God is represented as entering into judgment, or bringing a-plea, or complaint, against the people of the ten tribes, for their injustice and other sins, as being so many injuries to his honour, for which he demands satisfaction. The other prophets bring the same charges against this people, as we find from their writings. Because there is no truth, &c.—No faithfulness in their minds, words, or works; they cover falsehood with fair words, till they can conveniently execute their designed frauds. It appears they had no sense of moral honesty; made no conscience of what they said or did, though never so contrary to uprightness, and injurious to their neighbours. Much less had they any sense of mercy, or of the obligation they were under to help the indigent and necessitous. There was neither compassion nor beneficence among them; they neither pitied nor relieved any. Nor knowledge of God in the land—Here we have the cause of their want of integrity and benevolence: they had not the true and saving knowledge of God, they were neither acquainted with him, nor with his will, and their own duty: hence they were destitute of true piety, and therefore also of true virtue.

Verse 2. By swearing—False swearing seems to be here chiefly intended, which is here, as it is also elsewhere, joined with lying and stealing; because, in the Jewish courts of justice, men that were suspected of theft were obliged to purge themselves by an oath; and they often ventured to forswear themselves, rather than discover the truth. The Hebrew word, אָלָה, here used, is rendered apa by the LXX., that is, execration, imprecation, or cursing, as Bishop Horsley renders it. Profane swearing, however, or taking the name of God in vain, is doubtless included. The next word, כָּזָב, rendered lying, means falsehood in general: and especially, as some think, the denying of deposits which had been left in their hands, and which, when the owners came to claim them, they absolutely denied having received. And killing, committing murders, either privately or with open violence. They break out—Hebrew, פָּרָצוּ, they burst out, or overflow, a metaphor taken from rivers breaking their banks, and bearing down every obstacle by the impetuosity of their waters. The meaning is, There is an inundation of all manner of wickedness, and all law and equity is broken through and violated. And blood toucheth blood—One murder follows upon another, and many are committed in all parts of the country, and as it were, in a constant series and succession. This was probably spoken with an especial reference to the murder of their kings by those who aspired to succeed them; as Zechariah by Shallum, Shallum by Menahem, Pekah by Pekahiah and Hoshea. In such civil broils a great many of their friends and dependants are commonly slain with the kings themselves.

Verse 3. Therefore shall the land mourn—"Desolation, drought, and dearth shall come upon the whole land; shall consume both men, and beasts, and fowls, and shall even extend itself to the inhabitants of the waters." A land is said, in Scripture language, to mourn, when it is deprived of its inhabitants, or lies desolate. A great part of the land of Israel was made thus desolate by Tiglath-pileser, and the rest by Shalmaneser. There may also be a reference to the drought foretold by Amos, chap. i. 2, or to the locusts, mentioned chap. v. 7. Every one that dwelleth therein shall languish—If any one remain therein, he shall languish for want of the proper necessaries of life. With the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven—Even the beasts and birds shall pine away with want; not only the fruits of the earth, but the herbs and grass also, being eaten up or spoiled by the enemies' armies. Yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away—The fishes of the rivers and great waters, called seas in the Hebrew language, shall be killed through drought, or so diminished that they shall not supply the wants of this rebellious people: see Zeph. i. 3.

Verses 4, 5. Yet let no man strive, nor reprove another—Bishop Horsley translates this clause, By

A. M. 3224. 6 ¶ "My people are ³destroyed for
B. C. 780. lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee,

§ Isaiah v. 13.

no means let any one expostulate, nor let any one reprove; adding, by way of paraphrase, "For all expostulation and reproof will be lost upon this people, such are their stubbornness and obstinacy. For my people are as they that strive (Are exactly like those who will contend, Horsley) with the priest—" "To contend with the priest, the authorized interpreter of the law, and the typical intercessor between God and the people, was the highest species of contumacy and disobedience, and by the law was a capital offence, Deut. xvii. 12. God tells the prophet that contumacy and perverseness, even in this degree, were become the general character of the people; that the national obstinacy, and contempt of the remonstrances and reproofs of the prophets, were such as might be compared with the stubbornness of an individual who, at the peril of his life, would arraign and disobey the judicial decisions of God's priests." In other words, that there was no modesty, nor fear of God or man, left among them, but they would contend with their teachers, reprovers, and counsellors. The LXX. translate this clause, Ο δε λαος μν ως αντιλογουμενος ιερειν, My people are as a gainsaying priest, that is, as Houbigant interprets it, they follow the rebellion of the priest: or, are as wicked as those priests who infamously desert the service of God for that of idols. Pocock on the place quotes a MS. Arabic version, which considers the words as declarative, and translates them accordingly; a sense which is approved by Archbishop Newcome, who renders the verse, Yet no man contendeth, and no man reproveth; and as is the provocation of the priest, so is that of my people. While every kind of wickedness abounded, and crimes of all sorts were openly committed from one end of the land to the other, there was no person, either prophet, priest, or magistrate, who protested against such vices, or steadily opposed them. Therefore shalt thou fall—The last sentence was addressed to the prophet, "Thy people, O prophet;" this to the people themselves, "Thou, O stubborn people." This sudden conversion of the speech of the principal speaker, from one to another of the different persons of the scene, is frequent in the prophets. In the day—Not for want of light to see thy way; but in the full daylight of divine instruction thou shalt fall. Even at the rising of that light which is for the lighting of every man that cometh into the world. In this daytime, when our Lord himself visited them, the Jews made their last false step, and fell. Thou shalt fall when it is least probable; when thou thinkest thy state most secure and prosperous. And the prophet also, &c., in the night—"In the night of ignorance, which shall close thy day, the prophet shall fall with thee; that is, the order of prophets among you shall

that thou shalt be no priest to me: A. M. 3224.
seeing thou hast forgotten the law of B. C. 780.
thy God, I will also forget thy children.

³ Heb. cut off.

cease." Thus Bishop Horsley, who understands the words as spoken of true prophets. But it seems more probable that they are intended of false prophets, and that the meaning is, that their revelations, to which they pretended in the night, or in the darkness of ignorance and error, should be delusive and dangerous ones. Or, the people were to fall by day, the prophets by night, because the ruin of the latter would be the consequence of the ruin of the former: the prophets would then fall after the people, when the people, being destroyed, it should appear that the prophets had spoken falsely by predicting prosperity. And I will destroy thy mother—That is, the mother city, the metropolis. So Capellus, Houbigant, and Archbishop Newcome. If the prophet be considered as addressing the ten tribes only, Samaria is meant; but if he addressed the children of Israel in general, then Jerusalem must be intended: which city, and not Samaria, was the metropolis of the whole nation.

Verse 6. My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge—The ignorance of the nature, necessity, and excellence of true religion, which prevailed among the Jews and Israelites, was one principal cause of those sins which drew down such heavy judgments upon them. Because thou hast rejected knowledge—That is, wouldest not use the means of knowledge which thou hadst. "But this lack of knowledge in the people was, in a great measure, owing to the want of that constant instruction which they ought to have received from the priests. The mention of it, therefore, occasions a sudden transition from general threatenings to particular denunciations against the priesthood." I will also reject thee—The high-priest for the time being, as the representative of the whole order, seems to be here addressed; that thou shalt be no priest to me—"Since the person threatened was to be rejected from being a priest, he was priest at the time when he was threatened; otherwise he had not been a subject of rejection. The person threatened therefore must have been the head, for the time being, of the true Levitical priesthood, not of the intruded priesthood of Jeroboam. This is a proof, that the metropolis, threatened with excision is Jerusalem, not Samaria, and that the ten tribes exclusively are not the subject of this part of the prophecy."—Bishop Horsley. Seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God—Hast neither desired nor endeavoured to understand, or retain it in thy mind, nor to transmit the knowledge and remembrance of it to posterity. I will also forget thy children—Thy offspring, or the people whose priest thou art, and of whom thou oughtest to have taken a fatherly care; I will not look upon them any longer as the seed of Abraham, and children of my covenant.

A. M. 3224. 7^b As they were increased, so they
B. C. 780. sinned against me: ¹ therefore will
I change their glory into shame.

8 They eat up the sin of my people, and they
⁴ set their heart on their iniquity.

9 And there shall be, ^k like people, like priest:
and I will ⁵ punish them for their ways, and ⁶ reward them their doings.

10 For ¹ they shall eat and not have enough:

they shall commit whoredom, and A. M. 3224.
shall not increase: because they have B. C. 780.
left off to take heed to the LORD.

11 Whoredom and wine and new wine ^m take away the heart.

12 ¶ My people ask counsel at their ⁿ stocks,
and their staff declareth unto them: for ^o the spirit of whoredoms hath caused them to err, and they have gone a whoring from under their God.

^b Chapter xiii. 6.—¹ Samuel ii. 30; Malachi ii. 9; Phil.
iii. 19.—⁴ Heb. lift up their soul to their iniquity.—^k Isaiah
xv. 2; Jeremiah v. 31.—⁵ Heb. visit upon.

⁶ Heb. cause to return.—¹ Lev. xxvi. 26; Mic. vi. 14; Hag.
i. 6.—^m Isa. xxviii. 7; Eccles. vii. 7.—ⁿ Jer. ii. 27; Hab.
ii. 19.—^o Isa. xlv. 20; Chap. v. 4.

Verse 7. As they were increased, so they sinned
—Or, The more they were increased, the more they sinned against me—The greater the favours were which I heaped upon them, and the more I multiplied them, the more presumptuously they sinned against me: see chap. xiii. 6. Instead of, as they were increased, Bishop Horsley reads, In propor- tion as they were magnified, (a translation the Hebrew word, כָּרַנִּים, will well bear,) “the priesthood,” he observes, “among the Jews was, by God’s appointment, a situation of the highest rank and authority; and the complaint is, that, in proportion as they were raised in dignity and power above the rest of the people, they surpassed them in impiety.”
Therefore will I change their glory into shame—Therefore I will divest them of all those glories for which they pride themselves, and lead them away
in a poor and miserable condition into captivity.

Verses 8–11. They eat up the sin of my people—
These priests, mentioned verse 6, live upon the sin-offerings of the people; and are so far from restrain-ing them, that they take delight in seeing them commit iniquity, because the more they sin, the greater is the number of their sin-offerings, which are the priests’ portions. Bishop Horsley translates the verse, “Every one of them, while they eat the sin-offerings of my people, sets his own heart upon the crime;” that is, while they exercise the sacred function of the priesthood, and claim its highest privileges, their own hearts are set upon the prevailing idolatry. And there shall be, like people, like priest
—“The people’s sins deserve to be punished with such priests; and such priests have helped to make the people thus wicked.”—Bishop Hall. Or, rather, the sense is, It shall be, as with the people, so with the priest; that is, as they are alike in sinning, so shall they be alike in punishment, which shall be correspondent to their crimes. For they shall eat
and not have enough—Or, not be satisfied, as the word, יִשְׂבֵּעַ, is elsewhere translated. The expression may signify, either that their food should not afford due nourishment, for want of God’s blessing, or that they should be afflicted with a famine or scarcity, so that they should not have food enough to satisfy their craving appetites. The contrary phrase,
To eat and be full, or satisfied, denotes plenty.
They shall commit whoredoms, &c., and not increase

—Though they think to multiply by taking a plurality of wives, or concubines, yet in this they shall find their expectations disappointed. Because they have left off to take heed to the Lord—Here the reason is given why they should eat and not have enough, &c., namely, because they had apostatized
from the love and service of God; for how ready so ever we may be to attribute every thing to the operation of natural causes, yet the Scriptures always speak of God’s co-operation with them as necessary
in order to the producing of their desired effects.
Whoredom and wine, &c., take away the heart—Deprive men of their judgment, and darken their understandings. So a gift is said to destroy the heart, Eccles. vii. 7, that is, to bereave men of the use of their discerning faculties.

Verse 12. My people ask counsel at their stocks— Hebrew, בָּעֵצִי, at their wood, that is, the images of their idols made of wood; these they consulted as oracles, that they might foretel to them what was to come, or give them advice, what measures to take.
And their staff declares unto them—They seek to know things by means of rods, by which they think they can divine. This refers to a kind of divination by rods or staves, which was anciently practised in the East, of which different accounts are given by ancient writers. Some say, the person consulting measured his staff by spans, or by the length of his finger, saying as he measured it, “I will go, or I will not go; I will do such a thing, or I will not do it;”
and as the last span fell out so he determined.
Others, however, as Cyril and Theophylact, give a different account of the matter, and say, it was performed by erecting two sticks, after which they muttered forth a certain charm, and then according
as the sticks fell backward or forward, to the right or left, they gave advice in any affair. The same kind of divination seems to be intended with that used by the Chaldeans, concerning which see the note on Ezek. xxi. 21. For the spirit of whoredoms
hath caused them to err—For their fondness for idolatry hath caused them to fall into all these absurd errors, through the example of the idolatrous nations whom they loved to imitate. They have gone a whoring from their God—They have left their God,
the true God, and his laws, to follow the worship,
customs, and rites of heathen idolaters.

A. M. 3224. 13 ^p They sacrifice upon the tops
B. C. 780. of the mountains, and burn incense upon the hills, under oaks, and poplars, and elms, because the shadow thereof is good:
therefore your daughters shall commit whoredom,
and your spouses shall commit adultery.

14 ^r I will not punish your daughters when they commit whoredom, nor your spouses when they commit adultery: for themselves are sepa-

^p Isa. i. 29; lvii. 5, 7; Ezek. vi. 13; xx. 28.—^r Amos vii. 17; Rom. i. 28.—^r Or, shall I not.—^r Verses 1, 6.—^r Or, be punished.

Verse 13. They sacrifice upon the tops of the mountains—The sacrificing upon the mountains and in shady groves was an ancient piece of idolatry, often mentioned and reproved by the prophets. They seem to have made choice of the tops of hills and mountains for their sacrifices and religious rites, as places nearer heaven; but what could be more absurd than to think that God, who is omnipresent, was nearer to them on the hills or mountains than in the valleys? Israel, says St. Jerome, loves high places, for they have forsaken the high God, and having left the substance are attached to the shadow. And burn incense under oaks, poplars, and elms—Under high and spreading trees. Because the shadow thereof is good—Extremely grateful in those hot countries. Hence the Israelites were inclined to worship there. Therefore your daughters shall commit whoredom—Therefore your punishment shall be agreeable to your sin. As ye have committed spiritual whoredom, and have gone after idols, and have not regarded the commands of God; so your daughters shall go after their lusts, and commit whoredom, without any heed to your commands and exhortations. Great depravity and corruption of manners are generally the consequence of a disregard of God and religion.

Verse 14. I will not punish your daughters, &c.—I will suffer your daughters to go on in their iniquity, and to fall from one degree of wickedness to another. For themselves—That is, for yourselves; are separated with whores—That is, you go aside and retire with the women who prostitute themselves in the groves, or in the precincts of the idolatrous temples. And sacrifice with harlots—Hebrew, עם הקדשות, with women set apart, or consecrated to prostitution. The meaning is, that the people partook in those rites of idolatrous worship in which prostitution made a stated part of the religious festivity. Such lewd practices were frequent in the heathen temples dedicated to Venus and other impure deities. The expressions seem to allude to the practice mentioned Baruch vi. 43, and minutely described by Herodotus, lib. i. cap. 199. Therefore the people that doth not understand shall fall—Hebrew, לכת, shall be thrown down, prostrated, dashed to the ground, or beaten, as the Vulgate renders it.

Verse 15. Though, &c.—“Here,” says Bishop rated with whores, and they sacrifice with harlots: therefore the people that doth not understand shall fall.

15 ¶ Though thou, Israel, play the harlot, yet let not Judah offend; and come not ye unto Gilgal, neither go ye up to Beth-aven, nor swear, The Lord liveth.

16 For Israel slideth back as a backsliding heifer: now the Lord will feed them as a lamb in a large place.

^r Chapter ix. 15; xii. 11; Amos iv. 4; v. 5.—^r 1 Kings xii. 29; Chap. x. 5.—^r Amos viii. 14; Zeph. i. 5.—^r Jer. iii. 6; vii. 24; viii. 5; Zech. vii. 11.

Horsley, “a transition is made, with great elegance and animation, from the general subject of the whole people, in both its branches, to the kingdom of the ten tribes in particular.” Though thou, Israel, play the harlot—Though thou followest after idols; yet let not Judah offend—Let not Judah do so too: at least let her keep herself pure. Let her not join in the idolatrous worship at Gilgal or Beth-aven, or mix idolatry with the profession of the true religion. The kingdom of Judah still retained, in a great degree, the worship of the true God, and the ordinances of the temple service. Therefore the prophet exhorts that people not to be led away by the bad example of their brethren of the ten tribes. Gilgal, it must be observed, was remarkable for being the place where the Israelites renewed their rite of circumcision, when they first passed over Jordan; but after Jeroboam set up idolatry, it became famous for the worship of false gods. And it appears, from this prophet and Amos, that it was particularly so in this period of the Jewish history. Beth-aven was the same with Beth-el, and was the place where one of Jeroboam’s calves was worshipped. The word Beth-el signifies the house of God, and was the name given to that place by Jacob, because of God’s appearing to him there, Gen. xxviii. 17. But when it became a place noted for idolatrous worship, the worshippers of the true God called it, in detestation Beth-aven, that is, the house of vanity. Nor swear, The Lord liveth—Do not mingle the worship of the true God with idolatrous rites, nor dare to swear by his name while worshipping idols, or before the calves, as if they represented him; for he abhors every such coalition.

Verse 16. For Israel slideth back, &c.—As if the Lord had said, As for Israel, I give him up to a reprobate mind. And now the discourse passes naturally into the detail and amplification of Israel’s guilt. Bishop Horsley renders this clause, Truly Israel is rebellious like an unruly heifer; observing, “I restore the rendering of the Bishops’ Bible, and the English Geneva.” Certainly the word כרה, here used, properly means headstrong, untractable, or refractory, and describes a heifer, “indocili jugum collo ferens,” untamed to the yoke, which she will neither bear, nor be confined in her allowed pasture. Now the Lord will feed them as a lamb—Or sheep,

A. M. 3224. 17 Ephraim is joined to idols: ^y let
B. C. 780. him alone.

18 Their drink ⁹ is sour: they have committed whoredom continually: ^z her ¹⁰ rulers

^y Matthew xv. 14. — ⁹ Hebrew, is gone. — ^z Micah iii. 11; vii. 3.

solitary, timid, defenceless, and exposed to various beasts of prey; in a large place—That is, “In an unenclosed place, a wide common. They shall no longer be fed with care in the rich enclosures of God’s cultivated farm, but be turned to browse the scanty herbage of the waste. That is, they shall be driven into exile among the heathen, freed from what they thought the restraints, and of consequence deprived of all the blessings and benefits of religion. This dreadful menace is delivered in the form of severe derision; a figure much used by the prophets, especially by Hosea. Sheep love to feed at large. The sheep of Ephraim shall presently have room enough. They shall be scattered over the whole surface of the vast Assyrian empire, where they will be at liberty to turn very heathen. It is remarkable, however, that it is said that even in this state, Jehovah will feed them. They are still, in their utmost humiliation, an object of his care.”—Horsley.

Verses 17, 18. Ephraim, &c.—The Ephraimites were numerous and potent, and are here put for the whole ten tribes. Is joined to idols—The word עֲצָבִים, here rendered idols, properly means, sorrows and pains, idols being the cause of much misery to their worshippers. Bishop Horsley reads the verse, A companion of idols is Ephraim; leave him to himself. Leave him undisturbed in his idolatrous course. He is irreclaimable. Their drink is sour—Hebrew, is gone, turned, or ravid. “The allusion is to libations made with wine grown dead, or turning sour. The image represents the want of all spirit of piety in their acts of worship, and the unacceptableness of such worship in the sight of God; which is alleged as a reason for the determination, expressed in the preceding clause, to give Ephraim up to his own ways. ‘Leave him to himself,’ says God to the prophet, ‘his pretended devotions are all false and hypocritical. I desire none of lers with shame do love, Give ye. A. M. 3224.

19 ^a The wind hath bound her up B. C. 780.
in her wings, and ^b they shall be ashamed
because of their sacrifices.

¹⁰ Heb. shields, Psalm lxxiv. 9. — ^a Jeremiah iv. 11, 12; li. 1.
^b Isa. i. 29; Jer. ii. 26.

them.”—Horsley. They have committed whoredom continually—They have gone on in a course of idolatry: or carnal whoredom may be intended. Her rulers with shame do love, Give ye—Their rulers, to their shame be it spoken, are continually asking or expecting bribes, or are greedy of gifts. The Hebrew word translated rulers, properly signifies shields: it is taken for rulers in Ps. xlvii. 9, as well as here.

Verse 19. The wind hath bound her up in her wings—Or rather, binds, or, is binding her up, the present tense being put to denote instant futurity. The passage is strongly figurative, to signify that they should be suddenly taken away out of their country, and carried with irresistible force, and incredible speed, into a distant land. It is not unusual, in other writers, to attribute wings to the winds, to express their swiftness; and when any thing is said to be bound up in the wings of the wind, the expression must signify its being taken far away with great celerity. “An admirable image this,” says Bishop Horsley, “of the condition of a people, torn by a conqueror from their native land, scattered in exile to the four quarters of the world, and living thenceforward without any settled residence of their own, liable to be moved about at the will of arbitrary masters, like a thing tied to the wings of the wind, obliged to go with the wind which ever way it set, but never suffered for a moment to lie still. The image is striking now; but must have been more striking when a bird with expanded wings, or a huge pair of wings, without head or body, was the hieroglyphic of the element of the air, or rather of the general mundane atmosphere, one of the most irresistible of physical agents.” And they shall be ashamed because of their sacrifices—They shall be confounded to find, by experience, that all their sacrifices to idols have profited them nothing, but brought severe calamities upon them.

CHAPTER V.

The scope of this chapter likewise is, to discover the sins of Israel and Judah, and to denounce the judgments of God against them, with a promise of mercy upon their humiliation, confession of sin, and seeking reconciliation with God, 1–15.

A. M. 3229. HEAR ye this, O priests; and
B. C. 775. hearken, ye house of Israel; and give ye ear, O house of the king; A. M. 3229.

for judgment is toward you, because B. C. 775.

NOTES ON PSALM V.

Verse 1. Hear this, O ye priests—Or rather, princes, as Dr. Waterland renders כהני, a reading which agrees better with the house of the king that follows, and the word admitting of both significations. For judgment is toward you—Or, denounced

A. M. 3229. * ye have been a snare on Mizpah, and a net spread upon Tabor.

2 And the revolvers are ^b profound to make slaughter, ¹ though I have been ² a rebuker of them all.

3 ^o I know Ephraim, and Israel is not hid from me: for now, O Ephraim, ^d thou committest whoredom, and Israel is defiled.

4 ³ They ⁴ will not frame their doings to turn unto their God: for ^e the spirit of whoredoms is in the midst of them, and they have not known the LORD.

5 And ^f the pride of Israel doth testify to his face: therefore shall Israel and Ephraim fall in their iniquity; Judah also shall fall with them.

6 ^g They shall go with their flocks and with their herds to seek the LORD; but they shall not find him; he hath withdrawn himself from them.

^a Chapter vi. 9.—^b Isa. xxix. 15.—¹ Or, and.—² Heb. a correction.—^c Amos iii. 2.—^d Ezek. xxiii. 5; Chap. iv. 17.
^e Heb. They will not give.

^f Or, Their doings will not suffer them.—^g Chapter iv. 12.
^h Chap. vii. 10.—ⁱ Prov. i. 28; Isa. i. 15; Jer. xi. 11; Ezek. viii. 18; Mic. iii. 4; John vii. 34.

against you, as Archbishop Newcome renders it, a translation favoured by the LXX., προς υμας εστι το κρημα; by Houbigant, who reads, adest vobis iudicium, judgment is at hand to you, or hangs over you. Because ye have been a snare on Mizpah, and upon Tabor—Mizpah (a name derived from מצפה, to watch, namely, from an eminence) was a mountain, and probably a city too, of Gilead. Tabor was a beautiful and fruitful mountain in the tribe of Zebulun. These places being much frequented by hunters and fowlers, many snares and nets were laid in them to catch birds and beasts: and with an allusion to this the Israelites are here described as insinuating men on these places into idolatry, because many of the tribe of Judah had been seduced, or drawn into idolatry, by their bad example.

Verse 2. And the revolvers—Hebrew, דשכח, declinantes, the persons declining, turning aside, and departing out of the way appointed them to walk in, are profound to make slaughter—Or, have gone deep in slaughter, as שחטתם העמיק may be properly rendered. The words may be intended either of the slaughter of idolatrous sacrifices, or of men. It seems most likely, however, that the latter is meant, and that these wicked priests and princes laid plots to cut off such as adhered to the worship of the true God, and opposed their idolatry. The LXX. suppose the allusion to hunting is still carried on, and render the clause, οι αγγελοντες την θηραν κατεπησαν, the hunters have pierced the prey. Though I have been a rebuker of them all—Though I have reprovèd, exhorted, and instructed them by the prophets whom I raised up among them, even after they turned to idolatry. They had, in particular, two very extraordinary prophets, Elijah and Elisha, who were endued with a greater power to work miracles, whereby to prove their divine commission, and to convince the people of the certain truth and deep importance of their messages, than any one who had been raised up either among the Jews or Israelites since the days of Moses. Dr. Waterland and Calmet, however, translate this clause, I will call them all to discipline; and Newcome and Horsley, I will bring a chastisement on them all; which the latter interprets, “I will be a chastisement to them, as they have been a net and a snare to others.”

Verses 3–5. I know Ephraim—I am perfectly well acquainted with the actions of Ephraim, the head of the ten tribes; and Israel is not hid from me—And the actions of the other nine tribes are no less known to me. Now, O Ephraim, thou committest whoredom—Even now, at this time, thou goest on in thy idolatry, notwithstanding all my rebukes and exhortations. They will not frame their doings to turn unto their God—They are so wholly inclined to idolatry, and it has got so fixed a root in their affections, that they cannot think of turning to the pure worship of the true God. And it even extinguishes all true knowledge and sense of him among them. Bishop Horsley renders the verse, Their perverse habits will not permit them to return unto their God; for a spirit of wantonness is within them, and the Jehovah they have not known. The pride of Israel doth testify to his face—The insolent behaviour of Israel toward God, whose worship they despise, both discovers itself in all their conduct, and testifies that their guilt is great, and deserves severe punishment. Archbishop Newcome renders this clause, The pride of Israel shall be humbled to his face; and Waterland, Shall be brought down in his sight. Therefore shall Israel and Ephraim fall, &c.—Be brought to utter ruin; Judah also shall fall with them—And the other two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, having followed their bad example, shall also be severely punished as well as they.

Verse 6. They shall go with their flocks and herds to seek the Lord—They shall seek to make their peace with God, and to induce him to be favourable to them by a multitude of sacrifices; but they shall not find their expectations answered. This is spoken of the people of Judah, mentioned in the latter part of the foregoing verse; who, though they attended the temple worship, yet did it without any true sense of religion, for which the Prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah particularly reprove them. The prophecy seems to look forward to the times of Hezekiah and Josiah, declaring that the attempts of those pious kings to reclaim the people from idolatry, and to restore the true worship of God, would fail of any durable effect, and would not avail to reverse the doom pronounced upon the guilty people. He hath withdrawn himself from them—God is said to hide and withdraw himself,

A. M. 3229. 7 They have ^h dealt treacherously
B. C. 775. against the LORD: for they have begotten strange children: now shall ⁱ a month
devour them with their portions.

8 ^k Blow ye the cornet in Gibeah, and the trumpet in Ramah: ^l cry aloud at ^m Bethaven, ⁿ after thee, O Benjamin.

9 Ephraim shall be desolate in the day of rebuke: among the tribes of Israel have I made known that which shall surely be.

^h Isaiah xlviii. 8; Jeremiah iii. 20; v. 11; Chapter vi. 7;
Malachi ii. 11.—ⁱ Zech. xi. 8.—^k Chap. viii. 1; Joel ii. 1.
^l Isaiah x. 30.

when he will not answer men's prayers, nor afford them seasonable relief in time of need. Hebrew, הלץ בהם, he hath disengaged, or loosened himself
from them, or hath taken himself away.

Verse 7. They have dealt treacherously against the Lord—The word בור, rendered, to deal treacherously, signifies properly, a wife's being false to her husband; see Jer. iii. 20; from whence it is applied to the sin of idolatry, which was being false to the true God, or giving to creatures, or mere imaginary beings, the affection and regard due to him, and therefore it is often in Scripture styled spiritual whoredom. For they have begotten strange children—A race of aliens, as Bishop Horsley renders it: that is, children trained from their earliest infancy in the habits and principles of idolatry, and growing up aliens with respect to God, (for all are not Israel that are of Israel,) alienated from him in their affections, and in their sentiments and practice mere heathen. The expression alludes to children not lawfully begotten, or not born in wedlock. Now shall a month devour them—A very short time shall complete their destruction. It shall be sudden and unexpected. With their portions—That is, their allotments. "They shall be now totally dispossessed of their country, and the boundaries of the separate allotments of the several tribes shall be confounded and obliterated, and new partitions of the land into districts shall be made, from time to time, at the pleasure of its successive masters. The captivity of the ten tribes was completed soon after Hezekiah's attempted reformation, and the kingdom of Judah not long survived Josiah's." It is probable the month alludes to these events.

Verses 8, 9. Blow ye the cornet in Gibeah, &c.—The prophet here calls upon the watchmen of Judah and Israel to sound an alarm, and give notice of the approach of the enemy: compare Joel ii. 1. It was usual in those days, when a country was invaded, or was on the point of being so, to give notice of it by sounding cornets and trumpets from the towers and high places, on which the watchmen or sentinels were placed. Gibeah and Ramah were towns in the tribe of Benjamin; and Beth-aven, or Bethel, was in the territory of the ten tribes, so that ordering the sounding of an alarm in those places, signified that both kingdoms should be hostilely invaded.

10 The princes of Judah were like ^{A. M. 3229.} them that ^{B. C. 775.} remove the bound: there- fore I will pour out my wrath upon them like water.

11 Ephraim is ^p oppressed and broken in judgment because he willingly walked after ^q the commandment.

12 Therefore will I be unto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Judah ^r as ^s rottenness.

^m Josh. vii. 2; Chap. iv. 15.—ⁿ Judg. v. 14.—^o Deut. xix.
14; xxvii. 17.—^p Deut. xxviii. 33.—^q 1 Kings xii. 28; Mic.
vi. 16.—^r Prov. xii. 4.—^s Or, a worm.

After thee, O Benjamin—Or, Look behind thee, O Benjamin: see Pocock. The words present the image of an enemy in close pursuit, ready to fall upon the rear of Benjamin. Ephraim shall be desolate—God's judgments shall likewise overtake Israel, or the ten tribes, as well as Judah. In the day of rebuke—At the time when God shall punish them for the provocations which he has received. This seems to be intended of the invasion of the kingdom of Israel by Shalmaneser king of Assyria. Among the tribes of Israel I have made known, &c.—I have denounced my judgments against the whole kingdom of Israel, as well as that of Judah, and given them warning, that they may escape them by a timely repentance.

Verse 10. The princes of Judah, &c.—The prophet in this chapter passes frequently from the one kingdom to the other, that he might set forth the crimes, and foretel the punishments of both, unless they averted them by their repentance. Instead of the princes, Bishop Horsley reads, the rulers of Judah, observing, "I prefer the word rulers to princes, because, in the modern acceptance of the word princes, royalty, or at least, royal blood, is included in the notion of it. But these שרי, saree, [princes,] of the Old Testament, were not persons of royal extraction, or connected by blood or marriage with the royal family; but the chief priests and elders, who composed the secular as well as the ecclesiastical magistracy of the country." Like them that remove the bound—They have violated the most sacred laws of God: upon which, not only the ordinances of his worship, but likewise the rights and properties of men depend, and are become guilty of the same injustice and confusion with those that remove the ancient bounds and landmarks, Ezek. xvi. 18. Therefore I will pour out my wrath upon them like water—That is, with great violence, like an impetuous torrent, or the hasty unexpected overflowing of a river, which overwhelms every thing near. Great calamities are often compared to the overflowing of water.

Verses 11, 12. Ephraim is oppressed and broken in judgment—He is delivered over to oppressors by God's just judgment. Such were Pul and Tiglath-pileser, kings of Assyria. Archbishop Newcome distinguishes between these phrases thus: He is op-

A. M. 3229. 13 When Ephraim saw his sick-
B. C. 775. ness, and Judah saw his wound, then went Ephraim to the Assyrian, and sent to King Jareb: yet could he not heal
you, nor cure you of your wound.

14 For I will be unto Ephraim as a lion,
and as a young lion to the house of Judah:

^a Jer. xxx. 12.—¹ 2 Kings xv. 19; Chapter vii. 11; xii. 1.
^b Chapter x. 6.—^c Or, to the king of Jareb, or, to the king that should plead.

I, even I, will tear and go away; A. M. 3229.
I will take away, and none shall B. C. 775.
rescue him.

15 ¶ I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offence, and seek my face: in their affliction they will seek me early.

^x Lam. iii. 10; Chap. xiii. 7, 8.—^y Psal. l. 22.—⁷ Heb. till they be guilty.—^z Lev. xxvi. 40, 41; Jer. xxix. 12, 13; Ezek
vi. 9; xx. 43; xxxvi. 31.—^a Psalm lxxviii. 34.

pressed with a heavy weight of calamity; he is crushed, or broken in his judicial contest with God;
because he willingly walked after the commandment—Because he willingly submitted to, or complied with Jeroboam's command, requiring his subjects to worship the calves which he had placed at Dan and Beth-el, and to conform to all his idolatrous institutions, in opposition to the law of God. Of this kind were the statutes of Omri, mentioned Mic. vi.
16. The reading of the LXX. here is different, namely, Κατεπατήσας το κρίμα, οτι ηρξάτο πορευεσθαι
οπισω των ματαιων, He trode judgment under foot, because he began to walk after vain things; that is, after idols. They seem either to have read טָוַשׁ, shave, (vanity,) for צַוָּה, tzave, (commandment,) or else to have supposed the latter word to be put for the former, there being frequent instances in the Hebrew text of letters being changed, one for another, which have nearly the same sound: see the Arabic, Syriac, Chaldaic, Houbigant and others, in Poole's Synopsis, who read טָוַשׁ, vanity. Therefore will I be unto Ephraim as a moth—My judgment shall consume both Israel and Judah as a moth fretteth a garment, or as rottenness consumes the flesh, from small and unperceived beginnings, working slow, but certain and complete destruction.

Verses 13, 14. When Ephraim saw his sickness
—When the king of Israel, namely, Menahem, saw himself too weak to contend with Pul, king of Assyria, he sent an embassy to him to make him his ally, and, in order to do it, became his tributary, that his hand might be with him to confirm his kingdom to him, 2 Kings xv. 15. And Judah his wound—Hebrew, his ulcer, or corrupted sore. So in like manner shall Ahaz, king of Judah, implore
the assistance of Tiglath-pileser against his enemies.
For, after the words, then went Ephraim to the Assyrian, the word Judah should be supplied, and the clause should be read, And Judah sent, (or, shall send,) to King Jareb. Thus Seeker and Pocock understand the passage. The word Jareb means one that will plead for a person, and defend his cause against any that may oppose him, or an avenger, or helper. And it does not appear to be here a proper name. Bishop Horsley renders it,
The king who takes up all quarrels, and observes,
“This describes some powerful monarch who took upon him to interfere in all quarrels between inferior powers, to arbitrate between them, and compel them to make up their differences upon such terms

as he thought proper to dictate: whose alliance was,
of course, anxiously courted by weaker states. Such was the Assyrian monarch in the times to which the prophecy relates. His friendship was purchased by Menahem king of Israel,” (as observed above,) “and in a later period solicited by Ahaz, 2 Kings xvi.
5-9.” Yet could he not heal you, nor cure you of your wound—Those foreign alliances proved to be of no benefit either to Israel or Judah. It is expressly said of Tiglath-pileser, 2 Chron. xxviii. 20, that when he came to Ahaz, under colour of helping him according to the terms of their agreement,
at a time when Judah was brought low, he distressed him, but strengthened him not. And though Ahaz gave him presents out of the house of the Lord, out of the house of the king, and of the princes, still he helped him not. And as to the ten tribes, the Assyrian kings were so far from helping them really, that they destroyed numbers of them from time to time, and at last carried them all away into captivity. So weak often is human policy! I will be unto Ephraim as a lion—The Vulgate reads, leona, a lioness, and the LXX. a panther. The sense of the verse is, that it was in vain for either Israel or Judah to expect help from men, since God had determined to destroy or take them away, as with the impetuosity of a panther flying upon his prey, or the fury of a lion, tearing it in pieces.

Verse 15. I will go and return to my place—I will withdraw myself from them, and give them up to exile and punishment, till they acknowledge their offence and seek my face: that is, till they confess their sins, and, by a sincere humiliation, and in fervent prayer, implore my favour. The Chaldee paraphrase expresses the sense thus: “I will take away my majestic presence, or shechinah, from among them, and will return into heaven.” Thus Ezekiel describes the destruction of the temple and kingdom, by God's removing his glory from the sanctuary and city: see Ezek. x. 4, and xi. 23. In their affliction they will seek me early—That is,
without delay, and earnestly; or, with great diligence and assiduity. Observe, reader, when we are under the corrections of the divine rod, our business is to seek God's face, that is, an acquaintance with him, a token of his being at peace with us, and a manifestation of his favour. And it may reasonably be expected that affliction will bring those to God who had gone astray, and kept at a distance from him. For this reason God turns away from us, that he may turn us to himself, and then may return to us. Is any among you afflicted? Let him pray. The first three verses of the next chapter should have been joined to this. So the LXX. thought, connecting the last verse of this with the first of the next, by the participle λεγοντες, saying.

CHAPTER VI.

In this chapter we have, (1.) An exhortation of the prophet; or the resolution of some real penitents to return to God, and the considerations wherewith they encourage themselves in their return, 1-3. (2.) The instability of many of the people, both of Israel and Judah, in their professions and promises of repentance, and the severe course which God, therefore, took with them, 4, 5. (3.) The covenant God made with them, and his expectations from them, 6: and their violation of that covenant, and frustrating of those expectations, 7-11.

A. M. 3229.
B. C. 775.

COME, and let us return unto the LORD: for ^a he hath torn, and ^b he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up.

^a Deut. xxxii. 39; 1 Sam. ii. 6; Job v. 18; Chap. v. 14.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VI.

Verse 1. Come, let us return, &c.—Bishop Horsley considers the prophet as speaking here in his own person, to the end of the 3d verse, and taking occasion, from the intimation of pardon to the penitent, given in the conclusion of the preceding chapter, to address his countrymen in words of mild, pathetic persuasion, and to exhort them to return to the worship and service of God. But many other commentators rather think these are to be considered as the words of the repenting and returning Jews and Israelites in their exile, who, it is said, in the last clause of the foregoing chapter, would in their affliction seek God, which they are here represented as encouraging one another to do, saying, Come, &c.—Not only the LXX., but, according to Houbigant, the Arabic, Syriac, and Chaldee, supply the word saying, before this verse. Whether they did this as interpreters, which, says Archbishop Newcome, is my opinion, or whether they read in their copy of the Hebrew text, לֵאמֹר, (saying), is uncertain. Let us return unto the Lord, &c.—He it is who hath brought us into this estate under which we groan; and he is able, if he think fit, to deliver us from it in a short time: nothing is difficult to him. Full of mercy as he is, he will not permit us to continue long in captivity and oppression, wherein we are buried like the dead in the tomb. He hath torn, and he will heal us, &c.—The same God that punisheth us can only remove his judgments, and show us mercy. The expression, He hath torn, relates to what was said chap. v. 14.

Verse 2. After two days he will revive us—A deliverance from miseries or calamities, from which men had despaired of a recovery, is often represented as restoring them to life after death: see Psa. xxx. 3, and lxxi. 20, and lxxxvi. 13; particularly the restoration of the Jewish nation is often described, as if it were a resurrection from the dead: see note on Ezek. xxxvii. 11. Two, or three, in 2 ° After two days will he revive us: in the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight.

A. M. 3229.
B. C. 775.

^b Jer. xxx. 17.—^c 1 Cor. xv. 4.

Scripture, denote a small number. Two are put for a few, 1 Kings xvii. 12. One and two for a few, Isa. vii. 21; Jer. iii. 14. Two or three for a few, Isa. xvii. 6. Accordingly, here the expression signifies a short space of time. Compare Luke xiii. 32, 33. The primary and obvious sense, therefore, of this verse, taking it in reference to the others, is, that they expected God would, in a short time after they should repent and turn to him, free them from their captivity, which might be looked upon as a state of death; and would return again to them, and exhibit the signs of his presence among them, his chosen people: so that, being converted and restored, they should live in his sight, and should attain to that true knowledge of God which they had not possessed before. Added to this, Bishop Horsley thinks these days denote three distinct periods of the Jewish people. His view of the subject he explains as follows: "The first day is the captivity of the ten tribes by the Assyrians, and of the other two under the Babylonians, considered as one judgment upon the nation; beginning with the captivity of the ten, and completed in that of the two. The second day is the whole period of the present condition of the Jews, beginning with the dispersion of the nation by the Romans. The third day is the period yet to come, beginning with their restoration, to the second advent. R. Tanchum, as he is quoted by Dr. Pocock, was not far, I think, from the true meaning of the place. 'The prophet,' he says, 'points out two things—and these are, the first captivity, and a second. After which shall follow a third, [time,] redemption: after which shall be no depression or servitude.' And this I take to be the sense of the prophecy, in immediate application to the Jews. Nevertheless, whoever is well acquainted with the allegorical style of prophecy, when he recollects that our Lord's sufferings and death" were endured for our sakes, "and that he, rising on the third day, raised us to the hope of life and immortality, will easily per-

A. M. 3229. B. C. 775. 3 ^d Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the LORD: his going forth is prepared ^e as the morning; and ^f he shall come unto us ^g as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth.

4 ¶ ^h O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? O Judah, what shall I do unto thee?

^d Isa. liv. 13.—^e 2 Sam. xxiii. 4.—^f Psa. lxxii. 6.—^g Job xxix. 23.—^h Chap. xi. 8.—ⁱ Or, mercy, or, kindness.

ceive no very obscure, though but an oblique, allusion to our Lord's resurrection on the third day; since every believer may speak of our Lord's death and resurrection, as a common death and resurrection of all mankind."

Verse 3. Then shall we know, if we follow on, &c.—Hebrew, ונדעה נדרכה לרעה, And we shall know, we shall follow on to know the Lord. Then, when we have returned unto the Lord, verse 1, in sincerity and truth; when he hath torn and healed us, hath smitten and bound us up, hath convinced us of and humbled us for our sins, and converted us to himself, and created us anew; when he hath revived us, raised us up, and made us live; then shall we experimentally know the Lord, as merciful to our unrighteousness, Jer. xxxi. 34; we shall taste and see that he is good; we shall not only be raised out of deep afflictions, wherein we lay as in a state of death, but we shall live in his sight, a life of union and communion with him, a life of faith, love, and obedience; we shall know Him whom to know is life eternal. And we shall prosecute that knowledge; we shall follow on to know him, not content with any measures of the knowledge of him already attained. We shall proceed therein, and make progress, as the morning light doth to the perfect day. For, his going forth to visit, deliver, and comfort his people, to manifest himself to them, to refresh and save them; or, his going forth before his people, in his gracious, faithful, holy, just, and wise providence, for their benefit and comfort, is prepared as the morning—As sure, beautiful, grateful, reviving, and clear, with a continually increasing light, which proclaims his own approach and progress. And he shall come unto us as the rain unto the earth—Which refreshes it, renders it fruitful, beautifies it, and gives it a new and smiling face. As the latter and former rain—Or, as the words should rather be rendered, the harvest rain, and the rain of seed-time: see notes on Deut. xi. 14, and Prov. xvi. 15. For, as Bishop Horsley justly observes, the Hebrew words here used have nothing of latter or former implied in their meaning. And these expressions convey a notion just the reverse of the truth to the English reader. For what our translation here terms the latter rain, כליקוש, is literally, as the bishop terms it, the crop rain, which fell just before the season of the harvest, to plump the grain before it was severed: that is, it fell in what we term the spring, and consider as the former part of the year; for the harvest in Judea began about the middle of

for your ¹ goodness is ¹ as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away.

5 Therefore have I hewed them ^k by the prophets; I have slain them by ¹ the words of my mouth: ² and thy judgments are as the light that goeth forth.

¹ Chap. xiii. 3.—^k Jer. i. 10; v. 14.—¹ Jer. xxiii. 29; Heb. iv. 12.—² Or, that thy judgments might be.

our March, according to the old style. The other, ורר, which we term the former rain, and which is literally the springing rain, or the rain which makes to spring, fell upon the seed newly sown, and caused the green blade to shoot up out of the ground: that is, it fell about the end, or middle, of our October, which we consider as the latter end of the year. These rains, of seed-time and harvest, are the veros πρωτος και οπισθος, the early and latter rain, of St. James, chap. v. 7. But the apostle's epithets have reference to the order of the husbandman's expectations, not to the civil division of the year.

Verse 4. O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee?—Or rather, what shall I do for thee? Here the Lord takes up the discourse again in his own person, and gives an answer to the prayer, or promises, of Judah and Israel: as if he had said, How can I give either of you, O Israel and Judah, any tokens of my favour, since there is no sincerity or stability to be found in you? Such is the essential beneficence of God, that he delights to bestow favours on all his creatures; and here, and elsewhere in the Scriptures, represents himself as it were concerned, whenever their conduct is such that it becomes inconsistent with his attributes, as the all-righteous governor of the universe, to bestow his blessings upon them. Thus we find Christ lamenting over Jerusalem, Matt. xxiii. 37; and Isaiah, chap. lix. 1, 2 representing men's iniquities as the sole cause of God's hiding his face from them, and not hearing their prayers: see also Deut. v. 29. Your goodness is as a morning cloud, &c.—Your goodness is of a short continuance, and gives way to every temptation, like as the cloud of the morning, and the dew, are dispersed at the first approach of the sun.

Verse 5. Therefore have I hewed them by the prophets—Severely reprov'd and threatened them; or cut them off, as the word, חצבתי, may be properly rendered: that is, I have denounced against them great destruction. The prophets, and God by the prophets, are said to do those things which they foretel, or denounce: see notes on Jer. i. 10, and v. 14. I have slain them by the words of my mouth—that is, I have declared, or denounced, the slaughter of them. God's word is described as sharper than a two-edged sword, because his judgments, denounced by his messengers, are like the sentence of a judge, which shall certainly be followed with execution. And thy judgments are as the light when it goeth forth—These may be considered as the words of the prophet addressing God, and signi-

A. M. 3229. 6 For I desired ^mmercy, and ⁿnot
B. C. 775. sacrifice; and the ^oknowledge of God
more than burnt-offerings.

7 But they ³like men ^phave transgressed the covenant: there ^ahave they dealt treacherously
against me.

^m 1 Samuel xv. 22; Eccles. v. 1; Micah vi. 8; Matt. ix. 13;
xii. 7.—ⁿ Psal. i. 8, 9; Prov. xxi. 3; Isa. i. 11.—^o Jer. xxii.
16; John xvii. 3.—³ Or, like Adam, Job xxxi. 33.

fying that his judgments against the people were, though gradually, yet as certainly approaching as the morning light; and that the justice of them would appear as clear as the light of the rising sun. Or they may be considered as addressed to Israel, and then the meaning of them must be, The punishment which shall come upon thee, O Israel, will clearly appear to be perfectly just; nor shall any thing happen to thee, but what thou hast been fully and repeatedly warned of. Bishop Horsley, however, connecting these words with the following, gives them a different sense. Taking the word כשפטך, here rendered thy judgments, to signify thy precepts, he renders the clause, And the precepts given thee (namely, given to the people) were as the onward-going light, &c., "that is, as light, of which it is the nature and property to go forth, to propagate itself infinitely, and in all directions; a most expressive image of the clearness of the practical lessons of the prophets." The word, adds he, in his Critical Notes, "signifies a fixed principle, or rule, in any thing, to which principle and rule can be applied. Here I take it for the practical rules of a moral and godly life, as delivered by the prophets; and so Calvin expounds it: 'Judicia tua, hoc est, ratio piè vivendi.' Thy judgments, that is, the method of living piously. Significat hic Deus se regulam piè et sancte vivendi monstrasse Israelitis, God here signifies that he had shown to the Israelites the rule of a pious and holy life."

Verse 6. For I desired mercy, and not sacrifice—That is, rather than sacrifice, this being spoken comparatively. I am better pleased with true goodness than with the most exact observance of the external duties of religion: see Micah vi. 6-8. The Jews use to express comparison by negatives, or rejecting the thing less worthy: so we are to understand that expression of the Prophet Joel, chap. ii. 13, Rend your heart, and not your garments; and those words of Christ, John vi. 27, Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that which endureth to everlasting life: that is, for this rather than the former. By mercy is here meant, not only all that is due from man to man, considered as fellow-creatures, and members of civil society; but also those acts of benevolence, which, though not claimable on principles of justice, yet must be performed by us, as we have opportunity, if we would be the children of our Father who is in heaven: see Matt. vi. 45. Indeed, the word חסד, here used, and rendered mercy, includes piety toward God, as well as benevolence to man; or the performance of all the 8 ^rGilead is a city of them that A. M. 3229.

work iniquity, and is ⁴polluted with B. C. 775, blood.

9 And as troops of robbers wait for a man, so ^sthe company of priests murder in the way ⁵by consent: for they commit ⁶lewdness.

^p Chap. viii. 1.—^q Chap. v. 7.—^r Chap. xii. 11.—^s Or, cunning for blood.—^t Jer. xi. 9; Ezek. xxii. 25; Chap. v. 1, 2.
⁴ Heb. with one shoulder, or, to Shechem.—⁵ Or, enormity.

duties of the moral law. "I can find no single word," says Bishop Horsley, "to answer to it, but charity; for charity, in the evangelical sense, is the love of man, founded upon the love of God, and arising out of it." And the knowledge of God more than burnt-offerings—Namely, that knowledge of God, which is his super natural gift, through the influence of his enlightening Spirit, Eph. i. 17; and which is always productive of a filial confidence in him, love to him, and obedience to his commandments; (see Psal. ix. 10; 1 John ii. 3, 4, and iv. 7, 8;) and which is always attended with a true, sincere, internal, spiritual worship of him, and reverence for him. This is infinitely more pleasing to God, and more essential to true religion, than any ceremonial observances whatever; yea, than all sacrifices and burnt-offerings.

Verse 7. But they like men have transgressed the covenant—That is, as all corrupt men are prone to do; and as other men, who are not under such strong obligations to keep covenant with me, use to do. In the Hebrew it is, like Adam: and it would have been better, it seems, to have rendered it so; the sense appearing to be, that their transgression of the covenant God had made with them, or of the commandments which he had given them, was very similar to the transgression of Adam in paradise. "As Adam transgressed a plain command, so the Israelites transgressed the plainest and the easiest precepts. As Adam's crime was not to be excused by any necessity or want, so the Israelites, secure under the protection of Jehovah, had they continued faithful to him, had no excuse in seeking other aids. Adam revolted from God to Satan; so the Israelites forsook God to worship devils. Adam broke that one command, on which the justification of himself and his posterity depended; so the Israelites broke the one precept of charity," on their observing which depended their continuance in the divine favour, and their right to the blessings of the Mosaic covenant: see Horsley. There have they dealt treacherously against me—There, even in that very delightful and plentiful land, which I gave them to encourage them to obedience, a land like unto Eden itself, they have transgressed my law, as Adam did in paradise, and have behaved themselves falsely and ungratefully toward me; and that even with all the advantages of the prophetic teaching, and in spite of all admonition and all warning.

Verses 8, 9. Gilead is a city of them that work iniquity, &c.—Archbishop Newcome translates these two verses very literally thus: Gilead is a city of

A. M. 3229. 10 I have seen ^a a horrible thing in
B. C. 775. the house of Israel: there is ^u the whoredom of Ephraim, Israel is defiled.

^a Jer. v. 30. — ^u Chap. iv. 12, 13, 17. — ^x Jer. li. 33;

them that work iniquity: she is marked with footsteps of blood. And as bands wait for a man, a company of priests murder in the way to Shechem. "If Gilead be put here for Ramoth-gilead, (and I know not," says Bishop Horsley, "what other city can be meant,) it was a city of refuge, Deut. iv. 43; and such also was Shechem, or Sichem, Josh. xx. 7; both, therefore, inhabited by priests and Levites. By describing the first of these two cities as polluted with blood, and the high-road to the other as beset with knots of priests, like robbers, intent on blood, and murdering on the whole length of the way, up to the very walls of the town, the prophet means to represent the priests as seducers of the people to that idolatry which proved the ruin of the nation. Inasmuch that, like a man who should be murdered in a place of religious retreat, or upon his way to it, the people, under the influence of such guides, met their destruction in the quarter where, by God's appointment, they were to seek their safety." The word שִׁכְרָה, rendered by consent, in verse 9, signifies toward Shechem. For they commit lewdness—Hebrew, זָמָה עִשָּׂו, they work enormity, or that which is wicked and abominable.

Verses 10, 11. I have seen a horrible thing—Such an apostasy from God as cannot be mentioned without horror. There is the whoredom of Ephraim—Or rather, there, namely, in the house of Israel, by the whoredom of Ephraim, that is, by the idolatry of Jeroboam, who was of that tribe, and first began the worship of the golden calves; Israel is defiled—The whole ten tribes are corrupted: for they soon all followed the example of Jeroboam in this idolatrous worship. Also, O Judah, he—That is, Ephraim; hath set a harvest for thee—For Ephraim, or Israel, had corrupted Judah by leading them into idolatry, and into the vices connected therewith, in conse-

11 Also, O Judah, ^x he hath set a ^a harvest for thee, ^y when I returned
B. C. 775. the captivity of my people.

Joel iii. 13; Micah iv. 12; Rev. xiv. 15.—^y Psa. cxxvi. 1.

quence of which they were made ripe for destruction: for that the harvest is often a type of judgment is evident, among many other passages that might be adduced, from those quoted in the margin. When I returned the captivity of my people—Or rather, the Hebrew being in the future tense, when I shall turn, &c., (so the Vulgate,) or, more literally, and as the Seventy render it, in my turning the captivity of my people. According to this interpretation, the phrase of turning the captivity of God's people is not to be taken in the sense in which the same phrase is generally understood in the Scriptures, namely, for bringing them out of captivity; punishment, and not a blessing, being supposed to be predicted: but the sense of the expression will be, When I shall return to make captives of my people; or, as Archbishop Newcome proposes rendering it, When I lead away the captivity of my people; that is, after I have again caused the Israelites to be carried into captivity. Tiglath-pileser first carried a part of them into captivity; then Shalmaneser carried away the remainder; and after this came Sennacherib, who wasted Judea, and laid siege to Jerusalem. Some eminent commentators, however, are of opinion, that not a judgment, but a blessing, is predicted to be conferred on Judah in this passage. They therefore translate the verse thus: But for thee, O Judah, a harvest is prepared; then when I shall bring back the captivity of my people: see Houbigant and Horsley. Mr. S. Clark's note on the verse takes in both interpretations, thus: "And as Israel has been drawn to idolatry by Jeroboam, (verse 10,) so hast thou, Judah, too: and therefore God has prepared a harvest of sorrow and sufferings for thee too, by sending thee into captivity; which yet afterward shall be turned into a harvest of joy, when thou shalt be returned out of captivity again."

CHAPTER VII.

In this chapter we have, (1.) A general charge brought against Israel for those crimes by which they had obstructed the course of God's favour to them, 1, 2. (2.) A particular accusation of the court, the kings, princes, and judges, 3-7. Of the country for various sins and follies, which are particularly mentioned, and for which they are threatened with a severe chastisement to humble them; and if that should not have its desired effect, with utter destruction, particularly of their princes, 8-16.

A. M. 3239. WHEN I would have healed Israel;
B. C. 765. then the iniquity of Ephraim was discovered, and the ¹ wickedness of Sama-

¹ Heb. evils. — ^a Chap. v. 1; vi. 10.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VII.

Verse 1. When I would have healed Israel—When I would have reclaimed them from their sins, ria: for ^a they commit falsehood: and ^a the thief cometh in, and the troop of robbers ² spoileth without.

² Heb. strippeth.

and in consequence thereof have averted their judgments. The Hebrew, כִּרְפָּאִי, is, as I was healing: dum in eo essem ut sanarem. At the very time

A. M. 3239. 2 And they ³ consider not in their
B. C. 765. hearts, that I ^b remember all their wickedness: now ^c their own doings have beset them about; they are ^d before my face.

3 They make the king ^e glad with their wickedness, and the princes ^f with their lies.

4 ^f They are all adulterers, as an oven heated by the baker, ⁴ who ceaseth ⁵ from A. M. 3239.

raising after he hath kneaded the B. C. 765.
dough, until it be leavened.

5 In the day of our king the princes have made him sick ⁶ with bottles of wine; he stretched out his hand with scornors.

6 For they have ⁷ made ready their heart like

^a Heb. say not to. — ^b Jer. xvii. 1. — ^c Ps. ix. 16; Prov. v. 22.
^d Ps. xc. 8. — ^e Rom. i. 32.

^f Jer. ix. 2. — ⁴ Or, the raiser will cease. — ⁵ Or, from waking.
⁶ Or, with heat through wine. — ⁷ Or, applied.

when I was about to heal them; or, as the Seventy render it, Ev to iasathai me ton Israēl, When I was in the very act of healing Israel. Then the iniquity of Ephraim was discovered—Literally, was uncovered, or made bare, that is, showed itself openly, or was avowed and undisguised. The people gave me fresh provocations, especially the inhabitants of Samaria, the principal seat of the kingdom. For they commit falsehood—Or, carry on delusion; literally, practise deceit, or a lie. “The thing meant here seems to be the carrying on of a premeditated plot, or scheme, for the subversion of the true religion, and the establishment of idolatry. And the lie, falsehood, or delusion which they wrought, was every thing that was seductive in the external rites of the false religions:” see Horsley, who, in a note on this passage, observes, “The particular time alluded to is, I think, the reign of the second Jeroboam, when the kingdom of Israel seemed to be recovering from the loss of strength and territory it had sustained in the preceding reigns, by the encroachments of the Syrians; for Jeroboam restored the coast of Israel from the entering of Hamath unto the sea of the plain, 2 Kings xiv. 25. The successes vouchsafed to this warlike prince against his enemies were signs of God’s gracious inclination to pardon the people, and restore the kingdom to its former prosperity. For the Lord saw the affliction of Israel that it was bitter, &c. See 2 Kings xiv. 26, 27. But these merciful purposes of God were put aside by the wickedness of the king and the people. For this same Jeroboam did that which was evil in the sight of the Lord, he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam the son of Nebat, &c.” And the thief cometh in, and the troop of robbers, &c.—They are guilty both of the secret methods of fraud, and the open violence of rapine and oppression.

Verse 2. And they consider not in their hearts—They do not seriously reflect; that I remember all their wickedness—To call them to an account, and to punish them for it. Now their own doings—Their studied wickedness, their contrived iniquities: their own, not those of their fathers, as the incorrigible are ready to complain; have beset them about—Namely, as an enemy invests a town on every side. The meaning is, the guilt and punishment of their sins shall surround them on all sides, and seize upon them that they shall not escape. Some think that by this expression of besetting them about, the prophet alludes to the future siege of Samaria, wherein these sinners against their own souls were so straitly beset by the enemy, that they could not flee, nor escape the being either taken or destroyed.

Verse 3. They make the king glad with their wickedness—They study to please their kings and great men, by complying with the idolatry they have set up. The Seventy (with whom agree the Syriac and Arabic) read βασιλεις, kings, in the plural number, meaning the succession of the kings of Israel from Jeroboam. And the princes with their lies—Which they speak to please and flatter them. But the word lie sometimes signifies an idol, and the practice of idolatry, as being set up in direct opposition to the true God and his truth. Bishop Horsley renders the verse, By their evil doings they pleasure the king, and by their perfidies the rulers, namely, their perfidies toward God, in deserting his service for idolatry.

Verse 4. They are all adulterers—The expression may be here metaphorical, implying that they were apostates from God, to whose service they were engaged by the most solemn bond and covenant: compare Jer. ix. 2; James iv. 4. If the words be understood literally, the prophet compares the heat of their lust to the flame of an oven heated; or, as Bishop Horsley renders it, “Over-heated by the baker.” Who ceaseth from raising after he has kneaded the dough, until it be leavened—Vulgate, Donec fermentetur totum, until the fermentation of it be complete. When an oven is sufficiently heated, the baker does not increase the fire, but thinks what he has made sufficient to keep the oven hot till the dough be fit to be put into it. “An oven in which the heat is so intense as to be too strong for the baker’s purpose, insomuch that it must be suffered to abate before the bread can be set in, is certainly a most apt and striking image of the heart of the sensualist inflamed with appetite by repeated and excessive indulgence, so that it rages by the mere lust of the corrupted imagination, even in the absence of the external objects of desire that might naturally excite it; and works itself up to an excess which is even contrary to the purpose for which the animal appetites are implanted.”—Horsley.

Verses 5–7. In the day of our king—Probably the anniversary of his birth, or coronation; the princes have made him sick with bottles of wine—Or, when the princes began to be hot with wine, (so Newcome,) he stretched out his hand with scornors—Deriders of God and man. Some recent and notorious act of contempt to God, or to his prophets, or

A. M. 3239. an oven, while they lie in wait: their
B. C. 765. baker sleepeth all the night; in the morning it burneth as a flaming fire.

7 They are all hot as an oven, and have * devoured their judges; † all their kings ‡ are fallen: § there is none among them that calleth unto me:

8 Ephraim, he ¶ hath mixed himself among the people; Ephraim is a cake not turned.

9 † Strangers have devoured his strength, and

* Fulfilled about 773.—† Chap. viii. 4.—‡ 2 Kings xv. 10, 14, 25, 30.—§ Isa. lxiv. 7.—¶ Psa. cvi. 35.—‡ Chap. viii. 7.

to public justice, is here alluded to. "Those," says Bishop Horsley, "who in their cups made a jest of the true religion, and derided the denunciations of God's prophets, the king distinguished with the most familiar marks of his royal favour; in this way carrying on the plot of delusion." They—Those luxurious and drunken princes; have made ready their heart like an oven—Hot with concupiscence, ambition, revenge, and covetousness. While they lie in wait—Against the life or estate of some of their subjects. Their baker sleepeth, &c.—As a baker, having kindled a fire in his oven, goes to bed and sleeps all night, and in the morning finds his oven well heated, and ready for his purpose; so these, when they have laid some wicked plot, though they may seem to sleep for a while, yet the fire is glowing within, and flames out as soon as ever there is opportunity for it. They are all hot as an oven—The whole people are inflamed with bad passions, and have followed the ill example of their princes and great men. Or, the flame of civil discord is spread among the people in general; and, as fire devours, so has this destroyed their judges and rulers by conspiracies and assassinations. All their kings are fallen—An anarchy continued for eleven years after the death of Jeroboam II., and the six following kings, the last who reigned in Israel, fell by conspirators, namely, Zechariah, Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah, Pekah, and Hoshea. There is none among them that calleth unto me—And yet these plain signs of my indignation have not brought either kings or people to a due humiliation and sorrow for their sins.

Verses 8–10. Ephraim, he hath mixed among the people—By his alliances with the heathen, and by imitation of their manners, he is himself become one of them. He has thrown off all the distinctions, and forfeited the privileges of the chosen race. "The Hebrew word here rendered people, עַם, is in the plural, and, when applied to bodies politic," says Bishop Horsley, "always signifies the various nations of the earth, the unenlightened nations, in opposition to God's peculiar people, the Israelites." He therefore renders the word peoples here, "though," as he observes, "not without some violation of the propriety of the English language, which disowns the word in the plural form." Ephraim is a cake, or, like a cake, not turned—Burned on one side, and dough on the other, and so good for

he knoweth it not: yea, gray hairs A. M. 3239.
are † here and there upon him, yet he B. C. 765.
knoweth not.

10 And the † pride of Israel testifieth to his face: and ‡ they do not return to the Lord their God, nor seek him for all this.

11 ¶ Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart: § they call to Egypt, they go to Assyria.

† Heb. sprinkled.—‡ Ch. v. 5.—§ Isa. ix. 13.—¶ Ch. xi. 11. p 2 Kings xv. 19; xvii. 4; Chap. v. 13; ix. 3; xii. 1.

nothing on either; always in one extreme or the other. An apt image of a character that is all inconsistency. Such were the ten tribes of the prophet's day; worshippers of Jehovah in profession, but adopting all the idolatries of the neighbouring nations, in addition to their own semi-idolatry of the calves. Strangers have devoured his strength, and he knoweth it not—His national strength is impaired and decaying, and he acts as if he were insensible of it. The Syrians, in the time of Jehoabaz, reduced them very low, 2 Kings xiii. 7. Afterward they became tributaries to Pul, king of Assyria; and at length were carried captives by Shalmaneser, (chap. xvii.) and yet the afflictions that befell them did not make them sensible of the ill state of their affairs, and that the hand of God was against them. Yea, gray hairs are here and there upon him—The symptoms of decay. He declines in strength and power, like a man worn out with age. Rome, in the midst of great calamities, is thus described by Claudian:

———Humeris vix sustinet ægris
Squalentem clypeum; laxata casside, prodit Canitium.———

And the pride of Israel testifieth to his face—Or, witnesseth against him. Their insolent and obstinate behaviour, and continuance in sin, notwithstanding the warnings and admonitions they have had, sufficiently show how deserving they are of punishment; and they do not return, &c., nor seek him for all this—Notwithstanding such severe denunciations against them, and that they are forewarned of approaching calamities, yet they do not return to God in true repentance, nor make their supplication to him to avert his wrath.

Verses 11, 12. Ephraim is like a silly dove without heart—Which has neither courage to defend itself, nor cunning to prevent its falling into the snares that are laid for it. They call to Egypt, &c.—Sometimes they seek the alliance of one nation, and sometimes of another, all equally unserviceable to them; but are under no concern to seek the favour and protection of God, which alone can be of real and lasting benefit to them. When they shall go—When they shall do every thing their inclinations lead them to do, make the alliances they desire, and seek for safety in all the ways their imaginations can invent; I will spread my net upon them—I will

A. M. 3239. 12 When they shall go, ^a I will
B. C. 765. spread my net upon them; I will bring them down as the fowls of the heaven;
I will chastise them, ^r as their congregation
hath heard.

13 Wo unto them! for they have fled from me: ⁹ destruction unto them! because they have transgressed against me: though ^a I have redeemed them, yet they have spoken lies
against me.

14 ^t And they have not cried unto me with

^a Ezekiel xii. 13.—^r Leviticus xxvi. 14; Deuteron. xxviii.
15; 2 Kings xvii. 13, 18.—⁹ Hebrew, spoil.—^s Micah
vi. 4.

entangle and disappoint them in their designs, execute my decrees upon them, and bring them to destruction, like as birds are taken in the snares of the fowler, although they have wings to fly out of danger. *I will chastise them as their congregation
hath heard*—I will bring those calamities upon them which I have denounced in my laws against the whole people of Israel, whenever they should forsake me; and also have repeatedly denounced them
by my prophets.

Verses 13, 14. Wo unto them, &c.—These are words both of menace and lamentation. The prophet at once foretels and bewails their miseries.
For they have fled from me—As if it had not been enough that they at first left my government, temple,
and worship, they have gone still further from me
by their sinful and idolatrous courses. Destruction unto them—The ruin of their country and commonwealth will be the consequence of their apostasy.
Because they have transgressed against me—Rebelliously cast off my authority and laws. Though I have redeemed them, yet they have spoken lies, &c.
—Though I delivered them from the Egyptians, and afforded them many other signal deliverances, yet
they have not given me true glory, but have likened me to golden calves, and other images. Idolatry is frequently called in Scripture a lie, because it gives false representations of things; attributing power, &c., to things which, in their own nature, have no
such power, or representing the Deity by forms which he is in no way like; therefore it was, properly speaking, changing the truth and glory of God into a lie, or, speaking lies against him. They also belied his corrections, as if not deserved; they belied the good which God had done them, as if it were too little, or not done by him, but by their idols.
*And they have not cried unto me, when they howled,
&c.*—When they bemoaned their calamities, as sick
men bewail themselves upon their beds of sickness;
yet they did not call upon me heartily and sincerely.
They assemble, &c., for corn and wine, and they rebel, &c.—When they assemble themselves to deprecate a famine, they still retain the same disobedient temper toward me.

Verses 15, 16. Though I have bound, &c.—
Though, after bringing them low, I have given them their heart, when they howled upon A. M. 3239.

their beds: they assemble themselves B. C. 765.
for corn and wine, and they rebel against me.

15 Though I ¹⁰ have bound and strengthened their arms, yet do they imagine mischief
against me.

16 ^u They return, but not to the Most High:
^x they are like a deceitful bow: their princes shall fall by the sword for the ^y rage of their tongue: this shall be their derision ^z in the land of Egypt.

^t Job xxxv. 9, 10; Psa. lxxviii. 36; Jer. iii. 10; Zech. vii. 5.
^u Or, chastened.—^v Ch. xi. 7.—^w Psa. lxxviii. 57.—^x Psa.
lxxiii. 9.—^y Chap. ix. 3, 6.

new strength and vigour; yet do they imagine mischief against me—Yet they are continually devising some new idolatrous inventions, whereby they may dishonour me. The word כִּרְתִּי, rendered I have bound them, more properly signifies, I have chastised them, and is so rendered by Archbishop Newcome, Bishop Horsley, and others. The general sense of the verse is, Whether I inflict punishment on them, or show them favour, they are still the same, and reject me for their idols.
They return, but not to the Most High—Their conversion is only outward, not inward and sincere.
When they left the worship of Baal, they turned to the worship of the calves; and now they rest in an external reformation, or some ceremonial observances, and do not come up to true repentance, spiritual worship, or holy obedience. This seems to be the meaning of the clause, according to our translation of it. But the Hebrew text, יָשׁוּבוּ לֹא עָלַי, is very obscure, and variously rendered by interpreters.
Grotius and the Vulgate read, Reversi sunt ut essent absque jugo, They have returned that they might be without yoke, that is, without the restraint of God's law. Which is thus expounded by Grotius, “Denuo voluerunt esse absque jugo,” They would be again without yoke. The LXX. render it, ἀπερ-ρασαν εἰς σθέν, They have been turned away to nothing. Thus also the Syriac, or, as Bishop Horsley interprets it, They fall [have fallen] back into nothingness of condition. On which he remarks as follows: “The situation of the Israelites, as the chosen people of God, was a high degree; a rank of distinction and pre-eminence among the nations of the earth. By their voluntary defection to idolatry, they debased themselves from this exaltation, and returned to the ordinary level of the heathen, so far above which the mercy of God had raised them.
As if a man, ennobled by the favour of his sovereign, should renounce his honours, and, of his own choice, mix himself with the lowest dregs of the people. Thus, voluntarily descending from their nobility of condition, the Israelites returned to not high; for so the Hebrew literally sounds.”
The bishop observes elsewhere, that the Hebrew words will certainly bear the interpretation given by Grotius and the Vulgate; “and of all that have been proposed," says he, "it seems the best sense, next after that which I have given in my translation, which is R. Tanchum's, and in my judgment the best of all. Thus we say in common speech, of a man who by misconduct has lost all esteem and credit in the world, 'He has brought himself to nothing.'"^a They are like a deceitful bow—Which seems bent for and aiming at the mark, yet is too weak to carry the shaft to it; or, is false, and instead of directing the arrow straight to the mark, shoots it on one side or the other. Their princes shall fall, &c., for the rage of their tongue—For the dishonour which they have done me by blasphemous speeches; or, shall fall by conspiracies, stirred up and fomented by murmurings and seditious expressions. *This shall be their derision in the land of Egypt—*Their frequent rebellions and conspiracies against their kings, shall make them the derision of Egypt. Houbigant renders it, For the wantonness of their tongues, they shall be a derision in the land of Egypt. It is probable that many of the ten tribes fled to Egypt when invaded by the Assyrians; and that their blasphemies, and other enormities committed there, brought them under deserved reproach.

CHAPTER VIII.

In this chapter the idolatries and other impieties of Israel and Judah are set forth, and the judgments of God are denounced against them, 1-14.

A. M. 3244. SET^a the trumpet to ¹ thy mouth.
B. C. 760. He shall come^b as an eagle against the house of the LORD, because ^c they have transgressed my covenant, and trespassed against my law.

2 ^d Israel shall cry unto me, My God, ^e we know thee.

3 Israel hath cast off the thing that A. M. 3244.
is good: the enemy shall pursue him. B. C. 760.

4 ^f They have set up kings, but not by me: they have made princes, and I knew it not: ^g of their silver and their gold have they made them idols, that they may be cut off.

5 Thy calf, O Samaria, hath cast thee off;

^a Chap. v. 8.—¹ Heb. the roof of thy mouth.—^b Deut. xxviii. 49; Jer. iv. 13; Hab. i. 8.—^c Chap. vi. 7.—^d Psa. lxxviii.

34; Chap. v. 15.—^e Titus i. 16.—^f 2 Kings xv. 13, 17, 25; Shallum, Menahem, Pekahiah.—^g Chap. ii. 8; xiii. 2.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VIII.

Verse 1. Set the trumpet to thy mouth—The Vulgate renders it, In gutture tuo sit tuba; that is, Let thy throat, or mouth, sound like a trumpet. God speaks in these words, says Grotius, to the prophet, and commands him to proclaim, with a very loud voice, both the sins of the people, and the evils about to come upon them. He shall come as an eagle against the house of the Lord—The words, he shall come, are not in the Hebrew, and seem to be improperly supplied by the translators; the sense of the words appearing to be, that the prophet should warn the people, and denounce the judgments of God against them for their sins, with a voice so loud that it might be heard as far as the cry of the eagle, flying over, or sitting upon, the top of the temple. Because they have transgressed—Or rather, that they have transgressed my covenant. "Hoc enim ipsum est quod proclamari vult Deus;" for this is the thing which God commanded to be proclaimed.—Grotius. Namely, that they had transgressed against God's covenant, and violated his law.

Ver. 2-4. Israel shall cry unto me—Namely, when calamities come upon them, My God, we know thee—Thou art our God in covenant with us, and we make profession of thy name, and own thee for the only true God: see Matt. vii. 21, 22. Israel hath cast off the thing that is good—They have not walked agreeably to their profession, but have cast off obedience to my laws. This is a declaration, that all the worship of Israel, or their crying, My God, was vain, since their actions were wicked, or they had cast off what was good. Christ has made a declaration to the same purpose, to warn us of falling into the like error, in the passage above referred to. They have set up kings—Made a defection from the house of David, formed themselves into a distinct kingdom, and chosen what kings and governors they pleased, without ever asking my advice or consent. Not by me—Not by my warrant or order. Shallum, and Menahem, and Pekah, usurped the kingdom by murder and treason, 2 Kings xv. 13, 14, 25, not by any declaration of God's will, as Jeroboam and Jehu did; nor were any of the kings between Jeroboam and Jehu, nor any after the posterity of Jehu, made by God's appointment. They have made princes and I knew it not—They have appointed judges, or magistrates, such as I approved not of, and had no hand in raising up to that dignity. Of their silver, &c., they have made themselves idols—They have abused their wealth to idolatry, which will be the occasion of their destruction: see chap. ii. 8.

Verses 5, 6. Thy calf, O Samaria—Here God himself, who is the speaker, turns short upon Samaria, or the ten tribes; and, in a tone of dreadful indignation, upbraids their corrupt worship. Hath cast thee off—That is, "will profit thee nothing in dangers."—Grotius. As if he had said, As the people of Sa-

A. M. 3244. mine anger is kindled against them :
B. C. 760. ^b how long will it be ere they attain to innocency ?

6 For from Israel was it also : the workman made it ; therefore it is not God : but the calf of Samaria shall be broken in pieces.

7 For ⁱ they have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind : it hath no ^{A. M. 3244.}

^{B. C. 760.} ² stalk : the bud shall yield no meal :
if so be it yield, ^k the strangers shall swallow it up.

8 ¹ Israel is swallowed up : now ^{About} shall they be among the Gentiles ^{B. C. 765.}
^m as a vessel wherein is no pleasure.

^b Jeremiah xiii. 27.—ⁱ Proverbs xxii. 8 ; Chapter x. 12, 13.
² Or, standing corn.

^k Chapter vii. 9.—¹ 2 Kings xvii. 6.—^m Jeremiah xxii. 28 ;
xlviii. 38.

maria hath cast off that which is good, verse 3, so the calf, which they worship, shall not protect or deliver them from the evils coming upon them, now my anger is kindled against them. How long will it be ere they attain to innocency?—How long will it be ere they repent and reform? Bishop Horsley renders it, How long will they bear antipathy to pure religion? The Hebrew word, נָקִי, signifies purity, or cleanness generally ; hence moral purity, innocence. But here, says he, “I think it particularly denotes pure religion, or the purity of worship ; pure religion and undefiled, in opposition both to the superstitious practices of idolaters, and the false show of hypocrites. For from Israel was it also—Or, “from Israel came even this ; this thing, vile and abominable as it is, was his own invention ; not a thing that he had learned or borrowed from any other nations. Archbishop Newcome indeed says, ‘The Israelites may have originally borrowed this superstition from the Egyptians ;’ for in Egypt, he observes, ‘this species of animals were worshipped, the Apis at Memphis, and the Mnevis at Heliopolis.’ But the prophet expressly says, that the Israelites borrowed this superstition from nobody ; it was all their own. Indeed, what they had seen in Egypt was the worship of a living calf, not of the lifeless image of a calf, or of any other animal.”—Bishop Horsley. The workman made it, therefore it is not God—It is no more than the work of man, and therefore there is no divine power in it. But the calf of Samaria—Or, the calf of Beth-el, in the kingdom of Samaria, shall be broken in pieces—Whereby it shall be proved to all, that there is nothing divine in it. Horsley renders it, Verily, the calf of Samaria shall be reduced to atoms. So also Grotius understands the Hebrew expression, שִׁבְכֵי הָיָה, interpreting the noun שִׁבְכָה, as signifying, “minimum quidque in re quavis : ut scintillæ, fragmenta, segmenta ;” the smallest particle in any thing, as sparks, shivers, shreds ; Jerome says, atoms. This was done by the Assyrians, when they made an entire conquest of the ten tribes.

Verse 7. For they have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind, &c.—A proverbial expression, to signify, that as men’s works are, so must their reward be ; that they who sow iniquity shall reap vanity, Prov. xxii. 8. Their labour shall be fruitless, or shall turn to their hurt and damage : As if he had said, All the pains which the kings of Israel and their subjects had taken to enrich themselves, and to strengthen their kingdom, being built upon the foundation of apostacy and idolatry, shall turn to no better account, than countrymen expect from a blasted crop of corn ; and whatever advantage they make, it shall at last be a prey to foreigners, to the kings of Syria and Assyria.

Verse 8. Israel is swallowed up—Under this image the Hebrew language, the Greek, and our own, describe any sudden destruction, so complete as to leave no visible vestige of the thing remaining. The prophet speaks of what was future, as though it were already present ; and signifies that the Israelites would be as certainly carried captives into Assyria, as if they were already gone thither into captivity. Now shall they be among the Gentiles as a vessel, &c.—In a short time they shall be despised, as a vessel or utensil that is broken, or become useless. For they are gone up to Assyria—Namely, of their own accord, as the original expression, הָרָחֵק עָלוּ, seems to imply. So do also the versions of the LXX. and the Vulgate ; the former read, αυτοι ανεβησαν εις Ασσυριον, ipsi ascenderunt ad Assur ; they themselves have gone up to Assyria. This is not meant of their going into captivity. The captivity, though near at hand, was yet to come ; but this going up was past. It was a voluntary going up, and a crime ; a going up both for alliance, and also for idolatrous commerce. The captivity was to be the punishment. A wild ass alone by himself—The meaning is, that Ephraim was such ; that is, as Archbishop Newcome interprets it, Ephraim was like the solitary wild ass, he was as untamed to the yoke, and traversed the desert as earnestly in pursuit of idols, as the wild ass in quest of his mates. “Though wild asses,” says Pocock, “be often found in the deserts in whole herds, yet it is usual for some one of them to break away, and separate himself from his company, and run alone at random by himself ; and one so doing is here spoken of.” Ephraim hath hired lovers—He alludes to the flagitiousness of adulteresses hiring men to have commerce with them, to which he compares Israel’s procuring foreign allies with great expense, and relying on them, and not on God, for succour and protection. And the reference may be, not only to the bargain with Pul, but to the general profusion of the government in forming foreign alliances ; in which the latter kings, both of Israel and Judah, were equally culpable, as appears by the history of the collateral reigns of Ahaz and Pekah. It must be observed, “every forbidden alliance with idolaters was a part of the spiritual incontinence of the nation.”—Horsley.

A. M. 3244. 9 For ^a they are gone up to Assyria, ^a a wild ass alone by himself: Ephraim ^b hath hired ^c lovers.

10 Yea, though they have hired among the nations, now ^a will I gather them, and they shall ^a sorrow ^a a little for the burden of ^a the king of princes.

11 Because Ephraim hath made ^a many altars to sin, altars shall be made unto him to sin.

^a 2 Kings xv. 19.—^b Jer. ii. 24.—^c Isa. xxx. 6; Ezekiel xvi. 33, 34.—^d Heb. loves.—^e Ezekiel xvi. 37; Chap. x. 10. ⁴ Or, begin.—⁵ Or, in a little while, as Hag. ii. 6.—⁶ Isa. x. 8; Ezek. xxvi. 7; Dan. ii. 37.—⁷ Chap. xii. 11.—⁸ Deut. iv. 6, 8; Psa. cxix. 18; cxlvii. 19, 20.

Verse 10. Yea, though they have hired—Namely, allies; among the nations—And have been no way solicitous to gain my favour or help; now will I gather them—I will now (though they make so little account of my power) bring those very allies, namely, the Assyrians, against them. Here God tells them, that whatever sums they might offer, or expence they might be at, in order to raise armies of foreign auxiliaries, he would imbody those armies, he would press the men, paid by their money, into his own service against them. And they shall sorrow a little—Or, in a little time; for the burden of the king of princes—“They shall be severely galled by the yoke of the Assyrian king, and of the princes set over his several provinces.”—Newcome. Bishop Horsley, who thinks that the kings and princes, or rulers, of Israel are here intended, renders this clause differently, thus: And ere long they shall sorrow on account of the burden, the king and the rulers: that is, “Ere long the king and the rulers will lament the impolitic expence incurred in gifts and presents to their faithless allies, and the burden of taxes for that purpose laid upon the people.” The reading of מַשָּׂא, and rulers, “is supported,” says he, “by such a weight of authority, that I cannot but adopt it; and yet there is no difficulty in the construction of the common text. For it might be thus rendered: And ere long the rulers shall sorrow for the burden of the king, that is, for the burden imposed by the king [namely, the king of Israel] in taxes.”

Verses 11, 12. Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin—“Since the Israelites, forsaking that one altar at which alone God required them to serve him, idolatrously multiplied altars to themselves,—altars against God’s command; (to do which was manifestly a sin in them;) therefore shall those, their beloved altars, be accordingly occasions of great sin, and as such imputed to them to their condemnation.” The meaning is, that “God would give them up, to run on in their evil courses, till their iniquity was full, and they were ripe for destruction; and then that God would deliver them into the hands of their enemies, who should compel them to do that service at, and to, their idolatrous altars, which should appear a manifest punishment to them for those of their own. So should they

12 I have written to him ^a the great things of my law, but they were counted as a strange thing.

13 ^a They ^b sacrifice flesh for the sacrifices of mine offerings, and eat it; ^c but the LORD accepteth them not; ^d now will he remember their iniquity, and visit their sins: ^e they shall return to Egypt.

14 ^a For Israel hath forgotten ^b his Maker,

^a Jeremiah vii. 21; Zechariah vii. 6.—^b Or, In the sacrifice of mine offerings they, &c.—^c Jer. xiv. 10, 12; Ch. v. 6; ix. 4; Amos v. 22.—^d Chap. ix. 9; Amos viii. 7.—^e Deut. xxviii. 68; Chap. ix. 3, 6; xi. 5.—^f Deut. xxxii. 18.—^g Isa. xxix. 23; Eph. ii. 10.

be punished by that wherein they had offended.” —Pocock. I have written to him the great things of my law—Or, many things, as רַבִּי may be translated. The Vulgate renders it, multiplices leges meas, my manifold laws. That law which I gave them by Moses, containing rules excellent in themselves, and such as would have made them great in the eyes of their neighbours, they have disregarded, as if it had neither reason nor authority, and did not concern them: see Deut. iv. 6, 8.

Verse 13. They sacrifice flesh, &c., and eat it, but the Lord accepteth them not—They offer sacrifices indeed, but their sacrifices are not acceptable to God, not being offered with a pious and devout mind. Dr. Wheeler translates the clause, They have sacrificed the choicest sacrifices, and have eaten flesh: Jehovah taketh not delight therein. Now will he remember their iniquity, &c.—God supported the Jews, that they might support the true religion; which as they had now neglected to do, there was no reason why God should support and defend them against their enemies. They shall return to Egypt—Going into Egypt seems to have been a proverbial expression for extreme misery; and may here denote, that they should go into a state of captivity and bondage as bad as that which their forefathers had suffered in Egypt. Or else, taken literally, it might be intended to signify, that they should seek the alliance and friendship of Egypt, contrary to the faith they had given to the Assyrians, which would bring on their destruction. This proved to be the case, as the reader will see by consulting 2 Kings xvii. 4, 5, “The king of Israel sent messengers to So, king of Egypt, and brought no presents to the king of Assyria, as he had done year by year; therefore the king of Assyria shut him up, and bound him in prison. Then the king of Assyria came up throughout the land, took Samaria, and carried Israel away into Assyria.”

Verse 14. For Israel hath forgotten his Maker—Hath forgotten him who formed them into a people, preserved and advanced them, and conferred on them all those privileges wherein they excelled all other nations: either they have not remembered him at all, or have done it without reverence, gratitude, love, or consideration of the duty and service which they owe him. And buildeth temples—For idolatrous worship. And Judah hath multiplied

A. M. 3244. and ° buildeth temples; and Judah
B. C. 760. hath multiplied fenced cities: but ° I

° 1 Kings xii. 31.

fenced cities—To secure themselves from the invasion of the enemy. When the Jews saw what incursions were made upon the Israelites, or the ten tribes, by the Assyrians, they diligently set about fortifying their cities, thinking to find security in so doing, and putting greater confidence in their fortifications than in God's protection. But I will send a will send a fire upon his cities, and it shall devour the palaces thereof. A. M. 3244.

B. C. 760.

° Jer. xvii. 27; Amos ii. 5.

fire upon his cities—My judgments shall destroy them, as surely as if a fire had been kindled in them. Or the threatening may be interpreted literally; for when Sennacherib took all the fenced cities of Judah, except Jerusalem, he undoubtedly set fire to many of them, as conquerors were wont to do in those days.

CHAPTER IX.

The prophecy contained in this and the following chapter seems to regard the kingdom of Israel principally. Here, (1.) The Israelites, for their idolatry, are threatened with famine, captivity, want of divine ordinances, and the desolation of their country, 1-6. (2.) Because of the wickedness of their prophets and their oen, by which they were filling up the iniquities of their fathers, they are condemned to utter ruin, 7-10. (3.) For contempt of God's word and rod, corruption of his worship, and the wickedness of their rulers, they are threatened with the destruction of their children, and the rooting out of their posterity, 11-17.

A. M. 3244. REJOICE not, O Israel, for joy, as
B. C. 760. other people: for thou ° hast gone a whoring from thy God, thou hast loved
a ° reward ° upon every corn-floor.

2 ° The floor and the ° wine-press shall not

° Chap. iv. 12; v. 4, 7.—° Jeremiah xlv. 17; Chap. ii. 12.
° Or, in.—° Chap. ii. 9, 12.—° Or, wine-fat.—° Lev. xxv.
23; Jer. ii. 7; xvi. 18.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IX.

Verses 1, 2. Rejoice not, O Israel—It should seem that this prophecy was delivered at a time when the situation of public affairs was promising; perhaps after some signal success, which had given occasion to public rejoicings. As other people—Hebrew, כַּעֲמִי, as, or like, the nations, that is, the heathen nations, or the peoples, as Bishop Horsley renders it, paraphrasing the words thus: "Those national successes, which might be just cause of rejoicing to other people, are none to thee; for thou liest under the heavy sentence of God's wrath, for thy disloyalty to him; and all thy bright prospects will vanish, and terminate in thy destruction. The Gentiles were not guilty in an equal degree with the Israelites; for, although they sinned, it was not against the light of revelation, in contempt of the warnings of inspired prophets, or in breach of any express covenant." For thou hast gone a whoring from thy God—Hast been alienated from the love and service of God, and hast broken covenant with him by serving other gods, and thereby hast exposed thyself to his just displeasure. Thou hast loved a reward—Or hire, (such as was given by adulterers to lewd women,) upon every corn-floor—Thou hast loved to see thy floor full, and hast attributed thy plenty to thy idols, and rejoiced before them at the ingathering of thy corn. Bishop Horsley renders the clause, Thou hast set thy heart upon the fee of prostitution, feed them, and the new wine shall fail in her. A. M. 3244.

B. C. 760.

3 They shall not dwell in ° the Lord's land;
° but Ephraim shall return to Egypt, and ° they shall eat unclean things ° in Assyria.

° Chapter viii. 13; xi. 5; Not into Egypt itself, but into another bondage as bad as that.—° Ezekiel iv. 13; Daniel i. 8.
° 2 Kings xvii. 6; Chap. xi. 11.

namely, says he, "the fruits of the earth; which they ascribed to the heavenly bodies, and other physical agents which they worshipped." The floor—The corn which is gathered into the floor; and the wine-press—The wine that is pressed out into it; shall not feed them—Shall not nourish and strengthen the idolaters. And the new wine shall fail in her—Samaria and all Israel expect a full vintage; but they expect it from their idols, and therefore shall be disappointed. Archbishop Newcome renders it, The choice wine shall deceive them, or, shall lie unto them, as the word may be rendered. We find similar expressions in Horace, as fundus mendax, the lying farm, and spes mentita seges, the crop-deceiving hope.

Verse 3. They shall not dwell in the Lord's land, but Ephraim shall return into Egypt—God will turn them out of that inheritance he gave to their fathers, and they shall be carried into captivity or become exiles a second time in Egypt. When Shalmaneser made the ten tribes captive, such as were able to escape the conqueror fled into Egypt, having implored the aid of that country against the Assyrians. And they shall eat unclean things in Assyria—They have transgressed my law, in eating unclean things in their own land; and the time shall come when they shall be forced by their imperious masters the Assyrians to eat unclean things, whether they will or not. They will have no choice left

A. M. 3244. 4 ^h They shall not offer wine-offerings to the LORD, ⁱ neither shall they be pleasing unto him: ^k their sacrifices shall be unto them as the bread of mourners; all that eat thereof shall be polluted: for their bread ^l for their soul shall not come into the house of the LORD.

5 What will ye do in ^m the solemn day, and in the day of the feast of the LORD?

^h Chapter iii. 4.—ⁱ Jer. vi. 20; Chapter viii. 13.—^k Deut. xxvi. 14.—^l Lev. xvii. 11.—^m Chap. ii. 11.—³ Heb. spoil.
^a Chap. vii. 16; Verse 3.

them, but, as slaves, will be forced to eat what is given them.

Verse 4. They shall not offer wine-offerings to the Lord—They have omitted to make wine-offerings to the Lord when they had it in their power, and when it was their duty to do it; and in the time of their captivity they will be willing to do it, but shall not have it in their power. Wine-offerings were appointed to be offered with the morning and evening sacrifice; the sacrifice representing Christ, and pardon by him, and the wine-offering the Spirit of grace. The daily repetition of the sacrifice continued their pardon and peace. All this, it is here threatened, should be withheld from these captives. Neither shall they be pleasing unto him: their sacrifices shall be, &c.—The words in this sentence are somewhat transposed in our translation. They stand otherwise in most other versions, namely, Neither shall their sacrifices be pleasing unto him, but as the bread of mourners among them—That is, their sacrifices shall be no more pleasing to God than if they were the bread of mourners, or that which is prepared for those who are mourning for the dead, of which no part was ever offered, or so much as brought into the temple. Mourners for the dead were, during their time of mourning, unqualified to attend upon God's service; and any thing they had eaten of was accounted unfit to be offered to God: see note on Deut. xxvi. 14. All that eat thereof—Namely, of the sacrifices here spoken of; shall be polluted—Rendered impure. For their bread for their soul—The offerings they make for the expiation of their sin, or for an atonement for their souls, (see Lev. xvii. 11,) shall not come into the house of the Lord—Shall not be fit to be brought into the temple.

Verses 5, 6. What will ye do in the solemn day—What will you do in your captivity, when any of your solemn or festival days come? When you shall find yourselves far from your own country, without temple, without prophets, without priests, without sacrifices, without solemn assemblies; what will be your sentiments? You will doubtless be willing to abstain from labour on those days, as you were wont to do; but your masters will not permit that, but force you to your wonted employments. Though the Israelites of the ten tribes were schismatics, they did not go up to the temple at Jerusalem,

6 For lo, they are gone because A. M. 3244. of ³ destruction: ^a Egypt shall gather B. C. 760. them up, Memphis shall bury them: ⁴ the ⁵ pleasant places for their silver, ^o nettles shall possess them: thorns shall be in their tabernacles.

7 The days of visitation are come, the days of recompense are come; Israel shall know it: the prophet is a fool, ⁶ the ^p spiritual man is they omitted not to celebrate, in their own manner, the feasts of the Lord in their own country; and as these solemnities were always accompanied with festivity and rejoicing, it must have been a great mortification to them to be no longer able to celebrate them in the land of their captivity: see Calmet. For lo, they are gone because of destruction—Some are already withdrawn, because of the desolation that cometh. A great many of the ten tribes fled into Egypt, when they saw their country laid waste by the Assyrians. The prophet here threatens these, that they should have no better a fate than their brethren who were carried away into Assyria; but should die in Egypt, and never see their native country any more. Egypt shall gather them up—Or, gather them, as the word is translated Ezek. xxix. 5. It signifies the same in both places, as if it had been said they should be buried there. The pleasant places, &c., nettles shall possess them—Their fine houses, which they have purchased at vast prices, shall be ruined, and lie in rubbish till they be overrun with nettles. This signified a vast desolation. These two verses are thus translated by Bishop Horsley: "What will ye do for the season of solemn assembly, and for the festival of Jehovah? Behold, all are gone! Total devastation! Egypt shall gather them. Memphis shall bury them. Their valuables of silver! The nettle shall dispossess them, and the thistle, in their dwellings."

⁴ Or, their silver shall be desired, the nettle, &c.—⁵ Heb. the desire.—^o Isa. v. 6; xxxii. 13; xxxiv. 13; Chap. x. 8.—⁶ Heb. man of the spirit.—^p Ezek. xiii. 3; Mic. ii. 11; Zeph. iii. 4.

Verse 7. The days of visitation are come—The days of punishment, or retribution, are at hand. This resembles the well-known line of Virgil:—

Venit summa dies et ineluctabile tempus
Dardaniæ.—ÆN. lib. ii. l. 324.

The fatal day, th' appointed hour is come,
The time of Troy's irrevocable doom.

Israel shall know it—The Hebrew is only, Israel shall know, namely, that I have spoken the truth; that is, in denouncing misery and calamity against them, as the Chaldee supplies the ellipsis. God's judgments upon the ten tribes shall be so evident, that the most incredulous shall not be able to deny it. Others interpret this clause in connection with the following words, thus: Israel shall know that the prophet was foolish, that the man of the spirit was mad, namely, who encouraged the Israelites to continue in their sins, by promising them peace and

A. M. 3244. mad, for the multitude of thine iniquity, and the great hatred.

8 The ^a watchman of Ephraim was with my God: but the prophet is a snare of a fowler in all his ways, and hatred ⁷ in the house of his God.

9 ¹ They have deeply corrupted themselves, as in the days of ^a Gibeah: ^t therefore he will remember their iniquity, he will visit their sins.

10 I found Israel like grapes in the wilderness; I saw your fathers as ^u the first ripe in the fig-tree ^x at her first time: but they went to ^y Baal-

^a Jer. vi. 17; xxxi. 6; Ezek. iii. 17; xxxiii. 7.—⁷ Or, against.
¹ Isa. xxxi. 6; Chap. x. 9.—^u Judg. xix. 22.—^t Chap. viii. 13.
^a Isa. xxviii. 4; Mic. vii. 1.—^x Chap. ii. 15.—^y Num. xxv. 3; Psa. cvi. 28.—^u Chap. iv. 14.—^u Jer. xi. 13; Judg. vi. 32.

prosperity notwithstanding their corrupt manners. Bishop Horsley's translation of the passage is peculiarly spirited and sublime: The days of visitation are come! The days of retribution are come! Israel shall know it. Stupid is the prophet! The man of the spirit is gone mad! "Stupid," he remarks, "if he himself discerneth not the signs of the times. Gone mad, if, aware of the impending judgment, he flatters the people with delusive hopes; and by that conduct makes himself an instrument in bringing on that public ruin, in which he himself must be involved." For the multitude of thine iniquity, and the great hatred—Namely, which thou deservest. Or probably the sense is, as Bishop Horsley's version gives it, In proportion to the greatness of thine iniquity, great also is the vengeance.

Verses 8, 9. The watchman of Ephraim was with my God—Or, as some read it, on the authority of divers MSS., אלהי, his God, or, as the LXX. read it, with God. "The watchman is here evidently a title by which some faithful prophet is distinguished from the temporizers and seducers. But who in particular is this watchman, thus honourably distinguished, and how is he with his God? I think," says Bishop Horsley, "the allusion is to Elijah, and his miraculous translation. 'Elijah, that faithful watchman, that resolute opposer of idolatry in the reign of Ahab and Jezebel, is now with God, receiving the reward of his fidelity in the enjoyment of the beatific vision. But the prevaricating prophets, which now are, are the victims of judicial delusion.'" They have deeply corrupted themselves, as in the days of Gibeah—They have not only sinned lightly, or trivially, but have sunk into the deepest wickedness, and have become as bad altogether as the men of Gibeah were in former times: see Judg. xix. 15, &c. Therefore he will remember their iniquity, &c.—God, who hateth such workers of iniquity, will not pardon their crimes, but severely punish them.

Verse 10. I found Israel like grapes in the wilderness—The sense is, as the traveller, passing through the deserts of Arabia, is greatly delighted if peor, and ^z separated themselves ^a unto that shame; ^b and their abominations were according as they loved.

11 As for Ephraim their glory shall fly away like a bird, from the birth, and from the womb, and from the conception.

12 ^c Though they bring up their children, yet ^d will I bereave them, that there shall not be a man left: yea, ^e wo also to them when I ^f depart from them!

13 Ephraim, ^g as I saw Tyrus, is planted in a pleasant place: ^h but Ephraim shall bring forth his children to the murderer.

^b Psalm lxxxi. 12; Ezek. xx. 8; Amos iv. 5.—^c Job xxvii. 14.—^d Deut. xxviii. 41, 62.—^e Deut. xxxi. 17; 2 Kings xvii. 18; Chap. v. 6.—^f 1 Sam. xxviii. 15, 16.—^g Ezek. xxvi. 27, 28.—^h Verse 16; Chap. xiii. 16.

he happen to find in his way vines bearing grapes, so was Israel anciently delighted in by God. This relates particularly to their first entering into covenant with God, and their promises of ready obedience: see Exod. xix. 8, and xxiv. 3; Deut. v. 27–29. I saw your fathers—Whom I brought out of Egypt; as the first ripe in the fig-tree at her first time—As figs of the first season, and the earliest of that growth, which are the most valued and desired. But they went to Baal-peor—To the temple and worship of the god of the Moabites; and separated themselves unto that shame—That obscenity, so Horsley; that is, they consecrated themselves to that shameful idol; such as its worshippers ought to have been ashamed of, and as finally would cause shame to them. The word ינוו, they were separated, alludes to the order of the Nazarites, who were in a peculiar sense set apart for God's service; and, in like manner, these separated, or dedicated, themselves to the service of that filthy idol, Baal-peor, that shame, or shameful thing, as it is expressed Jer. xi. 13. And their abominations were according as they loved—They set up and worshipped other idols, according to their own fancies. Houbigant reads this clause, Abominations became as their love: and Bishop Horsley, As my love of them, so were their abominations; and he remarks, "the love gratuitous, the abominations without inducement, but from mere depravity; the love the most tender, the abominations enormous."

Verses 11–13. As for Ephraim, or, Ephraim! their glory shall fly away like a bird—What they make their boast of so much shall depart from them. The fruitfulness of their women seems to be the thing here spoken of. From the birth—Their children shall die soon after they are born; from the womb—They shall be untimely births, or abortions; and from the conception—They shall not even be conceived as they were wont to be. Dr. Wheeler renders this clause, They shall not bring forth, nor bear in the womb, nor conceive. Though they bring up, &c.—If some of them happen to bring up their children to a state of youth, or manhood, yet will I

A. M. 3244. 14 Give them, O LORD: what wilt
B. C. 760. thou give? give them ^a a miscarrying womb and dry breasts.

15 All their wickedness ^k is in Gilgal: for there I hated them: ^l for the wickedness of their doings I will drive them out of my house, I will love them no more: ^m all their princes are revolters.

^l Luke xxiii. 29.—^a Heb. that casteth the fruit.—^k Chap. iv.
15; xii. 11.—^l Chap. i. 6.

bereave them—Yet still shall they be deprived of them, for they shall be slain in war, or carried away captive. Yea, wo also to them when I depart from them—They shall suffer still greater and greater mi-series when I wholly withdraw my protection from them, Deut. xxxi. 17; 2 Kings xvii. 18–23. *Ephraim,
as I saw Tyrus, is planted in a pleasant place*—
The situation of Ephraim, and particularly of the royal city, Samaria, is as pleasant as that of Tyre:
see Ezek. xxvii. 3. But Ephraim shall bring forth, &c., to the murderer—Shall be obliged to deliver up his children to his enemies. Instead of Tyre, some interpreters render the word צור, a rock, which it generally signifies, and translate the passage,
Ephraim, which, when I looked upon him, was as a rock planted in a pleasant place, shall bring forth, &c. So Houbigant, and to the same sense Newcome and Horsley.

Verse 14. Give them, O Lord: what wilt thou give?
—The prophet here speaks as one greatly agitated, and at a loss what to say upon what he had just heard; but at last concludes with beseeching God
rather to let the women be barren, or miscarry; or,
if they brought forth children, have no milk in their breasts to give them, that they might die soon after their birth, rather than that they should grow up to be slain by their enemies before their parents' eyes, or carried into captivity; or, as it is expressed in the foregoing verse, that their parents should be driven to the hard necessity of bringing them forth for the murderer. Some interpret the verse thus: Give them a miscarrying womb, &c., “as a punishment for having inhumanly exposed their infants to death, by sacrificing them to their false gods; or, for having exposed them to the cruelty of the Assyrians, who destroyed them in war. The present passage is strikingly emphatical. But it is to be considered rather as a prediction of what was to happen as a punishment of their crimes, than as an imprecation.”

Verses 15–17. All their wickedness is in Gilgal— Gilgal is notorious, and has been so of old, for the wickedness of its inhabitants. There I hated them
—There of old (or therefore) they were an abomination to me. “The first great offence of the Israelites, after their entrance into the Holy Land, was committed while they were encamped in Gilgal;
namely, the sacrilegious peculation of Achan, (Josh.

16 Ephraim is smitten. their root A. M. 3244
is dried up, they shall bear no B. C. 760.
fruit: yea, ⁿ though they bring forth, yet will I slay even ^o the beloved fruit of their womb.

17 My God will cast them away, because they did not hearken unto him: and they shall be ^o wanderers among the nations.

^m Isaiah i. 23.—ⁿ Verse 13.—^o Heb. the desires, Ezek. xxiv.
21.—^o Deut. xxviii. 64, 65.

vii.,) and to this, it seems, these words allude. There, says God, of old, was my quarrel with them.” It must be observed further here, that “Gilgal was the place where the armies of Israel, upon their entering Canaan, first encamped; where Joshua set up the twelve stones, taken by God’s command out of the midst of Jordan, in memorial of the miraculous passage through the river. There the first passover was kept, and the fruits of the promised land first enjoyed. There the captain of the Lord’s host appeared to Joshua. There the rite of circumcision, which had been omitted during the forty years of the wandering of the people in the wilderness, was renewed. And, in the days of the prophet Samuel, Gilgal appears to have been an approved place of worship and burnt-offering. But, in later times, it appears from Hosea, and his cotemporary, Amos,
that it became a place of great resort for idolatrous purposes. And these are the wickednesses in Gilgal, of which the prophet here speaks.”—Horsley. I will drive them out of my house—That is, I will no longer consider them as my family, my children, and my servants. All their princes are revolters—All their chief men, their rulers and magistrates, have revolted from me and my commands; either by worshipping false gods, or by likening me to images of their own forming, and by worshipping me under the emblems of them. Ephraim is smitten, &c.—
Or rather, shall be smitten, namely, with barrenness;
for that is the punishment which is here chiefly mentioned. Bishop Horsley renders the clause,
Ephraim is blighted; their root is dried up, they shall produce no fruit: or, according to the construction and rendering of the Syriac, Ephraim is smitten at the root, he is dried up; so that he shall bear no fruit; which is also, in substance, the version of the LXX. Yea, though they bring forth—And if any should bring forth; yet will I slay the beloved fruit, &c.—I will soon take away the children,
whose birth afforded them great joy and satisfaction,
and in whom they placed their delight. *My God
will cast them away*—The prophet here calls Jehovah his God; as much as to say he would no longer be the God of the Israelites in general, and no more own them for his people, but leave them to wander and be dispersed among the other nations. They were afterward called by the name of the Διασπορα, or dispersed among the Gentiles.

CHAPTER X.

In this chapter, (1,) God charges the people of Israel with many sins: in particular, with gross corruptions in the worship of God, and in the administration of the civil government, and also with imitating the sins of their fathers; on all which accounts he threatens them with humbling and destructive judgments, 1-11. (2,) He earnestly exhorts them to repentance and reformation, and threatens them with ruin if they did not comply with the exhortation, 12-15.

A. M. 3258. B. C. 746. ISRAEL is "an empty vine, he bringeth forth fruit unto himself: according to the multitude of his fruit he hath increased the altars; according to the goodness of his land they have made goodly images.

2 Their heart is divided; now shall they be found faulty: he shall break down their altars, he shall spoil their images. A. M. 3258 B. C. 746.

3 For now they shall say, We have no king, because we feared not the Lord; what then should a king do to us?

4 They have spoken words, swearing falsely in making a covenant: thus judgment spring-

^a Nah. ii. 2.—¹ Or, a vine emptying the fruit which it giveth.
^b Chap. viii. 11; xii. 11.—^c Chap. viii. 4.—² Heb. statues, or, standing images.

³ Or, He hath divided their heart.—^d 1 Kings xviii. 21; Matt. vi. 24.—^e Heb. behead.—^e Chapter iii. 4; xi. 5; Mic. iv. 9; Verse 7.

NOTES ON CHAPTER X.

Verse 1. Israel is an empty vine—The Hebrew, נֶפֶן בֶּזֶק, may either signify, an empty, or emptying vine. If we take it in the former sense, the meaning is, Israel is a vine which has no fruit on it; that is, that they brought forth no fruit to God, had no true worshippers of him among them, none that truly served and glorified him; for it is said in the following words that he brought forth fruit unto himself. If the expression be understood in the other sense, and be rendered an emptying vine, the sense of the clause is, Israel is a vine which casteth its grapes, that is, does not bring them forth to perfection. And by the next words, he bringeth forth fruit unto himself, may be understood, not only that they used the blessings which God had given them according to their pleasure, and to the gratification of their lusts, but that their apparent good works proceeded from selfish motives, and not from a regard to the glory and will of God. The LXX. give the expression yet another sense, ἀμπελος ἐνκλήματωσα, a vine well furnished with branches: with which accords the Vulgate, vitis frondosa. Thus interpreted, the words may be considered as indicative of their national prosperity, increasing population, and military strength. According to the multitude of his fruit—By the fruit here spoken of we are not to understand good works, but their abundant crops, numerous flocks and herds, and public opulence; he hath increased the altars—When their land yielded a most plentiful harvest, and their flocks, and herds, and wealth increased, this plenty was employed on multiplying their idols. Their idolatrous altars were as numerous as their national prosperity was great, and were increased in proportion thereto. And according to the goodness, &c., they have made goodly images—Imagining that the goodness of their land was a blessing from their idols. Bishop Horsley reads here, Like the beauty of his land he made the beauty of his images, interpreting the meaning to be, "That the exquisite workmanship of his images was as remarkable as the natural beauty of his country."

Verses 2, 3. Their heart is divided—Between God and their idols, or between God and the world. Now shall they be found faulty—As this was their sin, so it is here threatened, that the effects thereof should prove, and be an open manifestation of their guilt. The Hebrew יִשְׁמְנוּ יָדָם, may be rendered, now shall they be punished, or, treated as guilty. So the Vulgate, nunc interibunt, now, that is, forthwith, shall they perish. He shall break down their altars, &c.—That is, God shall cause their idolatrous altars to be broken down, namely, by the Assyrians. For now they shall say—They shall see and feel, and be compelled to own; We have no king—Absolutely none, or no such king as we need and expected. This is thought by some commentators to relate to the time of anarchy, or the interregnum which continued for eight or nine years between the murder of Pekah and the settlement of Hoshea on the throne; because we feared not the Lord—They shall be sensible that their forsaking the Lord for idols, and their casting off his fear, is the true cause of all their calamities; and particularly of their being deprived of the blessing of a wise, just, and good civil government. What then—Or rather, But what should a king do for us? A king could not save us without the help of God. The verse, however, seems rather to refer to the time of their captivity, and the sense probably is, "After Israel shall be carried captive into the country of their enemies, and shall have no king over their nation, they shall then acknowledge that this misfortune has happened to them through their own fault, and because they have not feared the Lord. And they shall acknowledge that it would profit them nothing to have kings, without having also the protection of God."—Calmet.

Verse 4. They have spoken words—Mere empty words; swearing falsely in making a covenant—This may be spoken either of their breaking their solemn covenant with God, (see chap. v. 7,) or of their treachery toward their kings, against whom they had formed several conspiracies: see 2 Kings xv. 10, 14, 25, 30. Thus judgment—Divine vengeance; springeth up as hemlock, &c.—Destructive calamities, inflicted by the righteous judgment of God, will necessarily abound, as hemlock does in the furrows of a field. Bishop Horsley renders

A. M. 3258. eth up ^f as hemlock in the furrows of
B. C. 746. the field.

5 The inhabitants of Samaria shall fear because of ^g the calves of ^h Beth-aven: for the people thereof shall mourn over it, and ⁱ the priests thereof that rejoiced on it, ^j for the glory thereof, because it is departed from it.

6 It shall be also carried unto Assyria, for a present to ^k King Jareb: Ephraim shall receive shame, and Israel shall be ashamed ^l of his own counsel.

^f Deut. xxix. 18; Amos v. 7; vi. 12; Acts viii. 23; Heb. xii. 15.—^g 1 Kings xii. 28, 29; Chap. viii. 5, 6.—^h Chap. iv. 15. ⁱ Or, Chemarim, 2 Kings xxiii. 5; Zeph. i. 4.—^j 1 Sam. iv. 21, 22; Chap. ix. 11.

the verse, Negotiate, (or, talk words,) swear false oaths, ratify a treaty; nevertheless judgment shall sprout up, like hemlock over the ridges of the field. Which version he paraphrases thus: "Negotiate alliances with one power after another; make a treaty with the Assyrians; bind yourselves to it with an oath; break your oath, and make a new alliance with the Egyptian. In spite of all measures of crooked policy, all acquisitions of foreign aid and support, judgment is springing up."

Verse 5. The inhabitants of Samaria—That is, the kingdom of Israel; shall fear—"Be in a consternation."—Horsley. Because of the calves of Beth-aven—The Jewish writers have a tradition, that the golden calf at Dan was taken away by Tiglath-pileser, when he subdued Galilee, 2 Kings xv. 29; and the other at Beth-el, (here called Beth-aven: see note on chap. iv. 15,) by order of Shalmaneser, of which probably this is a prophecy. For the people thereof shall mourn over it—Hebrew, אכל עליו, shall grieve for him; and the priests thereof that rejoiced in it—Being fed, clothed, and enriched by it, shall now sorrow over it; for the glory thereof—The riches of its temple; because it is departed—The Assyrians either broke it, or carried it away into Assyria. Both priests and people shall mourn and be distressed when they see it disgraced.

Verses 6–8. It—The golden calf; shall be carried into Assyria—It was the custom of the eastern people, and also of the Romans, to carry away the gods of the conquered countries. For a present to King Jareb—See note on chap. v. 13. The king of Assyria is meant, whose dependant and tributary the king of Israel now was. Ephraim shall receive shame—They shall be ashamed to find that the idol in which they trusted could not defend them or itself from being disgraced and taken away. Bishop Horsley's version here is, Ephraim shall be overtaken in sound sleep, namely, in a dream of security, when nothing will be less in his thoughts than danger; and Israel shall be disgraced by his own politics; that is, the politics of the treaties of alliance, mentioned verse 4. An impolitic alliance with the king of Egypt was the immediate occasion of Shalmaneser's rupture with Hoshea, which ended in the captivity of the ten tribes. As for Samaria, her king

7 ^m As for Samaria, her king is cut off as the foam upon ⁿ the water. A. M. 3258. B. C. 746.

8 ⁿ The high places also of Aven, ^o the sin of Israel, shall be destroyed: ^p the thorn and the thistle shall come up on their altars; ^q and they shall say to the mountains, Cover us; and to the hills, Fall on us.

9 ^r O Israel, thou hast sinned from the days of Gibeah: there they stood: ^s the battle in Gibeah against the children of iniquity did not overtake them.

^k Chap. v. 13.—^l Chap. xi. 6.—^m Verses 3, 15.—ⁿ Heb. the face of the water.—^o Chap. iv. 15.—^p Deut. ix. 21; 1 Kings xii. 30.—^q Chap. ix. 6.—^r Isa. ii. 19; Luke xxiii. 30; Rev. vi. 16; ix. 6.—^s Chap. ix. 9.—^t Judg. xx.

is cut off—Or, more literally, according to the Hebrew, Samaria is cut off, (or destroyed,) with her king; or, by a small alteration of the pointing, Her king is as the foam upon the water—Namely, as a bubble, which no sooner swells than it bursts: as if he had said, Many of her kings have rapidly passed away by assassination: and Hoshea shall soon be cut off by the king of Assyria. The high places also—The temples and altars dedicated to idolatrous worship, and usually placed on hills and mountains; of Aven—Or, Beth-aven; the sin of Israel—That is, the temples and altars, in and by which Israel has so greatly sinned, shall be destroyed, shall be entirely demolished; so that the thorn and the thistle shall come upon their altars—That is, their altar shall become such heaps of ruins, and the places around them be made so desolate, that thorns and thistles shall overrun and cover them. And they shall say to the mountains, Cover us—These words express the confusion and despair to which the Israelites should be reduced by the destruction of their country. Our Lord has made use of the same words, to denote the extremity of the Jews in the last siege of Jerusalem; and St. John, in the Revelation, to set forth the terror of the wicked in the day of judgment. They express also the great consternation of the wicked when any of God's singular judgments overtake them, whose guilt prompts them to endeavour to hide themselves, and they even run into the darkest caves and holes of rocks to secure themselves.

Verse 9. O Israel, thou hast sinned from the days of Gibeah—This is not the first of thy sinning, O Israel, for long ago there was the greatest corruption of manners, and the most flagrant wickedness in Gibeah; and thou hast continued to be wicked ever since that time: see Judg. xix. Some render the words, Thou hast sinned more than in the days of Gibeah. Thou hast been guilty of more atrocious crimes than that committed in that place. There—That is, upon that occasion, namely, the quarrel with the tribe of Benjamin, on account of the outrage of the men of Gibeah. They stood—Israel stood there in array, prepared for the attack. This relates to the war which the rest of the Israelites made against the Benjamites, because they would not deliver up

A. M. 3258. 10 ¹ It is in my desire that I
B. C. 746. should chastise them; and ² the people shall be gathered against them, ³ when they shall bind themselves in their two furrows.

11 And Ephraim is as ⁴ a heifer that is taught, and loveth to tread out the corn; but I

¹ Deut. xxviii. 63.—² Jer. xvi. 16; Ezek. xxiii. 46, 47; Ch. viii. 10.—³ Or, when I shall bind them for their two transgressions.

the men of Gibeah, who had so shamefully and cruelly abused the Levite's concubine: see Judg. xx. The battle in Gibeah, &c., did not overtake them—By them here is meant not the children of iniquity, but the Israelites who warred against the Benjamites, because they would not deliver up these sinners; and the sense of the expression, the battle did not overtake them, is, that they were not overcome in this their attempt to inflict a just punishment on the perpetrators of a flagrant iniquity; for, though they were overcome in two battles, yet at last they gained an entire victory, and cut off all the Benjamites but six hundred: see notes on Judg. xx.

Verse 10. It is my desire that I should chastise them—Then I protected and gave them success, but now it is my desire that they should suffer due punishment; and I will bring punishment upon them. And the people shall be gathered against them—Either the Assyrians, whose alliance they formerly sought after; or those people whose idolatry they had complied with. When they shall bind themselves in their two furrows—The LXX. give a much plainer and easier sense of the words, who follow the marginal reading of the Hebrew, and render it, When I shall chastise them for their two iniquities; namely, the calves of Dan and Beth-el. Bishop Horsley, however, understands the passage in a sense somewhat similar to that given in our translation. His version of it is, When they are tethered down to their two furrows, which he explains as follows: "When they are tied to their two faults; that is, when they are reduced to a situation of such difficulty and danger, as to have no hope of deliverance by any measures of human policy, in which alone they place their confidence, but by choosing one or other of two alliances, the Egyptian or the Assyrian; in the forming of either of which they are criminal, having been repeatedly warned against all foreign alliances."

Verse 11. Ephraim is a heifer that is taught—Or, that is teachable; and loveth to tread out the corn—In opposition to ploughing; that is, loves the booty not gained by its own labour; or to tread out, and freely eat of the corn which is not its own. The mouth of the ox which trod out the corn was not muzzled. But I passed over—Or caused a yoke to pass over; her fair neck—Laid a light yoke upon her. Ephraim being here compared to a heifer, every thing that is said about him is therefore expressed in the same way as if a heifer were really spoken of. The meaning, laying aside the figurative expression, is, that God imposed a law upon Eph-

A. M. 3258. passed over upon ⁸ her fair neck: I
B. C. 746. will make Ephraim to ride; Judah shall plough, and Jacob shall break his clods.

12 ¹ Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy; ² break up your fallow ground: for it is time to seek the LORD, till he come and rain righteousness upon you.

sions, or in their two habitations.—³ Jer. l. 11; Micah iv. 13. ⁴ Heb. the beauty of her neck.—⁵ Prov. xviii. 21.—⁶ Jer. iv. 3.

raim, or the Israelites, to direct and govern them. Will make Ephraim to ride—It seems this should rather be rendered, I will ride upon Ephraim, that is, I will be his ruler or director: those who had the management of oxen or heifers in those countries, used often to ride upon them. Thus Bishop Horsley: "This and the following clause give the image of a husbandman mounting his bullock to direct it over the corn." Judah shall plough, and Jacob shall break his clods—By Jacob here is meant Israel, or the ten tribes, as separated from the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin; and the clause seems to signify that the kingdom of Judah should be superior to that of Israel. Or, the general sense of the verse may be, that the descendants of Jacob should be employed in servile offices by their enemies. Bishop Horsley interprets this difficult passage differently, thus: "The first three clauses of this verse express what had been done for the instruction of Ephraim by the Mosaic institution. The last two predict the final conversion of the Ephraimites, with the rest of the people, and their restoration to a condition of national splendour and prosperity. As if he had said, Notwithstanding the judgments that are to fall upon Ephraim, he was long under the training of my holy law; and the effect of that early discipline shall not be ultimately lost. I will, in the end, bring Ephraim to obedience. Judah shall be diligent in the works I prepare for him; and the whole race of Jacob shall take part in the same labours of the spiritual field, with profit and advantage to themselves."

Verse 12. Sow to yourselves in righteousness.—Exercise yourselves in the works of righteousness and holiness, in the performance of all duties due both to God and man. Reap in mercy.—And then God, of his grace and mercy, will, in due time, bestow an abundant reward upon you. Break up your fallow ground—Your hearts are as ground overrun with weeds, which have need to be ploughed and broken up by conviction, humiliation, and godly sorrow for sin, that good seed may be sown in them. For it is time—High time, if you mean to do it at all, and a fit season for it, 2 Cor. vi. 2, now that troubles are near; to seek the Lord—To seek reconciliation and peace with him, to seek his favour, and a conformity to his will. Seek him, with earnest desire and persevering diligence, in the use of all the means which he hath appointed. Till he come and rain righteousness upon you—That is, pour down his grace and blessings upon you, according to what he has promised.

A. M. 3258. 13 ^a Ye have ploughed wickedness,
B. C. 746. ye have reaped iniquity; ye have eaten
the fruit of lies: because thou didst trust in thy way, in the multitude of thy mighty men.

14 ^b Therefore shall a tumult arise among thy people, and all thy fortresses shall be spoiled, as

^a Job iv. 8; Proverbs xxii. 8; Chapter viii. 7; Gal. vi. 7, 8.
^b Chap. xiii. 16.

Verses 13-15. Ye have ploughed wickedness—Instead of working righteousness, (verse 12,) you have taken a great deal of pains in the service of sin, to compass your wicked designs. Ye have reaped iniquity—Ye have, in return, received the fruit of iniquity, namely, punishment, or calamity. Ye have eaten the fruit of lies—Fed yourselves with vain hopes, which have deceived and will deceive you. Or, you have trusted to that which has been only specious, not really satisfying or profitable. Because thou didst trust in thy way—Thy own carnal projects and sinful contrivances, particularly the idolatry at Dan and Beth-el. In the multitude of thy mighty men—The next lie, or false ground of their confidence, was the wisdom and valour of their great men. Therefore shall a tumult arise—A terrible outcry, as of men affrighted at the news of the enemies' approach. And all thy fortresses shall be spoiled, &c.—This seems to be a prophecy of the taking of Samaria by Shalmaneser, which put a final period to the kingdom of Israel, 2 Kings xvii. 6. It held out a siege of three years, which probably provoked Shalmaneser to treat it with the severity which he used, when he made himself master of it. The only difficulty in this verse is, what place or person is alluded to by the words, as Shalman spoiled Beth-arbel in the day of battle. It is supposed that by Shalman is meant Shalmaneser; and that Beth-arbel was a place in Armenia which he took and spoiled, putting the inhabitants to the sword without any distinction either of age or sex. But it cannot be said with certainty, that this supposition is founded on fact. Some other conquest, by some other person, might possibly be meant. But it is not material to know this. It was some place which had been treated with great severity by the conqueror, and such treatment the prophet denounces Samaria should meet with. It is worthy of remark,

Shalman spoiled ^c Beth-arbel in the A. M. 3258.
day of battle: ^d the mother was dash- B. C. 746.
ed in pieces upon her children.

15 So shall Beth-el do unto you because of ^e your great wickedness: in a morning ^f shall the king of Israel utterly be cut off.

^c 2 Kings xviii. 34; xix. 13.—^d Chap. xiii. 16.—^e Heb. the evil of your evil.—^f Verse 7.

however, that the Vulgate, St. Jerome, and the LXX. (see the Alexandrine MS.) suppose that the history alluded to is Gideon's destruction of Zalmunna. So shall Beth-el do unto you—"This is the fruit of your worshipping the golden calves at Beth-el and Dan. As it happened to the city above mentioned, so shall it happen to you, because of your iniquities." In a morning—That is, suddenly, quickly, and unexpectedly; or after a night of adversity, when they thought the morning of prosperity was come; shall the king of Israel be cut off—And the whole state and government of Israel be put an end to along with him. This seems to be spoken of Hoshea, the last king of Israel, who, in the sixth year of his reign, was shut up in prison by the king of Assyria, who, in three years more, made himself master of the whole kingdom of Israel, and carried the inhabitants of it into captivity. The Vulgate, (which, with the LXX. and the Syriac, carries this clause to the next chapter,) instead of בִּשְׁחָר, in the morning, seems to have read בִּשְׁחָר, as the morning, rendering the clause, sicut mane transit, pertransit rex Israel: "As the morning passes away, so passes away the king of Israel." This reading Bishop Horsley adopts, and translates to nearly the same sense, thus: As the morning is brought to nothing, to nothing shall the king of Israel be brought: observing, "The sudden and total destruction of the monarchy of the ten tribes is compared to the sudden and total extinction of the beauties of the dawn in the sky, by the instantaneous diffusion of the solar light: by which the ruddy streaks in the east, the glow of orange-coloured light upon the horizon, are at once obliterated, absorbed, and lost in the colourless light of day. The change is sudden even in these climates; it must be more sudden in the tropical; and in all it is one of the most complete that nature presents."

CHAPTER XI.

In this chapter we have, (1.) The great goodness of God toward his people Israel, and their ungrateful conduct toward him, with threatenings of wrath against them for their ingratitude and treachery, 1-7. (2.) Mercy remembered in the midst of wrath, 8, 9. (3.) Promises of what God would yet do for them, 10, 11. (4.) An honourable character given of Judah, 12.

A. M. 3274.
B. C. 730.

WHEN ^aIsrael was a child, then
I loved him, and ^bcalled my ^cson out of Egypt.

2 As they called them, so they went from them: ^dthey sacrificed unto Baalim, and burned incense to graven images.

3 ^eI taught Ephraim also to go, taking them

^a Chapter ii. 15.—^b Matthew ii. 15.—^c Exodus iv. 22, 23.
^d 2 Kings xvii. 16; Chap. ii. 13; xiii. 2.—^e Deut. i. 31; xxxii.
10, 11, 12; Isa. xlvii. 3.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XI.

Verse 1. When Israel was a child, &c.—"The Israel of this chapter is the whole people, composed of the two branches, Judah and the ten tribes. But the house of Israel is the kingdom of the ten tribes, as distinct from the other branch."—Horsley. By the time of Israel's childhood is meant the patriarchal age, and the time of their continuance under the Egyptian bondage. Then I loved him—Manifested a tender and paternal affection to him, increasing him in numbers, wealth, and honour. And called my son out of Egypt—Namely, by Moses, whom God commanded to acquaint the Israelites that they must remove out of Egypt. Israel is called God's son, and his firstborn, Exod. iv. 22, 23; and therein was an eminent figure of the Messiah, in whom all God's promises were fulfilled. This prophecy, therefore, is applied by St. Matthew, chap. ii. 15, to our Lord's return out of Egypt, after his being taken thither by his parents in his infancy, and kept there some time for fear of Herod. And the strict, literal sense of the words, more properly belongs to him than to Israel. And this is observable in many other prophecies, which can but improperly be applied to those of whom they were at first spoken; and, taking them in their strict, literal sense, are only fulfilled in Christ: see particularly Psa. xxii. 16, 18. "Although the son," says Bishop Horsley, "here immediately meant, is the natural Israel, called out of Egypt by Moses and Aaron; there can be no doubt that an allusion was intended by the Holy Spirit to the call of the infant Christ out of the same country. In reference to this event, the passage might be thus paraphrased: 'God in such sort set his affection upon the Israelites, in the infancy of their nation, that, so early as from their first settlement in Egypt, the arrangement was declared of the descent of the Messiah from Judah, and of the calling of that son from Egypt.'"

Verse 2. As they called them, so, &c.—Or, The more they called them, or, they were called, so much the more they went from him; that is, the more earnestly the prophets called upon them to cleave steadfastly to the true God, (see verse 7,) the more they were bent to depart from him to the worship of idols. They sacrificed to Baalim—See note on chap. ii. 13. And burned incense to graven images—"We read frequently, in our English Bibles, of graven images, and of molten images. And the words are become so familiar, as names of idolatrous images, that, although they are not well chosen to express the Hebrew names, it seems not advisable by their arms; but they knew not that ^fI healed them. A. M. 3274.

B. C. 730.

4 I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love: and ^gI was to them as they that ^htake off the yoke on their jaws, and ⁱI laid meat unto them.

5 ¶ ^jHe shall not return into the land of ^f Exodus xv. 26.—^g Leviticus xxvi. 13.—^h Hebrew, lift up.—ⁱ Psalm lxxviii. 25; Chapter ii. 8.—^j Chapter viii. 13; ix. 3.

to change them for others, that might more exactly correspond with the original. The graven image was not a thing wrought in metal by the tool of the workman we should now call an engraver; nor was the molten image an image made of metal, or any other substance melted, and shaped in a mould. In fact, the graven image and the molten image are the same thing under different names. The images of the ancient idolaters were first cut out of wood by the carpenter, as is very evident from the Prophet Isaiah. The figure of wood was overlaid with plates, either of gold or silver, or sometimes, perhaps, of an inferior metal. And in this finished state it was called a graven image, (that is, a carved image,) in reference to the inner solid figure of wood, and a molten (that is, an overlaid, or covered) image in reference to the outer metalline case, or covering. And sometimes both epithets are applied to it at once:" see Nah. i. 14; Hab. ii. 18, and Bishop Horsley.

Verses 3, 4. I taught Ephraim also to go—Hebrew, והנלתי לאפרים, I directed the feet of Ephraim. In this time of Ephraim's childhood, I supported and directed his steps, as a mother or nurse those of a child whom she is teaching to walk. Taking them by their arms—To guide them, that they might not stray from the right way; and to hold them up, that they might not stumble and fall: see notes on Deut. i. 31, and xxxii. 11, 12; Isa. lxiii. Thus did God deal with Israel in the wilderness; and thus he directs and supports the steps of his spiritual Israel, amidst all their difficulties and dangers. But they knew not that I healed them—They did not acknowledge this my care over, and kindness to, them. I drew them with cords of a man—I made use of those means of drawing them to myself, which were most proper to work upon them as creatures possessed of understanding and affection. The explanation in the Chaldee is just and beautiful: "As beloved children are drawn, I drew them by the strength of love." And I was to them as they that take off the yoke on their jaws—Or rather, on their cheek. As a careful husbandman, in due season, takes the yoke from his labouring oxen, and takes off the muzzle with which they were kept from eating when at work; so compassionately did I give relief to, and provide sustenance for Israel. I laid meat unto them—Brought them provision in their wants. God seems here to allude to the manna and quails which he provided for his people in the wilderness.

Verses 5, 6. He shall not return into the land of Egypt—They were desirous of making their escape

A. M. 3274. Egypt, but the Assyrian shall be his
B. C. 730. king, ^k because they refused to return.

6 And the sword shall abide on his cities, and shall consume his branches, and devour them,
¹ because of their own counsels.*

7 And my people are bent to ^mbacksliding from me: ⁿthough they called them to the Most High, ² none at all would exalt him.

8 ¶ ° How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? how shall I deliver thee, Israel? how shall I make thee as ^pAdmah? how shall I set thee as

Zeboim? ^qmy heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together.
A. M. 3274.
B. C. 730.

9 I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger, I will not return to destroy Ephraim: ^rfor I am God, and not man; the Holy One in the midst of thee: and I will not enter into the city.

10 They shall walk after the LORD: ^she shall roar like a lion: when he shall roar, then the children shall tremble ^tfrom the west.

* 2 Kings xvii. 13, 14.—Chapter x. 6.—* About 728, they became tributaries to Salmaneser.—^m Jer. iii. 6; viii. 5; Chap. iv. 16.—ⁿ Chap. vii. 16.—² Heb. together they exalted not.—^o Jer. ix. 7; Chap. vi. 4.

^p Genesis xiv. 8; xix. 24, 25; Deut. xxix. 23; Amos iv. 11. ^q Deut. xxxii. 36; Isa. lxiii. 15; Jer. xxxi. 20.—^r Num. xxiii. 19; Isaiah lv. 8, 9; Mal. iii. 6.—^s Isa. xxxi. 4; Jer. xxv. 30; Joel iii. 16; Amos i. 2.—^t Zech. viii. 7.

thither, and many families perhaps effected it: see note on chap. ix. 6. But it is here threatened, that the nation in a body should not be permitted so to escape. But the Assyrian shall be his king—They shall be wholly in the power of the king of Assyria, and be carried away captive into his dominions; because they refused to return—Namely, to the true worship of God, and obedience to his laws, notwithstanding the many calls, reproofs, admonitions, and exhortations given them by the prophets. Their obstinacy in idolatry is the cause of all the calamities coming upon them. And the sword shall abide on his cities—His cities shall be destroyed by the conqueror's sword; and shall consume his branches—The lesser towns and villages. Thus the word בְּרִים is expounded, in a marginal note of the Bishops' Bible. It often means the arms, or principal branches, of a great tree, and is twice translated staves, Ex. xxvii. 6. In this place some interpreters render it bars; and Abarbanel expounds it of the strong and valiant men of the nation, observing, that the chief branches of the people in a kingdom are the valiant men. Rabbi Tanchum explains it of their children; the branches, as he observes, springing from their fathers. The word, however, also signifies lies, and is so rendered Isa. xvi. 6, and Jer. xlviii. 30. Bishop Horsley translates it diviners, deriving it from בָּרַד, he was solitary, because they affected a solitary, ascetic life; a sense which he thinks, of all others, most apposite to the context. He acknowledges, however, that to render it branches, limbs, or bars, is admissible, and may very well suit the place.

Verse 7. My people are bent to backsliding from me—Many versions render this clause, Nevertheless, my people are in suspense (or hesitate) about returning to me; though they called them to the Most High—Though my prophets, and other pious persons, invited and exhorted them to return to my worship and service; none at all would exalt him—Scarce any would hearken and obey. The word him not being in the Hebrew, some versions read, None would raise himself up, or advance; that is, come forward to obey and serve me.

Verses 8, 9. How shall I give thee up, Ephraim—To utter destruction? God's mercy is here pathetic-

ically described as contending with his justice, to show that he does not willingly destroy, or even afflict, or grieve, the children of men, Lam. iii. 33. How shall I make thee as Admah? &c.—How shall I give thee up to a perpetual desolation? Admah and Zeboim were two cities which were wholly destroyed, together with Sodom and Gomorrah. My heart is turned within me—Or, upon me; so Horsley. My repentings are kindled together—Not that God is ever fluctuating or unresolved; but these are expressions after the manner of men, to show what severity Israel had deserved, and yet how divine grace would be glorified in sparing them. Thus God's compassion toward sinners is elsewhere expressed by the sounding, or yearning, of his bowels, Isa. lxiii. 15; Jer. xxxi. 20; a metaphor taken from the natural affection which parents have for their children. I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger—I will not punish to the utmost strictness of justice; I will not return to destroy Ephraim—I will not carry it so far as to make a second destruction of Ephraim; so as to cut off those who escaped the first infliction of my punishments, and thereby wholly destroy them. Conquerors, that plunder a conquered city, carry away the wealth of it, and, after some time, often return to burn it. God will not thus utterly destroy Israel. For I am God, and not man—Therefore my compassions fail not; the Holy One in the midst of thee—A holy God, and in covenant, though not with all, yet with many among you, and present with you to preserve a remnant to be my faithful servants. And I will not enter into the city—As an enraged enemy to destroy your cities, as I did Sodom.

Verses 10, 11. They shall walk after the Lord—The remnant shall hearken to God's call, and shall comply with his commands, when he shall convert them by the powerful preaching of his gospel, and the efficacious influence of his grace. He shall roar like a lion—That is, he will show terrible signs of his anger, and then they will fear and obey him. God's voice is elsewhere compared to the roaring of a lion, because of the terror which accompanies it: see the margin. The Chaldee says, The word of the Lord shall roar as a lion, and the words may be in

A. M. 3274. 11 They shall tremble as a bird out
B. C. 730. of Egypt, ² and as a dove out of the land of Assyria: ³ and I will place them in their houses, saith the LORD.

¹ Isa. lx. 8; Chap. vii. 11.—² Ezek. xxviii. 25, 26; xxxvii.

terpreted of the powerful voice of the gospel, sent forth, and sounding all over the world, and calling sinners to repentance. "The most learned commentators agree," says Bishop Horsley, "that this roaring of the lion is the sound of the gospel; and that the subject of this and the following verse is, its promulgation and progress, the conversion of the Gentiles, and the final restoration of the Jews. 'Clara et maxima voce predicabit evangelium,' With a loud and most powerful voice shall he preach the gospel, says Piscator. And to the same effect Rivetus and Bochart. As a lion, by its roaring, calls animals of its own kind to a participation of the prey; so Christ, by the powerful voice of the gospel, shall call all nations to the fellowship of eternal life.—Livelye. The preaching of the gospel, reaching the remotest corners of the earth, is frequently represented under the image of the loudest sounds. And this loudness of the sound alone might justify the figure of the roaring lion. But a greater propriety of the figure will appear, if we recollect, that the first demonstrations of mercy to the faithful will be, the judgments executed on the anti-christian persecutors; to whom the sound of the gospel will be a sound of terror." When he shall roar, then the children shall tremble from the west—The word וחררו, rendered, shall tremble, describes the motion which a bird makes with its wings when it flies. Dr. Waterland renders it, shall come fluttering, and Bishop Horsley, shall hurry. The primary sense of the passage may be, that at this efficacious call of God, the remnant of Israel, who shall be accounted his children, and heirs of the promises made to their fathers, shall come in haste from the several places of their dispersions, and particularly from the western parts of the world, (see Zech. viii. 7,) called the sea in the original, and expressed in Isaiah by the islands of the sea: see Isa. xi. 11, and xxiv. 14. They shall tremble as a bird out of Egypt—That is, fly with haste, as above. As a dove out of the land of Assyria—Great numbers of the Jews were exiles in Egypt and Assyria; and therefore, when the restoration of the Jews is spoken of, Egypt and Assyria are mentioned as countries from whence a great number of them should return. And I will place them in their houses—I will bring them back to their own country and habitations, like as the stork returns to her nest, and the dove to the dove-cot. This prophecy may be considered as receiving its completion in part when some of the Israelites, being recovered to the worship of the true God, returned to Judea with the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, brought back to their own land from their captivity in Babylon. But the full accomplishment of it will not take place till the latter days, when the fulness of the Gentiles being brought in by the preaching of the gospel, all Israel shall be saved.

12 ¶ ¹ Ephraim compasseth me A. M. 3274.
about with lies, and the house of Is- B. C. 730.
rael with deceit: but Judah yet ruleth with God, and is faithful ³ with the saints.

21, 25.—² Chap. xii. 1.—³ Or, with the most holy.

Thus Bishop Horsley. These verses "contain a wonderful prophecy of the promulgation and progress of the gospel, and the restoration of the race of Israel. The first clause of the tenth verse states generally that they shall be brought to repentance. In what follows, the circumstances and progress of the business are described. First, Jehovah shall roar; the roaring is unquestionably the sound of the gospel. Jehovah himself shall roar; the sound shall begin to be uttered by the voice of the incarnate God himself. The first effect shall be, that children shall come fluttering from the west; a new race of children, converts of the Gentiles." For, "it is remarkable, that the expression is neither their children, nor my children, but simply children. The first would limit the discourse to the natural Israel exclusively; the second would be nearly of the same effect, as it would express such as were already children at the time of the roaring. But the word children, put nakedly, without either of these epithets, expresses those who were neither of the natural Israel, nor children at the time of the roaring, but were roused by that sound, and then became children, that is, adopted children, by natural extraction Gentiles." These shall come "chiefly from the western quarters of the world, or what the Scriptures call the west; for no part, I think, of Asia Minor, Syria, or Palestine, is reckoned a part of the east, in the language of the Old Testament. Afterward the natural Israel shall hurry from all the regions of their dispersion, and be settled in their own dwellings. It is to be observed that the roaring is mentioned twice. It will be most consistent with the style of the prophets to take this as two roarings; and to refer the hurrying of the children from the west to the first, the hurrying from Egypt and Assyria to the second. The times of the two roarings are, the first and second advent. The first brought children from the west; the renewed preaching of the gospel, at the second, will bring home the Jews. And perhaps this second sounding of the gospel may be, more remarkably even than the first, a roaring of Jehovah in person." With this verse the chapter is closed in the Hebrew text and the Syriac version, and the following verse is given to the next chapter. But the division of the LXX., Vulgate, and Chaldee, which our public translation follows, seems preferable.

Verse 12. Ephraim compasseth me about with lies—Ephraim and Israel are hypocrites; they promise much and perform nothing; they draw near to me with their lips, but their hearts are far from me. But Judah yet ruleth with God—Judah kept close to that kingly government which God had settled in David's family, and faithfully observed those ordinances which God had given to his people, here termed saints, as they are also Deut. xxxiii. 3; and elsewhere a holy nation, and peculiar people. This seems to relate to the times of Hezekiah, who restored the pure worship of God in Judah; at which time the ten tribes were flagrantly wicked, and wholly addicted to an idolatrous worship. Instead of saints, Bishop Horsley reads, holy ones, and interprets the expression of the persons of the Trinity. His translation of the verse is, "Ephraim hath compassed me about with treachery, and the house of Israel with deceit. But Judah shall yet obtain dominion with God, and shall be established with the holy ones." He considers the expression, shall obtain dominion, &c., as "a promissory allusion to a final restoration of the Jewish monarchy;" and the remaining clause, shall be established, &c., as signifying "either the constancy of Judah's fidelity to the Holy Ones, or the firmness of the support which he shall receive from them." And he thinks that "by the use of this plural word, Holy Ones, the prophecy clearly points to the conversion of the Jewish people to the Christian faith."

CHAPTER XII.

In this chapter, (1.) God reproves Ephraim and Judah for their sins, particularly their covenanting with the Assyrians, and declares his resolution to punish them, 1, 2. (2.) By his former mercies he exhorts them to repentance, 3-6. (3.) He charges Ephraim with the sin of fraud, injustice, and ingratitude, as particularly provoking to God, and calling for wrath and punishment, 7-14.

A. M. 3279. EPHRAIM ^a feedeth on wind, and followeth after the east wind: he daily increaseth lies and desolation; ^b and they do make a covenant with the Assyrians, and ^c oil is carried into Egypt.

2 ^d The LORD hath also a controversy with

Judah, and will ¹ punish Jacob according to his ways; according to his doings will he recompense him.

3 ¶ He took his brother ^e by the heel in the womb, and by his strength he ² had ^f power with God:

^a Chapter viii. 7.—^b 2 Kings xvii. 4; Chapter v. 13; vii. 11. ^c Isa. xxx. 6; lvii. 9.—^d Chap. iv. 1; Mic. vi. 2.

¹ Heb. visit upon.—^e Gen. xxv. 26.—² Heb. was a prince, or, behaved himself princely.—^f Gen. xxxiii. 21.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XII.

Verses 1, 2. Ephraim feedeth on wind—Flatters himself with vain, delusive hopes, of receiving effectual support from the alliances which he forms. It is a proverbial expression to signify labour in vain, or pursuing such measures as will bring damage rather than benefit. And followeth the east wind—Pernicious, destructive counsels and courses. The east wind was peculiarly parching and noxious, blasting the fruits of the earth; thence it denotes desolation and destruction. He daily increaseth—Hebrew, רבה, multiplieth, lies and desolation—Or, falsehood and destruction; so Horsley: that is, in multiplying his falsehood, he multiplies the causes of his own destruction. And they do make a covenant with the Assyrians, and oil is carried into Egypt—Here is an example given of their falsehood, or deceit: while they were in covenant with the Assyrians, having engaged themselves to be tributaries to them, they were secretly and perfidiously seeking to make an alliance with the Egyptians, and for that purpose sent oil as a present to the king of Egypt, endeavouring to persuade him to assist them in shaking off the yoke of the king of Assyria: see the margin. The land of Judah abounded with excellent oil, which was much wanted in Egypt. The Lord hath also a controversy with Judah—Though Hezekiah had abolished idolatry, and restored God's worship in the temple, 2 Chron. xxix. 3, and xxxi. 1, yet there were much hypocrisy and great corruption in the manners of his subjects; for which God's judgments are here threatened, and the invasion of Sennacherib was actually inflicted, 2 Kings xviii. 13, &c.

Verse 3. He took his brother by the heel in the womb—From the mentioning of Jacob in the foregoing verse, the prophet takes occasion to put his posterity in mind of the particular favours God had bestowed upon him; partly with a view to encourage them to imitate him in endeavouring to obtain the like blessings, and partly to convince them of their ingratitude and degeneracy from him. His taking his brother by the heel, signified his striving, by a divine instinct, for the birthright and blessing. Even before his birth he reached forth his hand to catch hold of it, as it were, and if possible to prevent his brother. It denoted, also, that he should prevail at last, gain his point, and in process of time become greater than his brother. And this prognostic of his prevalence and superiority was the effect of God's will and power, and not of Jacob's, who was not then in a capacity of acting of himself: see note on Gen. xxv. 26. It is justly observed here, by Bishop Horsley, that his "taking his brother by the heel is not mentioned in disparagement of the patriarch. On the contrary, the whole of these two verses is a commemoration of God's kindness for the ancestor of the Israelites, on which the prophet founds an animated exhortation to them, to turn to that God from whom they might expect so much favour. By his strength he had power with God, &c.—This alludes to his

A. M. 3279. 4 Yea, he had power over the an-
B. C. 725. gel, and prevailed: he wept, and made supplication unto him: he found him in ^B Bethel, and there he spake with us;

^a Gen. xxviii. 12, 19; xxxv. 9, 10, 15.—^b Exod. iii. 15.

wrestling with the angel, as recorded Gen. xxxii. That bodily strength, wherewith he was endued by God, and enabled to wrestle with this heavenly being, was a token of the strength of his faith, and of the fervency of his spirit in prayer. This is mentioned here by the prophet, as another instance of God's favour to Jacob. He not only, when an infant in the womb, was enabled to perform the emblematical action just mentioned; but, in his adult age, he was endued with such supernatural strength of mind and body, that he was enabled to continue wrestling till he obtained the blessing. The prophet, in this clause, alludes to those words of his, I will not let thee go except thou bless me; intimating the strength of his faith, and prevalence of his prayers with God. The words, He had power with God, and those that follow, He had power over the angel, are equivalent; and plainly prove that this person, who assumed a human shape, was really God, that is, the Son of God, and the angel of the covenant, by whom all the divine appearances recorded in the Old Testament were performed; the affairs of the church being ordered by him from the beginning. This subject is learnedly handled by Dr. Allix in his Judgment of the Jewish Church, against the Unitarians, chap. xiii.-xv., by Archbishop Tenison in his Discourses of Idolatry, chap. xiv., and by Bishop Bull in his Defence of the Nicene Faith.

Verses 4, 5. He had power over the angel—Called God, verse 3, and Jehovah, God of hosts, verse 5, namely, God by nature and essence, and an angel by office and voluntary undertaking. He wept and made supplication unto him—He prayed with tears from a sense of his own unworthiness, and with earnestness for the mercy he desired. Jacob's wrestling with the angel^a was, as has been just intimated, not only a corporal conflict, but likewise a spiritual one; from bodily wrestling he betook himself to spiritual weapons; he poured forth tears with earnest supplications and prayers, and strove, not so much for victory, as for a blessing: the only way for a feeble, impotent creature, to prevail over his Creator. The observations of Luther, upon this extraordinary conflict between Jacob and the person called the angel, are so excellent, that the intelligent reader will be glad to be presented here with a translation of them. "Different views are wont to be entertained concerning the nature of this wrestling. But the history shows that Jacob had come into imminent danger of his life, and was assaulted by an unknown antagonist with his whole power. He therefore himself also exerted his bodily strength to the utmost against this antagonist, that he might defend his life. Nevertheless, he did not contend only with the strength of his body; his

5 Even the LORD God of hosts; the ^{A. M. 3279.}
^{B. C. 725.} LORD is his ^b memorial.

6ⁱ Therefore, turn thou to thy God: keep mercy and judgment, and ^k wait on thy God continually.

ⁱ Chap. xiv. 1; Mic. vi. 8.—^k Psa. xxxvii. 7.

faith also wrestled: and first, in such an immediate danger, he comforted himself that he had been ordered by God to return into the land of Canaan [to which country, in obedience to God, he was now journeying.] Then with his whole heart he laid hold on the promise made him by the Lord in Beth-el, where he was fully assured of the divine protection. When therefore he was in distress, and assaulted by an unknown enemy with all his might, although he used his own strength, yet he contended more strenuously by faith, beholding the promise, and concluding with certainty that God, according to his word, would be present with him in so great a danger, and would save him. And with this faith, [so to speak,] he prevailed over God; for although Christ tried Jacob in this conflict, nevertheless he could do nothing against, or contrary to, his word, on which Jacob relied." Jacob's supplication and tears, here mentioned, probably refer to those earnest prayers which he poured out to God, as is recorded Gen. xxxii. 9-11. The conflict here spoken of, in which Jacob had power with God, ended in an assurance that his prayers were answered. He found him in Beth-el—This refers to God's appearing to Jacob after the former vision, as is related Gen. xxxv. 9, 14, when God renewed his promise of giving the land of Canaan to his posterity. The prophet takes particular notice of the place where God appeared to him; as if he had said, He appeared in that very place where you worship a golden calf as your god! And there he spake with us—Who were then in Jacob's loins. The Alexandrian copy, however, of the LXX. reads, There he spake with him; as if the expression alluded to the above-mentioned passage, where God is said to have talked with Jacob. But the present Hebrew reading contains a very important meaning, signifying, that God did not only speak to him there, but likewise did, by so doing, instruct his posterity to the latest generation. Certainly the things spoken concerned Jacob's posterity, as much, or more, than himself. Even the Lord God of hosts—He that appeared and spake, who promised the blessing, and commanded the reformation at Beth-el, was Jehovah, the eternal and unchangeable God; who can perform his promise, and execute his threat; who is a most terrible enemy, and a most desirable friend. The Lord is his memorial—That is, the name Jehorah is God's memorial; his appropriate, perpetual, incommunicable name, expressing his essence; the name by which he will be known and remembered to all generations; the name which especially distinguishes him from all false gods, and sets forth his glory more than any other name whatsoever: see note on Exod. iii. 14.

Verse 6. Therefore turn thou to thy God—"Thou

A. M. 3279. 7 ¶ He is ³a merchant, ¹the bal-
B. C. 725. lances of deceit are in his hand :
he loveth to ⁴oppress.

8 And Ephraim said, ^mYet I am become rich, I have found me out substance : ⁵in all my labours they shall find none iniquity in me. ⁶that were sin.

9 And ^aI that am the LORD thy God from

³ Or, Canaan ; Ezek. xvi. 3.—¹ Prov. xi. 1 ; Amos viii. 5.

⁴ Or, deceive.—^m Zech. xi. 5 ; Rev. iii. 17.—⁵ Or, all my labours suffice me not, he shall have punishment of iniquity in whom is sin.

therefore, O Israel, encouraged by the memory of God's love to thy progenitor, and by the example which thou hast in him, of the efficacy of weeping and supplication, turn to thy God in penitence and prayer, and in the [practice of] works of righteousness."—Horsley. Leave your idolatries and all your sins. Jacob worshipped God alone, do you so ; he cast all idols out of his family, do you so too ; be Jacob's children herein. Keep mercy and judgment—Show kindness to all who need it, and do wrong to none ; but, with justice in all your dealings, in judicatures, and public offices, render to all their due. And wait on thy God continually—In public worship, and private duties, serve and trust in God alone : let not idols have either sacrifice, prayer, praise, or trust from you, and let your hope and worship be ever continued.

Verses 7, 8. He is a merchant, &c.—Bishop Horsley renders this verse thus : Canaan the trafficker ! The cheating balances in his hand ! He has set his heart upon over-reaching ! On which the bishop observes, "God says to the prophet, Instead of turning to me, and keeping to works of charity and justice, he is a mere heathen huckster. Thou hast miscalled him Jacob : he is Canaan. Not Jacob the godly, the heir of the promise : Canaan the cheat, the son of the curse." The Hebrew word כּנַעַן, rendered merchant, is both a proper name and an appellative. And to preserve the ambiguity in his translation, the bishop joins the appellative and the proper name together. Without this, as he justly observes, the whole spirit of the original would be lost to the English reader. All the ancient versions, except the Chaldee, give the proper name. The first words of the verse, He is, not being in the Hebrew, some interpreters, without supplying any thing, render the clause, The balances of deceit are in the hand of the merchant ; that is, instead of practising just and fair dealing, which was the way to please God, they made use of unjust weights and measures, and practised frauds, deceits, and cunning, in buying and selling ; depreciating those things they wanted to buy, below what they knew they were really worth ; and setting a greater value on, and saying more in praise of, those things they wanted to sell, than they really deserved. These deceits in buying and selling are but too much used among us now, though God has so strongly declared his abhorrence of them in the Scriptures.

the land of Egypt ^o will yet make thee to dwell in tabernacles, as in the days of the solemn feasts.

10 ^pI have also spoken by the prophets, and I have multiplied visions, and used similitudes, ⁷by the ministry of the prophets.

11 ^aIs there iniquity in Gilead ? surely they are vanity : they sacrifice bullocks in ^rGilgal ;

⁶ Hebrew, which.—^p Chapter xiii. 4.—^o Lev. xxiii. 42, 43 ; Neh. viii. 17 ; Zech. xiv. 16.—² Kings xvii. 13.—⁷ Heb. by the hand.—^a Chapter v. 1 ; vi. 8.—^r Chapter iv. 15 ; ix. 15 ; Amos iv. 4 ; v. 5.

He loveth to oppress—The Hebrew rather signifies, He loveth to defraud ; to use the arts of cozenage. And Ephraim said—Rather, Nevertheless Ephraim said, I am become rich—I have gotten riches, however, by my cunning and deceit, and as that is the case, I have no need to concern myself ; for, so I have but riches, none will ask how I came by them. In this description of Ephraim, we may see but too like a picture of many in our times ; for riches are too generally and too much the pursuit of mankind, and are generally too much prized ; so that if men have but riches, they think they have every thing that is to be desired. Bishop Horsley presents us with a different interpretation of this verse, thus : Nevertheless, Ephraim shall say, that is, the time will come when Ephraim will repent, and say, Although I became rich, I acquired to myself [only] sorrow ; all my labours procured not for me what may expiate iniquity. Thus interpreted, the words contain the penitent confession of the Ephraimites in the latter days, wrought upon at last by God's judgments and mercies.

Verses 9, 10. I that am the Lord thy God from the land of Egypt—From the time I brought thee out of it : will yet make thee to dwell in tabernacles—That is, in thy habitations, quietly and joyfully, as in festival times. The word tabernacles is here put for houses, or habitations ; because at first the Israelites dwelt in tabernacles, or tents. This must be taken as a promise of the restoration of the Israelites to their own land, after their being carried into captivity, provided they turned to God, and to his worship and service, in true repentance, and new obedience. I have also spoken by the prophets, &c.—"Here are three species of prophecy distinctly mentioned : 1st, Immediate suggestion, or inspiration, when God dictates the very words which the prophet is to deliver : 2d, Vision, or a representation made of external objects to the imagination, in as lively a manner as if they were conveyed to the senses : and, 3d, Parables, and apt resemblances, such as that of God's church to a vineyard, Isa. v. 1, of the destruction of Jerusalem to a forest set on fire, Ezekiel xx. 46, 49, and to a seething-pot, chapter xxiv. 3. Hosea himself was a parable, or type, to the Jews, in taking a wife of whoredoms, to represent the idolatries of the house of Israel."—Lowth.

Verses 11-13. Is there iniquity in Gilead ?—Or

A. M. 3279. yea, ^a their altars are as heaps in the
B. C. 725. furrows of the fields.

12 And Jacob ¹ fled into the country of Syria, and Israel ² served for a wife, and for a wife he kept sheep.

13 ³ And by a prophet the LORD brought

^a Chapter viii. 11; x. 1.—¹ Genesis xxviii. 5; Deut. xxvi. 5. ² Gen. xxix. 20, 28.—³ Exod. xii. 50, 51; xiii. 3; Psa. lxxvii. 20; Isa. lxxiii. 11; Mic. vi. 4.

Was there idolatry in Gilead? as the word אֵין often signifies. Surely they are vanity, &c., in Gilgal—The tribes settled about Gilead beyond Jordan, were already captivated by Tiglath-pileser. And God declares here by the prophet, that the idolatry still practised in Gilgal was equally abominable, and would bring down similar judgments upon the remaining tribes on the west of Jordan. Yea, their altars are as heaps—Notwithstanding this judgment of God upon Gilead, they continue to offer sacrifices to their idols in Gilgal; and their altars stand so thick, that they are discernible as stones gathered up, and laid in heaps in the fields. Some understand the sentence as containing a threatening that their altars should be demolished, and become so many ruinous heaps, 2 Kings xix. 25. But Jacob fled into the country of Syria, &c.—“So opposite to yours was the conduct of your father Jacob, that he fled into Syria to avoid an alliance with any of the idolatrous families of Canaan; and, in firm reliance on God’s promises, submitted to the greatest hardships.” And therefore by a prophet, &c.—“And, in reward of his faith, God did such great things for his posterity, bringing them out of the land of Egypt,

Israel out of Egypt, and by a prophet ^a was he preserved. A. M. 3279. B. C. 725.

14 ¹ Ephraim provoked him to anger ² most bitterly: therefore shall he leave his ³ blood upon him, ⁴ and his ⁵ reproach shall his Lord return unto him.

¹ 2 Kings xvii. 11–18.—² Hebrew with bitterness.—³ Heb. bloods, Ezek. xviii. 13; xxiv. 7, 8.—⁴ Dan. xi. 18.—⁵ Deut. xxviii. 37.

and leading them through the wilderness like sheep by the hand of his servant Moses.”—Horsley.

Verse 14. Ephraim provoked him to anger, &c.—Notwithstanding all God’s favours showed to these people and their ancestors, they provoked him by their idolatries and other sins in a most outrageous manner. The word הִמָּוֶה, translated, most bitterly, some render, with his bitterness; that is, by his wicked or impious deeds; and Schindler renders it, by his heaps, that is, his altars. Therefore shall he leave his blood upon him—The Chaldee paraphrase renders it, His blood shall return upon him. Ephraim’s wickedness, and in particular the innocent blood he has shed, shall bring down punishment or destruction upon him. And his reproach shall his Lord return unto him—The reproach which Ephraim hath cast upon the prophets, upon the worshippers of God, and on God himself, in preferring idols before him, shall God, who is Lord of all, recompense upon him, in making him a reproach and by-word among the heathen. Instead of his Lord, Bp. Horsley reads, his Master, that is, says he, “his conqueror, who shall hold him in servitude, and be the instrument of God’s just vengeance to him.”

CHAPTER XIII.

In this chapter, (1.) The people of Israel are reprov'd and threaten'd for their idolatry, 1–4. (2.) For their wantonness, pride, luxury, and other abuses of their wealth and prosperity, 5–8. (3.) The ruin that is coming upon them for these, and all their other sins, is foretold as very terrible, 12, 13, 15, 16. (4.) Those among them who yet retained a respect for their God are encouraged to hope that he would yet appear for their relief, though their kings and princes, and all their other supports and succours, fail'd them, 9–11, 14.

A. M. 3279. WHEN Ephraim spake trembling,
B. C. 725. he exalted himself in Israel;

^a 2 Kings xvii. 16, 18;

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIII.

Verse 1. When Ephraim spake trembling, he exalted himself—While he behaved himself submissively and obediently, and humbled himself before God, he was reckoned among the principal tribes of Israel. Here Ephraim is spoken of as distinct from the other tribes: in other places of this prophecy he is put for the whole kingdom of the ten tribes. But when he offended in Baal, he died—When he but ^a when he offended in Baal, he died. A. M. 3279. B. C. 725.

Chapter xi. 2.

gave himself to idolatry, his strength immediately declined, and had manifest symptoms of ruin and destruction. Bishop Horsley’s version of the verse is, When Ephraim spake there was dread: he was exalted in Israel. But he offended in Baal and died—“The former part of the verse describes the consequence and pre-eminence of Ephraim in his own country, and among the neighbouring nations; the latter part, his diminution and loss of consequence

A. M. 3279. 2 And now ¹they sin more and
B. C. 725. more, and ^bhave made them molten images of their silver, and idols according to their own understanding, all of it the work of the craftsmen: they say of them, Let ²the
men that sacrifice ^ckiss the calves.

3 Therefore they shall be ^das the morning
cloud, and as the early dew that passeth away, ^eas the chaff that is driven with the whirlwind out of the floor, and as the smoke out of the chimney.

4 ¶ Yet ^fI am the Lord thy God from the land of Egypt, and thou shalt know no god

¹ Hebrew, they add to sin.—^b Chap. ii. 8; viii. 4.—² Or, the sacrifices of men.—^c 1 Kings xix. 18.—^d Chapter vi. 4.
^e Dan. ii. 35.—^f Isa. xliii. 11; Chap. xii. 9.—^g Isa. xliii. 11;
xlv. 21.—^h Deut. ii. 7; xxxii. 10.

by his idolatry." The word Baal is here taken in a general sense for all false gods or idolatrous ways
of worship, so as to comprehend the worship of the golden calves, though they were designed for symbolical representations of the true God.

Verse 2. And now they sin more and more—They did not content themselves with worshipping the golden calves only, which they made to be symbols of Jehovah the true God, but made themselves
images of various idols after the manner of the heathen nations; which were nothing more than merely pieces of handicraft work. They at first worshipped Jehovah under the images of the golden calves, but
at last they came to worship the mere images themselves. Thus do men sink deeper and deeper into vice, folly, and ignorance, whenever they depart from the right way! Instead of, according to their own understanding, Bishop Horsley reads, In their great wisdom they made themselves images, &c., considering the words as spoken ironically. They say of them—Of the idols; Let the men that sacrifice, kiss the calves—Let all that bring their offerings to these idols worship and adore, and show they do so by kissing the calves. Among the ancient idolaters, to kiss the idol was an act of the most solemn adoration. Thus we read, 1 Kings xix. 18, of all the knees which have not bowed to Baal, and every mouth which hath not kissed him. And so Job describes the adoration which the idolaters of his time paid to the heavenly bodies, chap. xxxi. 27.
Tully mentions a brazen statue of Hercules at Agri-gentum, in which the workmanship of the mouth was sensibly worn by the frequent kisses of the worshippers. And, in allusion to this rite, the holy psalmist, calling upon the apostate faction to avert
the wrath of the incarnate God, by a full acknowledgment of his divinity, bids them kiss the Son,
that is, worship him.

Verses 3-5. Therefore they shall be as the morning cloud, &c.—All the comparisons in this verse are intended to express a quick destruction, or that they should soon come to nothing. Yet I am the Lord thy God, &c.—Notwithstanding thy recourse

but me: for ^ethere is no saviour A. M. 3279.
besides me. B. C. 725.

5 ^bI did know thee in the wilderness, ⁱin the land of ³great drought.

6 ^kAccording to their pasture, so were they filled; they were filled, and their heart was exalted: therefore ¹have they forgotten me.

7 Therefore ^mI will be unto them as a lion:
as ⁿa leopard by the way will I observe them.

8 I will meet them ^oas a bear that is bereaved of her whelps, and will rend the caul
of their heart, and there will I devour them like a lion: ⁴the wild beast shall tear them.

ⁱ Deut. viii. 15; xxxii. 10.—² Heb. droughts.—^k Deut. viii.
12, 14; xxxii. 15.—^l Chap. viii. 14.—^m Lam. iii. 10; Chap.
v. 14.—ⁿ Jeremiah v. 6.—^o 2 Sam. xvii. 8; Prov. xvii. 12.
⁴ Heb. the beast of the field.

to idols, I am the Lord thy God, who delivered thee
out of the bondage of Egypt. And thou shalt know—That is, thou oughtest to acknowledge; no god but me—For thou hast never yet proved, and thou never wilt prove by experience, the power and protection of any other. Those whom thou callest thy gods will be able to do nothing for thee; for there is no saviour besides me—No one who can deliver, or preserve thee from evil as I have done. I did know thee in the wilderness, &c.—That is, I acknowledged thee as my peculiar people, by my watchful care of thee. I was attentive to thee, protecting thee in all dangers, and supplying all thy wants.

Verses 6-8. According to their pasture, &c.—As I was their shepherd, and provided pasture for them,
so they were fully fed; they had an abundant plenty of all things. And their heart was exalted—The consequence of their having this plenty was, that
from thence they grew proud and high-minded.
Therefore they have forgotten me—They so abused
my kindness to them, as to make it the occasion of their ingratitude; "for in the pride of their heart,
which the miraculous supply of their wants for so long a time produced in them, they forgot their benefactor." Therefore I will be unto them as a lion—
That suddenly seizes upon and tears his prey: that is, I will utterly consume them from being a nation, and give them up into the hands of such enemies as will show them no mercy; as a leopard by the way
—That lies in wait by the way; will I observe them
—Watch for them, that I may be sure to take them, or watch all opportunities to destroy them. I will meet them as a bear, &c.—In the greatest fury imaginable; bereaved of her whelps—A circumstance which adds a particular degree of fierceness. "They never venture to fire upon a young bear when the mother is near: for if the cub drop, she becomes enraged to a degree little short of madness; and if she get a sight of the enemy, will only quit her revenge with her life."—Cook's Voyage, vol. iii. page 307. And will rend the caul of their heart—The seat of the blood, with which wild beasts love to glut

A. M. 3279. 9 ¶ O Israel, ^pthou hast destroyed
B. C. 725. thyself; ^abut in me ^bis thy help.

10 ^cI will be thy king: ^cwhere is any other that may save thee in all thy cities? and thy judges, of whom ^dthou saidst, Give me a king and princes?

^p Proverbs vi. 32; Chap. xiv. 1; Malachi i. 9.—^a Verse 4.
^b Heb. in thy help.—^c Rather, Where is thy king? King Hoshea being then in prison, 2 Kings xvii. 4.

themselves. The wild beast shall tear them—The Assyrian shall prove as a wild beast to them. The word תִּקַּעַם, here used, signifies, shall cleave them, or rip them. Bishop Horsley renders it, shall tear them limb from limb; observing, “The verb expresses a violent distraction and severing of united parts in any manner; and is to be differently rendered with regard to the particular agent and patient. When the agent is a wild beast, and the patient the beast’s prey, it must be tearing limb from limb: tearing, by itself, is inadequate.”

Verse 9. O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself—Thy sins have brought down destruction upon thee, and it is from me only thou canst expect any help, which I will in due time afford thee. The Hebrew of this verse is capable of different versions. That of the Vulgate, Destruction is thy own, O Israel: only in me is thy help, seems one of the most literal; unless, taking שָׁחַת for a verb, we prefer rendering the first clause, It has destroyed thee, O Israel; that is, all that sin and folly of thine, with which thou hast been before charged. As thy own wickedness has many a time corrected thee, so it has now at length destroyed thee. Observe, reader, wilful sinners are self-destroyers; obstinate impenitence is the grossest self-murder. Those that are destroyed of the destroyer, have their blood upon their own heads: they have destroyed themselves. Observe, also, that the case of such is not yet desperate: God will be their help if they will make application to him. This is a plank thrown out after shipwreck; and greatly magnifies not only the power of God, that he can help when things are at the worst, can help those that cannot help themselves; but the riches of his grace, that he will help those who have destroyed themselves, and therefore might justly be left to perish, and even those that had long refused his help. Dr. Pocock reads this verse, O Israel, this has destroyed thee, that in me is thy help. And R. Tanchum interprets it to the same effect. They understand the sentiment to be, “that the cause of the destruction of Israel was, his presuming upon God’s readiness to help him. They hardened themselves in their corrupt practices, in the confidence that God would never give them up; that, notwithstanding the severity of his threatenings, he would interpose, as upon so many occasions he before had done, to rescue them from their enemies when things came to an extremity. The passage, thus understood is a cool reflection upon the fatal effects of God’s kindness upon the perverse minds of the Israelites.”—Horsley.

11 ^eI gave thee a king in mine anger, and took him away in my wrath. A. M. 3279. B. C. 725.

12 ^fThe iniquity of Ephraim is bound up; his sin is hid.

13 ^gThe sorrows of a travelling woman shall

^e Deut. xxxii. 38; Chap. x. 3; Verse 4.—^f 1 Sam. viii. 5, 19.—^g 1 Sam. viii. 7; x. 19; xv. 22, 23; xvi. 1; Chap. x. 3.
^h Deut. xxxii. 34; Job xiv. 17.—ⁱ Isa. xiii. 8; Jer. xxx. 6.

Ver. 10, 11. I will be thy king—I would have been thy king to save and govern thee, but thou refusedst me in both respects: yet I will be thy king to judge me and punish thee. The LXX. and all the ancient versions interpret the clause differently, and give the interrogative, Where? Where is thy king now, that he may serve thee? They seem to have taken the word אָנֹכִי, I will be, for אֵינִי, where, by a transposition of letters, as the same word is used again, verse 14. Bishop Horsley understands the words in the same sense, and reads, Where is thy king? Where now is he? To save thee forsooth in all thy cities—and thy judges?—“This vehement, redoubled interrogation,” says he, “seems to suppose a denial, on the part of the Israelites, of the helpless, ruined state, asserted in the former verse, as the consequence of God’s withdrawing his protection. Do you deny this? Do you pretend that you have still means of defence, hope of deliverance? You rely upon the policy or prowess of your monarch. Where is he, this wise and mighty king? Tell me in what quarter? Your judges, your provincial rulers, where are they? Let us see what deliverance this king and these rulers can effect.” The words seem to be spoken with a reference to the Israelites desiring a king to be set over them, instead of continuing under the theocracy, or the immediate government of God, who raised them up from time to time, as he saw most fit for them, defenders and protectors, and endured them with extraordinary abilities for the purpose. But the Israelites foolishly thought they should thrive better under a kingly government, such as the rest of the nations around them were under, which is expressed in the latter part of this verse, Of whom thou saidst, Give me a king and princes—That is, a king and such principal officers as he shall appoint. This is what is meant by the word judges in this verse. I gave thee a king in mine anger—Being angry at your sins and provocations, I gave you a king at first, and have since suffered you, by seditions and conspiracies, to change your kings according as you pleased, whereby your state hath received more and more damage, and now I will take away your present king by the hand of the Assyrians.

Verses 12, 13. The iniquity of Ephraim is bound up—This verse may be better rendered, The iniquity of Ephraim is treasured up, his sin is laid up—That is, laid up in my memory, as that which ought to be punished at a proper time. The sentence is manifestly equivalent to that expression in Job xiv. 17, My transgression is sealed up in a bag;

A. M. 3279. come upon him: he is ⁷an unwise
B. C. 725. son; for he should not ²stay ⁷long
in the place of the breaking forth of children.

14 ^aI will ransom them from ⁸the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death:
^bO death, I will be thy plagues, O grave, I will be thy destruction: ^crepentance shall be hid from mine eyes.

15 ¶ Though ^dhe be fruitful among his brethren, ^ean east wind shall come, the wind of ⁷ Prov. xvii. 3.—² Kings xix. 3.—⁷ Heb. a time.—^a Isa.

xxv. 8; Ezek. xxxvii. 12.—⁸ Heb. the hand.—^b 1 Cor. xv.
54, 55.—^c Jeremiah xv. 6; Romans xi. 29.—^d Genesis xli.
52; xlviii. 19.

that is, thou keepest an exact account of it, as men
do of money which they seal up in a bag, to be forthcoming on a proper occasion. To the same purpose are those words, Deut. xxxii. 34, *Is not this laid up in store for me, and sealed among my treasures?
To me belongs vengeance, &c.* The sorrows of a travailing woman—Grievous sorrows, or pains, shall come upon him—Great calamities are often compared to the pains of child-bearing. He is an unwise son: for he should not—Or rather, else he would not, stay long, &c.—As a child, if it could be supposed to have understanding, would deliver itself
out of the womb, and not tarry there to the manifest danger of itself and the mother; so if Ephraim or Israel had acted wisely, they would have prevented their approaching destruction by a speedy reformation. Horsley's version is, He is of the thoughtless race, for it is the critical moment, when he ought not to stand still; the children are in the aperture: Hebrew, in the breach. "They are actually passing through the opening of the parts distended
by the throes of labour. It is the very moment when the pains must terminate in the delivery or the death of the woman. A proverbial expression, for a crisis of extreme danger and doubtful catastrophe: see Isa. xxxvii. 3. At such a moment as this, thoughtless Ephraim is supine and unconcerned."

Verse 14. I will ransom them from the power of the grave—If we apply this promise to Ephraim, or the Israelites spoken of before, it may signify, that though they should be in never so desperate a condition, God would in due time deliver them out of it: see the like expressions, Psa. xxx. 3, and lxxi.
20, and lxxxvi. 13. But there is a more sublime and spiritual sense contained in the words, as appears by the following clause. O death, I will be thy plagues—It is usual for the prophets, when they foretel temporal deliverances, to be carried away
by the influence of the prophetic spirit, to predict the greater mercies and deliverances which belong to the gospel state: so here the prophet takes occasion, from foretelling temporal mercies, to enlarge his views, and set forth that great and final deliverance of the faithful from the power of sin and death, which shall be completed by Christ, when he shall swallow

the LORD shall come up from the A. M. 3279.
wilderness, and his spring shall be—B. C. 725.
come dry, and his fountain shall be dried up:
he shall spoil the treasure of all ⁹pleasant vessels.

16 ^aSamaria shall become desolate; ^ffor she hath rebelled against her God: ^gthey shall fall
by the sword: their infants shall be dashed in pieces, and their women with child shall be ripped up.

^a Jeremiah iv. 11; Ezekiel xvii. 10; xix. 12; Chapter iv. 19.
⁹ Heb. vessels of desire, Nahum ii. 9.—^f Fulfilled about B. C.
721; 2 Kings xvii. 6.—^g 2 Kings xviii. 12.—^g 2 Kings viii. 12;
xv. 16; Isa. xliii. 16; Chap. x. 14, 15; Amos i. 13; Nah. iii. 10.

up death in victory, 1 Cor. xv. 54. That St. Paul understood the words in this sense appears from the next verse of the same chapter, O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory? which is almost an exact quotation of the Septuagint translation of this passage of the prophet. For the word אָרִי, which we translate, I will be, is rendered by them, where, as it also signifies, verse 10th of this chapter. The apostle, indeed, seems to have quoted the text from his memory, and therefore rather gives the sense than keeps exactly close to the letter of it.
Repentance shall be hid from mine eyes—I will never alter my purpose concerning these mercies
prepared for my people.

Verse 15. Though he be fruitful among his brethren—The name Ephraim denotes fruitfulness,
and this tribe answered its name, being the most numerous of all the ten tribes. An east wind shall come—The east wind was often pestilent and destructive in Judea and the countries about it; therefore this expressed that destruction was coming upon Ephraim and likewise pointed out the quarter
from whence it was to come, namely, from Assyria, which lay eastward of Judea. It is called the wind of the Lord, in the next words, because the destruction which the king of Assyria was to make of Ephraim was to be brought about by the divine will and providence. It is said to come up from the wilderness, because the way of the Assyrian army to Samaria lay through the desert part of Syria. His spring shall become dry, &c. The Assyrian king being spoken of as an east wind, which in those countries is very hot and drying; therefore the destruction, or desolation he was to make, is described by drying up the springs and fountains. He shall spoil the treasure—The same enemy shall plunder
all their treasures and take away their rich and costly
furniture, as the word כָּל is translated, Nah. ii. 9.

Verse 16. Samaria shall become desolate, for she hath rebelled, &c.—The prophet foretels the final destruction of Samaria, for her idolatry and other impieties, by Shalmaneser, king of Assyria. Their infants shall be dashed in pieces, &c.—These were the barbarous practices of conquerors when they took cities by storm, or put all to the sword without distinction of age or sex: see the margin.

CHAPTER XIV.

In this chapter we have, (1.) Directions how to repent, 1-3. (2.) Encouragements to repent, 4-9.

A. M. 3279. B. C. 725. O ISRAEL, ^a return unto the LORD thy God; ^b for thou hast fallen by thine iniquity.

2 Take with you words, and turn to the LORD: say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and ¹ receive us graciously: so will

^a Chapter xii. 6; Joel ii. 13.—^b Chapter xiii. 9.—¹ Or, give good.—^c Heb. xiii. 15.—^d Jeremiah xxxi. 18; Chap. v. 13; xii. 1.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIV.

Verses 1, 2. O Israel, return unto the Lord thy God—O Israel, return now at length, after thou hast suffered so many evils, to the Lord by true repentance and reformation of conduct. The whole family of Israel, in both its branches, seems to be here addressed. For thou hast fallen—From God's love and favour into his displeasure, and consequently into misery, by thine iniquity—Which has involved thee in endless troubles, and will be the cause of thy destruction. Take with you words—Make your confessions, present your petitions, and signify your promises and resolutions unto God, not only in your thoughts, but also by words well chosen and digested; sanctioned by the Holy Scriptures, and agreeable to the will of God. The prophet here prescribes a form of confession, petition, and supplication very proper to be used upon their repentance and conversion. It implies in substance, Confess your sins, entreat for pardon, and promise amendment. And turn to the Lord—In heart and life, in faith, love, and new obedience, otherwise your confessions and prayers will be to little purpose. Say, Take away all iniquity, &c.—Deliver us from the guilt and power of our sins, internal and external; take entirely away the sinful principle within us, the carnal heart of the old Adam. Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me; and receive us graciously—Accept our persons and performances of thy mere grace and favour, thy unmerited mercy and love. But this clause may be rendered, Give us what is good; that is, bestow thy grace and blessing upon us: or, accept the good; that is, when we are begotten again unto holiness by thy Spirit, accept, as good, what we, thus regenerated, shall be enabled to perform. So will we render the calves of our lips—That is, the sacrifices of praise and thanksgiving uttered by our lips. By calling vocal devotions calves, (or bullocks, as Bishop Horsley renders the word פָּרִים,) "as is shown, that this form of supplication is prepared for those times, when animal sacrifices will be abolished, and prayer and thanksgiving will be the only offering."

Verse 3. Asshur shall not save us—We will not rely on Assyria for protection and help. The Israelites frequently sought the alliance of the Assyrians, and are often reproved by the prophets for so doing. We will not ride upon horses—We will not implore the help of Egypt, as we did formerly, nor depend we render the ^c calves of our lips. A. M. 3279. B. C. 725.

3 ^d Asshur shall not save us; ^e we will not ride upon horses: ^f neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, Ye are our gods: ^g for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy.

4 ¶ I will heal ^h their backsliding, I will love

^e Deut. xvii. 16; Psa. xxxiii. 17; Isaiah xxx. 2, 16; xxxi. 1. ^f Chap. ii. 17; Verse 8.—^g Psa. x. 14; lxviii. 5.—^h Jer. v. 6; xiv. 7; Chap. xi. 7.

on horses brought thence, or on any of our military preparations. It was chiefly on account of their cavalry that the Jews and Israelites courted the help of Egypt, having no cavalry of their own. This is the first part of the people's repentance. It consists in their renouncing all dependance on foreign alliances, and on every arm of flesh. • The second is, their renouncing every species of idolatry and image-worship, expressed in the next clause, Neither will we say, &c., to the work of our hands, Ye are our gods—This is often spoken of in the prophets, as an introduction to that state of the church which is to commence from the time of the conversion of the Jews: see notes on chap. ii. 17; and Isa. i. 29. For in thee the fatherless findeth mercy—Thou art the helper of the weak and friendless; of us, who are unable to help ourselves, and are exposed to the injuries of others, having none to defend us. Observe, reader, God never fails to be the helper of all that are destitute of strength in themselves, and destitute of help from others: and who, being sensible of their helpless condition, look for it from God, who hath sufficient power, mercy, and wisdom to help.

Verse 4. I will heal their backsliding—I will deliver them from a backsliding heart and way, and remove those judgments they have brought upon themselves thereby. The Lord says, I will heal, &c., a usual metaphor in Scripture, because sin is our disease, and God is the physician who healeth us, Psa. ciii. 3; Jer. iii. 22; and he doth it through Christ, in whom this promise is made to returning backsliders. God makes this promise to the Israelites by his prophet, to encourage them to hearken to his advice, given in the preceding verses. I will love them freely—That is, of my own mere grace, and favour, and liberality. Bishop Horsley renders this verse, I will restore their conversion; (that is, as he understands it, their converted race, taking conversion as a collective noun for converts; like captivity for the captives; and dispersion for the dispersed;) I will love them gratuitously; for mine anger is departed from me. In these words, God promises, he says, to restore the converted nation [of the Israelites] to his favour, and a situation of prosperity and splendour. On the word gratuitously he quotes the following passage from Luther's commentary on this chapter: "Are good works then nothing? you will say. Is there no place at all for them in the doctrine of repentance? I answer, that hitherto the

A. M. 3279. them ¹ freely : for mine anger is turned away from him. B. C. 725.

5 I will be as ^k the dew unto Israel : he shall ² grow as the lily, and ³ cast forth his roots as Lebanon.

6 His branches ⁴ shall spread, and ¹ his beauty

¹ Eph. i. 6.—^k Job xxix. 19; Prov. xix. 12.—² Or, blossom.
³ Heb. strike.—⁴ Heb. shall go.

discourse hath been about remission of sins, and the gift of the Holy Ghost. These are entirely gratuitous, and not of our merit, but simply of the inexhaustible goodness and compassion of God. Therefore, when we speak of the remission of sins, it is right to be silent about our own works; which, because they are done without the Holy Spirit, although with regard to civil society they may not be bad, yet cannot be called good, and ought not, because of the unclean heart from which they proceed. But when through faith we have received remission of sins, and, together with that, the gift of the Holy Ghost, forthwith from the heart, as from a pure fountain, come forth works also good, and well-pleasing to God. For although, by reason of the remains of original sin, the obedience even of the saints is not perfectly pure, yet, on account of faith in Christ, it is pleasing and acceptable to God."

Verses 5, 6. I will be as the dew unto Israel—These verses contain gracious promises of God's favour, and of blessings upon Israel's conversion, represented by different metaphors. These are first described by that refreshment which copious dews give to the grass in the heat of summer. And if we consider the nature of the climate, and the necessity of dews in so hot a country, not only to refresh, but likewise to preserve life; if we consider also the beauty of the oriental lilies, the fragrance of the cedars which grow upon Lebanon, the beauteous appearance which the spreading olive-trees afforded, the exhilarating coolness caused by the shade of such trees, and the aromatic smell exhaled by the cedars; we shall then partly understand the force of the metaphors here employed by the prophet; but their full energy no one can conceive, till he feels both the want, and enjoys the advantage of the particulars referred to, in that climate where the prophet wrote. See Bishop Lowth's xiith and xixth Prelection. Mr. Harmer's illustration of this passage will be acceptable to the reader. "The image in general," says he, "made use of here by Hosea, is the change that takes place upon the descent of the dew of autumn on the before parched earth, where every thing appeared dead or dying; upon which they immediately become lively and delightful. Israel, by their sins, reduced themselves into a wretched, disgraceful state, like that of the earth, when no rain or dew has descended for a long time; but God promised he would heal their backslidings, and restore them to a flourishing state. The gentleman that visited the holy land in autumn 1774, found the dews very copious then, as well as the rain, and shall be as the olive-tree, and ^m his A. M. 3279. smell as Lebanon. B. C. 725.

7 ⁿ They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn, and ⁵ grow as the vine : the ⁶ scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon.

¹ Psal. lii. 8; cxxviii. 3.—^m Gen. xxvii. 27; Canticles iv. 11.
ⁿ Psal. xci. 1.—⁵ Or, blossom.—⁶ Or, memorial.

particularly observed, in journeying from Jerusalem, a very grateful scent arising from the aromatic herbs growing there, such as rosemary, wild thyme, balm, &c. If the fragrant herbs between Jerusalem and Joppa afforded such a grateful smell, as to engage this ingenious traveller to remark it in his journal, the scent of Lebanon must have been exquisite; for Mr. Maundrell found the great rupture in that mountain, in which Canobin is situated, had 'both sides exceeding steep and high, clothed with fragrant green from top to bottom, and everywhere refreshed with fountains, falling down from the rocks, in pleasant cascades; the ingenious work of nature.'" This sufficiently illustrates the clause, His smell, that is, his fragrance, shall be like that of Lebanon. To illustrate the clause, He shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon, Mr. Harmer quotes a passage from Dr. Russell's account of the natural history of Aleppo, vol. i. c. 3: "After the first rains in the autumn, the fields everywhere throw out the autumnal lily daffodil; and the few plants which had stood the summer now grow with fresh vigour." The other trees of Lebanon, as well as the cedars, are admired by travellers on account of their enormous size. So de la Roque, describing his ascending this mountain, says, the farther they advanced, the loftier were the trees, which, for the most part, were plane-trees, cypresses, and ever-green oaks. And Rauwolf, after mentioning several kinds of trees and herbs which he found there, goes on; But chiefly, and in the greatest number, were the maple-trees, which are large, high, and expand themselves very much with their branches: but, above all, the size of the cedar attracts admiration. "I measured," says Maundrell, "one of the largest, and found it twelve yards six inches in girth, and yet sound; and thirty-seven yards in the spread of its boughs. At about five or six yards from the ground it was divided into five limbs, each of which was equal to a great tree." The beauty of the olive-tree is frequently mentioned in Scripture, and has come under our observation before: see note on Psal. cxxviii. 3.

Verses 7. They that dwell under his shadow shall return—"Not only was Israel to regain its former prosperity, but those smaller tribes of people that were connected with Israel, and shared in its depression, which are here described by dwelling under his shadow." But many versions translate this clause, They shall return and dwell under his shadow. That is, they shall return to their own country, and rest safely under the protection of the Almighty. They shall revive as the corn—They

A. M. 3279. 8 Ephraim shall say, ° What have I to do any more with idols? ° I have heard him, and observed him: I am like a green fir-tree. ° From me is thy fruit found.

° Verse 3.—P Jer. xxxi. 18.—° James i. 17.—Psa. cvii. 43; Jer. ix. 12; Dan. xii. 10; John viii. 47; xviii. 37.

shall arise out of their calamities: this is properly expressed by reviving as the corn, because the corn is buried, and lies as it were dead in the earth, till, after some time, it springs forth. And grow as the vine—Which in winter seems dead, but yet has life, sap, and a fructifying virtue in it. The reference here is to a vine that had been stripped of its leaves, and afterward flourishes again, recovering its lost verdure. A lively emblem this of the Jewish nation, arising from a state of great depression and affliction, and recovering its former prosperity and dignity. And a still more lively image of the revival and increase of true religion in the church of God, and of the graces and virtues of its members after a time of barrenness and unprofitableness. The scent thereof shall be as the vine of Lebanon—Their wisdom, holiness, and usefulness, their piety and virtue, shall diffuse an agreeable fragrance far and wide, and shall be acceptable both to God and man. Mr. Harmer produces several testimonies in proof of the excellence of the wine of Lebanon above all the wines of that part of the world: and indeed above those which have been most celebrated elsewhere.

Verse 8. Ephraim shall say, &c.—The words, shall say, are not in the Hebrew. The clause is therefore translated thus by Bishop Horsley, Ephraim! What have I to do any more with idols, “an exultation,” says he, “of Jehovah over idols. Ephraim! even he is returned to me. I have no more contest to carry on with idols. They are completely overthrown. My sole Godhead is confessed.” I have heard him, and observed him—It is I, not his idols, who have heard his petitions and watched over him to preserve him. I am like a green fir-tree—If these be understood as the words of God, the meaning is, It is I, who am ever-existing, and have it in my power to give my people blessings at all times; as the fir is ever green and flourishing, and affords its shelter, not only in the summer, but in the winter too, when all the rest of the trees are stripped of their leaves and can afford no shelter at all. In other words, As a weary traveller finds rest and safety under a green, thick, and flourishing tree, so there are safety and refreshment under the protection of Jehovah. But some understand these as the words of Ephraim, or Israel, acknowledging that he is in a flourishing condition; and then God reminds him in the next words, that his fruitfulness and prosperity are wholly owing to the divine blessing. Thus the church of God, and all the members thereof, how much soever they may abound in the fruits of righteousness, and in the comforts connected therewith, must confess, that from Christ the true and

A. M. 3279. 9 ° Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? prudent, and he shall know them? for ° the ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them: but the transgressors shall fall therein.

° Proverbs x. 29; Luke ii. 34; 2 Corinthians ii. 16; 1 Peter ii. 7, 8.

living vine is their fruit found; and they must not fail to give him the glory thereof, remembering, that without him they can do nothing excellent or praiseworthy; nothing that will ultimately promote the glory of God, or their own salvation.

Verse 9. Who is wise, &c.—That is, who is so truly wise as duly to weigh and consider the important things contained in this prophecy, the duties prescribed, the blessings promised to the obedient, and the judgments threatened to the disobedient? The prophet's words imply, that there were but few that were endued with such spiritual wisdom and understanding as to do so; but that those who were, would seriously consider and be affected by these things. He shall understand—he shall know them—Those that set themselves to understand and know these things, thereby make it appear that they are truly wise and prudent, and will thereby be made more so; and that many do not understand and know them, is because they are inconsiderate and unwise. Those that are wise in the doing of their duty, that are prudent in practical religion, are most likely to know and understand both the truths and providences of God, which are a mystery to others. The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him. For the ways of the Lord are right—“The ways of the Lord are both the ways which he himself takes in his moral government of the world, and the ways of godliness which he prescribes to man. These, taken together, are the ways of the Lord, and they are right, or straight,” (as יָשָׁר may be properly rendered,) “because they go straight forward, without deviation, to the end,—the happiness of man, and the glory of God.” And the just shall walk therein—The truly righteous will conform to the will of God, both in his precepts and in his providences, and shall have the comfort of so doing. They shall well understand the mind of God, both in his word and in his works, shall be well reconciled to both, and shall accommodate themselves to God's intention in both. The righteous shall walk in those ways toward their great end, and shall not come short of it. Bishop Horsley renders this clause, And in them shall the justified proceed, but revolvers shall stumble. “In the ways of God,” says he, “as they have been described, the justified, those who by faith in Christ have obtained remission of their sins and the gift of the Holy Ghost, shall proceed; they will be making daily and hourly approaches to their journey's end. They shall be able to advance continually in the understanding of the ways of Providence, and of the way laid out by Jehovah for them. But to the incorrigible enemies of God, the very scheme of mercy itself will be a cause of error, confusion, and ruin." Thus also Mr. Lowth: "They who are sincerely desirous to know and do the will of God, will be fully satisfied of the reasonableness of his laws, and the methods of his providence, and will readily comply with the directions of both, to the securing of their own eternal happiness; whereas men of perverse and disobedient tempers take offence at God's commands, and repine against his providence, to their own ruin and perdition. The same sense is expressed in that observation of the son of Sirach, Ecclus. xxxix. 24, As God's ways are plain to the holy, so they are stumbling- blocks to the workers of iniquity. To the same purpose are those words of Christ, Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice, John xviii. 37; and, He that is of God heareth God's word, chap. viii. 47. And St. Peter says, that Christ is become a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence to the disobedient, 1 Pet. ii. 8. The observation of Grotius is very remarkable upon this subject, De Verit. Christian. Relig., lib. ii. c. ult. The doctrine of the gospel was designed to be 'tanquam lapis Lydius, ad quem ingenia sanabilia explorarentur,' as a touchstone to try the tempers of men, whether they were corrigible or not."

THE BOOK OF JOEL.

ARGUMENT.

THERE is much uncertainty as to the exact time when Joel prophesied. Some think he was cotemporary with Hosea : and that as Hosea prophesied chiefly to the ten tribes, so Joel addressed chiefly the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin. It seems most probable, from some parts of this prophecy, that it was delivered in the reign of Ahaz, after the Edomites had smitten Judah, and used great violence ; (compare 2 Chron. xxviii. 17, and Joel iii. 19 ;) and after the Philistines had invaded their cities, and slain or expelled their inhabitants, (compare 2 Chron. xxviii. 18, and Joel iii. 4,) and were both of them triumphing in their success : upon which account God particularly threatens them by this prophet. And as to the Philistines, Joel's prediction was executed against them in Hezekiah's reign, who succeeded Ahaz ; it being expressly predicted of him by Isaiah, chap. xiv. 29, that he should dissolve and destroy them, which we find from his history he actually did. The prophecy consists of four parts : 1st, The prophet describes and bewails the destruction which should be made by locusts, and the distress the country should be in through an excessive drought, chap. i.-ii. 12. 2dly, He calls the people to repentance, to which he encourages them with promises of a removal of the judgment, and of God's taking them into his favour on their complying with his exhortation, chap. ii. 12-27. 3dly, He foretels the plentiful effusion of the Holy Spirit, which should take place in the latter days, namely, in the days of the Messiah, chap. ii. 28-32. 4thly, He proclaims God's judgments against the neighbouring nations, which had unjustly invaded, plundered, and carried his people into captivity : and foretels glorious things of the gospel Jerusalem, and of the prosperity and perpetuity of it, chap. iii.

The style of Joel is essentially different from that of Hosea ; but the general character of his diction, though of a different kind, is not less poetical. He is elegant, perspicuous, copious, and fluent ; he is also sublime, animated, and energetic. In the first and second chapters he displays the full force of the prophetic poetry, and shows how naturally it inclines to the use of metaphors, allegories, and comparisons. Nor is the connection of the matter less clear and evident than the complexion of the style : this is exemplified in the display of the impending evils which gave rise to the prophecy ; the exhortation to repentance ; the promises of happiness and success, both terrestrial and eternal, to those who become truly penitent ; the restoration of the Israelites ; and the vengeance to be taken of their adversaries. But while we allow this just commendation to his perspicuity, both in language and arrangement, we must not deny that there is sometimes great obscurity observable in his subject, and particularly in the latter part of the prophecy. See Bishop Lowth, De Sacra Poesi Hebræorum, Prælec. xxi.

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter is contained, (1.) A description of an unparalleled devastation of the country by locusts, caterpillars, &c., 1-7. (2.) A call to drunkards and persons of all ranks, afflicted by the calamity, to consider and bewail it, 7, 8-13. (3.) An exhortation to the people to fast and pray, and humble themselves before God, on account of the famine and drought, which the very beasts of the field are represented as bewailing, 14-20

A. M. 3362. THE word of the Lord that came to Joel the son of Pethuel. A. M. 3362.
B. C. 742. B. C. 742.
2 Hear this, ye old men, and give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land. A. M. 3362.
B. C. 742. B. C. 742.
to Joel the son of Pethuel. B. C. 742.
been in your days, or even in the B. C. 742.
days of your fathers?

a Chap. ii. 2.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verses 1-3. Hear this, ye old men—Ye that have seen and remember many things. Hath this been

in your days, &c.—Give attention ; and when you have heard and considered, say whether any thing like the calamities which I am about to denounce

A. M. 3262. 3 ^bTell ye your children of it, and
B. C. 742. let your children tell their children, and their children another generation.

4 ^cThat ¹which the palmer-worm hath left hath the locust eaten; and that which the locust hath left hath the canker-worm eaten; and that which the canker-worm hath left hath the caterpillar eaten.

5 Awake, ye drunkards, and weep; and howl,
all ye drinkers of wine, because of the new
wine; ^dfor it is cut off from your mouth.

6 For ^ea nation is come up upon my land, strong, and without number, ^fwhose teeth are the teeth of a lion, and he hath the cheek teeth
of a great lion.

7 He hath ^glaid my vine waste, and ²barked
my fig-tree: he hath made it clean bare, and

^b Psalm lxxviii. 4.—^c Deuteron. xxviii. 38; Chapter ii. 25.
¹ Hebrew, the residue of the palmer-worm.—^d Isaiah xxii. 10.
^e Proverbs xxx. 25, 26, 27; Chap. ii. 2, 11, 25.—^f Rev. ix. 8.
^g Isaiah v. 6.

hath ever happened in your days, or in the days of your fathers. In this way the prophet shows how great and unparalleled this dearth, which he foretells, would be. Tell ye your children—Let these prophecies be handed down to distant generations,
and also an account of the events; that, the events
being compared with the prophecy, it may be seen
how exactly they were foretold.

Verse 4. That which the palmer-worm hath left hath the locust eaten—A succession of noxious creatures hath perfectly destroyed the fruits of the earth; which makes this judgment so strange and remarkable. It is usual with the prophets to speak of things which were certainly about to take place, as already come to pass; and it is likely that the prophet speaks thus here; and that the sense is, That which the palmer-worm shall leave the locust shall eat. Bochart hath assigned many probable reasons to show that the four Hebrew words here used signify four species of locusts.

Verse 5. Awake, ye drunkards—From the long sleep occasioned by your intoxication. Kimchi comments thus on the place: "You, who accustom yourselves to get drunk with wine, awake out of your sleep, and weep night and day; for the wine shall fail you, because the locust shall devour the grape." The exhortation implies, that the calamity should particularly affect those who were given to an excess of drinking, and that it should touch them in a tender part; the wine which they loved so well should be cut off from their mouths. Observe, reader, it is just with God to take away those comforts which are abused to luxury and excess.

Verse 6. For a nation is come up upon my land
—Insects are described as a nation or people marching in order under their leaders, both by sacred and profane writers, because of their power to do miscast it away; the branches thereof are made white. A. M. 3262.

B. C. 742.

8 ¶ ^hLament like a virgin girded with sack-
cloth for ⁱthe husband of her youth.

9 ^kThe meat-offering and the drink-offering is cut off from the house of the LORD; the priests, the LORD's ministers, mourn.

10 The field is wasted, ¹the land mourneth;
for the corn is wasted: ^mthe new wine is ²dried
up, the oil languisheth.

11 ⁿBe ye ashamed, O ye husbandmen;
howl, O ye vine-dressers, for the wheat and for the barley; because the harvest of the field is perished.

12 ^oThe vine is dried up, and the fig-tree
languisheth; the pomegranate-tree, the palm-tree also, and the apple-tree, even all the trees

² Hebrew, laid my fig-tree for a barking.—^h Isaiah xxii. 12.
ⁱ Prov. ii. 17; Jer. iii. 4.—^k Verse 13; Chap. ii. 14.—^l Jer.
xii. 11; xiv. 2.—^m Isa. xxiv. 7; Verse 12.—ⁿ Or, ashamed.
^o Jer. xiv. 3, 4.—^p Verse 10.

or art. Whose teeth are the teeth of a lion—They devour every thing that comes in their way, and there is no possibility of rescuing it from them.
Pliny and other writers tell us, that they will not only destroy the leaves and fruits of the trees on which they fasten, but will even devour the very bark and stock thereof.

Verse 8. Lament, &c.—The prophet here calls upon the inhabitants of Judea to deprecate this grievous judgment, by humiliation and unfeigned
sorrow for their sins; like a virgin for the husband of her youth—That is, bitterly, and from the very heart; for the grief of a woman is generally very poignant and sincere for the loss of her first husband, to whom she was married in her youth. The expression is still stronger, if we suppose it spoken of a virgin betrothed to a man she loves, and whom she loses before they come together as man and wife.

Verses 9, 10. The meat-offering and the drink-offering—These offerings always accompanied the daily sacrifice: see Num. xxviii. 4, 7. The word here and elsewhere translated meat-offering, properly signifies the bread-offering, which was made of flour. It is here foretold, that these daily sacrifices could not be offered as they were wont to be,
on account of the scarcity of corn and wine. The field is wasted, &c.—The fields and the whole land
have a mournful appearance, being altogether bare,
and destitute of fruit for the food of either man or beast. The oil languisheth—The olive-tree fadeth
and produceth no fruit.

Verses 11, 12. Be ye ashamed, O ye husbandmen
—Be struck with confusion to see all your hopes disappointed, and no fruit arising from your labour;
to find nothing of that which you had made yourselves
sure of. Howl, O ye vine-dressers—This is to be referred to what is said in the next verse, and not to the words immediately following, which belong to

A. M. 3262. of the field, are withered : because
B. C. 742. ¹ joy is withered away from the sons of men.

² ³ ⁴ Gird yourselves, and lament, ye priests :
howl, ye ministers of the altar : come, lie all night in sackcloth, ye ministers of my God :
for ⁵ the meat-offering and the drink-offering is withholden from the house of your God.

⁶ ⁷ ⁸ Sanctify ye a fast, call ⁹ a ¹⁰ solemn assembly, gather the elders and ¹¹ all the inhabitants of the land into the house of the LORD your God, and cry unto the LORD.

¹² ¹³ ¹⁴ Alas for the day ! for ¹⁵ the day of the LORD is at hand, and as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come.

¹⁶ Is not the meat cut off before our eyes,

¹ Isaiah xiv. 11 ; Jer. xlviii. 33 ; Psalm iv. 7 ; Isaiah ix. 3.
² Verse 8 ; Jer. iv. 8. ³ Verse 9. ⁴ 2 Chronicles xx. 3, 4 ;
Chap. ii. 15, 16. ⁵ Levit. xxiii. 36. ⁶ Or, day of restraint.
⁷ 2 Chron. xx. 13. ⁸ Jer. xxx. 7.

the husbandmen, as the subject for their lamentation ;
as the vine, being dried up, was the cause of the sorrow of the vine-dressers. Because joy is withered away from the sons of men—Through want of food and wine. Or, he refers to the joy they used to show at the gathering in of the fruits of the earth.

Verse 13. Gird yourselves—Namely, with sackcloth ; and lament, ye priests—Because the meat-offerings and drink-offerings were cut off : see verse
9. Lie all night in sackcloth—Let those priests, whose turn it is to keep the night-watches in the temple, cover themselves with sackcloth, as is usual in times of the greatest calamity ; and let them not put it off when they betake themselves to rest, but sleep in sackcloth instead of their ordinary garments.

Verse 14. Sanctify ye a fast, &c.—In order to avert God's wrath and deprecate his judgments.
Gather the elders, &c., into the house of the Lord—
The house where God hath placed his name, and where he hath promised to hear the prayers which are addressed to him by his people, when they are afflicted with judgments of this kind : see 1 Kings
viii. 37.

Verses 15-17. Alas for the day!—Wo to us !
The time in which God will inflict on us the punishments we have long deserved is now near ; and if they be not averted by our repentance, they will fall upon us in an irresistible manner, and will end
in our utter destruction, as coming from a God who is infinite in power, and terrible in his judgments.
Is not the meat cut off before our eyes—Hebrew,
before your eyes, namely, devoured by locusts or withered with drought. Yea, joy and gladness from the house of our God—The dearth hath obliged us to discontinue our daily offerings for want of corn
and wine ; and has deprived us of those rejoicings, wherewith we used to keep our solemn feasts at yea, ² joy and gladness from the A. M. 3262.

house of our God ? B. C. 742.

¹⁷ The ⁶ seed is rotten under their clods, the garners are laid desolate, the barns are broken down ; for the corn is withered.

¹⁸ How do ¹ the beasts groan ! the herds of cattle are perplexed, because they have no pasture ; yea, the flocks of sheep are made desolate.

¹⁹ O LORD, ² to thee will I cry : for ³ the fire hath devoured the ⁴ pastures of the wilderness,
and the flame hath burned all the trees of the field.

²⁰ The beasts of the field ¹ cry also unto thee : for ² the rivers of waters are dried up,
and the fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness.

¹ Isaiah xiii. 6, 9 ; Chapter ii. 1.—² Deut. xii. 6, 7 ; xvi.
11, 14, 15.—³ Heb. grains.—⁴ Hosea iv. 3.—⁵ Psa. l. 15.
⁶ Jer. ix. 10 ; Chap. ii. 3.—⁷ Or, habitations.—⁸ Job xxxviii.
41 ; Psa. civ. 21 ; cxlv. 15.—⁹ 1 Kings xvii. 7 ; xviii. 5.

Jerusalem, and partake of the sacrifices there offered. It must be remembered, that the prophet all along speaks of the calamity as present, although,
most probably, as was said before, this is a prophecy of what was to come. The seed is rotten under the clods—The corn which is sown dies away and rots
in the ground, so that the barns and granaries become useless and desolate.

Verse 18. How do the beasts groan!—"How grievous will be the distress of the beasts of the field ! How sadly will they complain through the vehemency of thirst ! How will the herds of cattle be troubled and perplexed ! For their verdant pastures shall be all scorched up, and they will have none wherein to feed. The flocks also shall be desolate, and ready to perish." Scarce any thing can be more strongly or more movingly descriptive of the effects of a dearth and drought than this is.

Ver. 19, 20. O Lord, to thee will I cry—The prophet carries on the beautiful hypotyposis, (or description of the calamity, painted in such strong and bright colours as rendered it, as it were, present before the eyes of the people,) by representing himself as a sharer in the calamity. And by crying to God himself, he endeavours to stir up the people to cry
to him. For the fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness—The fiery drought hath burned up all the pasture-grounds. The wilderness is sometimes opposed to the hills and mountains, and then it signifies the plains and places for pasture. Or, if the expression be here understood of deserts, it must be observed, that there were spots in them where flocks and herds might feed. *The beasts of the field
also cry unto thee*—Even the cattle and wild beasts utter their complaints, and express their want of food by the mournful noise which they make, as it were beseeching thee to have pity on them and relieve their wants. Even they have a voice to cry, as well as an eye to look to God. The rivers of water are dried up—The drought drying up the springs, the rivers have failed, and have little or no water in them. Thus, throughout the chapter, the prophet foretels a drought, as well as a plague of locusts; and these two calamities often go together, a great increase of locusts, according to Pliny and Bochart, being occasioned by heat.

CHAPTER II.

This chapter contains, (1.) A further description of the desolation of the land, 1–11. (2.) An earnest call to repentance, 12–17. (3.) A promise of all good things to the penitent, 18–27. (4.) A prophecy of the Messiah's kingdom, 28–32.

A. M. 3262. B. C. 742. BLOW ^aye the ¹trumpet in Zion, and ^bsound an alarm in my holy mountain: let all the inhabitants of the land tremble: for ^cthe day of the LORD cometh, for it is nigh at hand;

2 ^dA day of darkness and of gloominess, a day of clouds and of thick darkness, as the

^a Jeremiah iv. 5; Verse 15.—¹ Or, cornet.—^b Numbers x. 5, 9.—^c Chapter i. 15; Obadiah 15; Zephaniah i. 14, 15. ^d Amos v. 18, 20.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verse 1. Blow ye the trumpet in Zion—The prophet, having in the preceding chapter described the locusts and caterpillars as a mighty army sent by God, in pursuance of this metaphor now exhorts the people to prepare to meet them, in the same terms as if they were alarmed to oppose an enemy, which was always done by the sound of the trumpet. Danger is proclaimed in this way, Ezek. xxxiii. 3, 5; Hos. v. 8; Amos iii. 6. Natural means were wont to be used, to prevent the devastations of locusts; pits and trenches were dug, bags were provided, and combustible matter was prepared and set on fire: see Shaw's Travels, 4to. p. 187. Let all the inhabitants of the land tremble—Let them be seized with as terrible an apprehension of this approaching judgment, as if they saw an enemy invading their country.

Verse 2. A day of darkness and of gloominess—A day of great calamity and trouble, which is often expressed in the Scripture by darkness. Or, perhaps, the prophet's words are to be taken here in the literal sense; for it is certain that, in the eastern countries, locusts will sometimes, on a sudden, cover the sky like a cloud, intercept the light of the sun, and diffuse a darkness on the tract of country over which they are flying. "Solem obumbrant," They darken the sun, says Pliny, Nat. Hist. lib. xi. 28. Thuanus, (lib. xxxiv. 7, p. 364, vol. v.,) describing a calamity of this kind, says, Laborabat eo tempore, &c. "Syria was afflicted at that time with the want of every kind of forage and provisions, on account of such a multitude of locusts as was never seen before in the memory of man, which, like a thick cloud, darkening the light in mid-day, flying to and fro, devoured the fruits of the ground everywhere." And Adanson, in his Voyage to Senegal, p. 127, says, morning spread upon the mountains: A. M. 3262. B. C. 742. ^ea great people and a strong; ^fthere hath not been ever the like, neither shall be any more after it, even to the years ²of many generations.

3 ^gA fire devoureth before them; and behind them a flame burneth: the land is as ^hthe

^e Verses 5, 11, 25; Chap. i. 6.—^f Exodus x. 14.—² Heb. of generation and generation.—^g Chap. i. 19, 20.—^h Gen. ii. 8; xiii. 10; Isa. li. 3.

"Suddenly there came over our heads a thick cloud, which darkened the air and deprived us of the rays of the sun. We soon found that it was owing to a cloud of locusts." And in Chandler, on verse 10, Hermanus is quoted, as saying that "locusts obscure the sun for the space of a mile;" and Aloysius, "for the space of twelve miles." For a further account of them, see note on Exod. x. 5, 13. As the morning spread upon the mountains—This signifies, that the darkness occasioned by the locusts should be very diffusive or general; that they should spread themselves everywhere, as the rays of the morning do upon the mountains. A great people and strong—The locusts, being represented as a great army coming to destroy, are here termed a great and strong people: see note on chap. i. 6. There hath not been ever the like, &c.—The locusts which plagued Egypt are described after the same manner, Exod. x. 14. The expression in both places seems to be proverbial, and intended to set forth the extraordinary greatness of the judgment; but is not to be understood too strictly, according to the grammatical sense of the words. Thus we read of Hezekiah, that after him there was none like him among all the kings of Judah, 2 Kings xviii. 5; and yet the same character is given of Josiah, chap. xxiii. 25.

Verse 3. A fire devoureth before them, &c.—They consume like a general conflagration. "They destroy the ground," says Sir Hans Sloane, (Natural History of Jamaica, i. 29,) "not only for the time, but burn trees for two years after." "Wheresoever they feed," says Ludolphus, (History of Ethiopia, lib. i. c. 13,) "their leavings seem, as it were, parched with fire." Pliny bears the same testimony, xi. 29, Multa contactu adurentes, "Burning things up by the touch." The land is as the garden of Eden before them, &c.—The land of Judea, so famous for

A. M. 3262. garden of Eden before them, ¹ and
B. C. 742. behind them a desolate wilderness;
yea, and nothing shall escape them.

4 ^k The appearance of them is as the appearance of horses; and as horsemen so shall they run.

5 ¹ Like the noise of chariots on the tops of mountains shall they leap, like the noise of a flame of fire that devoureth the stubble, ^m as a strong people set in battle-array.

¹ Zechariah vii. 14. — ^k Revelation ix. 7. — ^l Revelation ix. 9.
^m Verse 2.

its fertility and pleasantness, shall be turned into a desolate wilderness by the ravages they will make. The garden of Eden is a proverbial expression for a place of pleasure and fruitfulness, in which sense we commonly use the word paradise. And nothing shall escape them—Namely, which the ground produces. “After devouring the herbage,” says Adanson, as above, “with the fruits and the leaves of the trees, they attacked even the buds and very bark. They did not so much as spare the reeds with which the huts were thatched.” Thus also Ludolphus: “Sometimes they enter the very bark of trees, and then the spring itself cannot repair the damage.” “Omnia morsu erodentes, et fores quoque tectorum,” says Pliny, xi. 20. “Consuming all things, even the doors of the houses.” In the Philosophical Transactions, No. 112, A. D. 1686, we have an account of the locusts in Languedoc, being about an inch in length, of a gray colour. “The earth,” it is observed, “in some places, was covered four inches thick with them, in the morning, before the heat of the sun was considerable; but as soon as it began to grow hot they took wing, and fell upon the corn, eating up both leaf and ear; and that with such expedition, by reason of their number, that in three hours they would devour a whole field, after which they again took wing, and their swarms were so thick, that they covered the sun like a cloud, and were whole hours in passing. After having eaten up the corn, they fell upon the vines, the pulse, the willows, and even the hemp, notwithstanding its great bitterness; after this these insects died, and stunk very much.”

Verses 4–6. The appearance of them is as the appearance of horses—Bochart and many other writers mention the resemblance which the head of a locust bears to that of a horse; whence the Italians call them cavalette. Like the noise of chariots on the mountains shall they leap—Or, as the clause may be better rendered, They shall leap on the tops of mountains with the noise of chariots. The locusts being represented as an army attacking the country, and chariots being anciently a part of warlike preparations, the text says that these locusts shall resemble them in their swiftness, noise, and terror. Pliny mentions (Natural History, lib. xl. cap. 29) locusts “making a noise with their wings, as if they were winged foals.” Like the noise of a flame of 6 Before their face the people shall be much pained: ⁿ all faces shall gather ³ blackness.

7 They shall run like mighty men; they shall climb the wall like men of war; and they shall march every one on his ways, and they shall not break their ranks:

8 Neither shall one thrust another; they shall walk every one in his path: and when they fall upon the ⁴ sword, they shall not be wounded.

ⁿ Jeremiah viii. 21; Lam. iv. 8; Nahum ii. 10. — ³ Heb. pot.
⁴ Or, dart.

fire, &c.—Like the crackling of the fire burning up stubble. Cyril says of them, that while they are breaking their food with their teeth, the noise is like that of flame driven about by the wind. See Bochart on the place. The Baron de Tott, quoted by Harmer, speaking of the clouds of locusts coming from Tartary toward Constantinople, observes, “To the noise of their flight succeeds that of their devouring activity; it resembles the rattling of hail-stones, but its consequences are infinitely more destructive. Fire itself eats not so fast, nor is there a vestige of vegetation to be found, when they again take their flight, and go elsewhere to produce like disasters.” As a strong people set in battle array—Their noise is like that of the shouts of an army going to be engaged. These expressions are undoubtedly hyperbolic; but yet the noise which such a vast multitude of locusts would make must needs be very great. Before their face the people shall be much pained—At seeing their vast multitudes, and the havoc they make of the fruits of the earth, the inhabitants of the land shall be in great pain and anguish, and shall be seized with such a dread and fear as shall make their visage look black and ghastly, like that of persons who are dying.

Verses 7, 8. They shall run like mighty men—They shall proceed everywhere like stout and mighty men, who are afraid of nothing. The description here given agrees perfectly to locusts, as Bochart has shown. “First, They shall run. Now their manner of fighting is thus described: They strike, or wound, not as they stand, but as they run. Secondly, They run as mighty men. What are more innumerable or strong than locusts, says St. Jerome, which no human pains can resist? Thirdly, They shall march every one in his way, and not break their ranks: and in the next verse, Neither shall one thrust or press his comrade. St. Jerome, in his notes on this place, observes, “This we lately saw in our part of the country; for when swarms of locusts came and filled the lower region of the air, they flew in such order, by the divine appointment, and kept their places as exactly, as when several tiles, or party-coloured stones, are skilfully placed in a pavement, so as not to be a hair’s breadth out of their several ranks.” The same is observed by other writers cited by Bochart: and what is further remarkable, before the body of them come to any

A. M. 3262. 9 They shall run to and fro in the
B. C. 742. city; they shall run upon the wall, they shall climb up upon the houses; they shall enter in at the windows ^p like a thief.

10 ^a The earth shall quake before them; the heavens shall tremble: ^r the sun and the moon shall be dark, and the stars shall withdraw their shining:

11 ^s And the LORD shall utter his voice before ^t his army: for his camp ^{is} very great: ^u for ^{he} ^{is} strong that executeth his word: for the ^v day of the LORD ^{is} great and very terrible;
and ^w who can abide it?

^a Jer. ix. 21.—^p John x. 1.—^q Psa. xviii. 7.—^r Isa. xiii.
10; Ezek. xxxii. 7; Verse 31; Chap. iii. 15; Matt. xxiv. 29.
^s Jer. xxv. 30; Chap. iii. 16; Amos i. 2.—^t Ver. 25.—^u Jer.
i. 34; Rev. xviii. 8.—^v Jer. xxx. 7; Amos v. 18; Zeph. i. 15.
^w Numbers xxiv. 23; Mal. iii. 2.—^x Jer. iv. 1; Hosea xii. 6;

place, they send scouts and messengers, as it were,
to view the ground, and measure it out for their use;
as the same last-mentioned writer remarks from Sigibertus, concerning the locusts which destroyed France in the year 874. When they fall upon the sword they shall not be wounded—By reason of their lightness and nimbleness, and the hardness and smoothness of the outward coat of their skin. It “refers,” says Newcome, “to the scales with which locusts are covered as with a coat of mail.” “Most animals retreat at the sight of a man, but it is the reverse with locusts, for they will studiously attack.
Where they collect in numbers, the inhabitants retire into their dwellings as fast as possible, lest
by appearing abroad they might provoke their anger.
They show no fear, and, from their slender shape,
frequently elude the blow aimed at them.”

Verses 9, 10. They shall run to and fro in the city—No place shall be inaccessible to them, nor free from them. “Every place,” says St. Jerome, “lies open to them; for they infest not only the fields,
and the fruits of the earth, but creep into cities,
houses, and the most secret recesses.” The earth shall quake before them—The inhabitants of the land of Judea shall be seized with a horrible dread at their approach. The heavens shall look dark and disinal, because they shall come in such swarms as to intercept the rays of the sun, and the light of the moon and stars. By the expression, The heavens shall tremble, is either meant, that the whole state of the kingdom of Judah, of the very highest in rank
and dignity, as well as the meanest, should be struck with a panic at this unusual judgment; or else that the locusts should so fill the sky, that, at a great height, it would appear as if the heavens themselves trembled.

Verse 11. And the Lord shall utter his voice before his army—God, who can make the meanest
parts of the creation the instruments of his vengeance,
is here sublimely introduced, like a leader or general, commanding and animating this his army by his voice. For his camp is very great—That is, his 12 ¶ Therefore also now, saith the A. M. 3262.

LORD, ^z Turn ye even to me with B. C. 742.

all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning:

13 And ^a rend your heart, and not ^b your garments, and turn unto the LORD your God:
for he ^{is} ^c gracious and merciful, slow to anger,
and of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil.

14 ^d Who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave ^e a blessing behind him; even ^f a meat-offering and a drink-offering unto the LORD your God?

xiv. 1.—^a Psalm xxxiv. 18; li. 17.—^b Genesis xxxvii. 34;
2 Sam. i. 11; Job i. 20.—^c Exod. xxxiv. 6; Psa. lxxxvi. 5, 15;
Jonah iv. 2.—^d Josh. xiv. 12; 2 Sam. xii. 22; 2 Kings xix. 4;
Amos v. 15; Jonah iii. 9; Zeph. ii. 3.—^e Isaiah lxx. 8; Hag.
ii. 19.—^f Chap. i. 9, 13.

army is very great and terrible, making whatsoever havoc he orders them, and wheresoever. For the day of the Lord is great, &c.—The time of God’s particular judgments, as well as that of his general
one, is commonly expressed by the day of the Lord,
the former being an earnest and imperfect representation of the latter.

Verses 12–14. Therefore, also now, &c.—Or,
Nevertheless, also now, saith the Lord, &c.—Here
a method is pointed out, whereby they might still have hopes of avoiding the calamity denounced against them, namely, by turning to God sincerely,
and publicly testifying their inward repentance and grief for their sins, by outward expressions of sorrow and humiliation. And rend your heart—Rending of the garments was customary in times of great sorrow and affliction, not only among the Jews and Israelites, but among almost all the ancient nations.
The prophet here does not absolutely forbid their using this outward sign of sorrow, but exhorts them
to attend more to inward contrition and humiliation, without which the outward signs of them were of no signification before God. The Hebrew writers often signify the preference that is due to one thing above another in terms which express the rejecting of that which is less worthy. Thus we read, Hos.
vi. 6, I will have mercy and not sacrifice; that is,
I require mercy rather than sacrifice. In the same sense we are to understand the text before us. God prefers a broken and a contrite heart far before all outward expressions of humiliation and grief. For he is gracious and merciful, &c.—These words
allude to God’s own declaration of himself, Exod.
xxxiv. 6, on which they might with good reason ground hopes of forgiveness on their repenting unfeignedly of their sins, and bringing forth fruit worthy of repentance. And repenteth him of the evil—That is, of the evil which he had threatened to inflict in case those, against whom his threatenings
were denounced, did not turn to him in true repentance. God is in Scripture said to repent when the humiliation of sinners and the reformation of their

A. M. 3262. 15 ¶ ^g Blow the trumpet in Zion, ^h sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly :

16 Gather the people, ⁱ sanctify the congregation, ^k assemble the elders, ^l gather the children, and those that suck the breasts : ^m let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet.

17 Let the priests, the ministers of the LORD,

^g Num. x. 3 ; Verse 1. — ^h Chap. i. 14. — ⁱ Exodus xix. 10, 22. — ^k Chapter i. 14. — ^l 2 Chron. xx. 13. — ^m 1 Cor. vii. 5. ⁿ Ezek. viii. 16 ; Matt. xxiii. 35.

conduct make it unfit that he should inflict the punishment threatened by him. Who knoweth if he will return, and repent—God's own nature, and the former instances we have found of his merciful disposition, encourage us to hope, that our sincere repentance may avail to avert his wrath, and engage him to restore his blessings upon us and our land. The prophet expresses himself between hope and fear of what might be the event, lest he should fill them with too much security on one hand, or drive them on the other, by a despair of pardon, to have no thoughts of repentance or amendment, but to go on still in their sins. Even a meat-offering and a drink-offering unto the Lord your God—At least sufficient provision to supply the necessary parts of God's public worship, which since the dearth had been necessarily omitted.

Verses 15, 16. Blow the trumpet in Zion—This was a signal for assembling the people at the solemn times of public worship. Sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly—Or, appoint ye a fast, proclaim a solemn day ; so Archbishop Newcome. Sanctify the congregation—Let the people prepare themselves for this solemn time of humiliation, not only by washing themselves and their clothes, and cleansing themselves from all legal impurities, as is required Exod. xix. 10–15, but by true contrition of heart, godly sorrow for, and forsaking all known sin, as also by abstaining from all sensual pleasures, however innocent and allowable at other times. Absolute self-denial is but a reasonable preparation for keeping a day of solemn humiliation before God, on account of national sins or calamities. This kind of abstinence was recommended among the heathen as a necessary preparation for solemn worship. Assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts—Let both young and old join in this duty, for all ages joining in it will add much to the solemnity of it, and is very proper to work in men's minds that sincere contrition, which may avert those judgments which threaten the whole nation, and in which their posterity may suffer. Let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet—Even on the day of their marriage, or during the marriage-feast. Let newly-married persons disregard the concerns and enjoyments peculiar to their situation, and afflict themselves with the rest of the people.

weep ⁿ between the porch and the altar, and let them say, ^o Spare thy people, O LORD, and give not thy heritage to reproach, that the heathen should ⁵ rule over them : ^p wherefore should they say among the people, Where is their God ?

18 ¶ Then will the LORD ^q be jealous for his land, ^r and pity his people.

19 Yea, the LORD will answer and say unto

^o Exod. xxxii. 11, 12 ; Deut. ix. 26–29. — ^p Or, use a by-word against them. — ^q Psal. xlii. 10 ; lxxix. 10 ; cxv. 2 ; Mic. vii. 10. ^r Zech. i. 14 ; viii. 2. — ^s Deut. xxxii. 36 ; Isa. lx. 10.

Verse 17. Let the priests, the ministers of the Lord, weep between the porch and the altar—The priests, being in a peculiar sense the Lord's servants, are here required to take the lead in this sacred work of penitence, and to stand weeping and praying between the porch and the altar ; that is, in the open court, just before the porch of the temple built by Solomon, (see 1 Kings vi. 3,) and the altar of burnt-offerings. This was called the priests' court, and was the place where the greatest part of those, whose course it was, gave their attendance. Hereupon this is mentioned as the most proper place for the priests to stand in, while they addressed their prayers and intercessions to God in behalf of the people ; because here they could best be seen and heard by all the assembly, and here they had before offered the sacrifices proper for such an occasion. And let them say, Spare thy people, O Lord—It was usual to prescribe certain forms of prayer or praise to the priests, in their public ministrations : see Hos. xiv. 2 ; 1 Chron. xvi. 36. Such was this here mentioned, wherein they beseech God to deliver his people, not for any merit of theirs, but for his own glory, lest the heathen round about them should take occasion to blaspheme his name, as if he were not able to protect his worshippers. That the heathen should rule over them—This translation of the Hebrew verb שָׁרָה, favours their interpretation, who understand by the army, at the beginning of the chapter, an invading human enemy. But if expounded of a plague of locusts, still this translation, as Archbishop Newcome justly observes, may be supported, because, when the people were distressed by the locusts, they would be an easier prey to their enemies. But, to make a proverb of them, or to use a by-word against them, as the margin reads, is the more natural translation : for to have their country destroyed by locusts would naturally make them the subject of their enemies' scorn and derision, as if they were forsaken by the God whom they worshipped ; and the Hebrew verb above mentioned is indifferently taken in either sense.

Verses 18–20. Then will the Lord be jealous for his land—If you do what I propose to you, if you sincerely humble yourselves before God, confess your sins, and truly repent of them, turning to God in newness of life, then will the Lord be concerned for the honour and welfare of that land which he

A. M. 3262. his people, Behold, I will send you
B. C. 742. "corn, and wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith: and I will no more
make you a reproach among the heathen:

20 But "I will remove far off from you "the northern army, and will drive him into a land

* Chapter i. 10; Malachi iii. 10, 11, 12.—† Exodus x. 19.
" Jeremiah i. 14.

has chosen to settle his worshippers in. Yea, the Lord will say, Behold, I will send you corn, &c.—I will restore your former plenty, and the nations about you shall have no more occasion to reproach your desolate condition. But I will remove far off from you the northern army—Or, enemy, nation, or people; that is, the locusts, which might enter Judea by the north, as Circassia and Mingrelia abound with them. Because Joel represents this army as coming from the north, some have been ready to imagine, that he was speaking not of real locusts, but of the Chaldeans, or some other desolating army of men that should come from that quarter. "But the Baron de Tott assures us, in a late publication of his, that he found locusts coming in great numbers from Tartary toward Constantinople, which lies to the south of that country. 'I saw,' says he, 'no appearance of culture on my route, because the Noguais (the Tartars) avoid the cultivation of frequented places. Their harvest by the sides of roads would serve only as pasture to travellers' horses. But if this precaution preserves them from such kind of depredation, nothing can protect their fields from a much more fatal scourge. Clouds of locusts frequently alight on their plains; and, giving the preference to their fields of millet, ravage them in an instant. Their approach darkens the horizon, and so enormous is their multitude, it hides the light of the sun. When the husbandmen happen to be sufficiently numerous, they sometimes divert the storm by their agitation and cries; but when they fail, the locusts alight on their fields, and there form a bed of six or seven inches thick. This plague, no doubt, would be more extensive in countries better cultivated; and Greece and Asia Minor would be more frequently exposed, did not the Black sea swallow up most of those swarms which attempt to pass that barrier. I have often seen the shores of the Pontus Euxinus, toward the Bosphorus of Thrace, covered with their dried remains, in such multitudes, that one could not walk along the strand without sinking half-leg deep into a bed of these skinny skeletons. Curious to know the true cause of their destruction, I sought the moment of observation, and was a witness of their ruin by a storm, which overtook them so near the shore, that their bodies were cast upon the land while yet entire. This produced an infection so great, that it was several days before they could be approached.'—Memoirs, part ii. p. 58–60. They frequently then, according to this writer, in that part of the world, pass, or attempt to pass, from north to south. In Judea they have been supposed to go from the south-

barren and desolate, with his face A. M. 3262.
"toward the east sea, and his hinder B. C. 742.
part "toward the utmost sea; and his stink
shall come up, and his ill savour shall come up, because "he hath done great things.

21 ¶ Fear not, O land; be glad and rejoice:

* Ezekiel xlvii. 18; Zech. xiv. 8.—† Deut. xi. 24.—" Heb.
he hath magnified to do.

eastward in a contrary direction. And if this is the common route they take there, it must have struck the Jews very much, when they found the prophet predicting the going of the locusts to the southward; and still more so when they found it exactly accomplished, as it was a demonstration of the perfect foreknowledge of Jehovah, perhaps of his guiding and directing those vast bodies of insects. The locusts, it is said, have no king, yet go they forth by bands, Prov. xxx. 27. But if they have no king of their own species, they are undoubtedly under the direction of the God that made them: he is their king."—Harmer, vol. iv. obs. 146.

Some of the locusts, which here are the subject of Joel's prophecy, were to be driven by the wind into the desert, or, as it is here styled, a land barren and desolate; some into the Dead sea, called here the east sea, lying eastward of Jerusalem; some into the Mediterranean, or western sea, called here the utmost sea. By his face toward the east sea, and his hinder part toward the utmost sea, is described the extent of the body, or army of locusts; the face meaning the foremost of them, and the hinder part the hindmost of them. And his stink shall come up—"That a strong and pestilential smell," says Newcome, "arises from putrefied heaps of locusts, whether driven upon land or cast up from the sea in which they have perished, appears from the testimony of many writers. Among various other authorities to the same effect, St. Jerome is quoted by Bochart as saying, that in his time those troops of locusts which covered Judea were cast by the wind in mare primum et novissimum; and that, when the waters threw them up, their smell caused a pestilence. Thevenot says of them, They live not above six months; and when dead, the stench of them so corrupts and infects the air, that it often occasions dreadful pestilences.—City Remem. i. 123. There came such a stench from those which appeared at Novogorod in 1646, as not only offended the nose, but the brain: it was not to be endured: men were forced to wash their noses with vinegar, and hold handkerchiefs dipped in it continually to their nostrils, Ibid. 125. In Ethiopia, when they die and rot, they raise a pestilence.—Mead, i. 36." Because he hath done great things—That is, committed great devastation. Or rather, although he hath done great things: though this army of insects, by God's appointment, has made such destruction in the land, yet it shall come to this shameful end.

Verses 21, 22. Fear not, O land, &c.—"In the former part of this prophecy the land is elegantly represented as mourning, the beasts groaning, and

A. M. 3262. for the LORD will do great things.
B. C. 742.

22 Be not afraid, ^aye beasts of the field: for ^athe pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the tree beareth her fruit, the fig-tree and the vine do yield their strength.

23 Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and ^brejoice in the LORD your God: for ^bhe hath given you ^cthe former rain ^dmoderately, and he ^ewill cause to come down for you ^dthe rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month.

24 And the floors shall be full of wheat, and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil.

^a Chap. i. 18, 20.—^a Zech. viii. 12; Chap. i. 19.—^b Isaiah xli. 16; lxi. 10; Hab. iii. 18; Zech. x. 7.—^c Or, a teacher of righteousness.—^d Heb. according to righteousness.—^e Levit. xxvi. 4; Deut. xi. 14; xxviii. 12.

the herds of cattle as greatly distressed; the rivers of water dried up, and the pastures of the wilderness as all consumed. In the same elegant strain he calls upon the land to rejoice, and the beasts of the field to be glad; because the rain should descend, the trees yield their increase, the earth its plenty, and every thing minister to the joy and comfort of the inhabitants: so that though the threatening ran, that the land (which looked, before the locusts invaded it, like the garden of Eden) should appear behind them like a desolate wilderness; the blessing intimated upon their repentance is, that the desolate wilderness should be again turned into a garden of Eden, and abound with every thing for usefulness and pleasure." For the Lord will do great things—God will magnify himself, and show his power as much in acts of mercy as he did before in the strokes of his justice. Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field—As the cattle and the wild beasts had their share in the dearth, (chap. i. 18, 20,) so now even they shall receive comfort, in the return of plenty. The fig-tree and the vine do yield their strength—That is, bear fruit according to their kind, in great abundance.

Verse 23. He hath given you the former rain moderately—The season of the former rain was about the middle of October. The Hebrew word לצרקה, rendered moderately, literally signifies, according to righteousness, and is equivalent with according to judgment. Archbishop Newcome renders it, in just proportion: and he will cause to come the latter rain in the first month—Which was Nisan, partly answering to our March. The regular season for this rain was three months before harvest, Amos iv. 7; that is, before wheat-harvest, which was later than the barley-harvest in Judea. Of the former and latter rain, see note on Hosea vi. 3.

Verses 25–27. And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten—I will compensate you, or make you amends, for what the locusts have eaten in the foregoing years, by an extraordinary plenty

25 And I will restore to you the years ^athat the locust hath eaten. A. M. 3262.
B. C. 742.

the canker-worm, and the caterpillar, and the palmer-worm, ^fmy great army which I sent among you.

26 And ye shall ^geat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you: and my people shall never be ashamed.

27 ^hAnd ye shall know that I am ⁱin the midst of Israel, and that ^kI am the LORD your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed.

^d James v. 7.—^e Chap. i. 4.—^f Verse 11.—^g Lev. xxvi. 5; Psa. xxii. 26; Lev. xxvi. 26; Mic. vi. 14.—^h Chap. iii. 17.
ⁱ Lev. xxvi. 11, 12; Ezek. xxxvii. 26, 27, 28.—^k Isa. xlv. 5, 21, 22; Ezek. xxx. 22, 28.

of the fruits of the earth. This verse proves, beyond a doubt, that they mistake who interpret this prophecy of a hostile invasion of Judea; for it seems to be a general rule in the prophecies, that when any thing of a common nature is expressed by metaphors, that which is the literal sense of these metaphors is generally signified in the conclusion, that there may be no mistake about it. Of this many instances have been given; and perhaps no instances of the use of metaphors in the prophetic writings, about things of a common nature, can be brought, but that in the end the metaphor is explained, and what is meant by it expressly declared. But here, instead of any indication in the conclusion of a metaphor's being used, or what is meant by that metaphor, the locust is literally spoken of as being the cause of that calamity, and, indeed, in such very express terms, that the passage cannot, without great violence, be interpreted of a hostile invasion. "We have here," says Archbishop Newcome, "a key to the grand and beautiful description which runs through these two chapters. And if we consider verse 7, and the propriety of the adjuncts, as applicable to locusts, and often to locusts only, there can remain no doubt but that the prophet is to be understood in a literal sense, as foretelling a plague of locusts. Every reader of taste must be struck with the poetical and sublime manner in which the allegory is conducted. There is not a more splendid piece of poetry extant." And my people shall never be ashamed—Provided they continue to serve me. And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel—God's giving tokens of his especial blessing and protection to his people, is expressed by his dwelling among them, or in the midst of them, chap. iii. 17; Lev. xxvi. 11, 12; Ezek. xxxvii. 26. This is a favour he never promises, but upon condition of their sincere and steady obedience, as appears in the fore-cited places. And that I am the Lord your God, and none else—You will then be convinced that I am always ready to protect you, and you need not apply yourselves to any other gods in your wants or

A. M. 3262. 28 ¶¹ And it shall come to pass
B. C. 742. afterward, that I^m will pour out my Spirit upon all flesh; ^aand your sons and ^oyour daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions:

¹Isa. xli. 17; xlii. 3; Ezek. xxxvi. 25; xxxix. 29; Acts ii. 17.
^mZechariah xii. 10; John vii. 39.—^aIsa. liv. 13.

troubles. And my people shall never be ashamed— Shall not be any more disappointed of the trust they place in me, nor be reproached by the heathen, as if I had forsaken them.

Verses 28, 29. And it shall come to pass afterward
—Some versions begin the third chapter with this verse; and indeed the subject which is begun here is of so different a nature from what goes before, that it seems evident a new chapter ought to be begun here. The Jewish Rabbi Kimchi says here, that the expression afterward signifies the same as in the latter days, Isa. ii. 2, and that whenever the words occur, they denote the times of the Messiah; and therefore he refers this prophecy to his days, and makes it descriptive of the event which is foretold
Isa. xi. 9, The earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord. This is unquestionably the true meaning of it, and thus it is explained by St. Peter, Acts
ii. 17. "And though the things here prophesied of
were not to happen till several ages afterward, yet was the prophecy highly proper to encourage the minds of the pious Jews; as it was an assurance to them that, let them be brought ever so low by this or any other calamity, yet God would preserve them
a people, till all the promises made to their forefathers should be actually accomplished; and especially till the Messiah should come, under whom the knowledge of God should spread itself among all the nations of the earth, and the gifts of the Spirit of God should be poured out in a much more abundant manner than ever they were before." see Chandler.
I will pour out my Spirit—In extraordinary gifts on the first preachers of the gospel, and in various graces on all believers; upon all flesh—Upon believing Gentiles, as well as believing Jews. In former times those gifts were confined to one particular nation, but now they shall be extended to those of all nations that will apply unto God for them through faith in the Messiah. The plentiful effusion of the Holy Spirit is often represented by the prophets as the peculiar character of the gospel state, and is elsewhere compared to the pouring out of waters upon
the thirsty ground, and thereby rendering it fruitful:
see the passages referred to in the margin, and compare them with John vii. 39. That this prophecy was in a great measure fulfilled in the days of the apostles and first messengers of the Lord Jesus, we have abundant proof from the Acts of the Apostles and the epistles of the New Testament. We need not, however, confine this prophecy to those early times, but, since many prophecies have gradual completions, we may understand this as implying that there shall be another remarkable effusion of the 29 And also upon ^pthe servants A. M. 3262 and upon the handmaids in those B. C. 742.

days will I pour out my Spirit.

30 And ^qI will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke.

^pActs xxi. 9.—^p1 Corin. xii. 13; Gal. iii. 28; Col. iii. 11.
^qMatt. xxiv. 29; Mark xiii. 24; Luke xxi. 11, 25.

Holy Spirit upon the Jews, in order to their conversion in the latter times of the world. This exposition, which is favoured by some expressions in this prophecy, renders its connection with the contents of the following chapter more manifest. And your sons and your daughters shall prophesy—The gift of prophecy was bestowed upon some women under the Old Testament, as upon Miriam, Exod. xv. 20;
upon Deborah, Judg. iv. 14; and Huldah, 2 Kings xxii. 14. But this gift was more frequently conferred upon that sex in the times of the New Testament.
Thus we read of four daughters of Philip the Evangelist who prophesied, Acts xxi. 9; and church history affords us several other instances; such as Perpetua
and Felicitas, who were martyrs for the Christian faith; Potamiana, mentioned by Eusebius, lib. iv.
cap. 5, and others. *Your old men shall dream
dreams*—Divine dreams, either imparting unto them
the knowledge of future events, or discovering to them the will of God in other respects. By this method God often made known his will to the patriarchs and prophets, impressing their minds, while they were asleep, with the things he intended to communicate; sometimes directly, without any parabolical representation, which was a pure dream; as to Solomon and others: sometimes under representations and images, which might be a vision and dream
mixed, as in the case of Pharaoh, Joseph, Daniel,
and others. Your young men shall see visions—In visions, distinguished from dreams, the inspired person was awake, but his external senses being bound up, and, as it were, laid in a trance, (see Num. xxiv.
4,) he had a distinct knowledge of the things revealed to him, and that sometimes accompanied with external representations: such was that vision of St.
Peter's, mentioned Acts x. 11. And in this way St.
John seems to have received all his revelations.
From visions being applied to young men, and dreams to old men, some have observed that the imagination is stronger in those that are young than in the old; so that their senses need not be bound up with sleep, in order to make them capable of receiving heavenly visions. Also upon the servants and upon the handmaids—Even persons of the lowest condition shall be made partakers of the saving graces of the Holy Spirit, and in many instances also of his extraordinary gifts. The poor have the gospel preached to them, and all the blessings of the gospel, whether ordinary or extraordinary, are as free for the poor as the rich, and are more commonly desired and received by them than
by the rich.

Verse 30. And I will show wonders in the heavens

A. M. 3262. 31 *The sun shall be turned into
B. C. 742. darkness, and the moon into blood,
*before the great and the terrible day of the LORD come.

32 And it shall come to pass, that †whoso-

* Verse 10; Isaiah xlii. 9, 10; Chapter iii. 1, 15; Matthew xxiv. 29; Mark xiii. 24; Luke xxi. 25; Revelation vi. 12.
† Malachi iv. 5.

and in the earth, &c.—Whoever will be at the pains to compare this prediction with the prophecy of Christ, Matt. xxiv., and Luke xxi., will have no doubt concerning the application of it. It principally and evidently refers to the destruction of the city and temple of Jerusalem, and the desolation of Judea by the Romans; a judgment justly inflicted upon the Jewish nation for their rejecting and crucifying their Messiah, resisting the Holy Spirit, contemning the gospel and the means of grace connected therewith, and persecuting the apostles and God's other messengers. Thus Malachi, after he had foretold the coming of the Messiah, preceded by that of his forerunner John the Baptist, (chap. iii. 1,) immediately adds, that his coming should be attended with terrible judgments upon the disobedient, verses 2-5, and chap. iv. 1. The prophet in the next clause predicts also the extraordinary signs which were to be forerunners of that destruction, by blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke, meaning probably the great slaughter which should be made of men, and the burning of the towns and cities of Judea, events which preceded that last and finishing stroke of the divine vengeance, the destruction of Jerusalem. He may also refer, perhaps, in the last expression, to the comet which hung over their city, and the fearful sights seen in the air some time before, which are mentioned by Josephus, and were foretold by Christ, Luke xxi. 11; and of which the reader may see an account in the note on Isa. lxvi. 6.

Verse 31. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, &c.—Particular judgments upon kings and nations are often described in such terms as properly belong to the general judgment and conflagration of the heavens and the earth, as has been observed on verse 10th of this chapter. The expressions here used, in their literal sense, import the failing of light in the sun and moon, whether by eclipses or any other cause, such as perhaps, at the time here referred to, by the prodigious quantity of smoke arising from the burning of cities, towns, and villages on every side, and also of Jerusalem itself, which undoubtedly was sufficient to obscure the heavenly luminaries for some time. Or, the expression in this verse may be interpreted figuratively of the dark and melancholy state of public affairs before and at the destruction of the Jewish nation by the Romans, and of the utter overthrow of their state and government: see note on Isa. xlii. 9, 10. The last destruction of Jerusalem, the desolation of Judea, and the prodigious slaughter made of the Jews, might with great propriety be called, as it is here, The great and terrible day of the ever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered: for †in A. M. 3262. B. C. 742.

mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in *the remnant whom the LORD shall call.

† Rom. x. 13.—* Isaiah xlii. 13; lix. 20; Obad. 17; Rom. xi. 26.—* Isa. xi. 11, 16; Jer. xxxi. 7; Mic. iv. 7; v. 3, 7, 8; Rom. ix. 27; xi. 5, 7.

Lord; since the divine justice was then executed with a severity which had never been used before toward the Jewish people. The calamities of those times were indeed dreadful, almost beyond description, and seem to have exceeded any thing that any other nation had ever suffered; which was agreeable to what Moses, in the very beginning of their state, had foretold should happen to them, if ever, by their disobedience to God's commands, and their other crimes, they should fill up the measure of their iniquity: see notes on Deut. xxviii.

Verse 32. And whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord—Whoever, having heard the gospel, shall repent and believe in Christ, and call on him, or shall make application to God in prayer through him, shall be delivered—Namely, from temporal and eternal destruction: thus St. Paul interprets this passage, Rom. x. 13. For to believe in Christ, give ourselves up to him, and profess ourselves his disciples, is the most effectual, and indeed the only effectual means of escaping the judgments coming upon the unbelieving and disobedient, and likewise of being preserved from the wrath to come. The prediction, as it stands here in the prophecy, chiefly refers to those in Jerusalem who believed in Jesus as the true Messiah; for these, having a firm faith in what he had said, upon seeing some of the signs come to pass which he had foretold should precede the destruction of Jerusalem, they quitted the city in time, and so saved their lives, and escaped all those dreadful calamities which the unbelieving Jews suffered during the siege. For in mount Zion, &c., shall be deliverance—The gospel is described as taking its rise from Jerusalem, and as being from thence carried to all nations. The deliverance, therefore, here said to be in mount Zion, is deliverance by embracing the gospel, which had its rise there. Or mount Zion and Jerusalem may be here put for the gospel church, the mystical Jerusalem, the city of the Messiah, the only place of salvation present and eternal. As the Lord hath said—That is, according to his promises and declarations by his prophets. And in the remnant—Or, among the remnant, whom the Lord shall call—Namely, to believe in Christ, and by him to wait for eternal life. Or, whom the Lord shall appoint to be preserved. This may primarily be understood of those who were converted by the preaching of Christ and his apostles, and who therefore escaped the vengeance which involved the rest of the nation, Acts ii. 40; 1 Thessalonians ii. 16. These are called the σωζόμενοι, such as should be saved, or delivered, Acts ii. 47. But there is another remnant of the Jews included in this promise, who shall be converted at the end of the world, when the obstinate and incorrigible shall be destroyed. In this sense the word remnant is often understood: see the margin. This sense of the word agrees well with what follows in the next chapter.

CHAPTER III.

This chapter contains a prophecy, (1.) Of God's reckoning with the enemies of his people, 1-8. (2.) Of his openly judging all nations, 9-17. (3.) Of the provision he has made for his people, 18-21. These contents of the chapter have been partly fulfilled in the several deliverances of the Jews, and will have their full accomplishment at the great day of final accounts.

A. M. 3262. FOR behold, ^a in those days, and
B. C. 742. in that time, when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem,

2 ^b I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into ^c the valley of Jehoshaphat, and ^d will plead with them there for my people and for my heritage Israel, A. M. 3262.

whom they have scattered among B. C. 742.
the nations, and parted my land.

3 And they have ^e cast lots for my people;
and have given a boy for a harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they might drink.

^a Jeremiah xxx. 3; Ezekiel xxxviii. 14.—^b Zechariah xiv.
2, 3, 4.

^c 2 Chron. xx. 26; Verse 12.—^d Isa. lxvi. 16; Ezek. xxxviii.
22.—^e Obad. 11; Nah. iii. 10.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verses 1, 2. For, &c.—This particle shows the connection of this chapter with the latter part of the preceding: as if he had said, As an earnest of the accomplishment of these predictions, my people shall be restored to their own land, and then their enemies shall be humbled: see note on chap. ii. 28. In those days, when I shall bring again—Namely, out of Babylon, (to which deliverance this promise seems primarily to refer,) the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem—As the type of the whole remnant which shall be saved. I will also gather all nations—In the type the expression means, all those nations that had oppressed Judah; in the antitype, all the nations that had been enemies to Christ and his church. And will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat—That is, into the place of judgment; for the word Jehoshaphat signifies divine judgment, or, the place where Jehorah will execute judgment. Thus the valley of Jezreel signifies the place where God's arm, or strength, would exert itself. The expression likewise alludes to the valley of Berachah, or of blessing, as it was afterward called, mentioned 2 Chron. xx. 26, the place in which Jehoshaphat obtained a remarkable victory; or, where God, by his miraculous interposition, so infatuated the enemies of his people, that they destroyed one another, and few or none of them that came against Judah escaped. Archbishop Newcome considers it as a prediction of an extraordinary battle which was to be won in that valley, probably, he thinks, by Nebuchadnezzar, which would utterly discomfit the ancient enemies of the Jews, and resemble that victory of Jehoshaphat. But it seems more probable that the prediction principally refers to a general discomfiture of the enemies of God's church in the latter days, probably to that foretold Isa. lxvi. 16, or to the battle of Gog and Magog, described Ezek. xxxix., and that of Armageddon, spoken of Rev. xvi. 14, 16. And I will plead with them—I will require of them the reason why they thus used my people. God pleads with men, and vindicates the cause of oppressed truth and righteousness by his judgments. Then the consciences of the guilty fly in their faces, and force them to acknowledge the justice of the punishments they suffer. For my people and for my heritage Israel, &c.—The prophets in the Old Testament often denounced judgments against Edom, Moab, and other hostile neighbours of the Jews, who took advantage of their calamities to vent their spite against them. But since all nations are summoned to answer the impeachment here mentioned, we may suppose the word Israel to comprehend the faithful of all ages; and then we may observe, that the judgments denounced against the church's enemies, are chiefly for their hatred and cruelty toward God's servants.

Verse 3. They have cast lots for my people—It was customary with conquerors, in those days, to divide the captives, taken in war, among themselves by lot, and so did these enemies of the Jews. And have given a boy for a harlot—By this is meant, that they exchanged, or gave away, Jewish boys, instead of money, for harlots. And sold a girl for wine, that they might drink—For a draught of wine, as it were; that is, at a very vile and low rate. These instances are mentioned, to signify the contempt in which these enemies of the Jews held the worshippers of the true God; they parted with them, when they had taken them captives, upon the vilest terms, as setting little or no value upon them. In Mingrelia, according to Sir John Chardin, they sell captive children for provisions and for wine: see Harmer vol. ii. p. 374.

A. M. 3262. 4 Yea, and what have ye to do
B. C. 742. with me, ¹O Tyre, and Zidon, and all the coasts of Palestine? ²Will ye render me
a recompense? and if ye recompense me, swiftly and speedily will I return your recompense upon your own head;

5 Because ye have taken my silver and my gold, and have carried into your temples my goodly ¹pleasant things.

6 The children also of Judah and the children of Jerusalem have ye sold unto ²the Grecians, that ye might remove them far from their border.

¹Amos i. 6, 9.—²Ezek. xxv. 15, 16, 17.—³Heb. desirable,
Dan. xi. 38.—⁴Heb. the sons of the Grecians.—⁵Isa. xliii.
5, 6; xlix. 12; Jer. xxiii. 8.

Verse 4. O Tyre, and Zidon, &c.—"When the Babylonians, the appointed instruments of my vengeance, afflict my land, why do you also, and the bordering nations, assist them? Do you take this occasion of avenging the former victories of my people over you? If so, this your act of revenge shall be speedily punished."—Newcome. The expression which he here uses, What have ye to do with me? signifies the same as that other so common in the sacred books, What have I to do with you? that is, What is the reason of your so frequently invading, and plundering my land and people?

Verse 5. Because ye have taken my silver and my gold—Have taken out of my temple the silver and golden vessels dedicated to my service; and have carried into your temples my goodly pleasant things—Hebrew, my desirable goodly things.
God's temple was several times despoiled of its ornaments by the Chaldeans. Once in the reign of Jehoiakim, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 7. Then in the short reign of Jehoiachin, 2 Kings xxiv. 13, before the last destruction of it, recorded 2 Kings xxv. 13. Some part of the furniture might probably be sold to the merchants of Tyre and Sidon. The profanation of God's temple, and the sacrilegious robbing of it of its vessels and ornaments, were crimes remarkably punished by God in heathen and infidels: see Jer. i.
28, and li. 11. So it was in Belshazzar, Dan. v. 1;
in Antiochus Epiphanes, 1 Mac. vi. 12; and afterward in Pompey and Crassus. And no wonder, for God had given remarkable proofs of his divine presence being in that place; and the heathen themselves might have discovered, by the light of nature,
that there was but one true and living God.

Verse 6. The children also of Judah, &c., have ye
sold unto the Grecians—The descendants of Javan, Gen. x. 2, 5. They trafficked with Tyre, and traded in slaves, Ezek. xxvii. 13. It was customary for the merchants of the neighbouring countries, particularly of Tyre and Sidon, to buy the children of Israel
for slaves of their conquerors, in order to sell them again: see 1 Mac. iii. 41. The histories which re-

7 Behold, ¹I will raise them out of ²the place whither ye have sold them, and will return your recompense upon your own head:

8 And I will sell your sons and your daughters into the hand of the children of Judah, and they shall sell them to the ¹Sabeans, to a people ²far off: for the LORD hath spoken it.

9 ¹Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles;
²Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them
come up:

10 ¹Beat your plough-shares into swords, and ¹Ezekiel xxiii. 42.—²Jer. vi. 20.—³Isa. viii. 9, 10; Jer.

xlvii. 3, 4; Ezek. xxxviii. 7.—⁴Heb. sanctify.—⁵Isa. ii. 4; Micah iv. 3.

cord the calamities of the Jews, speak of great numbers of them being made captives, and then sold and dispersed into foreign countries. Thus forty thousand were sold by Antiochus Epiphanes, 2 Mac. v.
14; and about ninety-seven thousand at the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus.

Verses 7, 8. Behold, I will raise them, &c.—I will restore them, or their posterity, out of their several captivities whither their enemies have dispersed them.
Grotius on this place mentions, that Alexander and his successors set at liberty many Jews, who were slaves in Greece. Many also, on occasion of Cyrus's decree, might return to their country, from such parts of Asia Minor and the Ionian islands as were subject to that monarch. And will return your re- compense upon your own head—Will inflict upon you the punishments mentioned in the following verse. I will sell your sons, &c.—This was fulfilled
when Alexander took Gaza, Zidon, and Tyre, and made a great multitude of captives, of whom he is said to have sold thirty thousand for slaves. These captives the Jews, who were in favour with him,
had the liberty of buying, and probably afterward
sold many of them, by way of traffic, to the Ara-bians, here meant by the Sabeans.

Verses 9, 10. Proclaim ye this among the Gen- tiles—"God having foretold these judgments against Tyre and Sidon, the Philistines, and the neighbouring nations, who had used the Jews with injustice and cruelty, proceeds here to confirm his people in the belief of the certainty of their destruction; which he tells them should be as sure as though they themselves had gathered them together by proclamation for it: for so are these words, Proclaim ye, &c., to be understood. Not as commanding what they were actually to do, but in order to excite their attention, and to let them know that God was as certainly preparing to bring this vengeance on their enemies, as though he had actually sent messengers
from the Jews to proclaim it among them:" see Chandler. Prepare war, wake up the mighty men
—Rouse and bring forward into the field your strong and valiant men. In these words the prophet, in an

A. M. 3262. your ⁴ pruning-hooks into spears: ^a let
B. C. 742. the weak say, I am strong.

11 ^o Assemble yourselves, and come, all ye heathen, and gather yourselves together round about: thither ^b cause ^p thy mighty ones to come down, O LORD.

12 Let the heathen be wakened, ^a and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat: for there will I sit to ^r judge all the heathen round about.

13 ^a Put ye in the sickle, for ^t the harvest is ripe: come, get you down; for the ^u press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great.

^a Or, scythes.—^a Zech. xii. 8.—^o Verse 2.—^b Or, the LORD shall bring down.—^r Psalm ciii. 20; Isaiah xiii. 3. ^q Verse 2.—^p Psa. xvi. 13; xcvi. 9; cx. 6; Isa. ii. 4; iii. 13; Mic. iv. 3.—^t Matt. xiii. 39; Rev. xiv. 15, 18.—^u Jer. li. 33; Hos. vi. 11.

ironical manner, encourages them to make their utmost effort to oppose the designs of Providence; but signifies that it should be all in vain. For, should they strengthen themselves by all the means in their power, yet they should be overcome and punished. Beat your plough-shares into swords, &c.—That is, make all the provision and preparation for war, or for your own defence, that you possibly can. For a people to beat their very plough-shares into swords, &c., signifies a general arming of themselves, much beyond what had been usual.

Verses 11, 12. Thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O Lord—After the prophet has given warning, in the way of irony, to the nations to provide for their defence by all possible means, and to assemble themselves together from all parts, that they might strive with their united force; he, in the conclusion of the verse, calls upon God to cause those to come whom he had appointed to overcome these nations. Some, however, render the clause, the Lord shall cause thy mighty ones to come down, or to be brought low. Let the heathen be awakened—Let their courage be roused up; and come to the valley of Jehoshaphat—To the place of divine judgment.

Verse 13. Put ye in the sickle—Ye executioners of divine vengeance: begin to reap; cut down sinners ripe for judgment; let the king of Assyria and his soldiers cut down Syria and its king, for their violence against my people. Let Cyaxares and his armies cut down Assyria. Let Nebuchadnezzar cut down Moab, Ammon, mount Seir, Egypt, Tyre, Zidon, and the Philistines. After this, let Cyrus destroy the Babylonians, and Alexander the Medes and Persians. And let the divided Grecian captains cut down one another, till the Romans cut them down. And when this is done, God will have mighty ones still to cut down his enemies till the final judgment, wherein they all shall for ever be destroyed. For the harvest is ripe—That is, they are fit for destruction, as the ripened corn for reaping. Come, get you down—Namely, into the appointed valley; as though they were going into a vineyard to gather grapes. Here the prophet uses another metaphor to 14 Multitudes, multitudes in ^a the valley of ^b decision: for ^r the day of

A. M. 3262. B. C. 742. the LORD is near in the valley of decision.

15 The ^z sun and the moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining.

16 The LORD also shall ^a roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and ^b the heavens and the earth shall shake: ^c but the LORD will be the ^r hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel.

17 So ^d shall ye know that I am the LORD your God dwelling in Zion ^e my holy moun-

^a Isaiah lxiii. 3; Lam. i. 15; Rev. xiv. 19, 20.—^z Verse 2. ^b Or, concision, or, thrashing.—^r Chap. ii. 1.—^c Chap. ii. 10, 31.—^d Jer. xxv. 30; Chap. ii. 11; Amos i. 2.—^e Hag. ii. 6. ^c Isa. li. 5, 6.—^r Heb. place of repair, or, harbour.—^d Chap. ii. 27.—^e Dan. xi. 45; Obad. 16; Zech. viii. 3.

express the cutting off the church's enemies; for the press is full; the fats overflow—That is, as it is immediately explained, their wickedness is great—It is come to its full measure. And as the grapes in the press are trodden, so the enemies of God's people are to be trodden in the wine-press of his displeasure.

Verses 14, 15. Multitudes, &c.—These are Joel's words, exclaiming, with prophetic warmth and agitation, Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision!—As though he had said, See what astonishing numbers are brought together for their destruction! The sentence, thus abrupt and broken, is very strong and emphatical. The place is called the valley of decision, because in it the cause would be decided between God and his enemies, and there he would execute judgment upon them. Houbigant reads, the valley of excision, that is, of cutting off: and Chandler, the appointed valley, namely, where God had appointed to execute his judgments. The sun and the moon shall be darkened—States and kingdoms shall be overthrown; and the stars shall withdraw their shining—Kings and princes shall be cast down from their state of dignity and pre-eminence, and shall be deprived of their power and glory. Or the meaning is, This particular judgment shall be a forerunner of the general one, when the whole frame of nature shall be dissolved.

Verse 16. The Lord shall roar out of Zion—He shall strike the enemies of his people with astonishment, as the roaring of the lion astonishes the weaker beasts of the forest. And the heavens and the earth shall shake—The destruction shall be as certain and dreadful as though God's enemies were destroyed by thunder and lightning from heaven. But the Lord will be the hope of his people—Though the heaven and the earth pass away, his word and promise, given to his servants, shall not pass away.

Verse 17. So shall ye know that I am the Lord dwelling in Zion—Very graciously present with you, and ever watching over you and delighting to save you. Then shall Jerusalem be holy—After the church's enemies are destroyed, the Messiah is

A. M. 3262. tain : then shall Jerusalem be ^g holy, B. C. 742. and there shall ^f no strangers pass through her any more.

18 ¶ And it shall come to pass in that day, that the mountains shall ^g drop down new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, ^h and all the rivers of Judah shall ^g flow with waters, and ⁱ a fountain shall come forth of the house of the LORD, and shall water ^k the valley of Shittim.

^g Heb. holiness.—^f Isa. xxxv. 8; lii. 1; Nah. i. 15; Zech. xiv. 21; Rev. xxi. 27.—^e Amos ix. 13.—^h Isaiah xxx. 25.
^g Heb. go.—ⁱ Psa. xlv. 4; Ezek. xlvii. 1; Zech. xiv. 8; Rev. xxii. 1.—^k Num. xxv. 1.

come, and the remnant saved, the people of God shall be holy. There shall no strangers pass through her—No profane or unclean person shall be found in the church of Christ.

Verse 18. The mountains shall drop down new wine—Namely, the vines planted upon the mountains. The hills shall flow with milk—So fruitful shall the hills be, that milk shall abound everywhere. And all the rivers, &c.—These expressions are all figurative, and highly poetical, and, according to Calmet, symbolical of the doctrine of the gospel; which, accompanied by the Spirit of grace, was to flow forth from Jerusalem, and to water the Gentile world, which had been as a barren and uncultivated land.

Verses 19, 20. Egypt shall be a desolation, and Edom, &c.—These two people were remarkable for the spite they bore to the Jews. The Egyptians were their oppressors when they first became a nation, and afterward exercised great cruelties upon them, during the reign of the Egyptian kings who were Alexander's successors. The Idumeans are often reproved and threatened with judgments by the prophets, for the malice they took all occasions to vent against the Israelites, though nearly related to them: see the margin. These two nations, 19 ¹ Egypt shall be a desolation, and A. M. 3262. ^m Edom shall be a desolate wilder- B. C. 742. ness, for the violence against the children of Judah, because they have shed innocent blood in their land.

20 But Judah shall ¹⁰ dwell ⁿ for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation.

21 For I will ^o cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: ^p for ¹¹ the LORD dwelleth in Zion.

¹ Isa. xix. 1, &c.—^m Jer. xlix. 17; Ezek. xxv. 12, 13; Amos i. 11; Obad. 10.—¹⁰ Or, abide.—ⁿ Amos ix. 15.—^o Isa. iv. 4.—^p Ezek. xlvi. 35; Verse 17; Rev. xxi. 3.—¹¹ Or, even I the LORD that dwelleth in Zion.

therefore, are taken, in a general sense, for the enemies of God's people. But Judah—The redeemed of the Lord, his church, shall dwell, or continue, for ever—Free from the annoyance of enemies. The Christian Church is evidently intended, including probably the conversion and final restoration of the Jews.

Verse 21. I will cleanse their blood, &c.—The word blood seems here to signify pollution in general; and the promise implies, that God would perfectly purge away the guilt and defilement of all the sins of his people, by a free pardon and entire sanctification. Calmet, who applies this to the times of the gospel, thus interprets the verse: "Jesus Christ cleanses, by the new law, the blood which remained unclean under the old. We find in the sacrament of the new law that real purity, of which the legal ceremonies and purifications were only a figure." For the Lord dwelleth in Zion—And his presence shall be a source of purity, as well as of consolation to his people. "It is uncertain," says Archbishop Newcome, "whether we have the key to this difficult chapter; which may not be fully understood till Jerusalem is rebuilt, and till the prophecies, Ezekiel xxxix. 5, 11; Revelation xx. 8, 9, are accomplished."

THE BOOK OF AMOS.

ARGUMENT.

AMOS was a herdsman of Tekoa, a small town about four miles southward of Jerusalem, and a gatherer of sycamore fruit. Rural employments, however, were general and honourable among his countrymen. When he says, "I was no prophet, neither was I the son of a prophet," chap. vii. 14, he seems to distinguish himself from those who were educated in the schools instituted by Samuel. God, however, constituted him a prophet, and sent him, in the reign of Jeroboam the son of Joash, to utter his prophecies in the kingdom of Israel, in which he seems to have dwelt, (see chap. vii. 12,) though born and brought up in the tribe of Judah. He appears to have been cotemporary with Hosea; although it is likely he began to prophesy before him, and continued in his office a much shorter time. Some have confounded him with Amoz, the father of Isaiah; but their names, in the original, are very different, and their families too of a different character; for Isaiah was a courtier, Amos a countryman. St. Jerome gives this character of him, that "though he was rude in speech, yet not in knowledge." And many, following the authority of St. Jerome, have spoken of him as if he were quite rude and ineloquent, and destitute of all the embellishments of composition. The matter, however, is far otherwise. Let any person, who has candour and perspicacity enough to judge, not from the man, but from his writings, open the volume of his predictions, and he will find that this shepherd is not a whit behind the very chief of the prophets. He will agree, that as, in elevation of sentiments and loftiness of spirit, he is almost equal to the greatest; so in splendour of diction, elegance of expression, and beauty of composition, he is scarcely inferior to any. The same celestial Spirit, indeed, actuated Isaiah and Daniel in the court, and Amos in the sheepfolds; constantly selecting such interpreters of the divine will as were best adapted to the occasion; and sometimes, from the mouths of babes and sucklings, perfecting praise: occasionally employing the natural eloquence of some, and occasionally making others eloquent. See Bishop Lowth, De Sacra Poesi Hebræorum, Prælec. xxi. "He borrows," says Archbishop Newcome, "many images from the scenes in which he had been engaged; but he introduces them with skill, and gives them force and dignity by the eloquence and grandeur of his manner. We shall find in him many affecting and pathetic, many elegant and sublime passages. No prophet has more magnificently described the Deity; or more gravely rebuked the luxurious; or reproved injustice and oppression with greater warmth, and a more generous indignation." He begins with predictions of ruin to the Syrians, Philistines, Tyrians, Edomites, Ammonites, and Moabites. He next inveighs against the idolatry, the oppression, carnal confidence, wantonness, selfishness, and obstinacy of Israel and Judah; and threatens them with distress, ravage, captivity, and desolation, on account thereof; and particularly predicts, that the family of Jeroboam, however then prosperous, should be quickly cut off by the sword. He concludes his work with a prophecy of the Jews' return from Babylon; of the gathering of the Gentiles to Christ; and of the conversion of Israel and Judah; and their restoration to, and establishment in their land, in the beginning of the glorious millennium. It is probable he lived to see a great part of his predictions fulfilled, namely, in the civil wars that took place in Israel, and the captivity of the ten tribes.

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter we have the general title and scope of this prophecy, 1, 2. God's controversy with Syria, 3-5; with Palestine, 6-8; with Tyre, 9, 10; with Edom, 11, 12; and Ammon, 13-15.

A. M. 3217. THE words of Amos, ^a who was
B. C. 787.

among the herdmen of ^b Tekoa, which he saw concerning Israel ^c in the days of Uzziah king of Judah, and in the days of ^d Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel, two years before the ^e earthquake.

2 And he said, The LORD will ^f roar from Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the habitations of the shepherds shall mourn, and the top of ^g Carmel shall wither.

3 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of ^h Damascus, ⁱ and for four, I will

^a Chap. vii. 14. — ^b 2 Sam. xiv. 2; 2 Chron. xx. 20. — ^c Hos. i. 1. — ^d Chapter vii. 10. — ^e Zech. xiv. 5. — ^f Jer. xxv. 30; Joel iii. 16. — ^g 1 Sam. xxv. 2; Isa. xxxiii. 9. — ^h Isa. viii. 4; xvii. 1; Jer. xlix. 23; Zech. ix. 1. — ⁱ Or, yea, for four.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. The words of Amos—This inscription, and some similar ones prefixed to some of the books of the prophets, seem to have been formed by those who collected their writings together. Which he saw—Received by revelation; concerning Israel—Namely, the kingdom of the ten tribes, to which this prophecy chiefly refers; although the prophet briefly denounces God's judgments against Judah, and also against the Syrians, Philistines, and other neighbouring countries. In the days of Uzziah king of Judah—Called Azariah in the second book of Kings, chap. xv. And in the days of Jeroboam—The great-grandson of Jehu. Two years before the earthquake—Of which only this text, and Zech. xiv. 5, make particular mention; but it is thought to be referred to, Isa. v. 25. And Josephus, who attributes it to Uzziah's invasion of the priest's office, recorded 2 Chron. xxvi. 16, gives us some account of its effects.

Verse 2. The Lord will roar from Zion—This and the next clause occur, Joel iii. 16, and a similar one, Jer. xxv. 30, where see the notes. The meaning is, that God would soon spread terror, like beasts of prey when they roar, chap. iii. 8: or, that he would soon display his power in executing judgment. And utter his voice from Jerusalem—The city God had chosen, where he dwelt; the seat of his instituted worship, and the royal seat of the kingdom, as God had settled it, but from which, in both respects, the ten tribes had revolted. The habitations of the shepherds shall mourn—The shepherds were wont to pitch their tents where they found pasturage, and to dwell therein, that they might attend their flocks. But it is here foretold, that the pasture-ground should wither and become barren, through a drought which would take place, and of which the prophet speaks, chap. iv. 7, 8. Carmel was a mountainous tract of ground, which ran through the two tribes of Issachar and Zebulon. It is often described as one of the most fruitful places in all Judea: see Isa. xxxiii. 9, and xxxv. 2: upon which account the word is sometimes taken appellatively, and translated a fruitful field.

not ² turn away the punishment ³ thereof; ⁴ because they have thrashed

Gilead with thrashing instruments of iron:

4 ^k But I will send a fire into the house of Hazael, which shall devour the palaces of Ben-hadad.

5 I will break also the ^l bar of Damascus, and cut off the inhabitant from ^m the plain of Aven, and him that holdeth the sceptre from ⁿ the house of Eden: and ^o the people of Syria shall go into captivity ^p unto Kir, saith the LORD.

² Or, convert it, or, let it be quiet, and so versé 6. — ³ 2 Kings x. 33; xiii. 7. — ⁴ Jer. xvii. 27; xlix. 27; Verses 7, 10, 12; Chap. ii. 2, 5. — ⁵ Jer. li. 30; Lam. ii. 9. — ⁶ Or, Bikathaven. — ⁷ Or, Beth-eden. — ⁸ Fulfilled, 2 Kings xvi. 9. — ⁹ Chap. ix. 7.

Verse 3. For three transgressions, &c.—The prophet first denounces judgments against foreign countries, and afterward comes to Judah and Israel. He begins with Syria, the head or capital city of which was Damascus. By the expression, for three transgressions and for four, used here, and repeatedly afterward, he means, many or multiplied transgressions, a certain number being put, according to a very common way of speaking, for an uncertain. So we read, Job. v. 19, He shall deliver thee in six troubles; yea, in seven no evil shall touch thee: see the like phrase, Prov. vi. 16; Eccl. xi. 2; Mic. v. 5. Once and twice are used, Psa. lxix. 11; twice and thrice, Job xxxiii. 29, (Heb.) So that the meaning here is, that on account of the frequent transgressions of Damascus, God was now resolved no longer to spare it. Because they have thrashed Gilead, &c.—This alludes to the thrashing-drag, or thrashing-wain, used in the eastern countries, and described in the note on Isa. xxviii. 27, which see. These instruments, being drawn by horses, or oxen, over the corn-sheaves spread on the floor, were proper and significant emblems of the tyrannical power of Syria, which cruelly oppressed and crushed the weak Gileadites, and other Israelites. It is probable that the cruelties exercised on them by Hazael and Ben-hadad, kings of Syria, are chiefly intended. The fact is recorded 2 Kings x. 32, 33, and xiii. 3-7, where it is said that Hazael made, them like the dust by thrashing.

Verses 4, 5. But I will send a fire into the house of Hazael—God's judgments are often compared to fire. But perhaps the expression may here signify, that the fine palaces of Hazael, and his son and successor Ben-hadad, should be burned down, as they probably were in the taking of Damascus by Tiglath-pileser. I will break also the bar of Damascus—The gates and fortifications thereof, in which its strength consists, shall be broken down: and cut off the inhabitant from the plain of Aven—Or, Bikath-aven. The word signifies, the plain of vanity; from whence some conjecture it was a place in Syria remarkable for idolatry, as Beth-el was called Beth-aven for the idolatry practised.

A. M. 3217. 6 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For
B. C. 787. three transgressions of ° Gaza, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof: because they ° carried away captive the whole captivity, ° to deliver them up to Edom:

7 ¶ But I will send a fire on the wall of Gaza,
which shall devour the palaces thereof:

8 And I will cut off the inhabitant ° from Ashdod, and him that holdeth the sceptre from Ashkelon, and I will ° turn my hand against Ekron: and ° the remnant of the Philistines shall perish, saith the Lord God.

9 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of ° Tyrus, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof: ° because they

° 2 Chron. xxviii. 18; Isa. xiv. 29; Jer. xlvii. 4, 5; Ezekiel
xxv. 15; Zeph. ii. 4.—° Or, carried them away with an entire captivity, 2 Chronicles xxi. 16, 17; Joel iii. 6.—° Verse 9.
° Jeremiah xlvii. 1.—° Zeph. ii. 4; Zech. ix. 5.—° Psalm lxxxi. 14.—° Jeremiah xlvii. 4; Ezekiel xxv. 16.—° Isaiah xxiii. 1; Jeremiah xlvii. 4; Ezek. xxvi.; xxvii.; xxviii.; Joel
iii. 4, 5.—° Verse 6.

there. And him that holdeth the sceptre from the house of Eden—That is, the house of pleasure.
Probably one of the pleasant palaces of the kings of Syria is intended. But Eden was likewise a country bordering on Syria, mentioned 2 Kings xix.
12; Ezek. xxvii. 23. And the people of Syria shall go into captivity—All this was fulfilled when Tig-lath-pileser took Damascus, and carried the people captive to Kir, and slew Rezin their king: see the margin.

Verses 6–8. For three transgressions of Gaza, &c.—From Syria he passes to Palestine, upon the coast of which Gaza was situated. It is one of the places threatened by Joel, chap. iii. 6. Because they carried away the whole captivity—Or, a peaceable captivity, as Mr. Locke renders גלות שלמה; that is, a captivity not taken in war, but by deceit: or, a perfect captivity, that is, not to be recovered. It appears, from 2 Chron. xxi. 16, and xxviii. 18, that the Philistines (for the town of Gaza belonged to them) made frequent incursions upon the Jews and Israelites. And it is probable from this passage that they were guilty of some injustice and cruelty, beyond the usual practice of war, in making captives,
perhaps taking the peaceable inhabitants and all without distinction, the old and infirm as well as the young and healthy: or, making these incursions
when Judah and Israel were at peace with them.
Or, perhaps, their cruelty consisted in selling those they made captives to the Edomites, whom they knew to be mortal enemies of the Jews, and consequently, they might reasonably suppose, would treat them with great severity and tyranny. But I will send a fire, &c.—What is here foretold respecting the destruction of the cities of the Philistines, was fulfilled by Hezekiah, 2 Kings xviii. 8. The same was predicted by Isaiah, chap. xiv. 29. And the delivered up the whole captivity to A. M. 3217.

Edom, and remembered not ° the B. C. 787.
brotherly covenant:

10 ¶ But I will send a fire on the wall of Tyrus, which shall devour the palaces thereof.

11 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of ° Edom, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof: because he did pursue ° his brother ° with the sword,
and ° did cast off all pity, ° and his anger did
tear perpetually, and he kept his wrath for ever:

12 But ° I will send a fire upon Teman,
which shall devour the palaces of Bozrah.

13 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of ° the children of Ammon, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment

° Heb. the covenant of brethren, 2 Samuel v. 11; 1 Kings v. 1;
ix. 11–14.—° Verses 4, 7.—° Isaiah xxi. 11; xxxiv. 5; Jer.
xlix. 8, &c.; Ezekiel xxv. 12, 13, 14; xxv. 2; Joel iii. 19;
Obad. 1; Mal. i. 4.—° Gen. xxvii. 41; Deut. xxiii. 7; Mal.
i. 2.—° 2 Chron. xxviii. 17.—° Heb. corrupted his compassions.
° Ezek. xxv. 5.—° Obad. 9, 10.—° Jer. xlix. 1, 2; Ezek.
xxv. 2; Zeph. ii. 9.

remnant of the Philistines shall perish—These were cut off by the Assyrians: see Isa. xx.

Verse 9. For three transgressions of Tyrus, &c.
—This prediction is probably to be understood of the destruction of Tyre by Nebuchadnezzar, as foretold by Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel: see the margin. Because they delivered up the whole captivity to Edom—Without doubt the Edomites used the Jewish captives with great barbarity, as the delivering of these captives up to them is also assigned as a principal reason of the punishment of Tyre, as it was of the punishment of Damascus, verse 6. And remembered not the brotherly covenant—That strict league and friendship begun between David and Hiram, king of Tyre, and afterward continued by Solomon, (see the margin,) Hiram giving Solomon
the title of My brother, as we read 1 Kings ix. 13.

Verses 11, 12. For three transgressions of Edom, &c.—The Edomites, or Idumeans, are often threatened for their enmity against the Israelites, because they took all occasions to oppress and insult over them in their distress. Because he did pursue his brother with the sword—The Edomites retained the same hatred and animosity against their brethren,
the Israelites, which their father Esau had expressed against his brother Jacob. But I will send a fire upon Teman, &c.—Teman and Bozrah were two principal cities of Idumea. The destruction here denounced against them was afterward brought upon them, in some degree, by Sennacherib, but more especially by Nebuchadnezzar: see notes on Jer. xlix. 7–22, and Ezek. xxv. 15.

Verses 13–15. For three transgressions of the children of Ammon—The Ammonites descended from Lot: see Gen. xix. 38. Their country lay to the east of Jordan, in the neighbourhood of Gilead.
Because they have ripped up the women with child

A. M. 3217. thereof: because they have ⁸ ripped
B. C. 787. ^f up the women with child, of Gilead,
⁸ that they might enlarge their border:
14 But I will kindle a fire in the wall of ^h Rabbah, and it shall devour the palaces there—

⁸ Or, divided the mountains.—^f Hosea xiii. 16.—⁸ Jeremiah xlix. 1.

—Hazeel, king of Syria, grievously afflicted the Israelites that lay eastward of Jordan, particularly the Gileadites: see 2 Kings x. 33. The low condition to which these countries were hereby reduced, might probably encourage the Ammonites to possess themselves of Gilead, and to destroy the inhabitants in the cruel manner here stated. But I will kindle a fire in the wall of Rabbah—The chief city of the Ammonites. With shouting in the day of battle— of, ⁱ with shouting in the day of A. M. 3217.

battle, with a tempest in the day of B. C. 787.
the whirlwind:

15 And ^k their king shall go into captivity, he and his princes together, saith the LORD.

^h Deut. iii. 11; 2 Sam. xii. 26; Jeremiah xlix. 2; Ezek. xxv. 5.
ⁱ Chap. ii. 2.—^k Jer. xlix. 3.

This was intended to express the great violence with which this city should be attacked; and with a tempest in the day of the whirlwind—The destructions of war are often compared to the devastations caused by whirlwinds and tempests; and the metaphor is here introduced very naturally and sublimely. And their king shall go into captivity, he and his princes together, saith the Lord—Foretold also, Jeremiah xlix. 3.

CHAPTER II.

We have here God's controversy with Moab, 1-3; with Judah, 4, 5; and with Israel, 6-8. The aggravations of their sins, 9-12. God complains of them, and threatens their ruin, 13-16.

A. M. 3217. THUS saith the LORD; For three
B. C. 787. transgressions of ^a Moab, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof, because he ^b burned the bones of the king of Edom into lime:

2 But I will send a fire upon Moab, and it shall devour the palaces of ^c Kiriath: and Moab shall die with tumult, ^d with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet:

3 And I will cut off ^e the judge from the midst thereof, and will slay all the A. M. 3217.

princes thereof with him, saith the B. C. 787.
LORD.

4 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Judah, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; ^f because they have despised the law of the LORD, and have not kept his commandments, and ^g their lies caused them to err, ^h after the which their fathers have walked:

^a Isa. xv., xvi.; Jeremiah xlviii.; Ezek. xxv. 8; Zeph. ii. 8.
^b 2 Kings iii. 27.—^c Jer. xlviii. 41.—^d Ch. i. 14.—^e Num.

xxiv. 17; Jer. xlviii. 7.—^f Leviticus xxvi. 14, 15; Daniel ix. 11.
^g Isa. xlviii. 15; Rom. i. 25.—^h Ezek. xx. 13, 16, 18, 24, 30.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verses 1-3. For three transgressions of Moab—Moab and Ammon being nearly related, (see Gen. xix. 37,) and bordering upon each other, they are usually joined together in the threatenings of the prophets. Because he burned the bones of the king of Edom to lime—To plaster the walls of his house with it, as the Chaldee paraphrase explains the text, which was most ungenerously and cruelly insulting over the dead. A like story is told by Sir Paul Rycant (Present State of the Greek Church, chap. ii.) of the walls of the city Philadelphia, made of the bones of the besieged, by the prince that took it by storm. I will send a fire upon Moab—Moab was conquered by Nebuchadnezzar, Jer. xxvii. 3, 6. It shall devour the palaces of Kiriath—A principal city of this country. And Moab shall die with tumult—The Moabites shall be destroyed in the tumult of war. And I will cut off the judge in the midst thereof—Probably the chief magistrate or king is intended.

Verses 4, 5. For three transgressions of Judah,

&c.—Having denounced judgments against the heathen nations, he now proceeds to denounce them against God's professing people, who were more guilty and inexcusable, as sinning against greater light, and abusing greater advantages than those with which the heathen were favoured. Because they have despised the law of the Lord—The law which was holy, just, and good, and which raised them in dignity above every other nation. In despising this law they despised the wisdom, justice, and goodness of the Law-maker; and this they did, in effect, when they observed not the commandments of it, and made no conscience of keeping them, or acquainting themselves therewith. And their lies—Vulgate, Idola sua, their idols, or fictitious deities, have caused them to err—Their idolatry blinded them, partly from the natural tendency of this sin, and partly from the just judgment of God. After the which—Idols; their fathers have walked—Successively, one generation after another, notwithstanding all the warnings I have given them by my

A. M. 3217. 5 ⁱ But I will send a fire upon Judah, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem.

6 ¶ Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof: because ^k they sold the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of shoes;

7 That pant after the dust of the earth on the head of the poor, and ^l turn aside the way of the meek: ^m and a man and his father will go

ⁱ Jeremiah xvii. 27; Hosea viii. 14.—^k Isaiah xxix. 21; Chapter viii. 6.—^l Isaiah x. 2; Chapter v. 12.—^m Ezekiel xxii. 11.—ⁿ Or, young woman.—^o Lev. xx. 3; Ezek. xxxvi. 20; Rom. ii. 24.

prophets. But I will send a fire upon Judah, &c.—Nebuchadnezzar's army was this fire, that burned many cities of Judah, and at last Jerusalem itself.

Verses 6, 7. For three transgressions of Israel—Amos, having first prophesied against the Syrians, Philistines, &c., who dwelt in the neighbourhood of the twelve tribes, and who had occasionally become their enemies and oppressors; and having thus not only taught his countrymen that the providence of God extended to other nations, but conciliated attention to himself by such interesting predictions; “he briefly mentions the idolatries and consequent destruction of Judah, and then passes on to his proper subject, which was to reprove and exhort the kingdom of Israel, and to denounce judgments against it. The reason why that kingdom was particularly addressed seems to have been, that Pul invaded it in the reign of Uzziah, 2 Kings xv. 19; and that in less than half a century after the first Assyrian invasion, it was subverted by Shalmaneser, 2 Kings xvii. 6.”—Newcome. Because they sold the righteous for silver, &c.—They perverted the cause of the righteous, and gave forth unjust sentences against them for bribes of the smallest value, even for a pair of shoes or sandals. That pant after the dust of the earth—That is, silver and gold, white and yellow dust: they covet it earnestly, and levy it on the heads of the poor by their unjust exactions. The Vulgate, however, gives another sense to this sentence. Qui conterunt super pulverem terræ capita pauperum: who tread down the heads of the poor into the dust of the earth: that is, they throw them into the dust and then trample upon them. And turn aside the way of the meek—From right and justice. They contrived to do injuries to those who they knew were mild and patient, and would bear injuries; invading their rights, and obstructing the course of justice. Observe, reader, the more patiently men bear the injuries that are done them, the greater is the sin of those that injure them. and the more occasion they have to expect that God will do his people justice, and take vengeance for them. And a man and his father will go in to the same maid—Or, young woman; to profane my holy name—To the great reproach of my name and religion:

into the same ¹ maid, ⁿ to profane A. M. 3217. my holy name: B. C. 787.

8 And they lay themselves down upon clothes ^o laid to pledge ^p by every altar, and they drink the wine of ² the condemned in the house of their god.

9 ¶ Yet destroyed I the ^q Amorite before them, ^r whose height was like the height of the cedars, and he was strong as the oaks; yet I ^s destroyed his fruit from above, and his roots from beneath.

^o Exod. xxii. 26.—^p Ezek. xxiii. 41; 1 Cor. viii. 10; x. 21. ^q Or, such as have fined, or, mulcted.—^r Num. xxi. 24; Deut. ii. 31; Josh. xxiv. 8.—^s Num. xiii. 28, 32, 33.—^t Isa. v. 24; Mal. iv. 1.

being such an instance of fornication as is scarce heard of among the more civilized heathen, as St. Paul observes, 1 Cor. v. 1.

Verse 8. They lay themselves down upon clothes laid to pledge—The Jews as well as the Romans used to lie along at their meals on couches, as appears by this verse, compared with chap. vi. 4: a custom which was continued in after times, as is evident by divers passages in the gospels, read in the original, which speak, not of persons sitting, but lying down, or reclining, at meat. As the prophet here speaks of their laying themselves down by every altar, it is manifest he refers to the feasts which were made of part of their idolatrous sacrifices, and were eaten in some of the apartments of their temples, according to the custom both of the Jews and Gentiles. And the prophet reproves them for three abuses. 1st, That they kept the clothes which they had received as pledges from the poor, contrary to the law, which commanded that the clothes received in pledge should be returned by the going down of the sun: see Exod. xxii. 6. 2d, That they made feasts in the houses, or temples, of their idols, or golden calves, no longer coming to the temple at Jerusalem; and, as if to insult the holiness of God's laws, and to carry the marks of their iniquity even to the feet of their altars, they sat down in their temples upon the garments which they had received in pledge from the poor. 3d, That they caroused at the expense of those on whom they had unjustly laid fines, or, as it is expressed in the text, They drank the wine of the condemned in the house of their god—As drink-offerings, made with wine, were a necessary part of the sacrifices, so some portion of these was likewise reserved for the entertainments that followed. And this the prophet here signifies was bought with the fines or mulcts laid on the innocent.

Verse 9. Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them—Namely, when they came out of Egypt. The Amorites include the rest of the Canaanites, and are here mentioned rather than the others, as being the mightiest nation of them all. Here the benefits which God had bestowed upon the Israelites are mentioned that it might appear how great their ingratitude was

A. M. 3217. 10 Also ^a I brought you up from the
B. C. 787. land of Egypt, and ^a led you forty years through the wilderness, to possess the land of the Amorite.

11 And I raised up of your sons for prophets,
and of your young men for ^a Nazarites. Is it not even thus, O ye children of Israel? saith
the LORD.

12 But ye gave the Nazarites wine to drink;
and commanded the prophets, ^a saying, Prophesy
not.

13 ^a Behold, ^a I am pressed under you, as a

^a Exodus xii. 51; Micah vi. 4.—^b Deuteron. ii. 7; viii. 2.
^c Numbers vi. 2; Judges xiii. 5.—^d Isa. xxx. 10; Jer. xi. 21;
Chap. vii. 12, 13; Mic. ii. 6.—^e Isa. i. 14.

toward him. Whose height was like that of the cedars—Who were men of a vast stature, and remarkable strength. The image is a grand and natural one. Virgil makes the same comparison, speaking of the Titans, Æneid, lib. iii. verse 677.

"Concilium horrendum, quales cum vertice celso,
Aeræ quercus, aut coniferæ Cyparissi Constiterunt, sylvæ alta Jovis, lucusve Dianæ."

"A dreadful council, with their heads on high,
Not yielding to the tow'ring tree of Jove,
Or tallest cypress of Diana's grove," DRYDEN.

Yet I destroyed his fruit from above, and his roots from beneath—The prophet diversifies and continues the image with great beauty. See similar ones, Homer's Il., xiii. 389, and Hor. Od., l. iv. 6. So Virgil compares the destruction of Troy to the cutting down a mountain ash; and the fall of Entellus to that of a pine. Æn., ii. 626; v. 447.

Verses 11, 12. I raised up your sons for prophets—Such were Moses, Joshua, Samuel, and many others; and of your young men for Nazarites—Who, by devoting themselves to my service in a peculiar manner, and by observing peculiar rites, were an honour to you. But ye gave the Nazarites wine— cart is pressed that is full of sheaves. A. M. 3217.

14 ^a Therefore the flight shall perish
from the swift, and the strong shall not strengthen his force, ^b neither shall the mighty deliver ^c himself:

15 Neither shall he stand that handleth the bow; and he that is swift of foot shall not deliver himself: ^d neither shall he that rideth the horse deliver himself.

16 And he that is ^e courageous among the mighty shall flee away naked in that day, saith
the LORD.

^a Or, I will press your place, as a cart full of sheaves presseth.
^b Ch. ix. 1, &c.; Jer. ix. 23.—^c Psal. xxxiii. 16.—^d Heb. his soul, or, life.—^e Psal. xxxiii. 17.—^f Heb. strong of his heart.

Ye tempted the Nazarites to violate their vow and condemn God's law, persuading them to drink wine; and commanded the prophets, saying, Prophesy not—You bid the prophets hold their peace, and not speak against your actions, nor denounce any punishments against you for them. An example of this we have in Amos himself, chap. vii.

Ver. 13-16. Behold I am pressed under you—Your sins have quite tired out my patience, and I am weary with bearing them: compare Isa. xliii. 24; Mal. ii. 17. In this sense the clause is understood by the LXX. and Vulgate. The marginal reading, however, is preferred by many commentators. Archbishop Newcome renders the verse, Behold, I will press your place as a loaded corn-wain presseth its sheaves; and Secker observes, The next verse being joined to this by the connective particle (and) makes it more natural that this should begin to express their punishment. Therefore flight shall perish from the swift—Even flight shall not secure the swift, for their enemies shall be swifter than they. The strong shall not strengthen his force—Their natural strength of body shall not deliver them. And he that is courageous shall flee away naked—Having cast away his armour, or upper garments, for greater expedition.

CHAPTER III.

Here, (1,) Judgments are denounced against Israel, 1-8. (2,) They are shown, that unless they repented and reformed their conduct, those judgments would certainly fall upon them, 9-15.

A. M. 3217. HEAR this word that the LORD
B. C. 787. hath spoken against you, O children of Israel, against the whole family

^a Deut. vii. 6; x. 15;

which I brought up from the land A. M. 3217.
of Egypt, saying, B. C. 787.

2 ^a You only have I known of all the families

Psal. cxlvii. 19, 20.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verses 1, 2. Hear this word against the whole family, &c.—All that family of which Jacob, or Israel, was the head. The word family is equivalent to people here and in the following verse. You only have I known—Acknowledged, by revealing myself to you, protecting you, and conferring on you peculiar privileges. Therefore will I punish you—Your

A. M. 3217. of the earth : ^b therefore I will ¹ punish you for all your iniquities.
B. C. 787.

3 Can two walk together, except they be agreed?

4 Will a lion roar in the forest, when he hath no prey? will a young lion ² cry out of his den, if he have taken nothing?

5 Can a bird fall in a snare upon the earth, where no gin is for him? shall one take up a snare from the earth, and have taken nothing at all?

6 Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and

^b Daniel ix. 12; Matthew xi. 22; Luke xii. 47; Rom. ii. 9; 1 Pet. iv. 17.—¹ Heb. visit upon.—² Heb. give forth his voice.
³ Or, not run together.—^c Isa. xlv. 7.

sins, therefore, shall be punished, and that in an exemplary manner; because you have sinned against greater light and higher obligations than other nations are or have been favoured with; and you have manifested an ungrateful, as well as a disobedient spirit. For the same reason the angel is commanded to begin his execution at the sanctuary, Ezek. ix. 6; and St. Peter observes, that judgment must begin at the house of God, 1 Pet. iv. 17: see also the margin.

Verse 3. Can two walk together—Comfortably as friends; except they be agreed—Except they be in peace with each other? So neither can I conduct myself toward you as a friend or benefactor, nor can you have my presence with you, while you walk so contrary to me, and act in such perfect opposition to my nature and laws.

Verses 4-6. Will a lion roar, &c., when he hath no prey?—“Naturalists assert that when the lion sees his prey, he roars before he rushes on it; and that at this roaring many animals show great fear. He likewise roars over his prey. The sense seems to be, As the lion roareth on account of his prey, so by my prophets I cry aloud against you, because ye are the objects of my vengeance.”—Newcome. Can a bird fall in a snare where no gin is for him?—As a bird does not fall into a snare, unless one has been laid for him, so the people of Israel and Judah would not fall into the calamities coming upon them, had not God, for their ingratitude and other sins, brought these punishments upon them. Figuratively speaking, the Assyrians and Chaldeans were gins or snares which God had laid to take the Israelites. Shall one take up a snare and have taken nothing?—As it is not usual for the fowler or hunter to take up the snares he has laid, till he has taken something in them; so neither will the enemies which God will bring upon Israel and Judah depart from them without executing the purpose for which they were brought, namely, making a conquest of the country, and spoiling its inhabitants. Or, God will not remove his judgments when they have begun to take place, till they have attained their proper end, the people’s repentance and reformation. Shall a trumpet be blown and the people not be afraid?—Will not the people the people ³ not be afraid? ^c shall there be evil in a city, ⁴ and the LORD hath not done it?

7 Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but ^d he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.

8 ^e The lion hath roared, who will not fear? the Lord God hath spoken, ^f who can but prophesy?

9 ¶ Publish in the palaces at Ashdod, and in the palaces of the land of Egypt, and say, Assemble yourselves upon the mountains of

⁴ Or, and shall not the LORD do somewhat?—^d Gen. vi. 13; xviii. 17; Psa. xxv. 14; Joh. xv. 15.—^e Chap. i. 2.—^f Acts iv. 20; v. 20, 29; 1 Cor. ix. 16.

of the city, when they first hear the alarm-trumpet blown, be affected with the danger, and run to their arms? and will not ye be moved by the warnings God gives you of approaching judgments? and will ye not be stirred up to repent and amend your ways? Shall there be evil—Such as famine, plague, and war; in a city—Or country; and the Lord hath not done it?—Either immediately by his own hand, or by the hands of those whom he employs. Whoever are the instruments of chastising a people, God is the principal agent. The meaning here is, You may be assured that the calamities you feel, or have just cause to fear, are not the effect of chance, but come upon you by the special direction of Providence.

Verses 7, 8. The Lord will do nothing, but he revealeth, &c.—As if he had said, You cannot complain of your not being forewarned of these calamities coming upon you, for God hath not done, nor will do any thing, without revealing it to his prophets, and by them to you; so that you have now warning of all that he intends to do, unless you prevent it by an alteration in your behaviour. It may be observed further on this verse, that there was no great revolution in the affairs, either of the kingdoms of Judah and Israel, or in those of the neighbouring nations, which the prophets of God did not foretel; in order that the Jews might constantly be reminded of their God, either as a rewarder or punisher. The lion hath roared, who will not fear?—As when a lion roars, no one who hears can avoid fearing, so now, God having threatened, all who are made acquainted with the threatening ought to be alarmed and to stand in awe. The Lord God hath spoken, who can but prophesy?—When God himself speaks, or commands, who will dare to do otherwise than obey? or, what prophet will have courage to refuse or forbear uttering what God reveals to him, and orders him to utter; for if the anger of a lion is to be feared, how much more the anger of God?

Verses 9-11. Publish in the palaces at Ashdod, &c.—God here orders the prophet to invite the Philistines and Egyptians, the inveterate enemies of God’s Israel, to come and behold what great wick-

A. M. 3217. Samaria, and behold the great tumults in the midst thereof, and the⁵ oppressed in the midst thereof.

10 For they⁸ know not to do right, saith the LORD, who store up violence and⁶ robbery in their palaces.

11 Therefore thus saith the Lord God; ^h An adversary there shall be even round about the land; and he shall bring down thy strength from thee, and thy palaces shall be spoiled.

12 Thus saith the LORD: As the shepherd⁷ taketh out of the mouth of the lion two legs, or a piece of an ear: so shall the children of Israel be taken out that dwell in A. M. 3217. Samaria in the corner of a bed, and B. C. 787.⁸ in Damascus in a couch.

13 Hear ye, and testify in the house of Jacob, saith the Lord God, the God of hosts,

14 That, in the day that I shall⁹ visit the transgressions of Israel upon him, I will also visit the altars of Beth-el: and the horns of the altar shall be cut off, and fall to the ground.

15 And I will smiteⁱ the winter-house with^k the summer-house; and^l the houses of ivory shall perish, and the great houses shall have an end, saith the LORD.

⁵ Or, oppressions.—⁶ Jer. iv. 22.—⁷ Or, spoil.—^h 2 Kings xvii. 3, 6; xviii. 9, 10, 11.—⁷ Heb. delivereth.

⁹ Or, on the bed's feet.—⁹ Or, punish Israel for.—ⁱ Jer. xxxvi. 22.—^k Judg. iii. 20.—^l 1 Kings xxii. 39.

edness was among them, and what cause he had to execute what he had threatened, and to mark the calamities coming upon them, as the punishment of that wickedness, that these heathen might hereby take warning. Say, Assemble yourselves upon the mountains of Samaria—That is, in the kingdom of the ten tribes, whose capital city was Samaria, built upon a hill of the same name. Or, the mountains of Samaria may be equivalent to the mountains of Israel, mentioned Ezek. xxxvi. 8, and xxxvii. 22; Samaria being often taken for the whole kingdom of Israel. Behold the great tumults in the midst thereof—The seditious councils and rebellious conspiracies among them. And the oppressed in the midst thereof—The multitude of oppressed ones throughout the whole kingdom; for the usurpers took it to be their interest to crush all they feared or suspected. For they know not to do right—That is, they will not know nor learn to do their duty. Who store up violence, &c.—Who store up in their houses riches gotten by violence and injustice. Therefore, An adversary shall be even round about the land—Shalmaneser the king of Assyria shall invade the land on every side, shall dismantle its fortresses, and plunder its wealthy palaces.

Verse 12. As the shepherd taketh out of the mouth of the lion two legs, &c.—When a lion hath for some time ravaged the flock, but is at last frightened away by the noise of the shepherds and their dogs, or by darts and other offensive weapons thrown at him, then all that, in such a case, the shepherd can hope to save will be but some poor remains of the prey that the lion hath seized. And thus shall it be at the taking of Samaria: only a small remainder of the inhabitants shall escape the search of their enemies, though they try to hide themselves in their most retired apartments. In the corner of a bed—In some dark corner behind a bed; and in Damascus—Supposing some of them have fled thither; in a couch—Some few of the poor may escape when the enemy finds them sick upon their couches. But the marginal reading, on the bed's feet, is thought by some to give a better sense: or, as the word rendered Damascus also signifies a corner, the clause may be properly rendered, In the side or corner of a couch, an interpretation approved by Aben. Ezra. See Buxtorf.

Verses 13–15. Hear ye, and testify, &c.—These words are directed to the prophets whom God sends to declare his will. In the day that I shall visit, &c.—In the general destruction of the ten tribes, my judgments will be particularly visible upon the places dedicated to idolatrous worship, especially Beth-el, the principal place of that kind. And the horns of the altar shall be cut off—These were squares placed at the four corners of the altar, and hollow in the middle, into which some of the blood of the sacrifices was poured. And I will smite the winter-house with the summer-house—The kings and great men had different houses and apartments for spending the winter and summer in. These were placed and made suitable to those different seasons. And the houses of ivory shall perish—We read 1 Kings xxii. 49, that King Ahab built himself an ivory house, that is, a house ceiled or wainscoted with ivory, or at least inlaid in some parts of it with ivory; and it is probable that other great men followed his example.

CHAPTER IV.

In this chapter we have, (1.) Threatenings denounced against oppressors, 1–3. (2.) A declaration that idolaters are abandoned to their idolatry, 4, 5. (3.) A representation of the incorrigibleness of the people of Israel, 6–11. (4.) They are called to humble themselves before God in the view of the terrible judgments which were approaching, 12, 13.

A. M. 3217. B. C. 787. HEAR this word, ye ^a kine of Bashan, that are in the mountain of Samaria, which oppress the poor, which crush the needy, which say to their masters, Bring, and let us drink.

2 ^b The Lord God hath sworn by his holiness, that lo, the days shall come upon you, that he will take you away ^c with hooks, and your posterity with fish-hooks.

3 And ^d ye shall go out at the breaches, every cow at that which is before her; and A. M. 3217. B. C. 787. ¹ ye shall cast them into the palace, saith the LORD.

4 ¶ ^e Come to Beth-el and transgress: at ^f Gilgal multiply transgression; and ^g bring your sacrifices every morning, ^h and your tithes after ² three years:

5 ⁱ And ³ offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving with leaven, and proclaim and publish ^k the free-offerings: ¹ for ⁴ this liketh you, O ye

^a Psalm xxii. 12; Ezekiel xxix. 18.—^b Psalm lxxxix. 35. ^c Jer. x. 16; Hab. i. 15.—^d Ezekiel xii. 5, 12.—¹ Or, ye shall cast away the things of the palace.—^e Ezekiel xx. 39; Hos. iv. 15; xii. 11; Chap. v. 5.

^g Num. xxviii. 3, 4.—^h Deut. xiv. 28.—² Heb. three years of days.—ⁱ Lev. vii. 13; xxiii. 17.—³ Heb. offer by burning. ^k Lev. xxii. 18, 21; Deut. xii. 6.—⁴ Psal. lxxxi. 12.—⁵ Heb. so ye love.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verse 1. Hear this word, ye kine of Bashan—Bashan was famous for its flocks and herds, Deut. xxxii. 14; Ezek. xxxix. 18. The proud and luxurious matrons of Israel may be here described. In this sense the words are understood by Grotius, and some other commentators. Thus rich, proud, and tyrannical men are compared, Psal. xxii. 13, to the bulls of Bashan; because cattle fed in the pastures of Bashan, which were remarkably rich, were more than commonly large, and wanton, or headstrong, by reason of their full feeding. Which say to their masters—To their husbands; Bring, and let us drink—From these expressions we may infer the dissoluteness and intemperance of the women. And it may be observed here also, that even the women are accused of oppressing the poor, and crushing the needy; from whence we may gather to how great a height cruelty, oppression, and insolence were grown among them, since even the women were guilty of these vices. Some, however, think that the description contained in this verse is not to be confined to the matrons, but that the rich, luxurious, and profligate rulers and nobles are also and even especially intended; and that these might be represented as kine rather than bulls, in order to reprove their effeminacy and cowardice when assaulted by their enemies; while at the same time they crushed and trampled on their unresisting brethren, and sold them for slaves, saying to the masters who bought them, Bring, and let us drink. Having made the iniquitous bargain, perhaps, on low terms, they required from the purchaser to be treated with wine. This is Mr. Scott's view of the passage.

Verse 2. The Lord hath sworn by his holiness—As sure as God is holy and true, so certainly will he bring the threatened judgment upon you; that he will take you away with hooks—"The original word in the masculine is used for thorns; but in the feminine it signifies shields. So that, perhaps, a fishing instrument may be denoted, which, like some now in our use, resembled a shield, or a basket, in its form. Our translators render the word hooks, from their analogy to thorns."—Newcome. And your posterity—Or remainder; with fish-hooks—Invaders and spoilers are often compared to fishers. The sense here seems to be, that the several invaders of Israel, coming after one another, should make an entire riddance of the whole nation, so that their posterity, or remainder, which had escaped the first invaders, should certainly fall into the hands of those that came after.

Verse 3. And ye shall go out at the breaches, every cow, &c.—The prophet pursues the metaphor taken from the kine of Bashan, verse 1, and tells the people, that as cattle strive to get out at every breach they can find in a mound or fence, so should they, with all possible haste, endeavour to make their escape at the several breaches which should be made in the walls of Samaria. And ye shall cast them into the palace—The marginal reading is preferable, Ye shall cast away the things; namely, the riches and ornaments, of the palace. Or the clause may be rendered, Ye shall cast out yourselves, that is, ye shall with haste betake yourselves to Harmon: so the Vulgate, Et projiciemini in Armon, that is, says Grotius, "into Armenia. So the Hebrews understand it."

Verses 4, 5. Come to Beth-el—The known place of the calf-worship; and transgress—A strong irony, giving them over as incorrigible: like that of Ezek. xx. 39, Go ye, serve every man his idols. At Gilgal multiply transgression—This place also, as well as Beth-el, was the scene of idolatry, as appears from the cotemporary Prophet Hosea. And bring your sacrifices every morning—According to the law of the daily burnt-offering, Num. xxviii. 4, which they observed in the worship of the golden calves. The prophet continues in the same strain of irony to reprove their idolatry, though in it they imitated the instituted worship at Jerusalem. And your tithes after three years—God had commanded, Deut. xiv. 28, that every third year all the tithe of that year should be brought and laid up in a public storehouse, upon which account the third year is called the year of tithing. And offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving with leaven—Or, with leavened bread, as the law prescribes, Lev. vii. 13. And proclaim the free-offerings—Or freewill-offerings, as the word is translated in other places. For this liketh you, &c.—Vulgate, sic enim voluistis, for such is your will, or so it pleases you to act. Your hearts are so set upon

A. M. 3217. children of Israel, saith the Lord
B. C. 787.

GOD.

6 ¶ And I also have given you cleanness of teeth in all your cities, and want of bread in all your places: ^a yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

7 And also I have withholden the rain from you, when there were yet three months to the harvest: and I caused it to rain upon one city, and caused it not to rain upon another city: one piece was rained upon, and the piece whereupon it rained not withered.

8 So two or three cities wandered unto one city, to drink water; but they were not satisfied: ^a yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

9 ° I have smitten you with blasting and mildew: ^b when your gardens, and your vine-

^a Isaiah xxvi. 11; Jeremiah v. 3; Hag. ii. 17; Verses 8, 9.
^b Verses 6, 10, 11.—Deut. xxviii. 22; Hag. ii. 17.—^c Or, the multitude of your gardens, &c., did the palmer-worm.—P Joel i. 4; ii. 25.—^d Or, in the way.

your idolatrous worship, that it is in vain to use any arguments to dissuade you from it.

Verses 6-8. And I also have given you—Or, for this cause I have given you, cleanness, of teeth—An expression signifying a scarcity of food, or a famine. The famine which we read of 2 Kings viii. 1, seems to be that which is here referred to. Yet have ye not returned unto me—Nevertheless ye have not been brought to a sense of your sins, to any sorrow for them, or to any sincere purpose of amendment. Also I have withholden the rain, when there were yet three months to the harvest—At a season when your country most needed it, and when it had been wont to fall most plentifully. And I caused it to rain upon one city, and not upon another—And, to make it more remarkable, I caused it to rain upon cities or places adjoining to yours, at the same time that the drought was so great on all your territories. This may import that God punished them with drought at the same time when he sent rain upon the cities of Judah; making a remarkable difference between Israel and Judah, like that which he formerly made between Egypt and the land of Goshen. One piece was rained upon, &c.—This seems to be spoken of those parts which lay quite contiguous to the lands of other nations, of which parts, though they touched each other, yet rain fell upon the one and not upon the other; the consequence of which was, that the one piece of land was withered, or scorched up for want of moisture, while the adjoining one was green and flourishing. So two or three cities wandered, &c.—So the inhabitants of several of your cities went to some city or other without your territories for the sake of getting water to quench their thirst. But they were not satisfied—They could not obtain a sufficient quantity.

yards, and your fig-trees, and your olive-trees increased, ^a the palmer-worm devoured them: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

10 I have sent among you the pestilence ^a after ^a the manner of Egypt: your young men have I slain with the sword, ^b and have taken away your horses; and I have made the stink of your camps to come up unto your nostrils: ^c yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

11 I have overthrown some of you, as God overthrew ^d Sodom and Gomorrah, ^e and ye were as a fire-brand plucked out of the burning: ^f yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

12 Therefore, thus will I do unto thee, O Israel: and because I will do this unto thee,

^a Exod. ix. 3, 6; xii. 29; Deut. xxviii. 27, 60; Psalm lxxviii. 50.—^b Heb. with the captivity of your horses, 2 Kings xiii. 7.
^c Verse 6.—^d Genesis xix. 24, 25; Isa. xiii. 19; Jer. xlix. 18.
^e Zech. iii. 2; Jude 23.—^f Verse 6.

Verses 10, 11. I have sent among you the pestilence after the manner of Egypt—I have sent such pestilence among you as I formerly sent upon Egypt: Or, such as has frequently taken place in Egypt. "The unwholesome effluvia, on the subsiding of the Nile, caused some peculiarly malignant diseases in this country."—Newcome. Maillet also tells us, (Lett. i. page 14,) that "the air is bad in those parts, where, when the inundations of the Nile have been very great, this river, in retiring to its channel, leaves marshy places, which infect the country round about. The dew is also very dangerous in Egypt." Your young men have I slain, &c.—I have caused your young men to fall in battle with your enemies. And have taken away your horses—Have enabled your enemies to take them from you. Horses being very scarce in the land of Israel, the loss of them was a great affliction. I have made the stink of your camps, &c.—I have sent diseases into your camps; so that they have been rendered quite noisome by the smell of the dead carcasses, or so great has been the slaughter in your camps, that there were not a sufficient number left alive to bury the slain. The Syrians made frequent incursions on the Israelites, which obliged the latter to be often encamped. I have overthrown some of you, &c.—Some of your cities I have caused to be burned with fire and utterly consumed, as Sodom and Gomorrah were. And ye were as a firebrand plucked out of the burning—Those that remained very narrowly escaped. A proverbial expression, used both by sacred and profane authors, to signify a narrow escape out of imminent danger.

Verses 12, 13. Therefore thus will I do unto thee—I will continue to send these several judgments upon thee till I entirely destroy thee. And because,

A. M. 3217. ^x prepare to meet thy God, O Israel.
B. C. 787.

13 For lo, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the ^s wind, ^r and declareth unto man what is his thought, ^z that

^x Ezekiel xiii. 5; xxii. 30; Luke xiv. 31, 32.—^s Or, spirit.
^r Ps. cxxxix. 2; Dan. ii. 28.

or, forasmuch, as I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Israel—Expect that he will come to take full vengeance upon thee, and consider whether thou art able to contend with him; (so the expression of meeting an adversary is understood, Luke xiv. 31;) or if that be impossible, endeavour to avert his anger by confession of sin, humiliation, repentance, and reformation, before it actually break out upon thee. For lo, he that formeth the mountains, &c.—For lo, I am he that formeth the mountains, and createth the wind—I am the former of all things, both those which are seen, and those which are so fine and subtle as to escape the discernment of man. And declareth unto man what is his thought—Who can search into the very thoughts of man, and declare what they are before they are put into execution, or are expressed in words. That

maketh the morning darkness, ^a and A. M. 3217.
treadeth upon the high places of the B. C. 787.
earth, ^b The Lord, The God of hosts is his name.

^z Chap. v. 8; viii. 9.—^a Deut. xxxii. 13; xxxiii. 29; Mic. i. 3.
^b Isa. xlvii. 4; Jer. x. 16; Chap. v. 8; ix. 6.

maketh the morning darkness—The Vulgate reads, Forming the morning cloud. Houbigant and Grotius, however, with some others, read, He that maketh the morning, and the darkness, namely, the day and the night, or, as the latter interprets it, gives prosperity to the godly, and adversity to the wicked, as the Chaldee here explains it. And treadeth upon the high places of the earth—That is, says Grotius, Who treadeth under foot the proud: in other words, who can humble the great and mighty, and overthrow the strongest fortresses, or places of strength. The Lord, The God of hosts is his name—Whose sovereign power all creatures obey, and act for or against us as he willeth. Let us humble ourselves before this God, and give all diligence to make him our God. For happy are the people whose God he is, and who have all this power engaged for them!

CHAPTER V.

In this chapter we have, (1,) The deplorable condition of Israel, 1-3. (2,) An exhortation to them to seek God, 4-15. (3,) Judgments denounced, 16-20; notwithstanding their outward services, 21-27.

A. M. 3217. HEAR ye this word which I ^a take
B. C. 787. up against you, even a lamentation, O house of Israel.

2 The virgin of Israel is fallen; she shall no more rise: she is forsaken upon her land; there is none to raise her up.

^a Jeremiah vii. 29;

3 For thus saith the Lord God; A. M. 3217.
The city that went out by a thou- B. C. 787.
sand shall leave a hundred, and that which went forth by a hundred shall leave ten, to the house of Israel.

4 ¶ For thus saith the Lord unto the house

Ezek. xix. 1; xxvii. 2.

NOTES ON CHAPTER V.

Verses 1-3. Hear ye, &c.—It is justly observed by Grotius, that this verse would be translated more according to the Hebrew thus; Hear ye this word, even a lamentation, which I take up over you—It alludes to the lamentations made at funerals: so here the prophet bemoans the state of the kingdom of Israel as dead. The virgin of Israel—Such she was when first espoused to God, a chaste virgin to a husband: she was then peculiarly beloved and delighted in, and was under the peculiar protection and care of her heavenly Lord; but she is now fallen from her glory and felicity, and for her idolatries and other sins delivered up to the will of her enemies. She shall no more rise—That is, says Grotius, non iterum surget; she shall not rise again, namely, if she so goes on in the wicked way in which she now walks: for it was always understood in God's threatenings against the Jewish people, that if they turned to him in true repentance they might, by that means,

avert the judgments threatened. And there are repeated promises of the restoration of Israel as well as Judah; but these were all made on the condition of their repentance and reformation, which as they never performed in general, so they have not been restored in general, as the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin were. She is forsaken upon her land—She is abandoned of all, and there is none to assist her to rise up again: like an infant that is fallen upon the ground and hath none to take it up; or, broken to pieces upon her own land; and so left, as a broken vessel. The city that went out by a thousand, &c.—A city which was able to send out a thousand men fit for war, shall have but a hundred of them left. And so it shall be in proportion for any less number; only one in ten of them shall escape the sword and other chances of war.

Verses 4, 5. For—Or rather, nevertheless, seek ye me, and ye shall live—That is, ye shall be prosperous again; for life, in the Scripture language, is

A. M. 3217. of Israel, ^b Seek ye me, ^c and ye shall live :
B. C. 787.

5 But seek not ^d Beth-el, nor enter into Gilgal, and pass not to ^e Beer-sheba : for Gilgal shall surely go into captivity, and ^f Beth-el shall come to naught.

6 ^g Seek the LORD, and ye shall live ; lest he break out like fire in the house of Joseph, and devour it, and there be none to quench it in Beth-el.

7 Ye who ^h turn judgment to wormwood, and leave off righteousness in the earth,

8 Seek him that maketh the ⁱ seven stars and

^b 2 Chron. xv. 2 ; Jer. xxix. 13 ; Verse 6. — ^c Isaiah lv. 3. ^d Chapter iv. 4. — ^e Chapter viii. 14. — ^f Hosea iv. 15 ; x. 8. ^g Verse 4. — ^h Chap. vi. 12.

used to express prosperity, or happiness. This shows, that what was said in the 2d verse, of their being fallen to rise no more, is to be taken as it is there explained ; namely, in case they did not repent, but continued in their wickedness. But seek not Beth-el, nor enter into Gilgal, &c.—The places here named, it is probable, were all seats of idolatrous worship. The sense of the verse, therefore, is, that if they continued in their idolatries they should certainly be carried into captivity, and come to naught—For it was only by returning and seeking God's favour by true repentance and humiliation, and ceasing from their idolatry, that they could be saved from ruin.

Verse 6. Seek the Lord, and ye shall live—He repeats his exhortation, and also the promise of a good issue on their complying with it. Lest he break out like fire in the house of Joseph—That is, the kingdom of the ten tribes, the chief whereof was Ephraim the son of Joseph. And there be none to quench it in Beth-el—As if he had said, If once this fire break out, all your idols in Beth-el shall not be able to quench it. A proper caution this to the Israelites, not to trust in their idolatrous worship for their safety, because it would be so far from averting the divine wrath, or saving them from God's judgments, that it would provoke that wrath still more, and hasten the execution of his judgments.

Verses 7–9. Ye who turn judgment to wormwood—Or into hemlock, as the word here used is translated, chap. vi. 12. Ye judges and rulers that pervert the law that was designed to protect innocence, and under colour of it exercise the greatest oppression. True or just judgment is sweet or pleasing ; corrupt judgment, mere bitterness. And leave off righteousness—That is, leave off to practise it, or make it to cease in your courts of judicature. Seek him that maketh the seven stars and Orion—Concerning these constellations see notes on Job ix. 9 ; and xxxviii. 31. These and the other constellations were commonly thought to have great influence upon the seasons ; and therefore their rising and setting used to be particularly taken notice of by husbandmen and shepherds ; whose employments lying abroad,

Orion, and turneth the shadow of ^{A. M. 3217.} death into the morning, ^{B. C. 787.} and maketh the day dark with night : that ¹ calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth : ^m The LORD is his name :

9 That strengtheneth the ¹ spoiled against the strong, so that the spoiled shall come against the fortress.

10 ⁿ They hate him that rebuketh in the gate, and they ^o abhor him that speaketh uprightly.

11 Forasmuch, therefore, as your treading is upon the poor, and ye take from him burdens

¹ Job ix. 9 ; xxxviii. 31. — ^k Psalm civ. 20. — ^l Job xxxviii. 34 ; Chap. ix. 6. — ^m Chap. iv. 13. — ⁿ Heb. spoil. — ^o Isaiah xxix. 21. — ^p 1 Kings xxii. 8.

made them more observant of the appearances of the heavenly bodies. So this was a dispensation of providence, which it was very suitable for one of Amos's profession to mention. "But in Arabia and the neighbouring countries, to this present day, not only the shepherds, but the men in general, the women and children, know the names of the stars. Sanctius assures us, that the shepherds in Spain know perfectly well the stars of Ursa Major, Orion, the Pleiades, &c., and that they generally measure the time of night by the course of these stars."—Dodd. And turneth the shadow of death into the morning—The greatest adversity into as great prosperity ; and maketh the day dark with night—Changes prosperity into adversity ; that calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them upon the earth—Who commandeth the seas and the rivers to overflow the earth in great inundations ; or rather, commands the vapours to ascend from the sea, turns them into rain, and then pours it from the clouds, to render the earth fruitful. That strengtheneth the spoiled against the strong—Who giveth strength to him that hath been conquered and spoiled, and enables him to subdue his conquerors, and become master even of the strongest places. This was very properly mentioned here as one act of God's great power, because it implied, that the deplorable state of the Israelitish affairs might be retrieved if they sought to him.

Verse 10. They hate him that rebuketh in the gate—The usual place of administering justice, and of reproving and passing judgment on iniquity. The prophet now, after having descanted upon God's wondrous power, returns to enumerate the crimes of the Israelites ; and begins with telling them, that they in general hated the judges who reproved them for their injurious conduct and acts of fraud or violence, and endeavoured to do justice to the oppressed. And besides this, they hated the prophets and private persons who rebuked ungodliness and unrighteousness, and exhorted men to the practice of piety and virtue.

Verses 11–13. Forasmuch, therefore, as your treading is upon the poor—It appears by this, that

A. M. 3217. of wheat: ^pye have built houses of
B. C. 787. hewn stone, but ye shall not dwell in them; ye have planted ²pleasant vineyards,
but ye shall not drink wine of them.

12 For I know your manifold transgressions and your mighty sins: ^athey afflict the just,
they take ³a bribe, and they ^rturn aside the poor in the gate from their right.

13 Therefore, ^athe prudent shall keep silence
in that time; for it is an evil time.

14 Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live:
and so the LORD, the God of hosts, shall be with you, ^tas ye have spoken.

15 ^uHate the evil, and love the good, and establish judgment in the gate: ^xit A. M. 3217.

may be that the LORD God of hosts B. C. 787.
will be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph.

16 Therefore the LORD, the God of hosts,
the Lord, saith thus; Wailing shall be in all streets; and they shall say in all the highways, Alas! alas! and they shall call the husbandman to mourning, and ^vsuch as are skilful of lamentation to wailing.

17 And in all vineyards shall be wailing: for ^zI will pass through thee, saith the LORD.

18 ^aWo unto you that desire the day of the LORD! to what end is it for you? ^bthe day of the LORD is darkness, and not light.

^p Deut. xxviii. 30, 38, 39; Mic. vi. 15; Zeph. i. 13; Hag. i. 6.
^q Heb. vineyards of desire.—^r Chap. ii. 26.—^s Or, a ransom.
^t Isa. xxix. 21; Chap. ii. 7.—^u Chap. vi. 10.—^v Mic. iii. 11.
^w Psa. xxxiv. 14; xcvi. 10; Rom. xii. 9.

^x Exodus xxxii. 30; 2 Kings xix. 4; Joel ii. 14.—^y Jer. ix.
17.—^z Exod. xii. 12; Nah. i. 12.—^a Isaiah v. 19; Jer. xvii.
15; Ezek. xii. 22, 27; 2 Pet. iii. 4.—^b Jer. xxx. 7; Joel ii. 2; Zeph. i. 15.

their acts of oppression were more than ordinarily proud and tyrannical. They were the effect of fraud executed with insolence, as the word treading, and the subsequent clause, added in explanation of it,
signify. And ye take from him burdens of wheat—
This expresses the most grievous inhumanity, implying that they took from the poor their very sustenance by acts of injustice and violence. Ye have built houses of hewn stone, but shall not dwell in them—God often threatens to deprive men of the enjoyment of their ill-gotten substance. For I know your manifold transgressions and mighty sins—
Your daring impieties, your sins of the first magnitude, such as idolatry and oppression, reprov'd in the foregoing part of this chapter. Therefore the prudent shall keep silence in that time—So great is the corruption of manners, and such the insolence
of power, that the prudent man, though he be vir-tuous, and abhor such doings, yet will incline to be silent, perceiving that his speaking by way of reproof or exhortation to others will only bring danger on himself, and be of no real use.

Verses 14, 15. Seek good, and not evil—Give your minds to the practice of true piety and virtue. Do that which is just and good, and endeavour to make others do the same. That ye may live—That it may be well with you, your families, and the whole kingdom. And so the Lord God of hosts—The eternal, glorious God, who is Lord of all, and can help you, having all the hosts of heaven and earth at his disposal; shall be with you—To bless and save you yet, notwithstanding all your former sins. As ye have spoken—You have boasted of his being with you, you think he is with you, and is bound to be with you, and own you: so he will indeed, but it is on condition that you repent and turn from your idols and violence. Hate the evil—Practised either by yourselves or others. And love the good—Cleave
to and practise it yourselves, and commend, encourage, defend, and reward it in others. Let your hearts be toward good things and good men. Es- tablish judgment in the gate—Set up honest and upright judges in the gates of your cities, and see that true judgment be there administered. By this it is evident, that the prophet speaks chiefly to governors and persons in authority among them. It may be the Lord will be gracious to the remnant of Joseph

—To those small remains of the ten tribes which the civil wars and the invasions of your enemies have spared. As if he had said, Your case is not so desperate but repentance may yet avert God's judgments, and he may show himself gracious to those that are left of you.

Verses 16, 17. Therefore the Lord saith thus—
The prophet, foreseeing their obstinacy, proceeds in denouncing judgments against them: and the word therefore, which introduces his threatenings, is to be referred to the twelfth verse, and not to the verses immediately foregoing. As if he had said, It is on account of your evil deeds, and because you will not be persuaded to hate the evil and love the good, that the Lord saith thus. *Wailing shall be in all streets,
and in all the highways*—There shall be a general lamentation of all orders and degrees of men; of the citizens, for the loss of their wealth and substance,
plundered by the conquerors; of the husbandmen
and vine-dressers, for the loss of the fruits of the earth, destroyed or eaten up by the enemies' army.
And such as are skilful of lamentation
—Let those, whose profession it is to make lamentation at funerals, join in this public mourning, to make it more solemn. And in all vineyards shall be wailing—Where there used to be shouting and rejoicing, when the summer-fruits were gathered in.
For I will pass through thee, saith the Lord—To punish all everywhere: I will act like an enemy that invades and destroys a country as he marches through it.

Verses 18-20. Wo unto you that desire the day of the Lord—Scoffingly, not believing any such day will come: for this seems to be spoken of some among them, who, in mockery, expressed a desire

A. M. 3217. 19 ° As if a man did flee from a lion, and a bear met him; or went into the house, and leaned his hand on the wall, and a serpent bit him.

20 Shall not the day of the LORD be darkness, and not light? even very dark, and no brightness in it?

21 ¶ ^d I hate, I despise your feast-days, and ° I will not ⁴ smell in your solemn assemblies.

22 ^f Though ye offer me burnt-offerings and

° Jer. xlviii. 44.—^d Prov. xxi. 27; Isa. i. 11-16; Jer. vi. 20; Hosea vi. 6; viii. 13.—° Lev. xxvi. 31.—⁴ Or, smell your holy days.—^f Isa. lxvi. 3; Mic. vi. 6, 7.

of seeing those things which the prophet predicted brought to pass. Or, it may respect those who, notwithstanding all the prophet had said, still expected God would appear in their favour, not to their destruction: see Isa. v. 19. To what end is it for you?—To what purpose should you desire to see the day of the Lord? The day of the Lord is darkness—Adversity, black and doleful, and not light—No joy or comfort in it. It will certainly be a very dismal time to you, and indeed to all in the country, when evils shall succeed one another so fast, that he who seeks to escape one, shall fall into a greater. As if a man did flee from a lion—A creature that has something of generosity in his nature; and a bear met him—Which never spares any thing that comes in its way. Or went into the house—Namely, for fear of being devoured by beasts, or to avoid some other danger which threatened him without; and a serpent bit him—And a viper, whose sting is incurable, should creep out of the wall and bite him. Serpents sometimes concealed themselves in the holes and chinks of the walls of the eastern houses. Shall not the day of the Lord be darkness—It might indeed well be described as darkness; even very dark, without any brightness in it—Since it was to be no less than the destruction of the towns and cities, the desolation of the country, the slaughtering of the people, or the carrying of them into captivity, and even the overturning of the whole kingdom.

Verses 21-24. I hate and despise your feast-days—This and the three following verses are the same in sense with Isa. i. 11-16, and the other texts referred to in the margin, on which the reader is desired to consult the notes. They all show of how little signification the external rites of religion are, unless they be accompanied with living faith in, and sincere love to God, and a universal obedience to his will; or without holiness of heart and life. Take away from me the noise of thy songs—The psalms and hymns sung with vocal and instrumental music, the usual accompaniments of sacrifices among the Jews and heathen. As the worshippers at Beth-el imitated the temple worship in other particulars, (see chap. iv. 4,) so it is likely they did in this part of the public worship: see chap. viii. 3. The prophet calls your meat-offerings, I will not accept ^{A. M. 3217.} them; neither will I regard the ^{B. C. 787.} ⁶ peace-offerings of your fat beasts.

23 Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols.

24 ¶ But let judgment ⁶ run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream.

25 ^h Have ye offered unto me sacrifices and offerings in the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel?

° Or, thank-offerings.—⁶ Hosea vi. 6; Mic. vi. 8.—⁶ Heb. roll.—^h Deut. xxxii. 17; Josh. xxiv. 14; Ezek. xx. 8, 16, 24; Acts vii. 42, 43; Isa. xliii. 23.

their songs a noise, like that of an untuneful voice, because their melody, not proceeding from a true principle of religion, was not grateful to God. There are great authority and majesty in this passage, verses 21-24; and the grandeur of the image in the following words, with which it closes, must strike every reader. But let judgment run down as waters—Rather, let justice have its free course, so that the meanest persons may feel the benefit of it; and let your benignity be great and universal to your fellow-creatures.

Verse 25. Have ye offered—Or, did you offer, unto me sacrifices and offerings—“Verborum emphasis in MIHI sita est,” says Spencer: The emphasis of the passage lies in ME. “Did ye offer such sacrifices as were acceptable to ME; such an entire and undivided service as I enjoin?”—Newcome. Certainly they did not. They offered sacrifices indeed, but in general did not offer them in a right manner, in a true spirit of piety; in the genuine fear and love of God, and with an upright intention to glorify him. On the contrary, they joined the worship of idols with the worship of God, and thereby polluted it, and rendered it insignificant in God’s sight. Thus Dr. Whitby: “This question is a strong negative, importing, that though they really did offer sacrifices, as he had commanded, yet he did not accept, or look upon them, as offered to him. The expression is like that of the Prophet Zechariah, chap. vii. 5, When ye fasted, &c., did ye at all fast to me, even to me? And this is here denied, 1st, Because God will accept of no worship as done unto him, which is not done unto him alone; and when any other is worshipped with him, he looks upon himself as not worshipped at all. So, of those nations which came from Assyria into the cities of Samaria, it is said, 2 Kings xvii. 33, They feared the Lord, and served their own gods; and then it is added, verse 34, They feared not the Lord. 2d, Because God will not own any worship as performed to him, while men continue in their disobedience to his laws, and in their hearts depart from him. Thus the Jews, in Zechariah, are said not to fast to him, because they would not hearken to nor obey his words; and he is said to have been angry with them in the wilderness forty years, because they erred from him in their

A. M. 3217. '26 But ye have borne ⁷ the tabernacle ¹ of your Moloch and Chiun your images, the star of your god, which ye made to yourselves.

⁷ Or, Sicuth your king.—¹ 2 Kings xi. 33.

hearts; that is, says the Chaldee, they had their idols in their hearts."

Verse 26. But ye have borne, or did bear, the tabernacle of your Moloch and Chiun—Your ancestors manifested their want of true devotion toward me, in that they were so prone to practise those idolatries which they learned in Egypt, or which they saw practised in the countries through which they passed: see Num. xxv. 2; Josh. xxiv. 14; Ezek. xx. 7, 16; and xxiii. 3, 8. As these words are quoted by St. Stephen, (Acts vii. 42, 43,) to prove that God gave them up to worship the host of heaven, it is probable that by Moloch is meant the sun, which the whole East worshipped in ancient times, called also, as almost all interpreters agree, Baal, Bel, or Belus: Baal, the Lord, (as the word signifies,) and Moloch, the king of heaven, being the same. As for the other word, Chiun, rendered by the LXX. Rephan or Remphan, according to Vossius, it signifies the moon; but Aben Ezra understands it of Saturn, an interpretation which many learned men approve: see particularly Lud. de Dieu, upon Acts vii. 43, and Dr. Spencer, De Leg. Hebr., lib. iii. cap. 3, where it is shown that Saturn was called Rephan, or Remphan, by the Egyptians. Your images—They had images of these supposed deities, that of Moloch representing the sun, and that of Chiun the star Saturn: see Seldon, ii. 396. These images were placed in shrines, here termed סככות, a tabernacle, or tabernacles, and these they used to carry about with them, as Grotius and Dr. Hammond, on Acts vii. 43, have proved.

27 Therefore will I cause you to go into captivity ¹ beyond Damascus, saith the LORD, ¹ whose name is The God of hosts.

¹ 2 Kings xvii. 6.—¹ Chap. iv. 13.

Verse 27. Therefore will I cause you to go into captivity beyond Damascus, saith the Lord, whose name is, &c.—Ye shall be removed further from your own country, than when Hazael, king of Syria, carried away so many Israelites captives to Damascus, (see 2 Kings x. 32, 33,) and consequently shall have less hopes of returning home. The king of Assyria carried the ten tribes captive as far as Media, 2 Kings xvii. 6. Therefore St. Stephen, in the passage above quoted, expressing rather the sense than the words, reads, I will carry you away beyond Babylon, Media being at a much greater distance than Babylon. Both readings imply, that the captivity of the ten tribes would be far worse than that of the two remaining, and likely to be of much longer duration.

CHAPTER VI.

Here, (1.) The people of Israel and Judah, confiding in their privileges and power, and wallowing in carnal pleasure, are represented as contemning God's threatenings, and the judgments which had already begun to be executed, 1-6. (2.) God shows what terrible calamities hung over their heads, and would certainly fall heavy upon, and overwhelm them and their country, 7-14.

A. M. 3217. B. C. 787. WO ^a to them that ¹ are at ease in Zion, and trust in the

^a Luke vi. 24.—¹ Or, are secure.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VI.

Verse 1. Wo to them that are at ease in Zion—Who are secure, as the margin reads, continuing in their sins, fearless of God's judgments, and resolved to indulge themselves in that voluptuousness and ease which their riches give them an opportunity of enjoying, notwithstanding the evident tokens of God's displeasure against the whole nation, both Israel and Judah. For these and the following words contain a threatening against both kingdoms, although the chief design of this prophecy is against the kingdom of Israel. Because the word יְשׁוּעָה, which our translation renders at ease, signifies also to be insolent, therefore the LXX. translate the clause, Οὐκ εἰσὶν ἐφελουμένης Σιών, Wo unto them that despise Zion, in which sense the words may fitly mountain of Samaria, which are ^a named ^b chief ² of the nations, to belong to the ten tribes, who despised Zion, and the temple, though God had chosen it to place his name there. And trust in the mountain of Samaria—In the strength of their capital city, built on the hill of Samaria. Which are named chief of the nations, to whom the house of Israel came—"Zion, or Jerusalem, and Samaria, were the chief seats of the two kingdoms, whither there was the greatest resort of the whole nation. The Chaldee interprets it, 'Who give names to their children, according to the names of the chief of the heathen, to whom the house of Israel apply themselves for protection.' Thus, in later times, some of the Jews took the names of Alexander, Antipater, Agrippa, and the like, to compliment some great men among the Greeks or Romans of those names."—Lowth.

^b Exod. xix. 5.—^a Or, first-fruits.

A. M. 3217. whom the house of Israel came!
B. C. 737.

2 ° Pass ye unto ^d Calneh,* and see; and from thence go ye to ° Hamath the great: then go down to ^f Gath of the Philistines: ^g be they better than these kingdoms? or their border greater than your border?

3 Ye that ^h put far away the ⁱ evil day, ^k and cause ^l the ³ seat of violence to come near;

4 That lie upon beds of ivory, and ⁴ stretch themselves upon their couches, and eat the lambs out of the flock, and the calves out of the midst of the stall;

° Jeremiah ii. 10.—^d Isa. x. 9.—* Taken about B. C. 794.
2 Kings xviii. 34.—^f 2 Chron. xxvi. 6.—^g Nahum iii. 8.
^h Ezek. xii. 27.—ⁱ Chapter v. 18; ix. 10.—^k Chapter v. 12; Verse 12.

Verse 2. Pass ye unto Calneh—To check their pride and carnal security, the prophet bids them consider the state of those cities in the neighbourhood of Canaan that had been as illustrious in their time as ever Zion and Samaria were, and yet had been destroyed. Calneh, called Calno, (Isa. x. 9,) was a city in the land of Shinar, or the territory of Babylon, (Gen. x. 10,) supposed by St. Jerome to be the same as Ctesiphon; and, it seems, had been taken and destroyed, probably by some king of Assyria, not long before the uttering of this prophecy. Thence go ye to Hamath the great—A city of Syria, on the Orontes. It was conquered by Jeroboam, 2 Kings xiv. 25; and by the Assyrians, chap. xix. 34. It is called here Hamath the great, to distinguish it from another Hamath, mentioned verse 14, which was the northern boundary of Palestine. Then go down to Gath—This city was taken by Uzziah, in whose reign Amos prophesied, 2 Chron. xxvi. 6. Be they better than these kingdoms?—The kingdoms of Judah and Israel? The answer seems to be, Yes; they were better, and their border greater than your border. So that they had more reason to be confident of their safety than you have; yet you see what is become of them, and dare you be secure? Thus Nahum asks Nineveh, (chap. iii. 8,) Art thou better than populous No, that was situate among the rivers, whose rampart was the sea? &c.; yet she was carried away, she went into captivity. By these examples, then, learn to amend your ways, or expect to perish in them. Or, the sense may be, Were these cities more favoured of God than Israel and Judah? or had they a larger and more fertile country to live in, and therefore were more deserving of the wrath of God for their ingratitude? or had they greater riches to tempt the avarice of invaders? In this sense Archbishop Newcome seems to have understood the passage, and therefore supposes the prophet to ask, “Why then do ye worship their gods? and why are ye not grateful to Jehovah?” The prophet, however, seems to have intended rather to check and reprove their presumption than their ingratitude, as appears by the next verse.

5 ^m That ⁿ chant to the sound of ^o A. M. 3217.
the viol, and invent to themselves in- B. C. 737.
struments of music, ⁿ like David;

6 That drink ^o wine in bowls, and anoint themselves with the chief ointments: ° but they are not grieved for the ⁷ affliction of Joseph.

7 ¶ Therefore now shall they go captive with the first that go captive, and the banquet of them that stretched themselves shall be removed.

8 ^p The Lord God hath sworn by himself,

¹ Psa. xciv. 20.—³ Or, habitation.—⁴ Or, abound with superfluities.—^m Isa. v. 12.—^o Or, quaver.—ⁿ 1 Chron. xxiii. 5.
⁶ Or, in bowls of wine.—^o Gen. xxxvii. 25.—⁷ Heb. breach.
^p Jer. li. 14; Heb. vi. 13, 17.

Verses 3-6. Ye that put far away the evil day—Ye who persuade yourselves that God's judgments will not overtake you so soon as the predictions of the prophet import. And cause the seat of violence to come near—Who take every opportunity of perverting justice by pronouncing unrighteous decrees, and of turning the seat of justice into the seat of oppression. Or, this latter clause may be interpreted of the Israelites' bringing the Assyrians, who were to be their destroyers, upon them, by continuing in their sins, and thereby provoking God's wrath more and more; or by their imprudence, such as that of Menahem, who, having got possession of the throne by slaying Shallum, gave Pul, the king of Assyria, a thousand talents of silver, that his hand might be with him to confirm the kingdom in his hand, 2 Kings xv. 19. That lie upon beds of ivory—This and the two following verses are an elegant description of the bad use men too often make of a plentiful fortune; so that it shuts out all serious consideration, and makes them void of compassion toward persons in want and misery, and to regard nothing but their present gratification; eat the lambs out of the flock—The choicest and best of them. That chant to the sound of the viol, &c.—Who, though but private persons, make use of all manner of musical instruments, the same as David did, when he was a king; and employ as great a variety of music for their own diversion as he did in the service of God. That drink wine in bowls—Not in small, but in large vessels; that is, who drink to excess, and in all respects live very luxuriously. But they are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph—Do not humble themselves under God's afflicting hand, nor lay to heart the calamities which the divine judgments have brought, and are still bringing more and more upon the kingdom of Israel, called by the name of Joseph. The words allude to the afflicted state of Joseph, when he was sold by his brethren into Egypt.

Verses 7, 8. Therefore now shall they go captive with the first, &c.—As they were reckoned the first among the people, and claimed the preference in every thing, so now shall they be the first that shall

A. M. 3217. saith the LORD, the God of hosts, I
B. C. 787.

abhor ^a the excellency of Jacob, and hate his palaces: therefore will I deliver up the city with all ^b that is therein.

9 And it shall come to pass, if there remain ten men in one house, that they shall die.

10 And a man's uncle shall take him up, and he that burneth him, to bring out the bones out of the house, and shall say unto him that is by the sides of the house, Is there yet any with thee? and he shall say, No. Then shall he say, ^c Hold thy tongue: ^d for ^e we may not make mention of the name of the LORD.

11 For behold, ^f the LORD commandeth, ^g and be carried into captivity. And the banquet of them that stretched themselves shall be removed—They who indulged themselves in ease and luxury shall have no more costly banquets spread before them: all their, luxurious living shall be at an end. The Lord hath sworn by himself—And will not violate his oath; I abhor the excellency of Jacob—Whatever the kingdoms of Israel and Judah value themselves for is hateful to me, as having been abused by them, and made instrumental in dishonouring me. Or, the words should rather be rendered, I abhor the pride of Jacob. Inhumanity and hardness of heart, as well as many other vices, are generally the companions of pride; and therefore God always expresses, in the Scriptures, the utmost abhorrence of that sin. Therefore I will deliver up the city—Namely, the city of Samaria first, and then that of Jerusalem.

^a Psa. xlvii. 4; Ezek. xxiv. 21; Chap. viii. 7.—^b Heb. the fulness thereof.—^c Chap. v. 13.—^d Chap. viii. 3.—^e Or, they will not, or, have not.

Verses 9–11. If there remain ten men in one house, &c.—Those that escape the hands of the enemy shall die by the pestilence. And a man's uncle (or kinsman) shall take him up—Some friend or relation, whose duty it is to perform the last offices for the deceased, shall take him up directly and burn him: for so it should be rendered, and not, and he that burneth him. The meaning is, that he should not stay to perfume the body with rich ointments, as was the usual custom; nor should he bury it, but burn it to ashes, to prevent infection. To bring out the bones out of the house, &c.—Or rather, that he may bring out, &c., that is, that he may, as soon as possible, cleanse the house by the removal of the body. All that is said here, is strongly expressive of what is the case where a deadly pestilence rages. And shall say unto him that is by the sides of the house—Or near the house, out of which the bones are carried; Is there any yet with thee—Is there any yet living besides thyself belonging to this house? And he shall say, No—All the inhabitants of the house are dead. Then shall he say, Hold thy tongue; for we may not make mention of the name of the Lord—

he will smite the great house with ^h breaches, and the little house with clefts.

12 ¶ Shall horses run upon the rock? will one plough there with oxen? for ⁱ ye have turned judgment into gall, and the fruit of righteousness into hemlock:

13 Ye which rejoice in a thing of naught, which say, Have we not taken to us horns by our own strength?

14 But behold, ^j I will raise up against you a nation, O house of Israel, saith the LORD, the God of hosts; and they shall afflict you from the ^k entering in of Hamath unto the ^l river of the wilderness.

^h Isa. lv. 11.—ⁱ Chap. iii. 15.—^j Or, droppings.—^k Hos. x. 4; Chap. v. 7.—^l Jer. v. 15.—^m Num. xxxiv. 8; 1 Kings viii. 65.—ⁿ Or, valley.

As this clause has no immediate connection with, or relation to, the negative answer contained in the preceding clause, it is to be supposed that when the person has given that answer, and said that there was none left alive in the house, he utters, as is natural, some prayer to God for mercy or deliverance; on which the other speaks to him in this manner: as much as to say, It is in vain now to pray, or make supplication; for God will not now hear us, but we also shall be cut off by this dreadful pestilence, as the rest have been. Archbishop Newcome puts a different sense on the last clause, thus: "Solitude shall reign in the house; and if one is left, he must be silent (see chap. viii. 3) and retired, lest he be plundered of his scanty provisions." For behold, the Lord commandeth—Gives forth his commands to the enemy, namely, the Assyrians, to come against Israel. And he will smite the great house, and the little house, &c.—People of all ranks, high and low, shall be sufferers in the common calamities.

Verse 12. Shall horses run upon the rock?—"Is it possible that horses should run upon the steep and craggy cliffs? So impossible is it that ye Israelites should continue to prosper, while ye remain thus sinful."—Bishop Hall. Or, "as horses and oxen are useless in such places, so are ye evidently useless to God."—Grotius. Several other interpretations are given of this obscure verse. Mr. Scott's is, "It was as perilous to endeavour to reform the people as it would be to ride a race on the top of a craggy rock, where both horses and horsemen would be in danger of being killed; and as vain as to plough there with oxen, when no impression could be made or increase expected." For ye have turned judgment into gall, &c.—Ye have rendered the administration of public justice as bitter as gall, and the fruit of righteousness, or the observance of religious ceremonies, as poisonous as hemlock.

Verses 13, 14. Ye which rejoice in a thing of naught—Ye who place confidence in your strength, which will avail you nothing when God withdraws his blessing from you; which say, Have we not taken to us horns by our strength?—Have we not, by our strength, been victors over our neighbours? This boast seems chiefly founded upon the success which Jeroboam II. had in restoring the ancient dominion of Israel, and recovering it from the Syrians, who had brought them very low: see 2 Kings xiii. 3, 7, and xiv. 15. But behold, I will raise up against you a nation, &c.—The Assyrians were the nation here spoken of, who, it is here denounced, should afflict them from one end of the land to the other; which they accordingly did some time after, making an entire conquest of the country. Hamath was the boundary of the land of Israel to the north: see Num. xxxiv. 8; 2 Kings xiv. 25: and the river of the wilderness, by which is meant the river Nile, or, as it is called, Josh. xv. 47, the river of Egypt, was the southern boundary.

CHAPTER VII.

This chapter represents, (1.) God contending with the Israelites by lesser judgments, and removing them at the prayer of Amos, 1–6; but at last abandoning them, as incorrigible, to utter destruction, 7–9. (2.) Amaziah, the idolatrous priest of Beth-el, accusing the prophet to King Jeroboam, and advising him, and charging him to leave the country and return to Judea, 10–13. (3.) Amos vindicating his office, and denouncing ruin to Amaziah, and his family and nation, 14–17.

A. M. 3217. THUS hath the Lord God showed
B. C. 787. unto me; and behold, he formed

¹ grasshoppers in the beginning of the shooting up of the latter growth; and lo, it was the latter growth after the king's mowings.

2 And it came to pass, that when they had made an end of eating the grass of the land, then I said, O Lord God, forgive, I beseech thee: ^a by ² whom shall Jacob arise? for he is small.

¹ Or, green-worms.—^a Isaiah li. 19; Verse 5.—² Or, who of (or, for) Jacob shall stand?

NOTES ON CHAPTER VII.

Verse 1. Thus hath the Lord showed unto me—The Lord also showed me the following things. Here the prophet mentions the first of five prophetic representations of what was coming upon this people. He formed grasshoppers in the beginning of the latter growth—He appeared to me as bringing a vast multitude of grasshoppers upon the land at the season when the grass begins to shoot again after the first mowing. Though this be spoken in a literal sense of a plague of grasshoppers, yet some commentators think it is to be understood metaphorically, and that by the grasshoppers is meant the army of Pul, king of Assyria, mentioned 2 Kings xv. 19. After the king's mowings—It is supposed that the first crop of grass was set apart for the use of the king's stables.

Verses 2, 3. When they had made an end of eating the grass—With us grasshoppers are not hurtful, but those in our text were locusts, as the word חֲסִידִים, here used, is rendered, Isa. xxxiii. 4: in which sense the word is understood by the Vulgate and Houbigant; see also Nah. iii. 17. By whom shall Jacob arise?—Or, who shall raise up Jacob; for he is small?—If thou suffer these calamities to proceed to extremities, by what means shall the small re-

3 ^b The Lord repented for this: A. M. 3217.
It shall not be, saith the Lord. B. C. 787.

4 ¶ Thus hath the Lord God showed unto me: and behold, the Lord God called to contend by fire, and it devoured the great deep, and did eat up a part.

5 Then said I, O Lord God, cease, I beseech thee: ^c by whom shall Jacob arise? for he is small.

6 The Lord repented for this: This also

^b Deuteron. xxxii. 36; Verse 6; Jonah iii. 10; James v. 16.
^c Verses 2, 3.

mains of the riches and strength of the kingdom be rescued from utter destruction? The Lord repented for this, &c.—The prophet here informs us, that it was represented to him in his vision, that the Lord was pleased to hearken to his earnest supplication, and to promise that the threatened judgment should not proceed to an utter destruction of the whole kingdom. Those who suppose all this to be metaphorically expressed, understand this of Pul's being induced by a sum of money to depart out of the land, as we read 2 Kings xv. 20: but it may be understood of a threatened judgment of locusts and other insects, which was deprecated by the prophet's prayers, and so not executed.

Verses 4–6. The Lord God called to contend by fire, &c.—This represented a sorer judgment than the former, and, in the opinion of some expositors, denoted the invasion of Tiglath-pileser, who carried a great part of Israel away captive, 2 Kings xv. 29, and so was properly represented by a raging fire, which consumed the sea by turning it into vapours, and then devoured a great part of the land. Then said I, O Lord God, cease, I beseech thee, &c.—Here the prophet observes, that upon this judgment being represented to him in his vision, he made supplication to God as he had done before, and that God heark-

A. M. 3217. shall not be, saith the Lord God.
B. C. 787.

7 ¶ Thus he showed me: and behold, the LORD stood upon a wall made by a plumb-line, with a plumb-line in his hand.

8 And the LORD said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? and I said, A plumb-line. Then said the LORD, Behold, ^d I will set a plumb-line in the midst of my people Israel: ^e I will not again pass by them any more:

9 ^f And the high places of Isaac shall be desolate, and the sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste; and ^g I will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.

10 ¶ Then Amaziah ^h the priest of Beth-el sent to ⁱ Jeroboam king of Israel, saying, Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the ^d 2 Kings xxi. 13; Isaiah xxviii. 17; xxxiv. 11; Lam. ii. 8.

^e Chap. viii. 2; Micah vii. 18.—^f Beer-sheba, Gen. xxvi. 25; xlvii. 1; Chapter v. 5; viii. 14.—^g Fulfilled, 1 Kings xv. 10.
^h 1 Kings xii. 32.—ⁱ 2 Kings xiv. 23.

ened to him in this instance also, and promised that this judgment should not be executed, or should have a stop put to it.

Verses 7-9. The Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumb-line—A wall strongly and beautifully built. God's judgments are sometimes represented in Scripture by a line and a plummet, to denote that they are measured out by the exactest rules of justice. Behold, I will set a plumb-line in the midst of my people Israel—I will exactly measure my people Israel; I will take a particular view of the whole kingdom of the ten tribes, and notice how far it is right, or how far it is out of order, and will judge and punish according to their sins. I will not again pass by them any more—I will not any longer pass over their transgressions. The high places of Isaac shall be desolate—The idolatrous altars and groves which they have erected at Beer-sheba, where their holy ancestor Jacob erected an altar to the true God, and devoutly worshipped him, shall be entirely spoiled and made desolate. And the sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste—All the other places in Israel, set apart for idolatrous worship, shall also be entirely destroyed.

Verses 10, 11. Then Amaziah the priest of Beth-el sent to Jeroboam—This was a priest not of the tribe of Levi, but such a one as those were whom Jeroboam I. had consecrated to perform the idolatrous services at Beth-el: see 1 Kings xii. 31. Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst, &c.—That is, in an open and barefaced manner. He represents the prophet as exciting sedition, because he denounced destruction against the kingdom, and threatened the house of Jeroboam. The same crime was objected to Jeremiah, chap. xxvi. 9, 10; to Christ, Luke xxiii. 2; and to St. Paul, Acts xxiv. 5. The land is not able to bear all his words—The friends of the government cannot patiently hear his words, and the enemies of it will take advantage from them house of Israel: the land is not able A. M. 3217

B. C. 787.
to bear all his words.

11 For thus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land.

12 Also, Amaziah said unto Amos, O thou seer, go flee thee away into the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there:

13 But ^k prophesy not again any more at Beth-el: ^l for it is the king's ^m chapel, and it is the ⁿ king's court.

14 ¶ Then answered Amos, and said to Amaziah, I was no prophet, neither was I ^o a prophet's son; ^p but I was a herdsman, and a gatherer of ^q sycamore fruit:

15 And the LORD took me ^r as I followed the ^k Chap. ii. 12.—^l 1 Kings xii. 32; xiii. 1.—^m Or, sanctuary.

ⁿ Heb. house of the kingdom.—^o 1 Kings xx. 35; 2 Kings ii. 5; iv. 38; vi. 1.—^p Chap. i. 1; Zech. xiii. 5.—^q Or, wild figs.
^r Heb. from behind.

to make some disturbance. If he proceed to speak in this manner, the inhabitants will be moved to take up arms against each other. For Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword—This was a perverting of the prophet's words; for he did not prophesy against the king himself, but against his family, or posterity.

Verses 12, 13. Amaziah said, O thou seer, go flee, &c.—Thou that sayest thou art a prophet, get thee hence, where thou signifyest that thou art so much displeased with the actions of the people, and go into the land of Judah—Where it is likely thou wilt be better entertained than thou art here. And there eat bread, &c.—There they will feed thee well, because thou pretendest to be a prophet. Prophesy not at Beth-el, for it is the king's chapel, &c.—This is the place where the king performs his religious worship in person, and often resides here with his court, that he may the better attend upon the service performed at this place; (see 1 Kings xiii. 1;) and therefore thou oughtest to reverence it, and not utter thy sham prophecies here.

Verses 14, 15. I was no prophet—Not originally, or by study, or by any human designation; neither was I a prophet's son—Neither was I bred up at the schools of the prophets; as those usually were who took that office upon them. But I was a herdsman—By breeding and occupation I was, and still am, a herdsman; and a gatherer of sycamore fruit—I got my livelihood also in part by gathering wild figs for those who had occasion for them. The Lord took me, &c.—As I was following my flock, and thinking of nothing else; and said unto me—By an extraordinary irradiation, or impulse of his Divine Spirit; Go, prophesy unto my people—Go, and as a prophet divinely commissioned, reprove, instruct, exhort, and warn my people of the calamities impending over them, and which will assuredly fall upon them, unless they avert them by turning to me in true repentance.

A. M. 3217. flock, and the LORD said unto B. C. 787. me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel.

16 ¶ Now, therefore, hear thou the word of the LORD: Thou sayest, Prophecy not against Israel, and ° drop not thy word against the house of Isaac.

° Ezekiel xxi. 2; Micah ii. 6.—^r Jeremiah xxviii. 12; xxix. 21, 25, 31, 32.

Verses 16, 17. Now, hear thou the word of the Lord—Who hath sent me, and whom thou contradictest; from him I have a message to thee also, which much concerns thee. Thou sayest, Prophecy not against Israel—Thou usest thy power to silence me; therefore thus saith the Lord—Because thou hast so directly and wilfully opposed the Lord; Thy wife shall be a harlot in the city—Shall be treated as a harlot in this very city of Beth-el. The meaning probably is, that she should be abused, or ravished, 17 ^p Therefore thus saith the LORD; A. M. 3217. ^q Thy wife shall be a harlot in the B. C. 787. city, and thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by line; and thou shalt die in a polluted land: and Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land.

^q Isaiah xlii. 16; Lamentations v. 11; Hosea iv. 13; Zechariah xiv. 2.

by the Assyrian soldiers, when they should take Beth-el. Thy land shall be divided by line—Conquerors were used to divide conquered lands in portions among their soldiers, which was done by measuring out every one's part by a line; so that this expression signified, his land should be divided among the enemy. And thou shalt die in a polluted land—Thou shalt be carried captive from thine own country, and die in a land where the inhabitants are idolatrous.

CHAPTER VIII.

In this chapter, (1.) By the vision of a basket of summer fruit, the prophet is shown the certainty and nearness of the destruction of the ten tribes, 1–3. (2.) For their oppression of the poor, profanation of the sabbath, and injustice in traffic, they are threatened with the most ruinous and mournful calamities, 4–10. (3.) For their idolatrous worship they are threatened with an utter deprivation of the word and ordinances of God, 11–14.

A. M. 3217. THUS hath the Lord God showed B. C. 787. unto me: and behold a basket of summer fruit.

2 And he said, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A basket of summer fruit. Then said the LORD unto me, ^a The end is come upon

^a Ezek. vii. 2.—^b Chap. vii. 8.—^c Chap. v. 23.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VIII.

Verses 1, 2. Behold a basket of summer fruit—This symbolically denoted that Israel's sins were now ripe for judgment, and that as the fruit, when it is ripe, is taken from the trees, so, their iniquity being now ripe, they should be taken off the land in which they dwelt. The two Hebrew words, קיץ, kaits, summer fruit, and קץ, kets, an end, have an affinity in their sound. Such paronomasias occur in other passages of Scripture: see Isaiah xxiv. 17; Jer. i. 11. Instead of summer fruit, Houbigant reads, "autumnal fruit, or, fruit of the last season of the year; and so in the next verse, where, instead of the end, he reads the last end, in order to keep up the allusion, and the play of the words in the original: whereby is signified, that as after the autumnal fruits, no others are produced from the earth, or gathered from the tree, so should it come to pass, that the kingdom of Israel should no more produce any fruit, nor reflowerish in the following years. After my people of Israel; ^b I will not A. M. 3217. again pass by them any more. B. C. 787.

3 And ° the songs of the temple ¹ shall be howlings in that day, saith the Lord God: there shall be many dead bodies in every place; ^d they shall cast them forth ² with silence.

¹ Heb. shall howl.—^d Chap. vi. 9, 10.—² Heb. be silent.

Jeroboam II. all things became worse and worse, till the kingdom of Israel was totally destroyed:" see Jer. xxiv.

Verse 3. And the songs of the temple shall be howlings, &c.—Houbigant renders it, And the singers of the palace shall howl, the word הִכִּיל, signifying palace as well as temple; and as Amos prophesied against Israel, not against Judah, the temple, properly so called, could not be meant here. There shall be many dead bodies in every place—In cities, towns, and the country; in all places shall the bloody effects produced by the enemies' sword, and by famine and pestilence, be seen. They shall cast them forth with silence—The enemy will make such slaughter among the people, and the dead will be so numerous, that there will be no opportunity of using public mournings, or lamentations, at funerals, as had been usual in other cases; but the friends of the deceased will be glad to hurry them to their graves with as much silence and privacy as possible.

A. M. 3217. 4 ¶ Hear this, O ye that ^aswallow
B. C. 787. up the needy, even to make the poor of the land to fail,

5 Saying, When will the ³new-moon be gone, that we may sell corn? and ^fthe sabbath,
that we may ⁴set forth wheat, ^gmaking the ephah small, and the shekel great, and ⁵falsifying the balances by deceit?

^a Psalm xiv. 4; Prov. xxx. 14.—³ Or, month.—^f Neh. xiii.
15, 16.—⁴ Heb. open.—^g Mic. vi. 10, 11.

Verses 4-6. Hear, O ye that swallow up the needy—That greedily and cruelly devour such as would have been objects of your compassion, had you been just and merciful as well as rich and great. He alludes to the greater fish swallowing up the lesser. To make the poor of the land to fail—Either to root them out or to enslave them. Saying, When will the new-moon be gone—This was one of their solemn feasts, the use of which they retained with their idolatrous worship; that we may sell corn—It seems they were prohibited during this feast, and probably in their other solemn feasts, from every kind of traffic, even the selling of corn; and these covetous wretches thought the time during which they were so restrained long and tedious, wishing to be again at liberty to trade and get gain. Making the ephah small, and the shekel great—The ephah was the measure whereby they sold corn, &c., containing about one of our bushels. This they made smaller than the just standard, and so cheated in the quantity of what they sold. The shekel was the money they received for the price of their goods, and by weighing this by too heavy a weight, they diminished its real value, and so cheated also in the sum they received. So that both ways they over-reached those that dealt with them, who received less of what they bought than it was their right to receive, and paid more than they ought to pay for it. That we may buy the poor for silver—That we may, by these unjust dealings, soon get the poor so much into our debt, that they may not be able to discharge it, but be obliged to surrender themselves to us as slaves, and that for a very trifling consideration in reality. So that these avaricious and merciless men wished the new-moon and sabbaths to be over, that they might go to market, as it were, and buy the poor; and when these poor owed but for a very trifling article, as suppose a pair of shoes, they would take advantage against them, and make them sell themselves to pay the debt. Or, to buy any thing for a pair of shoes, was a proverbial expression to signify getting it at a very vile, or low price. It was the custom of those times when a man could not discharge his debts, for him to surrender up himself and family to his creditor as bond-servants. By this the rich increased their power, as well as their wealth; and such was their inhumanity, that they practised every art of fraud and extortion to reduce the needy to this miserable condition. Yea, and sell the refuse of the wheat—Not content with de-

6 That we may buy the poor for A. M. 3217.
^b silver, and the needy for a pair of B. C. 787.
shoes; yea, and sell the refuse of the wheat?

7 The LORD hath sworn by ⁱthe excellency of Jacob, Surely ^kI will never forget any of their works.

8 ^lShall not the land tremble for this, and every one mourn that dwelleth therein? and

^a Heb. perverting the balances of deceit, Hos. xii. 7.—^b Chap.
ii. 6.—ⁱ Chap. vi. 8.—^k Hos. viii. 13; ix. 9.—^l Hos. iv. 3.

frauding in the measure and price, ye mix the chaff, or refuse, such as is not fit to make bread, and sell it together with the wheat. This was another kind of oppression; corrupted wares were sold to those that were necessitous.

Verse 7. The Lord hath sworn by the excellency of Jacob—That is, by himself; Surely I will never forget any of their works—God is said to remember men's sins when he punishes them. We may learn by this passage, and many others in Scripture, that however slightly men may think of it, God takes particular notice of, and will certainly punish, all extortions and over-reachings in trade, and more particularly when they are used in regard of the poor. They shall have judgment without mercy, who have showed no mercy. It is to be wished that persons would always consider themselves as the fathers of the poor, when they deal with them; and rather give them measure pressed down and running over, than mete to them with a scanty hand.

Verse 8. Shall not the land tremble—Shall not the state, or government, and all the people of the land, be terribly afraid, and greatly troubled; for this—This, that you have done, O house of Israel, in sinning, and this that God will do in punishing? And every one mourn that dwelleth therein—Shall not all be deeply concerned and distressed, since all have sinned and deserved punishment, and all will suffer in the approaching calamity? Certainly they shall. Observe, reader, those that will not tremble and mourn as they ought for national sins, shall be made to tremble and mourn for national judgments; those that look unconcerned upon the sins of oppressors, which should make them tremble, and upon the miseries of the oppressed, which should make them mourn, God will find out a way to make them tremble at the fury of those that oppress them, and mourn for their own losses and sufferings by it. And it shall rise up wholly as a flood—The LXX. read, with a very small alteration in the Hebrew points, καὶ ἀναβήσεται ὡς ποταμὸς συντελεία, Destruction shall rise up like a flood; that is, the judgment, the calamity of a hostile invasion by the Assyrians, shall be like an inundation, which in a short time overflows a whole country. And it shall be cast out and drowied—The inhabitants of the land shall be cast out of their possessions, or the land itself shall be overwhelmed as by the flood, or rather, the river of Egypt, that is, as Egypt is by the inundation of the river Nile. Thus the Chaldee paraphrase—

A. M. 3217. it shall rise up wholly as a flood: and
B. C. 787. it shall be cast out and drowned, ^m as by the flood of Egypt.

B. C. 791. 9 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord God, ⁿ that I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day:

10 And I will turn your feasts into mourning,
and all your songs into lamentation; ^p and I

^m Chap. ix. 5.—ⁿ Job v. 14; Isaiah xiii. 10; lix. 9, 10; Jer.
xv. 9; Micah iii. 6.—^p Isaiah xv. 2, 3; Jer. xlviii. 37; Ezek.

*He shall make a king come up against it [the land]
with a numerous army like a flood, and he shall drive out the inhabitants thereof, and [the land
itself] shall be drowned as when the flood of Egypt [overflows.]*

Verse 9. I will cause the sun to go down at noon
—Calamitous times are often expressed in the Scriptures by the failing of the light of the sun, and the day's being overspread with darkness. So Israel's sun did begin to go down, as at noon, under the dark cloud of conspiracies and civil wars by Shallum, Menaheem, Pekah, and Hoshea, till it entirely set,
and total darkness came on through the Assyrian
invasions by Pul, Tiglath-pileser, and Shalmanezar, and by the entire desolation and destruction of the country produced thereby. And I will darken the earth—By bringing a thick cloud of troubles and afflictions over it; in the clear day—When they think all is safe, well settled, and hopeful.

Verse 10. I will turn your feasts into mourning
—God commanded the Jews to celebrate their festivals with joy and gladness; but this it would be impossible for them to do under such melancholy circumstances and manifestations of the divine displeasure. And all your songs into lamentation—
The particular psalms and hymns which used to be sung at the great festivals are here alluded to. And I will bring up sackcloth upon all loins—All sorts of persons shall put on mourning. And baldness upon every head—Shaving the head and beard was a sign of the greatest sadness. I will make it as the mourning, rather, as in the mourning of [or for] an only son—That is, a most heavy mourning; for the death of an only son generally occasions the severest grief; and the end thereof as a bitter day—A sorrowful day, which you shall wish you had never seen, shall succeed your dark night. In other words, the calamities shall increase more and more; so that the last part of these grievous times shall be far more distressing than any that had preceded. This undoubtedly was the case, as the carrying them into captivity would occasion a separation of friends from friends, children from parents, wives from husbands, than which it is not easy to conceive any thing more deplorable.

Verse 11. Behold the days come, saith the Lord
—This is spoken of events which were yet at some distance. That I will send a famine in the land, not of bread, &c., but of hearing the words of the will bring up sackcloth upon all loins, A. M. 3217.

and baldness upon every head; ^q and B. C. 787.
I will make it as the mourning of an only son,
and the end thereof as a bitter day.

11 ¶ Behold, the days come, saith the Lord God, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but ^r of hearing the words of the LORD:

12 And they shall wander from sea to sea,

vii. 18; xxvii. 31.—^q Jeremiah vi. 26; Zechariah xii. 10.
^r 1 Sam. iii. 1; Psa. lxxiv. 9; Ezek. vii. 26.

Lord—When Amos prophesied, and for a considerable time after, there were several prophets, and abundant opportunities of hearing the word of the Lord, in season and out of season: they had precept upon precept and line upon line. Prophecy was their daily bread; but they despised it as Israel did the manna in the wilderness; and therefore God threatens that he would hereafter deprive them of this privilege. It appears that there were not so many prophets in the land of Israel, about the time that their destruction came upon them, as there were in the land of Judah; and after the ten tribes
were carried away captive, they saw not their signs;
there were no more any prophets among them; none
to show them How long; Psa. lxxiv. 9. The Jewish church also, after Malachi, had no prophets for many ages. Now, 1st, This was the departure of a great part of their glory: what especially made their nation great and high was, that to them were committed the oracles of God: but when these were taken from them their beauty was stained, and their honour laid in the dust. 2d, This was a token of God's highest displeasure against them: surely he was angry indeed with them, when he would no more speak to them as he had done; and had abandoned them to ruin, when he would no more reprove them for their sins, and call them to repentance by his messengers. 3d, This made all the other calamities that were upon them truly melancholy; that they had no prophets to instruct and comfort them from the word of God, nor to give them any hopeful prospect. We should say at any time, and shall be compelled to say in a time of trouble, that a famine of the word of God is, of all others, the sorest famine
—the heaviest judgment. It is not improbable that this threatening was intended to look further than to the judgment now referred to, even to the blindness which has in part happened to Israel, in the days of the Messiah, and the veil that is on the hearts of the unbelieving Jews. They reject the gospel, and the ministers of it, which God sends to them, and covet to have prophets of their own, as their fathers had; but they shall have none, the kingdom of God being taken from them and given to another people.

Verses 12, 13. And they shall wander from sea to sea—From the sea of Tiberias to the great sea, from one border of the country to another. And from the north even to the east—The prophet omits naming

A. M. 3217. and from the north even to the east ;
B. C. 787. they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the Lord, and shall not find it.

13 In that day shall the fair virgins and young men faint for thirst.

* Hosea iv. 15. —† Deut. ix. 21. —‡ Heb. way, Acts

the south, because the idolaters, to whom he directs his discourse, would choose to inquire anywhere rather than of the true prophets of the Lord, who dwelt in the tribe of Judah, which was situated to the south of the ten tribes. They shall run to and fro, to seek the word of the Lord—To inquire if there be any prophet, any prophecy, any message from God, any divine direction what course to take in their distress—any encouragement to expect deliverance from their calamities, and happier times. In that day shall the fair virgins, &c.—They who are in the bloom of their youth and in the strength of their age, shall faint, and be dispirited like those that want necessary refreshment.

Verse 14. They that swear by the sin of Samaria—That is, by the calf which Jeroboam set up as an object of worship at Beth-el, not far from Samaria, committing a great sin in so doing, and making Israel to sin. Swearing, according to the sense in which the word is here taken, is a solemn invocation of the 14 They that "swear by 'the sin of A. M. 3217.

Samaria, and say, Thy god, O Dan, B. C. 787.
liveth; and, The 'manner "of Beer-sheba liveth; even they shall fall and never rise up again.

ix. 2; xviii. 25; xix. 9, 23; xxiv. 14. —^a Chap. v. 5.

name of God, and an appeal to him; and, as such, is a proper part of divine worship, (see Deut. vi. 13, and x. 20,) and therefore ought not to be given to idols. And say, Thy God—Or, As thy God, O Dan, liveth—That is, who say in the way of an oath, As the god who is worshipped in Dan liveth: at Dan was placed another of Jeroboam's calves. And, The manner of Beer-sheba liveth—The LXX. render it, the god of Beer-sheba liveth; expressing the sense rather than the words of the original. The way or manner signifies the same with the way of worship; so that the people swore by the religion of Beer-sheba, or the manner of worship used there, which they looked upon as sacred. Thus the Papists swear by the mass: but they who thus give that honour to idols which is due to God alone, will find the God whom they thus affront is made their enemy. And they shall fall, &c.—And the gods they serve cannot raise them up; so that without better help they shall never rise again.

CHAPTER IX.

In this chapter we have, (1.) Judgments threatened which sinners shall not escape, 1–4; which shall be inflicted by an Almighty power, 5, 6; and are deserved by the people, 7, 8; which nevertheless should not be the utter ruin of their nation, for a remnant of pious persons should escape them, while the wicked should perish, 9, 10. (2.) Mercy, a restoration, and great prosperity promised, 11–15; which blessings were to be bestowed in the latter days, the days of the Messiah, Acts xv. 16; and with these comfortable promises, after the foregoing rebukes and threatenings, the book concludes.

A. M. 3217. I SAW the LORD standing upon the
B. C. 787. altar: and he said, Smite the lintel of the door, that the posts may shake:
and ² cut ^a them in the head all of them; and

I will slay the last of them with the A. M. 3217.
sword: ^b he that fleeth of them shall B. C. 787.
not flee away, and he that escapeth of them
shall not be delivered.

¹ Or, chapter, or, knop. —² Or, wound them.

^a Psa. lxxviii. 21; Hab. iii. 13. —^b Chap. ii. 14.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IX.

Verse 1. I saw—Namely, in a vision or ecstasy; the Lord—That is, the glory and majesty of the Lord, as Isaiah did, chapter vi. 1, or a bright glorious light, indicating the presence of God; standing upon the altar—Resting upon, or over the altar. The altar of burnt-offering seems to be meant here, and the glory of God resting upon it to have denoted that his justice demanded the lives of the sinners here spoken of to be cut off. "He stands upon the altar," says Henry, "to show that the ground of his controversy with this people was their profanation of his holy things: here he stands to avenge the quarrel of his altar; as also to signify, that the sin of the house of Israel, like that of the house of Eli, should not be purged with sacrifice nor offering for ever." And he said—To an angel, as Jerome explains it; or rather God here speaks to his people's enemies, and gives them a commission to destroy them and their temple. Smite the lintel of the door—This signified that the temple, which was then represented to the prophet, should be destroyed. Whether this was the temple at Beth-el, or that of Jerusalem, is not quite certain. The Chaldee understands the vision of the kingdom of Judah; if so, the temple at Jerusalem is undoubtedly intended. And even if the vision relates, as most suppose, to the kingdom of Israel, yet still the temple of Jerusalem may be

A. M. 3217. 2 ° Though they dig into hell,
B. C. 787. thence shall my hand take them;
d though they climb up to heaven, thence will
I bring them down :

3 And though they hide themselves in the top of Carmel, I will search and take them out thence ; and though they be hid from my sight
in the bottom of the sea, thence will I command
the serpent, and he shall bite them :

4 And though they go into captivity before their enemies, ° thence will I command the sword, and it shall slay them : and f I will set

c Psalm cxxxix. 8.—d Job xx. 6; Jeremiah li. 53; Obad. 4.
e Lev. xxvi. 33; Deut. xxviii. 65; Ezek. v. 12.—f Lev. xvii.
10; Jer. xlv. 11.

here spoken of, and the scene be laid there, because Israel had forsaken this altar and temple and set up others in opposition to them; and here God, in his jealousy, appears prepared to take vengeance. Possibly, the vision might also be designed to intimate his future departure from Judah too. There Ezekiel, chapter ix. 2, saw the slaughter-men stand. By the lintel of the door, the chapter, knop, or ornament that was upon the lintel, is intended, namely, of the door of the gate of the temple, or possibly of the gate that led into the priests' court. *That the posts
may shake*—The posts were the strength and beauty of the gate, and by these the princes, the door-posts
as it were of the nation, are supposed to be represented, as the king is by the lintel of the door. And cut them, wound them deep in the head—That is,
the people who were represented in the vision as standing in the court of the temple. He says in the head, more fully to signify the destroying of the chief or heads of this sinful people. All of them—
Spare not one of them; let the destruction be general.
And I will slay the last of them—That is, their posterity and their families—them, and all that remain
of them, till it come to the last man. Observe, reader, there is no living for those of whom God hath said,
I will slay them; no standing before his sword. *He
that fleeth of them shall not flee away*—That is,
shall not escape. He that escapeth of them shall not be delivered—That is, he that escapeth in battle,
or escapes one or two, or even several judgments,
shall, nevertheless, not escape finally; but shall fall
in some other way, or be made captive. The greatest precaution, and the highest station in life, will not avail a man any thing when God is resolved to punish. This is intended for a warning to all that provoke the Lord to jealousy: let sinners read it and tremble. As there is no fighting it out with God, so there is no fleeing from him. His judgments, when they come with commission, as they will overpower
the strongest, who think to withstand them, so they will overtake the swiftest, who think to outrun
them.

Verses 2-4. Though they dig into hell, &c.—
Here the subject is enlarged upon to impress it more deeply on the minds of all that read or hear it.

mine eyes upon them for evil, and A. M. 3217.
not for good. B. C. 787.

5 And the Lord God of hosts is he that toucheth the land, and it shall e melt, h and all that dwell therein shall mourn: and it shall rise up wholly like a flood; and shall be drowned, as by the flood of Egypt.

6 It is he that buildeth his i stories k l in the heaven, and hath founded his m troop in the earth; he that n calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth: 1 The Lord is his name.

g Isa. lxii. 1, 2; Heb. ii. 10; Micah i. 4.—h Chapter viii. 8.
i Or, spheres.—k Heb. ascensions.—l Psa. civ. 3, 13.—m Or,
bundle.—n Chap. v. 8.—1 Chap. iv. 13.

Though they hide themselves in the deepest holes or caverns of the earth, (see Isa. ii. 19,) or take refuge in the highest fortresses, they shall not escape
my vengeance, but shall be brought forth to destruction or captivity. And though they hide themselves in the top of Carmel—There were great caves formed by nature in the tops of some mountains, where men used to secure themselves in the times of danger. Such was the cave in a mountain of the wilderness of Ziph. I will search and take them out thence—Neither the thickest bushes nor the darkest caves shall serve to hide them. Though they be hid in the bottom of the sea—The Chaldee reads, in the islands of the sea; but the expression is rather to be understood metaphorically, as signifying that they should not, by any means whatsoever, be able to escape the calamities which God had determined to bring upon them. The word rendered serpent in our translation, is in some versions rendered a whale. Without doubt it should be translated here by the name of some great sea
animal. And though they go into captivity, thence will I command the sword, &c.—The same judgment is denounced against them in the passages referred to in the margin.

Verses 5, 6. And—Or, for, the Lord toucheth the land, and it shall melt—The least token of God's displeasure is sufficient to put the whole frame of nature out of order. See the margin. And when God's hand is visibly stretched out against a people,
they become altogether dispirited; the stoutest men
lose their courage, their hearts failing them for fear,
and out of a dreadful expectation of the miseries
which are coming upon them. See the explanation of the next clause, chap. viii. 8. *He that buildeth
his stories in the heavens*—This is an awful description of God's power, discovering itself in the works of the creation, particularly in his making several regions of the air as so many apartments which lead to the highest heavens, the seat of his glory. Archbishop Newcome renders it, He buildeth his upper chambers in the heavens; alluding to the circumstance of the chief and most ornamented apartments
in the East being upper rooms. And hath founded his troop in the earth—Or, as the old English trans-

A. M. 3217. 7 Are ye not as children of the
B. C. 787. Ethiopians unto me, O children of Israel? saith the LORD. Have not I brought up Israel out of the land of Egypt? and the Philistines from ^a Caphtor, and the Syrians from ^o Kir?

8 Behold, ^p the eyes of the Lord God are upon the sinful kingdom, and I ^q will destroy it from off the face of the earth; saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob,
saith the LORD.

^m Jer. xlvii. 4.—ⁿ Deut. ii. 23; Jer. xlvii. 4.—^o Chap. i. 5.
^p Verse 4.—^q Jer. xxx. 11; xxxi. 35, 36; Obad. 16; 17.

lation renders the clause, And hath laid the foundation of his globe of elements in the earth; the word rendered troop being taken to signify the collection of elements and other creatures, which furnish the earth, expressed by the word צבא, host,
Gen. ii. 1. Many learned interpreters, however,
render the word his storehouses, supposing that there is an allusion to repositories in the lower parts of houses, or to such as were sometimes dug in the fields. Thus Capellus: The heaven is, as it were,
God's place of dwelling, his principal apartment;
the earth is that to him which the cellars are in a large house. He that calleth for the waters, &c.— See on chap. v. 8. "The power and sure vengeance of the Deity," says Bishop Newcome, "are very sublimely described in this and the four preceding verses."

Verse 7. Are ye not as the children of the Ethiopians, &c.—The prophet, to take away from the Israelites their false confidence, that the Lord was too much interested in their preservation to permit their total ruin, says, that in consequence of their idolatry and other sins, they were no more esteemed by him than the Ethiopians, a barbarous and cruel race of people: as if he had said, You have rendered yourselves unworthy the name of my people; you have renounced, by your idolatry, the privileges of my covenant; you have given up me, and I give you up in my turn. You may think my former kindness in delivering you out of the Egyptian bondage, and giving you the land of Canaan,
obliges me still to continue to be your protector.
But I have showed the like favour to other nations, particularly to the Philistines, who had their original from Caphtor, and afterward dispossessed the old inhabitants of Palestine, and dwelt in their stead;
and to the Syrians, whom I brought from Kir; and yet against these very nations have I denounced my judgments for their sins.

Verses 8-10. The eyes of the Lord are upon the sinful kingdom—See verse 4. Saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob—God still promises to preserve a remnant in the midst of his heaviest judgments, that he may perform the promises made to their fathers. Lo, I will sift the house of Israel among all nations—I will mingle, or scatter, the Israelites among other nations, just as good

9 For lo, I will command, and I will ^{A. M. 3217}
^{B. C. 787.} sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least ⁷ grain fall upon the earth.

10 All the sinners of my people shall die by the sword, ^r which say, The evil shall not overtake nor prevent us.

11 ¶ ^s In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen, and ^t close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins,
and I will build it as in the days of old:

⁶ Heb. cause to move.—⁷ Heb. stone.—^r Chap. vi. 3.—^s Acts
xv. 16, 17.—^t Heb. hedge, or, wall.

and bad grain are mingled in a sieve; but will so order it, that none of the good grain shall be lost or fall to the ground. Though the good shall be involved in the calamities which are sent to punish the wicked, yet shall they be preserved from destruction. All the sinners of my people shall die by the sword—Those unbelieving and obstinately wicked men who have paid no regard to the warnings of the prophets, and have given no credit to their predictions, shall all perish by the sword, or by some judgment sent by me. Which say, The evil shall not overtake us—Who indulge themselves in their carnal security, without any dread or apprehension of the divine judgments denounced against them.

Verse 11. In that day—In this and the following verses, to the end of the chapter, we have a most consolatory conclusion of this prophecy in sundry evangelical promises, after so many very severe and sharp menaces. The phrase, in that day, signifies here the same as afterward, or, after this, for so St. James interprets it when quoting this very verse, Acts xv.
16. And there are other places of Scripture where then, or in that day, signifies afterward. Will I raise up the tabernacle of David—This promise seems, at least in the first place, to be intended of the return of the Jews from the land of their captivity,
their resettlement in Judea, rebuilding Jerusalem,
and attaining to that height of power and glory
which they enjoyed in the days of the Maccabees.
This restoration was an event so extraordinary, and the hope of it so necessary to be maintained in the minds of the Jewish people, in order to their support
under the calamity of their seventy years' captivity, that God was pleased to foretel it by the mouth of all his prophets. And though we suppose the prophesy before us to appertain chiefly to the kingdom of Israel, yet a promise of a future restoration was no less proper and necessary, in order to their encouragement, to be annexed to God's threatenings against them: because it was his purpose to restore Israel in general, that is, the whole twelve tribes,
and to make them one nation, as they were before their unhappy division. The edict of Cyrus was general, giving liberty to all the posterity of Jacob, wheresoever dispersed, to return to Judea. And many of the ten tribes certainly did return, though the main body of those who returned consisted of

A. M. 3217. 12 ¹That they may possess the
B. C. 787. remnant of ²Edom, and of all the heathen ³which are called by my name, saith
the LORD that doeth this.

13 Behold, ⁴the days come, saith the LORD,
that the ploughman shall overtake the reaper,
and the treader of grapes him that ¹⁰soweth
seed; ⁷and the mountains shall drop ¹¹sweet
wine, and all the hills shall melt.

14 ⁸And I will bring again the captivity

¹ Obadiah 19.—² Numbers xxiv. 18.—³ Heb. upon whom my name is called.—⁴ Lev. xxvi. 5.—¹⁰ Heb. draweth forth.
⁷ Joel iii. 18.

the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin. This prophecy, however, must also be extended to the days of the Messiah, and to the calling of the Gentiles to the knowledge of the true God: and so St. James expounds it, Acts xv. 16; for this was, emphatically speaking, raising up the tabernacle of David, both in the person of Christ, who is frequently styled David, and the seed of David in the prophets, and also in respect to what peculiarly distinguished David and Israel in God's sight, namely, their having the knowledge of the true God, and worshipping of him alone.

Verse 12. That they may possess the remnant of Edom—This the restored Jews did in the time of Hyrcanus, when they made an entire conquest of Edom, as Josephus relates. And of all the heathen (or nations) which are called by my name—Or rather, which have been called by my name; for so it is rendered in other versions. The Ishmaelites, Ammonites, Moabites, and other neighbouring nations, were in the beginning worshippers of the true God, as being descendants from Abraham, Lot, &c., with whom the knowledge of the true God was preserved. And the Jews subdued a considerable part of these nations in the times of the Maccabees. But this is also a prophecy of setting up the kingdom of the Messiah, and bringing in the Gentiles.

Verse 13. Behold the days come—Here we have another promise, literally to be understood of the abundant plenty which God would bestow on the returned captives, and mystically of the abundant grace given and blessings conferred in gospel days. That the ploughman shall overtake the reaper—He who breaks up the ground, and prepares it for the seed, shall be ready to tread on the heels of the reaper; who shall have a harvest so large, that before he can gather it all in, it shall be time to plough the ground again. And the treader of grapes him that soweth seed—This is to be understood in the same of my people of Israel, and ⁵they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them.

15 And I will plant them upon their land, and ⁶they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the LORD thy God.

¹¹ Or, new wine.—⁵ Jeremiah xxx. 3.—⁶ Isaiah lxi. 4; lxx. 21; Ezek. xxxvi. 33-36.—⁷ Isaiah lx. 21; Jer. xxxii. 41; Ezekiel xxxiv. 28; Joel iii. 20.

sense as the foregoing clause: so great shall their vintage be, that before the treader of grapes can have finished their work, the seedsman shall be sowing his seed against the next season. And the mountains shall drop sweet wine—The vineyards shall be so fruitful, and shall produce such abundance of grapes, that wine shall appear to be as plentiful as if it ran down from the mountains. And all the hills shall melt—Hebrew, shall flow. The meaning is, that they should afford such plenty of rich feeding to the cattle, that they should in consequence thereof give a large quantity of milk. The parallel expression to this, in the prophecy of Joel, is, The hills shall flow with milk. As these predictions were not fulfilled in their literal sense between the time of the return of the Jews from Babylon and the coming of Christ, it is evident they are either to be figuratively understood of gospel blessings, or, if taken in their literal sense, they respect the happy state of things during the millennium, which may be supposed to begin after the future restoration of the Jews to their own country. See notes on Joel iii. 18. The prophets, it may be observed, frequently describe the days of the Messiah in terms similar to those which the poets used in describing the golden age.

Verses 14, 15. I will bring again the captivity of my people—I will restore them to their own country, and settle them in it. See the following verse, and notes on Isa. xi. 12; and Ezek. xxviii. 25. They shall build the waste cities, &c.—Compare the texts referred to in the margin. This and the following part of the verse contains a promise that they should enjoy the fruit of their labours, in opposition to that curse denounced against them, chap. v. 11; Deut. xxviii. 30, that they should build houses and not dwell in them. I will plant them, &c., they shall no more be pulled up—This part of the prophecy will receive its completion on the future restoration of the Jews to their own land.

THE BOOK OF OBADIAH.

ARGUMENT.

WE have no certain information in the Scriptures, or elsewhere, concerning the life or death of this prophet, of the time when he lived, or of his country or mission. It has been generally thought, indeed, that he was cotemporary with Hosea, Joel, and Amos; at least this was the opinion of St. Jerome, Grotius, Huetius, and Dr. Lightfoot. But the reason which they allege for it is only the supposition that the compilers of the Old Testament canon had a regard to the order of time in their placing of the books of the minor prophets. But this reason, as Lowth justly observes, is of little force, since we find Jonah placed the fifth in order, nay, the sixth, in the Greek copies, who was confessedly more ancient than any of those that are placed before him. The most probable opinion seems to be, that he was cotemporary with Jeremiah and Ezekiel, and prophesied about the time of the taking of Jerusalem; or, as Archbishop Newcome thinks, between that time and the destruction of Idumea by Nebuchadnezzar; which latter event probably took place a very few years after the former. It is certain he foretels the destruction of Edom, and that in doing this he uses several expressions which Jeremiah had used before him, speaking upon that subject. Compare verses 1, 8, with Jeremiah xlix. 9–11. Ezekiel agrees with Jeremiah and Obadiah, in assigning the same reason for the judgments threatened against the Edomites, namely, their insulting over the Jews in the time of their distress.

After the preface, 1, we have, (1,) Threatenings against Edom, 2–16. (2,) Gracious promises to Israel, 17–21.

A. M. 3417.
B. C. 587. THE vision of Obadiah. Thus saith the Lord God ^a concerning Edom; ^b We have heard a rumour from the Lord, and an ambassador is sent among the heathen, Arise ye, and let us rise up against her in battle.

2 Behold, I have made thee small among the heathen: thou art greatly despised.

^a Isaiah xxi. 11; xxxiv. 5; Ezek. xxv. 12, 13, 14; Joel iii. 19; Mal. i. 3.—^b Jer. xlix. 14.—^c 2 Kings xiv. 7.

NOTES ON OBADIAH.

Verses 1–4. The vision of Obadiah—The name of this prophet signifies, a servant, or a worshipper, of the Lord. Such he undoubtedly was, and also a prophet, but what he was in other respects we are not informed. It is not improbable that he had other visions, or revelations, from God, besides this which is here recorded, but this only has been preserved for the benefit of future ages. Thus saith the Lord—This declaration includes his commission and authority to prophesy, together with the certainty of what he declares; concerning Edom—Or, against

3 ¶ The pride of thy heart hath ^a deceived thee, thou that dwellest in ^b the clefts ^c of the rock, whose habitation is high; ^d that saith in his heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground?

4 ^e Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle, and though thou ^f set thy nest among the stars, thence will I bring thee down, saith the Lord.

^d Isaiah xiv. 13, 14, 15; Rev. xviii. 7.—^e Job xx. 6; Jer. xlix. 16; li. 53; Amos ix. 2.—^f Hab. ii. 9.

Edom; that is, both the people and the country, so named from their progenitor Esau, called Edom, Gen. xxv. 30. This country, which was a part of Arabia Petræa, is called Idumea, Isa. xxxiv. 5, 6. We—That is, other prophets, as well as I, have heard a rumour—Not an uncertain report, but a true and important revelation from God. And an ambassador is sent among the heathen—Or nations. For an explanation of this and the three following verses, see notes on Jer. xlix. 14–16, where nearly the same words occur; only what Jeremiah speaks in the singular number, is expressed here in the

A. M. 3417. B. C. 587. 5 If ^g thieves came to thee, if robbers by night, (how art thou cut off!) would they not have stolen till they had enough? if the grape-gatherers came to thee, ^h would they not leave ¹ some grapes?

6 How are the things of Esau searched out! how are his hidden things sought up!

7 All the men of thy confederacy have brought thee even to the border: ² the ⁱ men that were at peace with thee have deceived thee, and prevailed against thee; ³ they that eat thy bread have laid a wound under thee: ^k there is none understanding ⁴ in him.

^g Jer. xlix. 9.—^h Deut. xxiv. 21; Isaiah xvii. 6; xxiv. 13. ⁱ Or, gleanings.—² Heb. the men of thy peace.—³ Jer. xxxviii. 22.—⁴ Heb. the men of thy bread.—^k Isa. xix. 11, 12.—⁴ Or, of it.—¹ Job v. 12, 13; Isa. xxix. 14; Jer. xlix. 7.

plural, to intimate that Obadiah had received the same commission from God which was signified to Jeremiah before. I have made thee small among the heathen—Or, nations. Thou art contemptible in the sight of the Chaldeans and their confederates, who think they can easily subdue thee. “Idumea was a country, if compared with the dominions of flourishing states, very moderate in extent, and inconveniently situated. The land of Moab occupied the eastern part of the sea of Sodom. Next to this country Idumea turned toward the south; though it did not border on all Canaan southward, but only on its eastern part. The rest lay open to Arabia Petrea, by which Idumea was situated southward, made a part of it, and went far into it.”—Vitringa, on Isa. xxxiv. 6. “The country of the Idumeans was properly circumscribed by that mountainous tract which enclosed Canaan to the south near the sea of Sodom, as appears from the whole sacred history: whence mount Hor, situated there, is said to have been on the edge, border, or extremity of the land of Edom, Num. xx. 23. It is true, that about the time of Solomon, the Idumeans occupied some part of the Elanitic gulf of the Red sea, whence a tract of that coast was called the land of Edom, 1 Kings ix. 26. But all the prophets who speak of Edom about these times, restrain their lands to mount Seir, in the tract which I have marked out. Vitringa, on Isa. xxi. 1.”—Archbishop Newcome. The pride of thy heart hath deceived thee, &c.—Thou valuest thyself too much upon the strength of thy situation, being placed among rocks which thou thinkest inaccessible by the enemy. That saith in his heart, Who shall bring me down?—Namely, from those lofty rocks in which I dwell? Who can climb up to them but myself? Or who can find out the way into the secret caverns where I have made my habitation? Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle, &c.—Upon the highest mountains, that seem to reach up to heaven; thence will I bring thee down—From thy height of power and pre-eminence.

Verses 5–9. If thieves come unto thee—See note on Jer. xlix. 9. How are his hidden things sought

8 ¹ Shall I not in that day, saith A. M. 3417. the LORD, even destroy the wise men B. C. 587. out of Edom, and understanding out of the mount of Esau?

9 And thy ^m mighty men, O ⁿ Teman, shall be dismayed, to the end that every one of the mount of Esau may be cut off by slaughter.

10 ¶ For thy ^o violence against thy brother Jacob, shame shall cover thee, and ^p thou shalt be cut off for ever.

11 In the day that thou stoodest on the other side, in the day that the strangers ^q carried away captive his forces, and foreigners entered into up!—Those treasures and riches which he took all possible care to conceal, that they might not be discovered by the enemy. All the men of thy confederacy have brought thee even to the border—Thy confederates marched out with thee, until thou wast come to the borders of thy country, and then they perfidiously joined with the enemy's forces, and thereby deceived thee. And prevailed against thee—Namely, treacherously. They that eat thy bread have laid a wound under thee—Those that were maintained at thy cost, as thine allies, have given thee a secret blow. There is none understanding—Thou wast not aware of it. Shall I not, in that day, even destroy the wise men, &c.—At that time, when these evils shall come upon them, their prudence and skill shall altogether forsake them, and the wisest among them shall not know what to do, or shall give unsatisfactory, or foolish, counsel. When God designs a people for destruction, he causes such circumstances to arise, such a multiplicity of dangers, and so unexpectedly, to surround them, that their greatest wisdom is confounded, and the most skillful among them are quite at a loss how to act. See note on Jer. xlix. 7. And thy mighty men, O Teman, shall be dismayed, &c.—Teman was one of the grandsons of Esau, after whom some city and district in Idumea was named. Here it seems to be used to signify the whole country of Idumea. Certain it is that the Idumeans were looked upon as a strong and valiant people. Josephus says, they went as unconcernedly and as cheerfully into battle as to a banquet; but here it is threatened that a panic fear should seize upon this courageous nation, so that they should be entirely discouraged, and not able to stand against their enemies, or defend themselves; the consequence of which would be, a great slaughter of them.

^m Psal. lxxvi. 5; Amos ii. 16.—ⁿ Jer. xlix. 7.—^o Genesis xxvii. 11; Psalm cxxxvii. 7; Ezekiel xxv. 12; xxxv. 5; Amos i. 11.—^p Ezekiel xxxv. 9; Malachi i. 4.—^q Or, carried away his substance.

Verses 10, 11. For thy violence against thy brother Jacob—Because of the injury thou hast done to the people of Judea, who are descended from Jacob, the brother of Esau, your progenitor: see note on Amos i. 11. Shame shall cover thee—Contempt and reproach shall be cast upon thee by all that hear of thy conduct; and thou shalt be cut off for ever—So

A. M. 3417. his gates, and ^a cast lots upon Jerusalem, even thou wast as one of them. B. C. 587.

12 But ^e thou shouldest not have ^r looked on ^s the day of thy brother in the day that he became a stranger; neither shouldest thou have ^t rejoiced over the children of Judah in the day of their destruction; neither shouldest thou have ^v spoken proudly in the day of distress.

13 Thou shouldest not have entered into the gate of my people in the day of their calamity; yea, thou shouldest not have looked on their affliction in the day of their calamity, nor have laid hands on their ⁸ substance in A. M. 3417 the day of their calamity; B. C. 587.

14 Neither shouldest thou have stood in the cross-way, to cut off those of his that did escape; neither shouldest thou have ⁹ delivered up those of his that did remain in the day of distress.

15 ^u For the day of the LORD is near upon all the heathen: ^x as thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee: thy reward shall return upon thine own head.

16 ^y For as ye have drunk upon B. C. 585. my holy mountain, so shall all the

^a Joel iii. 3; Nahum iii. 10.—^e Or, do not behold, &c. ^r Psalm liv. 7; lix. 10; xcii. 11; cxii. 8; Micah iv. 11; vii. 10. ^s Psa. xxxvii. 13; cxxxvii. 7.—^t Job xxxi. 29; Micah vii. 8; Prov. xvii. 5; xxiv. 17, 18.

⁷ Heb. magnified thy mouth.—⁸ Or, forces.—⁹ Or, shut up, Psa. xxxi. 8.—^u Ezek. xxx. 3; Joel iii. 14.—^x Ezek. xxxv. 15; Hab. ii. 8.—^y Jeremiah xxv. 28, 29; xlix. 12; Joel iii. 17; 1 Pet. iv. 17.

great a slaughter shall be made of thy inhabitants, that thou shalt never recover it; and at last thou shalt be quite dispossessed of thy country: see note on Ezek. xxxv. 7-9. In the day that thou stoodest on the other side—Or, in the day that thou stoodest against him. That strangers carried away captive his forces—This may refer to the time when the Syrians spoiled Judea, overcame the Jewish forces, and made many captives of them. And foreigners entered into his gates—That is, into his cities. This seems to be spoken of the cities of Judea, which the Syrians took when they had spoiled the country, and laid siege to Jerusalem, as recorded in 2 Kings xvi. 5. And cast lots upon Jerusalem—Either this means that the Syrians and Israelites, whose armies were joined together, cast lots which of them should make the first assault on that city: or else, they cast lots about the spoils of Jerusalem, before they had taken it, making themselves quite sure of it, though the event proved they were mistaken. Or, as many learned men think, the taking of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar is here referred to; an event at which, as we learn from Psa. cxxxvii., the Edomites rejoiced: and then probably lots were cast what captives should fall to the share of each of the commanders. Thou wast as one of them—Thou, that wast a brother by birth, wast as cruel and injurious in thy actions as these strangers, and joined with them in every thing against thy brother.

Verse 12. But thou shouldest not have looked upon the day of thy brother—On his evil day. Thou oughtest not to have taken pleasure at the sight of thy brother's calamity. So the expression of looking upon an enemy signifies, in many passages of Scripture, the beholding his fall with satisfaction: see the margin. In the day that he became a stranger—When he was driven from his own inheritance, and went captive into a strange land. Neither shouldest thou have rejoiced over the children of Judah, &c.—In the day when many of them were slain; nor have spoken proudly in the day of distress—Neither shouldest thou have insulted over them when they were in calamity, boasting of thy own felicity, while they were groaning under misery.

Verses 13, 14. Thou shouldest not have entered into the gate of my people, &c.—Thou shouldest not have entered into the cities of my people by way of spoiling them, or of feasting thy eyes with the slaughter, when their enemies made themselves masters of them. Neither shouldest thou have stood in the cross-way—Or, in the goings forth; to cut off those that did escape—Thou shouldest not have posted thyself in the passages that were left unguarded by the enemy, in order to cut off those who endeavoured to escape by such ways. Neither have delivered up those—Or shut up those, as the margin reads it, that did remain—The word כָּנַר, here used, signifies to shut up all the ways of escaping to the conquered, in order to deliver them up to the enemy.

Verses 15, 16. For the day of the Lord is near upon all the heathen—The sacred writers call that the day of any persons, in which they do or suffer any thing very remarkable. Thus, verse 13, the day of thy brother, signifies that time in which he was remarkably afflicted. So the day of the Lord signifies that time in which he does something extraordinary; and here it means the time in which God would inflict a remarkable vengeance upon the enemies of Judah. By all the heathen, is meant all those nations who, together with the Idumeans, insulted over the calamities of the Jews, or had waged war against them without any just cause. As thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee—As thou hast rejoiced at the calamities of others, so shall others rejoice at thine: and as thou hast spoiled and plundered thy neighbours, so shalt thou be served thyself: see the margin. For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, &c.—Here is a sudden apostrophe to the Jewish people, who are here addressed. The sense is, As ye, who dwell on the mount which is sacred to me, have drunk of the cup of my indignation, or have suffered grievous calamities from my just displeasure, so also shall the nations among whom I am not known. They shall drink and

A. M. 3417. heathen drink continually, yea, they
B. C. 587. shall drink, and they shall ¹⁰ swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been.

17 ¶ ^a But upon mount Zion ^a shall be ¹¹ deliverance, and ¹² there shall be holiness; and the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions.

18 And the house of Jacob ^b shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle in swallow down—Or, they shall drink large draughts of it, even to the very dregs. By this is expressed their suffering calamities in an extraordinary degree. They shall be as though they had not been—They shall be utterly destroyed, so that there shall be no remains of them.

¹⁰ Or, sup up.—^a Joel ii. 32.—^a Amos ix. 8.—¹¹ Or, they that escape.—¹² Or, it shall be holy, Joel iii. 17.

Ver. 17, 18. But upon mount Zion shall be deliverance—Literally taken, this refers to the Jews; mystically, to the gospel church. By deliverance here may be first meant an asylum, or place of refuge, to escape the evil; and it may be spoken with a reference to the invasion of Judea by Sennacherib, and his being prevented by God from taking Jerusalem, (though he took all the other fenced cities of Judah,) so that all persons of the neighbouring places found a deliverance, or an asylum, there; and so escaped falling into the enemies' hands. It may also, perhaps, chiefly refer to the restoration of the Jews from the captivity of Babylon. But yet this promise was more remarkably verified in the time of the first preaching of the gospel, when God's law went forth out of Zion, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem, Psa. c. 2; Isa. ii. 3; and when, through believing in Christ, and embracing the gospel, the Christians escaped the destruction that came upon the Jewish nation, concerning which see note on Joel ii. 32. And there shall be another and more glorious completion of it at the restoration of the Jewish nation, which is foretold in this and the following verses, as it is in many other places. And there shall be holiness—So far as this refers to the Jews returned from captivity, it signifies that the temple, the city, and the people should be holy to the Lord. But the words more especially refer to gospel days; and are intended to express the holiness of the Christian Church, particularly after the conversion of the Jews, and during the millennium. The house of Jacob shall possess their possessions—Shall remain in possession of their own land or territories. The house of Jacob shall be a fire, &c.—This was fulfilled in part by the Jews under Hyrcanus and the Maccabees, who made great slaughter of the Idumeans; here expressed by the strong image of their being the fire and flame, and the Idumeans stubble. But the passage will be more fully accomplished when the Lord shall make his church as a fire to all its enemies.

them and devour them; and there ^{A. M. 3417.} shall not be any remaining of the ^{B. C. 587.} house of Esau; for the Lord hath spoken it.

19 And they of the south ^c shall possess the mount of Esau; ^d and they of the plain the Philistines: and they shall possess the fields of Ephraim, and the fields of Samaria: and Benjamin shall possess Gilead.

20 And the captivity of this host of the children of Israel shall possess that of the Canaanites, even ^e unto Zarephath; and the

^b Isaiah x. 17; Zech. xii. 6.—^c Amos ix. 11.—^d Zeph. ii. 7.
^e 1 Kings xvii. 9, 10.

Verse 19. And they of the south shall possess the mount of Esau—The Jews that dwell in the southern parts of Judea, next Idumea, shall, after their return and victories over the Edomites, possess the mountainous part of their country, elsewhere called mount Seir; see Mal. i. 3. And they of the plain—The Jews who dwell in the plain country, lying toward that of the Philistines, shall possess their territories together with their own ancient inheritance. The Philistines were likewise ill neighbours to the Jews, who, it is here foretold, should at last conquer them and possess their land. The former part of this prediction was fully accomplished by Hyrcanus. And if this were the time of fulfilling the one, doubtless it was the time of fulfilling the other also. And they shall possess the fields of Ephraim, &c.—All the land which belonged to the ten tribes shall be possessed by the Jews after their restoration to their own country. And Benjamin shall possess Gilead—Benjamin, although one of the smallest tribes, shall enlarge his borders as far as the land of Gilead beyond Jordan. Here a larger possession is promised than ever they had before the captivity. But if Judah be considered as united with Benjamin, which perhaps it is, as those two tribes made but one people, all this was completely fulfilled in the time of Hyrcanus, as appears from Josephus, lib. xii.; xxii. But no doubt the great enlargement of the church of Christ, in the times of the gospel, is mystically pointed out in this passage.

Verses 20, 21. And the captivity of this host, &c.—Those of the ten tribes that were carried away captive by Shalmaneser; shall possess that of the Canaanites—That is, all the countries they anciently possessed, with this addition, that what the Canaanites held by force, and the Israelites could not take from them, shall now be possessed by these returned captives. Even unto Zarephath—Or Sarepta, a city near Sidon, in the northern borders of Judea, 1 Kings xvii. 9. The Canaanites, properly so called, were the ancient inhabitants of that district: see Judg. i. 32; Matt. xv. 21, 22. And the captivity of Jerusalem—The two tribes of Judah and Benjamin, carried captive from Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar; which is in Sepharad—That is, as some suppose, a province of Babylon, in which the Jews resided during their captivity. Shall possess the cities of

A. M. 3417. captivity of Jerusalem, ¹³ which is in
B. C. 587. Sepharad, ^f shall possess the cities of the south.

¹³ Or, shall possess that which is in Sepharad.—^f Jer. xxxii. 44.
ε 1 Tim. iv. 16; James v. 20.

the south—All the cities which were once their own.
And saviours shall come upon mount Zion, &c.—
That is, deliverers. Taken literally, the expression may mean, the leaders of those captive troops who were to return from Babylon, such as Zerubbabel, Ezra, and Nehemiah. If understood mystically, these saviours are Christ, his apostles, and the other preachers of the gospel. To judge the mount of Esau—To avenge Israel upon the Edomites, or, figuratively speaking, the church of Christ upon all its enemies, here represented by Edom. Instead of 3

21 And ^e saviours shall come upon A. M. 3417.
mount Zion to judge the mount of B. C. 587.
Esau; and the ^h kingdom shall be the LORD'S.

^h Psalm xxii. 28; Daniel ii. 44; vii. 14, 27; Zechariah xiv. 9;
Luke i. 33; Rev. xi. 15; xix. 6.

saviours, the LXX., with a small alteration of the Hebrew points, read απαλωσμενοι, those that are saved, or escape: namely, the same with the remnant often mentioned in the prophets, and particularly Joel ii. 32, where see the note. And the kingdom shall be the Lord's—This will be fulfilled when the last of the four monarchies, foretold Dan. ii. 7,
are destroyed, and the *stone which smote the image
becomes a great mountain, and fills the whole earth*;
when the God of Israel shall be honoured, obeyed,
and worshipped by all mankind.

947

THE BOOK OF JONAH.

ARGUMENT.

JONAH was the most ancient of all the prophets whose writings have come down to us. He is supposed to have prophesied in the latter end of Jehu's or the beginning of Jehoahaz's reign; at which time the kingdom of Israel was brought very low, by the oppressions of Hazael, king of Syria, 2 Kings xiii. 22. This might be the chief reason why Jonah was raised up to foretell the success which Jehoahaz's grandson Jeroboam should have, in restoring the coasts of Israel, 2 Kings xiv. 25, where we learn that he was of Gath-hepher, a town in the tribe of Zebulun, called Gittah-hepher, Josh. xix. 13, a place not far from Sephorim, or Diocæsarea, as St. Jerome informs us in his commentary upon Jonah: who adds, that Jonah's sepulchre was showed there in his time. This town was situated in Galilee, and so confutes that observation of the Pharisees, that out of Galilee there arose no prophet, John vii. 51. This book, which is rather a history than a prophecy, informs us of Jonah's being sent to Nineveh to denounce destruction on that city within forty days' time, if they repented not. But his preaching produced such a reformation, that God was graciously pleased to defer the execution of his judgments for the present, and indeed till about one hundred and fifty years afterward, when the great increase of their iniquities made them ripe for destruction, as we shall see more particularly when we come to the prophecy of Nahum. The narrative contained in this book is, in some parts of it, of such an extraordinary nature, that some have been induced to consider it as an allegory, while others have presumed profanely to ridicule it. But it must be remembered, that our Lord hath several times borne testimony to the truth of the narration; and hath shown, that the most wonderful of the events recorded in it was intended to be a type of his own death, burial, and resurrection on the third day. They who have faith in the power of God, as set forth in all parts of the Scripture, will not call in question what is here recorded of a miraculous nature. And they who thoroughly know themselves, and the weakness of fallen man, will not wonder at the very extraordinary conduct of the prophet himself.

CHAPTER I.

this chapter we have, (1.) God's command to Jonah to go to Nineveh and warn its inhabitants to repent, 1, 2. (2.) His disobedience to God, and flight from his land, 3. (3.) God's pursuit and arrest of him by a storm, in which he was asleep, 4-6. (4.) His disobedience discovered by the heathen mariners to be the cause of the storm, 7-10. (5.) With great reluctance the mariners cast him into the sea, as the only means of obtaining a calm, 11-16. (6.) A great fish, by swallowing him up, preserves him for future service, 17.

A. M. 3142. NOW the word of the LORD came
B. C. 862. unto ^aJonah ¹the son of Amittai, saying,

^{A. M. 3142.} 2 Arise, go to Nineveh, that ^bgreat city, and cry against it; for ^ctheir
^{B. C. 862.} wickedness is come up before me.

^a 2 Kings xiv. 25.—¹ Called, Matt. xii. 39, Jonas.—^b Gen. x. 11, 12; Chap. iii. 2, 3; iv. 11.

^c Genesis xviii. 20, 21; Ezra ix. 6; James v. 4; Revelation xviii. 5.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verses 1, 2. Now the word of the Lord—An impulse or revelation from the Lord, significative of his will; came unto Jonah, 'he son of Amittai'—Of whom see 2 Kings xiv. 25. It is probable he had been before acquainted with the word of the Lord, and knew his voice from that of a stranger. Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city—The capital of the Assyrian empire: see notes on chap. iii. 3; iv. 11; and Nah. i. 1; iii. 18. And cry—Proclaim as a prophet, against it—Or concerning it. He must witness against their great wickedness, and warn them of the destruction that was coming upon them for it. And this he must do, not privately in corners, but publicly

A. M. 3142. B. C. 862. 3 But Jonah ^d rose up to flee unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD, and went down to ^e Joppa; and he found a ship going to Tarshish: so he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it, to go with them unto Tarshish ^f from the presence of the LORD.

4 ¶ But ^g the LORD ² sent out a great wind into the sea, and there was a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship ³ was like to be broken. A. M. 3142. B. C. 862.

5 Then the mariners were afraid, and cried every man unto his god, and ^h cast forth the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten it of them. But Jonah was gone down ⁱ into the sides of the ship; and he lay, and was fast asleep.

6 So the ship-master came to him, and said

^a Chap. iv. 2.—^b Josh. xix. 46; 2 Chron. ii. 16; Acts ix. 36. ^c Gen. iv. 16; Job i. 12; ii. 7.—^d Psa. cvii. 25.

² Heb. cast forth.—³ Heb. thought to be broken.—^h So Acts xxvii. 18, 19, 38.—ⁱ 1 Sam. xxiv. 3.

in the streets, and must cry aloud, that all might hear. For their wickedness is come up before me—Is manifest in my sight, and calls aloud for vengeance.

Verse 3. But Jonah rose up to flee unto Tarshish—It is not to be wondered at that Jonah should be averse to undertake this mission. He probably considered it as a dangerous one, and might be tempted to think it would be unprofitable, and answer no valuable end. The journey was long, and the perils and hardships of it, he supposed, would be great. The inhabitants of the city were idolaters, and knew nothing of Jehovah, in whose name the warning was to be given, and the destruction denounced. The city was proud as well as idolatrous, and would look down with contempt on an Israelite, coming from a distant country, hardly known to many of them, or at least despised by them. And he had every reason to suppose that the delivery of such an unpleasant message would draw upon him the resentment both of the rulers and multitude. Indeed, “when we reflect how such a message would be received in the streets of London at this day, we shall not wonder that he was extremely reluctant to undertake the service. Strong faith and a habit of unreserved obedience were necessary to overcome the reluctance that he must have felt: and perhaps he was a young man, and not as yet inured to perilous employments.”—Scott. And, besides this, Jonah himself assigns another reason, chap. iv. 2, namely, that he knew God’s mercifulness to be great, and that it was probable God would be moved to forbear executing the judgments denounced; and so he would have the shame of being accounted a false prophet. This and other parts of his conduct, however, deserve censure. But, as Bishop Newcome observes, “men endued with extraordinary gifts of the Spirit, and made the instruments of declaring God’s will to mankind, have occasionally been subject to great human infirmities, and have even contracted great guilt.” Of Tarshish, see note on Isa. ii. 16. From the presence of the Lord—That is, to be at a distance from the land of Israel, the immediate residence of God, as Grotius and Locke interpret the expression. Houbigant however reads, through fear of the Lord; and what he feared is shown chap. iv. 2. Perhaps Jonah hoped, if he were at a greater distance, God would send some other prophet to preach repentance to the Ninevites. And went down to Joppa—A well-known haven on the Mediterranean. And he found a ship going to Tarshish—Bound for, and ready to sail to the place he designed. Thus Providence seemed to favour his design, and to give him an opportunity to escape. Observe, reader, we may be out of the way of duty, and yet may meet with apparently favourable providences. So he paid the fare thereof, and went down into it—He lost no time, for he was in haste to get at a distance from the presence of the Lord. Here we see what the best of men are when God leaves them to themselves, and what need we have, when the word of the Lord comes to us, to have the Spirit of the Lord to come along with the word, to bring every thought within us into obedience to it. Let us learn from hence to cease from man, and not to be too confident either respecting ourselves or others in time of trial, but let him that thinks he stands, take heed lest he fall.

Verses 4, 5. But the Lord sent out a great wind—The extraordinary greatness of it, with the suddenness of its rising, and the terrible effects it was likely to produce, showed that it was supernatural, and came from God, displeased with all, or with some one in the ship. Then the mariners were afraid—As they had great reason to be, since this preternatural tempest fell upon them with such great violence; and cried every man unto his god—To their several idols, as being heathen and ignorant of the true God. And cast forth the wares that were in the ship—By which they showed in what extreme danger they judged even their lives to be. But Jonah was gone down into the sides of the ship—Into a cabin in one of the sides of the ship. And he lay, and was fast asleep—This profound sleep of Jonah seems to have been caused by his weariness, labour, and anxiety: it was “not the sleep of security,” says St. Jerome, “but of sorrow;” like that of the apostles, Matt. xxvi. 40.

Verse 6. So the ship-master—Who had the conduct of the vessel, and from whose mouth such a reproof was seasonable; came and said to him, What meanest thou, O sleeper?—A just and necessary reproof this. We cannot but pity Jonah, who needed it: as a prophet of the Lord, if he had been in his place, he might have been reproving the king of Nineveh; but, being out of the way of his duty, he himself lies open to the reproof of a sorry ship-master. See how men, by their sin and folly, make themselves mean! Yet we must admire

A. M. 3142. unto him, What meanest thou, O
B. C. 862. sleeper? arise, ^k call upon thy God, ^l if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not.

7 And they said every one to his fellow,
Come, and let us ^m cast lots, that we may know for whose cause this evil is upon us.
So they cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah.

8 Then said they unto him, ⁿ Tell us, we pray thee, for whose cause this evil is upon us:
What is thine occupation? and whence comest thou? what is thy country? and of what people art thou?

9 And he said unto them, I am a Hebrew;
and I fear ^o the LORD, the God of heaven,

^k Psalm cvii. 28.—^l Joel ii. 14.—^m Joshua vii. 14, 16;
1 Samuel x. 20, 21; xiv. 41, 42; Proverbs xvi. 33; Acts i. 26.
ⁿ Josh. vii. 19; 1 Sam. xiv. 43.—^o Or, JEHOVAH.

God's goodness in sending him this seasonable
reproof; for it was the first step toward his recovery;
as the crowing of the cock was to Peter. "Those that sleep in a storm," says Henry, "may well be asked what they mean." Arise, call upon thy God—
We are here crying every man to his god, why dost thou not get up and cry to thine? Art thou not equally concerned with the rest both in the danger dreaded, and in the deliverance desired? If so be that God will think upon us—With pity, care, and favour; that we perish not—That the ship, goods, and men also may not be lost. The word rendered God being in the plural number, and the ship-master,
the mariners, and others in the ship being, it appears,
idolaters, and knowing nothing of the one living and true God, this clause should undoubtedly be rendered,
If so be that the gods will think upon us, &c.

Verses 7, 8. Come, and let us cast lots—"The sailors betake themselves to this practice, because they see that there is something supernatural in the tempest:
whence they conclude that it arose on account of some wicked person who sailed with them. Thus the sailors who carried Diagoras in their vessel, concluded that the tempest which assailed them was principally on account of this philosopher, who openly professed atheism. God was pleased so to order the lots, that Jonah was found to be the guilty person: not to favour such vain practices of the heathen; but that, after Jonah had made known to the mariners that the God of heaven and earth, whom ^{re} worshipped, had sent this storm, they might be brought to understand that the true God is the only director of lots; which indeed they seemed to have well understood, as appears from the end of this chapter." See Calmet and Houbigant *Then said they, Tell us, we pray thee, for whose cause
this evil is come upon us*—This should rather be rendered, for what cause; for they already knew for whose cause it was, by the lot falling upon Jonah;
their inquiry now was, what he had done to occasion
divine vengeance to follow him.

^o which hath made the sea and the dry land. A. M. 3142.
B. C. 862.

10 Then were the men ^s exceedingly afraid,
and said unto him, Why hast thou done this?
For the men knew that he fled from the presence of the LORD, because he had told
them.

11 ¶ Then said they unto him, What shall we do unto thee, that the sea ^e may be calm unto us? for the sea ⁷ wrought, ⁸ and was tempestuous.

12 And he said unto them, ^p Take me up,
and cast me forth into the sea; so shall the sea be calm unto you: for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

^o Psalm cxlvi. 6; Acts xvii. 24.—^s Heb. with great fear.
^e Heb. may be silent from us.—⁷ Or, grew more and more tempestuous.—⁸ Heb. went.—^p John xi. 50.

Verses 9, 10. And he said, I am a Hebrew—One descended from Heber, whose offspring by Abraham are well known. And I fear the Lord—Or rather JEHOVAH, the God of heaven, Jehovah being the peculiar name of the true God, by which he was distinguished from those who had the name of gods and lords among the heathen. Which hath made the sea and the dry land—These words, as Mr. Locke observes, are a further distinction between the true
God and the gods of the heathen; as if he had said,
I worship and serve the one living and true God;
that eternal and almighty Being, who made and
ruleth the heavens and the earth, and all creatures
therein. Then were the men exceedingly afraid—
And with good reason, for they perceived that God was against them, even the God that made the world and governs all things, and that this tempest proceeded from his offended justice. Hence they inferred that their case was perilous in the extreme. And having learned from Jonah that he had disobeyed
this Almighty God, and fled from his presence, they said unto him, Why hast thou done this?—How couldst thou dare to behave in such a manner, or disobey his commands, whom thou acknowledgest to be so great and powerful a Being, and Lord of all?

Verses 11, 12. Then said they, What shall we do unto thee, &c.—They perceived that Jonah was a prophet of the Lord, and therefore they would not do any thing to him without consulting him. He appeared to be a delinquent, but he appeared also to be a penitent: and therefore they would not insult over him, or offer him any rudeness. They would not cast him overboard, if he could think of any other expedient by which to save the ship. And he said, Take me up, and cast me into the sea—It is probable the conviction in Jonah's mind of his guilt was so strong, at this time, as to make him certain that God had raised this tempest on his account; or he might have a revelation from God that it was so:
in either case he might think it his duty to offer him-

A. M. 3142. 13 Nevertheless, the men ⁹ rowed
B. C. 862. hard to bring it to the land; ^a but they could not: for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous against them.

14 Wherefore they cried unto the LORD, and said, We beseech thee, O LORD, we beseech thee, let us not perish for this man's life, and ^r lay not upon us innocent blood for thou, O
LORD, ^a hast done as it pleased thee.

^a Heb. digged.—^r Proverbs xxi. 30.—^r Deuteron. xxi. 8.
^s Psalm cxv. 3.—^t Psalm lxxxix. 9; Luke viii. 24.—¹⁰ Heb.
stood.

self to death to save the rest that were in the ship.
For if it be lawful, and even praise worthy for one man, though guiltless, to sacrifice his life to save the lives of many; how much more may and ought a person to do this who knows that he is the cause of imminent danger, which threatens immediate destruction to many others.

Verses 13, 14. Nevertheless, the men rowed hard,
&c.—Whoever these mariners were, they are to be admired for their generosity; for though Jonah had told them that he was the cause of the tempest, and had advised them to cast him into the sea, yet they were very unwilling to do it, and generously redoubled their efforts, strained every nerve, and exposed themselves unto still greater danger of sinking, for some time longer, in order, if possible, to gain the shore without throwing him overboard.
Wherefore they cried unto the Lord—Hebrew, unto JEHOVAH, the Maker of heaven and earth. They were convinced, by the account which Jonah gave of himself, that the God whom he worshipped, verse 9, had brought this tempest upon them; therefore they made their petitions to him. Let us not perish
for this man's life—For doing that to him which in all probability will prove his destruction. And lay not upon us innocent blood—Although this man has committed nothing against us worthy of death, according to human laws, and nevertheless we are about to take away his life; yet do not impute to us the crime of shedding innocent blood, inasmuch as we take it away through extreme necessity to save our own lives, and by his own desire. For thou, O Lord,
hast done as it pleased thee—"Who hast raised this storm manifestly extraordinarily, who hast caused the lot to fall upon Jonah, who hast compelled him to confess himself to be guilty, and the cause of this calamity."—Grotius. Or, as Bishop Newcome expresses their meaning, "Punish us not as murderers
of an innocent man: for we judge, from the whole transaction, that we are conforming ourselves to thy will."

Verse 16. Then the men feared the Lord exceed- ingly—They were convinced of the power and 15 So they took up Jonah, and cast A. M. 3142.

him forth into the sea: ^t and the sea B. C. 862.
¹⁰ ceased from her raging.

16 Then the men ^u feared the LORD exceedingly, and ¹¹ offered a sacrifice unto the LORD,
and made vows.

17 ¶ Now the LORD had prepared a great fish to swallow up Jonah. And ^x Jonah was in the ¹² belly of the fish three days and three nights.

^u Mark iv. 41; Acts v. 11.—¹¹ Heb. sacrificed a sacrifice
unto the LORD, and vowed vows.—^x Matt. xii. 40; xvi. 4; Luke xi. 30.—¹² Heb. bowels.

greatness of that God whom Jonah worshipped;
which appeared both in raising this storm, and in so suddenly laying it. And offered sacrifice unto the Lord—Or JEHOVAH; and made vows—As it is not probable that they offered a sacrifice on shipboard, this seems to be spoken of what they did when they came safe to the port for which they were bound;
namely that they made a public acknowledgment,
by sacrifice and other religious acts, of the mercy
they had received of God, and of his wonderful power, the effects of which they had witnessed.

Verse 17. Now the Lord prepared a great fish,
&c.—We have but an imperfect acquaintance with the natural history of fishes. However, it is a well-attested fact, that there are fishes, sharks, for instance, that grow to a size capable of swallowing and containing a man. The Scripture calls this a great fish in the general, and therefore there is no need to confine it to a whale; in which view, much of the wit thrown out by persons disposed to be merry on the Scripture is quite foreign to the purpose. See more in the note on Matt. xii. 40, in Calmet's dissertation on the subject, and in Scheuchzer. And Jon- ah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights—"The Hebrew language," says Lowth, "has no one word to express what we call a natural day;
so that what the Greeks express by νηχθημερον, they denote by a day and a night. Therefore the space of time consisting of one whole revolution of twenty-four hours, and a part of two others, is fitly expressed in that language by three days and three nights. Such a space of time our Lord lay in the grave;" (that is, one whole νηχθημερον, or natural day, and part of two others;) "and we may from thence conclude that Jonah, who was an eminent figure of him in this particular, was no longer in the fish's belly." This miracle of preserving Jonah was evidently very important. It served to spread the knowledge of the true God, the whole transaction having this tendency: see verse 16. And it also taught Jonah, and in him the whole prophetic order, God's power and determination to enforce his commands.

CHAPTER II.

In this chapter we have, (1.) Jonah's prayer in the fish's belly, representing the danger and distress he was in, 2, 3, 5, 6; the despair to which he was almost reduced, and the encouragement he took to himself in this deplorable condition, 4-7. (2.) His warning to others, 8. (3.) His ascription of praise and thanksgiving to God, 9. (4.) He is safely restored to dry land by the fish, 10.

A. M. 3142. THEN Jonah prayed unto the LORD
B. C. 862. his God out of the fish's belly,

2 And said, I ^acried ¹by reason of mine affliction unto the LORD, ^band he heard me; out of the belly of ²hell cried I, and thou heardest my voice.

3 ^cFor thou hadst cast me into the deep, in the ³midst of the seas; and the floods compassed me about: ^dall thy billows and thy waves passed over me.

4 ^eThen I said, I am cast out of thy sight; yet I will look again ^ftoward thy holy temple.

5 The ^gwaters compassed me about, even to the soul: the depth closed me round about, the weeds were wrapped about my head.

^a Psalm cxx. 1; cxxx. 1; cxlii. 1; Lam. iii. 55, 56.—¹ Or, out of mine afflictions.—^b Psalm lxxv. 2.—² Or, the grave, Isa. xiv. 9.—^c Psa. lxxxviii. 6.—³ Heb. heart.—^d Psa. xlii. 7. ^e Psa. xxxi. 22.—^f 1 Kings viii. 38.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verses 1, 2. Then Jonah prayed—Those devout thoughts and feelings which he had at that time, he afterward digested into the following prayer, and added a thanksgiving for his deliverance at the end of it. So several of David's Psalms were probably composed after his trouble was over; but in a manner suitable to the thoughts he had at the time of his affliction; and with a grateful sense of God's mercies for his deliverance out of it: see Psa. liv. and cxx. And he heard me—He thanks God that, in consequence of his prayer, his life is wonderfully preserved. Out of the belly of hell, cried I—The word שְׁאוֹל signifies the state of the dead. So it may most properly be rendered the grave here, as the margin reads: the belly of the fish was to Jonah instead of a grave.

Verses 4-7. Then I said, I am cast out, &c.—“My first apprehensions were, that as I had justly forfeited thy favour by my disobedience, so thou wouldest cast me out of thy protection; yet, upon recollecting myself, I thought it my duty not to despair of thy mercy, but direct my prayer toward thy heavenly habitation.”—Lowth. The waters compassed me even to the soul—Or life; that is, to the extreme hazard of my life; and I thought of nothing more than losing my life among the waves. I went, &c.—I went down to the bottom of the sea, where the foundations of the mountains lie. Or, the fish carried me down as deep in the sea as are the bottoms of the mountains. The earth with her bars was about me—I found myself enclosed on every side, without any way for escape; and should have been enclosed for ever, had not thy power interposed.

6 I went down to the ‘bottoms of A. M. 3142
the mountains; the earth with her B. C. 862.
bars was about me for ever: yet hast thou brought up my life ^hfrom ⁱcorruption, O LORD my God.

7 When my soul fainted within me I remembered the LORD: ^jand my prayer came in unto thee, into thy holy temple.

8 They that observe ^klying vanities, forsake their own mercy.

9 But I will ^lsacrifice unto thee with the voice of thanksgiving; I will pay that that I have vowed. ^mSalvation is of the LORD.

10 ¶ And the LORD spake unto the fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land.

^g Psa. lxxix. 1; Lam. iii. 54.—^h Heb. cuttings off.—ⁱ Psa. xvi. 10.—^j Or, the pit.—^k Psa. xviii. 6.—^l 2 Kings xvii. 15; Psa. xxxi. 6; Jer. x. 8; xvi. 19.—^m Psa. l. 14, 23; cxvi. 17, 18; Hos. xiv. 2; Heb. xiii. 15.—ⁿ Psa. iii. 8.

Yet hast thou brought up my life from corruption—But, notwithstanding it was involved in all these terrible circumstances, which seemed to preclude all possibility of its being preserved, yet thou, O my God, by thy power didst save my life from destruction. When my soul fainted within me—When I seemed just expiring, and lost all hopes of being preserved; I remembered the Lord—I thought of thy almighty power and boundless mercy, O Jehovah, who causest to be whatsoever thou wilt; and my prayer came in unto thee—And therefore I addressed my prayer to thee, as being persuaded that thou couldest still preserve me, even in the most extreme dangers; and my faith was not disappointed; for I found, by the event, that thou couldest deliver me, as I believed thou wast able to do.

Verses 8, 9. They that observe lying vanities, &c.—They that seek to, or trust in, idols, (often called by the names of vanity and lies,) forsake their own mercy—Forsake him who alone is able to show mercy to them, and preserve them in time of danger: who, to all that depend upon him, is an eternal fountain of mercy, even a fountain of living waters which flow freely to all that seek unto him for them. But I will sacrifice unto thee, &c.—I will offer to thee those thanks which I solemnly promised to pay in the time of my trouble, and which will be as acceptable to thee as the sacrifices of slain beasts.

Verses 10. And the Lord—This should rather have been rendered, For the Lord; because what follows was not done after the preceding thanksgiving, but before it; and it is mentioned here only to show the cause or subject of the thanksgiving. The Lord spake unto the fish, &c.—God's almighty power is represented in Scripture as bringing things to pass by his bare will and command: see Gen. i. 3. He willed that the fish should cast Jonah up on the dry land, and the fish did so. Various are the traditions of the Orientals respecting the place where Jonah was disembogued; but, as Calmet well observes, amidst such doubt and obscurity, the best part is absolute silence, and the sincere declaration that the matter is entirely unknown. "The fame of Jonah's deliverance appears to have spread among the heathen nations; and the Greeks, who were accustomed to adore the memory of their heroes by every remarkable event and embellishment which they could appropriate, added to the fictitious adventures of Hercules, that of his having continued three days, without injury, in the belly of a dog, sent against him by Neptune."—Gray's Key. Huetius (Demonst. Evang., Prop. 4) supposes that Jonah's deliverance from the whale's belly gave occasion to the Greek story of Arion, who, after he was cast into the sea, was conveyed by a dolphin to the port of Corinth.

CHAPTER III.

We have here, (1,) Jonah's mission renewed and executed, 1-4. (2,) The humiliation and reformation of the Ninevites, 5-9. (3,) Their sentence revoked, 10.

A. M. 3142. B. C. 862. AND the word of the LORD came unto Jonah the second time, saying,

2 Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee.

3 So Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. Now Nineveh was an ¹ exceeding great city of three days' journey.

4 And Jonah began to enter into ^{A. M. 3142. B. C. 862.} the city a day's journey, and ^a he cried, and said, Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

5 ¶ So the people of Nineveh ^b believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them.

6 For word came unto the king of Nineveh,

¹ Heb. of God, so Gen. xxx. 8; Psa. xxxvi. 6; lxxx. 10.

^a Deut. xviii. 22.—^b Matt. xii. 41; Luke xi. 32.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verses 1-3. And the word of the Lord, &c.—After Jonah had been well chastised for his disobedience, and was set at liberty, as recorded in the preceding chapter, the divine call to him to prophesy was repeated. He had rebelled against God's command the first time, but now, being humbled and better prepared, he is tried again. So—Hebrew, And, Jonah arose and went into Nineveh—He now obeys without reluctance. Such was the blessed fruit of the correction which he had received. Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city—The Hebrew reads, A great city to God; so the mountains of God are the same with great mountains, Psa. xxxvi. 6, and the cedars of God are translated goodly cedars, Psa. lxxx. 10. Nineveh was the greatest city in the known world at that time; greater than Babylon, whose compass was then three hundred and eighty-five furlongs; but Nineveh was in compass four hundred and eighty furlongs, which makes something more than sixty of our miles. It is said that its walls were one hundred feet in height, and broad enough for three coaches to meet and pass safely by each other: that it had one thousand five hundred towers on its walls, each two hundred feet high. Diodorus Siculus represents it as an oblong figure, the two longer sides of which measured one hundred and fifty stadia, and the two shorter ninety. "Ninus," says he, "hastened to build a city of such magnitude, that it should not only be the greatest which then existed in the whole world, but that none in succeeding ages, who undertook such a work, should easily surpass it; and his expectation has not been deceived. For no one has since built so great a city; both as to the extent of its circuit, and the magnificence of its wall." According to a report recorded by Eustathius, fourteen myriads of men were employed for eight years in building this city. It is here said, that it was of three days' journey; and Diodorus asserts the same; that is, of three days' journey in circuit, allowing twenty miles to each day.

Verse 4. And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey—That is, he proceeded into the city as far as he could go in a day. And he cried, Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown—The threat is express; but there was a reserve with God on condition of repentance. And it must be observed, that in most of the threatenings of God there is a condition expressed or understood. This is the general rule for interpreting all such denunciations, as has been observed in the note on Jer. xviii. 8, unless where God makes an express declaration that the iniquity of the people against whom he denounces his judgments is full, and that he will not spare them; or, as it is expressed by our Saviour, with regard to Jerusalem, that the things which belong unto their peace are then hid from their eyes.

Verses 5, 6. So the people of Nineveh believed God, &c.—"The fame," says Lowth, "of the wonderful works God had wrought for the Jews, was spread over the eastern parts of the world. This

A. M. 3142. and he arose from his throne, and he
B. C. 862. laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, ^c and sat in ashes.

7 ^d And he caused it to be proclaimed and ² published through Nineveh by the decree of the king and his ³ nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste any thing :
let them not feed, nor drink water :

8 But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God : yea,

^c Job ii. 8. — ^d 2 Chron. xx. 3; Joel ii. 15. — ² Heb. said.
³ Heb. great men. — ^e Isa. lviii. 6.

might make the Ninevites hearken to a man of that nation, that came to them as sent by God. And it is likely that he gave them an account of the miraculous circumstances which attended his own mission. But, without question, a sense of their own guilt, and their deserving whatever punishment Heaven could inflict, was a principal reason that moved them to have a regard to this message. And by the men of Nineveh's repenting at the preaching of Jonah, God designed to upbraid the stubbornness of his own people, and shame them, as it were, into repentance; lest the men of Nineveh should rise up in judgment against them, as our Saviour speaks of the Jews in his own time, Matt. xii. 41." And proclaimed a fast—The king and his nobles, or those in authority, ordered that every one should fast for three days, and put on habits of sorrow and humiliation. For word came unto the king of Nineveh—Archbishop Usher, in his Annals ad A. M. 3233, supposes this prince to have been Pul, the king of Assyria, (Nineveh being then the capital city of that empire,) who afterward invaded the kingdom of Israel, in the days of Menahem, 2 Kings xv. 19: it being very agreeable to the methods of Providence to make use of a heathen king, that was penitent, to punish the impenitence of God's own people Israel. And he arose from his throne, &c.—He laid aside all his state, and put on the habit of a penitent.

Verses 7-9. Let neither man nor beast taste any thing—This was ordered to add the greater solemnity to the humiliation, and that men might be affected by the mournful cries of the cattle under such restraints, and thereby be moved to greater sorrow and contrition. It was, however, carrying their abstinence to a greater severity than we find practised among the Jews; for though, in times of public calamity, and on the day of solemn expiation, they made their children fast, as we may gather from Joel ii. 16, yet we nowhere read of their extending that rigour to cattle. But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth—Their horses and camels, both which they had been accustomed to adorn with rich and costly clothing, they must now clothe with sackcloth, in testimony of a hearty repentance; the clothing of the beasts must witness for the men. Thus, in funerals, the covering horses and mules

^e let them turn every one from his ^f evil way, and from ^g the violence that is in their hands.

9 ^h Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?

10 ⁱ And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not.

^f Isaiah lix. 6. — ^g 2 Sam. xii. 22; Joel ii. 14. — ^h Jeremiah xviii. 8; Amos vii. 3, 6.

with sackcloth adds to the solemnity of the occasion, and tends to increase the sorrow. And cry mightily—That is, let the men cry; for though the men and beasts are spoken of promiscuously in this proclamation, yet there are some expressions which are to be applied peculiarly to the men. Yea, let every one turn from his evil way—Let every one forsake his vicious practices. And from the violence that is in their hands—Let him cease to defraud or oppress his fellow-creatures, and desist from all acts of violence; yea, and let him restore what he has gotten by such practices. Natural religion instructed them, that their earnest prayers, without true amendment, would not avail them before God; nor would their repentance be thought sincere, unless they restored to the true owners what they had gained by violence and injustice. Who can tell if God will turn and repent?—That is, whether he will change his way toward us, and revoke the sentence gone forth against us. It was a great thing for these heathen to give such proofs of repentance, under an uncertain hope of pardon.

Verse 10. And God saw their works—He not only heard their good words, by which they professed repentance, but saw their good works, by which they brought forth fruits meet for repentance. He saw that they turned from their evil way—And that was what he looked for and required. If he had not seen that, their fasting and sackcloth would have been as nothing in his account. Observe, reader, God takes notice of every instance of the reformation of sinners, even of those instances which fall not under the observation of the world. He sees who turn from their evil ways and who do not; and meets those with favour that meet him in a sincere conversion. When men repent of the evil of sin committed by them, he repents of the evil of judgment pronounced against them. Thus he spared Nineveh, and did not the evil which he said he would do against it. Here were no sacrifices offered to God, that we read of, to make atonement for sin; but the sacrifice of God is a broken spirit; a broken and a contrite heart, such as the Ninevites now had, is what he will not despise: on the contrary, it is what he will give encouragement to, and put honour upon.

CHAPTER IV.

In this chapter we have, (1,) Jonah's repining at God's mercy to Nineveh, 1-3. (2,) The gentle reproof God gave him for it, 4. (3,) His discontent at the withering of his gourd, and his justifying himself in that discontent, 5-9. (4,) God's improving his concern for his gourd, to convince him of the propriety of saving Nineveh, 10, 11.

A. M. 3142. B. C. 862. BUT it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was very angry.

2 And he prayed unto the LORD, and said, I pray thee, O LORD, was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? Therefore I fled before unto Tarshish: for I knew that thou art a gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repentest thee of the evil.

3 Therefore now, O LORD, take, I beseech thee, my life from me; for it is better for me to die than to live.

4 ¶ Then said the LORD, ¹Doest thou well to be angry?

* Chap. i. 3.—^b Exod. xxxiv. 6; ^c Psal. lxxxvi. 5; Joel ii. 13. ^d 1 Kings xix. 4.—^e Verse 8.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verses 1-3. But it—The divine forbearance in sparing Nineveh; displeased Jonah exceedingly—“Seeing that what he had foretold against the Ninevites did not happen, he was afraid lest he should pass for a false prophet and a deceiver, his ministry be despised, and his person exposed to the violence of the Ninevites. He was therefore very peevish and impatient, and he vents his complaints in the following verse.” And he prayed unto the Lord—He uttered expostulations and complaints in his prayer to God, wherein he pleaded an excuse for his former disobedience to God's commands. O Lord, was not this my saying—Did I not think of this, and suppose that it would be the case, that thy pardon would contradict my preaching? Therefore I fled before unto Tarshish—Namely, to avoid coming upon this message, for I knew that thou art a gracious God—I knew by the declarations thou madest to Moses, (Exod. xxxiv. 6,) and by several instances of thy mercy, that thou dost not always execute the punishments thou threatenest against sinners; being moved by thy essential goodness and mercifulness to spare them. Therefore now, O Lord, take, I beseech thee, my life from me—“I cannot survive the confusion of seeing my prediction vain and to no effect; I cannot bear to live under the imputation of being a false prophet.” For it is better for me to die than to live—We may learn from this, that Jonah was naturally a man of a hasty, impatient temper; for he here shows himself to have been exceedingly vexed without any just cause. For it does not appear that the Ninevites would have despised him, or looked upon him as a false prophet, though the city was not destroyed; because their having recourse to fasting, humiliation, and turning from their evil ways, was in order to avert the wrath

5 So Jonah went out of the city, ^{A. M. 3142. B. C. 862.} and sat on the east side of the city, and there made him a booth, and sat under it in the shadow, till he might see what would become of the city.

6 And the LORD God prepared a ²gourd,³ and made it to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him from his grief. So Jonah ⁴was exceedingly glad of the gourd.

7 But God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd that it withered.

8 And it came to pass, when the sun did arise,

¹ Or, Art thou greatly angry?—² Or, palmerist.—³ Hebrew, Kikajon.—⁴ Heb. rejoiced with great joy.

of God, that he might repent and turn from his fierce anger, and they perish not; see chap. iii. 9; and therefore they would, in all probability, have attributed the city's preservation to this their humiliation and repentance, and have still looked upon Jonah as one that was divinely commissioned. So that he was indeed moved to these passionate expressions and exclamations purely by his own hasty disposition, and not from any just cause given him.

Verses 4-9. Doest thou well to be angry?—What a mild reproof was this from God, for such a passionate behaviour as Jonah manifested! Here the prophet experienced that Jehovah was a gracious God, merciful, and slow to anger. Here we learn by the highest example, that of God himself, how mild and gentle we ought to be if we would be like him, even to those who carry themselves toward us in the most unreasonable and unjustifiable manner. So Jonah went out of the city—The words should rather have been rendered, Now Jonah had gone out of the city: for the particulars related in the foregoing verses took place after his departing out of the city, and sitting somewhere in view of it, expecting some extraordinary judgment to come upon it; but being disappointed, he broke out into that expostulation with God already mentioned. We may observe, in this book, several instances of facts related first, and then the manner how these facts were brought about explained afterward. And sat on the east side of the city—Probably in a place where he could best see the city; and there made him a booth—A little cot, or shed of twigs. Or, a shelter, as Bishop Newcome translates the word, observing, that it signifies both an artificial cover, such as a tent, or booth, and also a natural one, as Job xxxviii. 40; Jer. xxv. 38, where it is used of the covert of a lion. The LXX. render it σκηνη, a tent;

A. M. 3142. that God prepared a ⁶vehement east wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and wished in himself to die, and said, ⁶*It is better for me to die than to live.*

9 And God said to Jonah, ⁶Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, ⁷I do well to be angry, even unto death.

10 Then said the LORD, Thou hast ⁸had pity

on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow; which ⁹came up in a night, and perished in a night:

11 And should not I spare Nineveh, [†]that great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons [‡]that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand, and also much [‡]cattle?

⁵ Or, silent.—⁶ Verse 3.—⁶ Or, Art thou greatly angry?
⁷ Or, I am greatly angry.—⁸ Or, spared.

⁹ Hebrew, was the son of the night.—[†] Chapter i. 2; iii. 2, 3
[‡] Deut. i. 39.—[‡] Psalm xxxvi. 6; cxlv. 9.

and the Vulgate, umbraculum, a little shed. And the Lord prepared a gourd—This is supposed to be spoken of a shrub growing in Palestine, bearing broad and very thick leaves, so that it affords a great shade. Bochart, Hiller, and Celsius say, that the ricinus, or palma-christi, is here meant; a supposition which is favoured by its height, which is that of the olive, the largeness of its leaves, which are like those of the vine, and the quickness of its growth: see Pliny, Nat. Hist., lib. xv. cap. 7. Whatever kind of plant it was that shaded Jonah, we may justly attribute a miraculous growth to it. Indeed the relation in the text evidently supposes that, saying that God made it to come up over Jonah: that it might be a shadow, &c., to deliver him from his grief—That is, from the inconvenience which he felt from the heat. So Jonah was exceeding glad of the gourd—As vehement in his joy now as in his grief before. His passions were strong, and easily moved by trifling events, whether of an agreeable or disagreeable nature. We are not told that Jonah saw the hand of God in this plant's rising up so suddenly to shelter him, or that he was thankful to God for it. But God prepared—That is, sent, or excited, a worm—By the same power which caused the gourd suddenly to spring up and spread itself. And it smote the gourd—Early next morning it bit the root, so that the whole gourd withered. And when the sun did arise—That is, when it was got to some height; for the day-break is spoken of before, and this seems to signify some space of time after that: besides, the sun's being described as beating on the head of Jonah, shows that an advance in the day is here intended; God prepared a vehement east wind—The winds in the hot countries, when they blow from the sandy deserts, are oftentimes more suffocating than the heat of the sun, and they make the sun-beams give a more intense heat. The sun beat upon the head of Jonah that he fainted—Was overpowered by the heat, and ready to faint. And wished himself to die—As he had done before; and said, It is better for me to die than to live—But Jonah must be made more wise, humble, and compassionate too, before it will be better for him to die than to live. And before God hath done with him, he will teach him to value his own life more, and to be more tender of the lives of others. And God said, Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd?—For an insignificant, short-lived plant?

God adds this circumstance to the question before proposed, that Jonah might be his own judge, and at once condemn his own passions, justify God's patience and mercy, and acquiesce with satisfaction in God's merciful dealings with the inhabitants of Nineveh. And he said, I do well to be angry—When a similar question was asked before, he was silent; but now he is out of all patience, and quarrels openly and rudely with God, who had spared Nineveh, which Jonah thought ought to have been consumed as Sodom, or as the old world was. Even unto death—I have just cause to be angry, even to that degree as to wish myself dead. The prophet here records his own sin, without concealing any circumstance of it, as Moses and other holy writers have done.

Verse 10. Then said the Lord—Jonah having thus showed his love and pity for the gourd, God proceeds to judge him out of his own mouth; Thou hast had pity on the gourd, &c.—Thou deplorest the loss of the gourd, and thinkest it a severe misfortune to thee, and hard that thou shouldst be deprived of it, though it was not made by thee, came up without any labour of thine, and was by its nature of a short duration:—if this is the case with thee in regard to a mean, short-lived plant, think how unjustly thou judgest, when thou condemnest my mercy toward the Ninevites! How much more severe would it have been to have destroyed a whole city, in the ruin of which many innocent creatures, as children and brute animals, must necessarily have been involved; and, what is still more awful, many immortal beings have been plunged into everlasting misery! If thou supposest I ought to have spared or preserved the gourd, because it shaded thee from the heat; think how much more my essential goodness and kindness toward my creatures, the work of my hands, must incline me to spare them whenever it can be done any way consistently with my justice or the laws of my government.

Verse 11. And should not I—The God of infinite compassion; spare Nineveh, that great city?—Wouldest thou have me to be less merciful to such a large and populous city as Nineveh, than thou art to a shrub? Surely the lives of so many thousand men, to say nothing of their immortal souls, are much more valuable than the life of a single contemptible plant. Wherein (in which city) are more than six-score thousand persons that cannot discern, &c.—That is, infants, who have no knowledge between good and evil, as it is expressed Deut. i. 39. If we compute these as a fifth part of the inhabitants of Nineveh, the whole sum will amount to six hundred thousand persons, which are as few as can well be supposed to have inhabited a city of such large dimensions. And also much cattle—Besides men, women, and children in Nineveh, there are many other of my creatures that are not sinful, and my tender mercies are, and shall be, over all my works. If thou wouldest be their destroyer, yet I will be their saviour. Go, Jonah, rest thyself content, and be thankful that the goodness which spared Nineveh hath spared thee, in this thy inexcusable frowardness, peevishness, and impatience. I will be to repenting Nineveh what I am to thee, a God gracious and merciful, slow to anger and of great kindness, and I will turn from the evil which thou and they deserve. This reasoning seems to have silenced

Jonah's complaints, and made him sensible of his fault in repining at God's mercy. It has been observed, that the book of Jonah ends as abruptly as it begins. It begins with a conjunction copulative, And the word came unto Jonah, &c., which has made some commentators think that it was but an appendix to some of his other writings: and it ends without giving us any manner of account, either of what became of the Ninevites, or of Jonah himself after this expedition. It is likely, indeed, from the compassionate expressions which God makes use of toward the Ninevites, that for this time he reversed their doom; and it is not improbable that Jonah, when he had executed his commission, and been satisfied by God concerning his merciful procedure, returned into Judea. We may presume, however, that the repentance of the Ninevites was of no long continuance; for, not many years after, we find the Prophet Nahum foretelling the total destruction of that city. See Calmet and Bishop Newton.

THE BOOK OF MICAH.

ARGUMENT.

MICAH, of whose family nothing certain is known, was a Morasthite, or of Moresa, a village near Eleutheropolis, in the south of Judah. He was cotemporary with Isaiah, began to prophesy a little after him, and continued in the prophetic office about fifty years. What we find here in writing seems to be an abstract of what he preached during that time. He had seen the prophecies of Isaiah, and has introduced whole passages verbatim into his own. Compare Isa. ii. 2, with Mic. iv. 1; and Isa. xli. 15, with Mic. iv. 13. "The style of Micah," says Bishop Lowth, "is, for the most part, close, forcible, pointed, and concise; sometimes approaching the obscurity of Hosea: in many parts animated and sublime, and in general truly poetical." "Like Amos and Hosea," says Archbishop Newcome, "he reproves and threatens a corrupt people with great spirit and energy. See chap. ii. 1-10; iii. 2-4; vi. 10-16; vii. 2-4. And, like Hosea, he inveighs against the princes and prophets with the highest indignation. See chap. iii. 5-12; vii. 3. Some of his prophecies are distinct and illustrious ones, as chap. ii. 12, 13; iii. 12; iv. 1-4, 10; v. 2-4; vii. 8-10." In many passages, "we may justly admire the beauty and elegance of his manner;—his animation;—his strength of expression;—his pathos;—his sublimity." The scope of his whole book is, 1. To convince Israel and Judah of their sins, and of the judgments of God ready to break in upon them; 2. To comfort the righteous with promises of mercy and deliverance, and especially with an assurance of the coming of the Messiah. To be more particular, In the first chapter of his prophecies he foretells the calamities of Samaria, which was some time after taken and spoiled by Shalmaneser; and then prophecies against Judah, denouncing the evils which were accordingly brought upon it by Sennacherib, in the reign of Hezekiah. In the second chapter he inveighs against those who devised evil against others, and who coveted and took away by violence other men's possessions, &c. In the third chapter he reproves the heads of Jacob, and the princes of the house of Israel, for their avarice, injustice, and oppression of the people; and also the false prophets, for their deceiving of the people; and tells them that they will be the occasion of Jerusalem's being reduced to a heap of rubbish. After these terrible denunciations, in chapters fourth and fifth he speaks of their restoration, and, under the figure of that, of the times of the Messiah. In the sixth and seventh chapters the sins of the people are reproved, and threatenings denounced against them; but with promises of better things on their amendment. This prophet is cited by Jeremiah, (chap. xxvi. 18,) which shows that he prophesied before Jeremiah. "It is related by Epiphanius, and the Greek writers who copied him, that Micah was thrown from a precipice and killed by Jehoram, the son of Ahab, whom he erroneously calls king of Judah, but who was really king of Israel; and whose grandson Jehoram lived at least one hundred and thirty years before Micah. But these writers seem to have confounded Micah with Micaiah the son of Imlah, who flourished in Israel, and prophesied evil of Ahab. Micah does not appear to have suffered martyrdom, as may be collected from Jer. xxvi. 18, 19, but probably died in peace in the reign of Hezekiah. St. Jerome says, that his tomb was at Morasthi, and converted into a church in his time: and Sozomen professed to have heard, that his body was shown, in a divine vision, to Zebennus, bishop of Eleutheropolis, in the reign of Theodosius the Great, near a place called Berathsatia, which probably might be a corruption of Morasti, since Sozomen describes it to have been at nearly the same distance from Jerusalem that St. Jerome places Morasthi."—Gray's Key.

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter we have, (1.) The time when Micah prophesied, and a demand of attention, 1, 2. (2.) A solemn warning of the desolations impending over Israel and Judah, for their abounding sins, 3-7. (3.) The greatness of the destruction manifested by the prophet's sorrow for it, 8, 9; and by the general sorrow that should be produced by it in the several places that should share in it, 10-16.

A. M. 3254. B. C. 750. THE word of the LORD that came to ^a Micah the Morasthite in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, ^b which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem.

2 ¶ ¹ Hear, all ye people; ^c hearken, O earth, and ² all that therein is: and let the Lord God ^d be witness against you, the LORD from ^e his holy temple.

3 For behold, ^f the LORD cometh forth out of his ^g place, and will come down and tread upon the ^h high places of the earth.

4 And ⁱ the mountains shall be molten under him, and the valley shall be cleft, as wax before the fire, and as the waters that are poured down ³ a steep place.

^a Jer. xxvii. 18.—^b Amos i. 1.—¹ Heb. Hear, ye people, all of them.—^c Deut. xxxii. 1; Isaiah i. 2.—² Heb. the fulness thereof.—^d Psal. i. 7; Mal. iii. 5.—^e Psal. xi. 4; Jonah ii. 7; Hab. ii. 20.—^f Isa. xxvi. 21.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. In the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah—Micah is thought to have prophesied about sixteen years in Jotham's time, as many under Ahaz, and fourteen under Hezekiah: in all, forty-six years. And he survived the captivity of Israel ten years, which he lamented as well as foretold. Which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem—Concerning both the kingdoms of Israel and Judah, whereof Samaria and Jerusalem were the capital cities. It is said, Which he saw, &c., because the prophets having the general name of seers, every kind of prophecy, in whatever way delivered, seems to have been generally called a vision.

Verses 2-4. Hear, all ye people—All ye of Israel and Judah. Hearken, O earth—Or, O land, [of Israel,] and all that therein is—That is, all its inhabitants. Let the Lord be witness against you—"I call him to witness, that I have forewarned you of the judgments that hang over your heads, unless you speedily repent. And he himself will become a witness against you, and convince you of your sins in such a manner that you shall not be able to deny the charge." The Lord from his holy temple—Heaven, his holy habitation. The Lord cometh forth out of his place—God is said, in Scripture, to come out of his place, or heaven, when he makes his judgments or mercies to be remarkably conspicuous, by visible effects on the earth. And will tread upon the high places of the earth—He will cause places of the greatest strength to be destroyed, and men of the highest rank to be brought down. And the mountains shall be molten under him, &c.—An allusion to God's coming down upon mount Sinai, when thunder and lightning shook the mountain, and violent rains, which accompanied this tempest, made the hills look as if they were melted down. Or the words may be referred to the general judgment, of which all particular judgments are an earnest, when

5 For the transgression of Jacob ^{A. M. 3254.} is all this, and for the sins of the house ^{B. C. 750.} of Israel. What ¹ is the transgression of Jacob? ² is it not Samaria? and what ³ are the high places of Judah? ⁴ are they not Jerusalem?

6 Therefore, I will make Samaria ^k as a heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard: and I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, and I will ¹ discover the foundations thereof.

7 And all the graven images thereof shall be beaten to pieces, and all the ^m hires thereof shall be burned with the fire, and all the idols thereof will I lay desolate: for she gathered ^{it} of the hire of a harlot, and they shall return to the hire of a harlot.

¹ Psal. cxv. 3.—² Deut. xxxii. 13; xxxiii. 29; Amos iv. 13. ³ Judges v. 5; Psal. xcvi. 5; Isaiah lxiv. 1, 2, 3; Amos ix. 5; Hab. iii. 6, 10.—⁴ Heb. a descent.—^k 2 Kings xix. 25; Chap. iii. 12.—¹ Ezek. xiii. 14.—^m Hos. ii. 5, 12.

the heavens and the earth shall be dissolved at Christ's appearing.

Verse 5. For the transgression of Jacob—That is, of the sons of Jacob; for the many transgressions committed among them; is all this—All these many, great, and irresistible judgments of God foretold and executed. What is the transgression of Jacob—Where is the chief cause of Israel's sin and apostasy? Is it not Samaria—Is it not in that city, the chief seat of the kingdom, the residence of the king and his princes, who have set up the idolatry of the golden calves, and made it the established religion of the kingdom? What are the high places of Judah, &c.—Doth not the idolatrous worship, practised in the high places of Judah, receive its chief encouragement from the city of Jerusalem, even from Ahaz, and the great men who there join with him in that idolatry?

Verses 6, 7. Therefore I will make Samaria as a heap—A heap of ruins. And as plantings of a vineyard—As in planting vineyards men dig the earth, and cast it up in hillocks, so shall they make this city. The Vulgate reads, I will make Samaria as a heap of stones in a field, when a vineyard is planted. I will pour down the stones thereof, &c.—The stones of it shall be tumbled down, from the lofty eminence on which it is situated, into the valley beneath, and shall leave the foundations thereof naked and bare. All this, and what follows, was fulfilled by Shalmaneser, who made a conquest of Samaria. And all the graven images thereof—Whether made of gold, silver, brass, wood, or stone; shall be beaten to pieces—Shall be pulled out of their chapels, shrines, or repositories, by their conquering enemies, and shall be trampled upon and broken, either out of contempt, or that the rich materials of which they are made may be carried away. And all the hires thereof shall be burned with fire—The rich gifts, given for the honour and

A. M. 3254. 8 Therefore ^a I will wail and howl ;
B. C. 750. ^o I will go stripped and naked : ^p I will make a wailing like the dragons, and mourning
as the ^q owls.

9 For ^r her wound is incurable ; for ^a it is come unto Judah ; he is come unto the gate of my people, even to Jerusalem.

10 ¶ ^r Declare ye it not at Gath, weep ye not

^a Isaiah xxi. 3 ; xxii. 4 ; Jer. iv. 19.—^o Isaiah xx. 2, 3, 4.
^p Job xxx. 29 ; Psalm cii. 6.—^q Heb. daughters of the owl.
^r Or, she is grievously sick of her wounds.—² Kings xviii. 13 ;
Isa. viii. 7, 8.—² Sam. i. 20.

service of the idols by the deceived idolaters, shall be consumed. This seems to be spoken of the gifts sent to their temple by the Assyrians, whose worship they imitated. *For she gathered it of the hire
of a harlot, &c.*—She got it by the gifts of idolaters, and it shall return to those idolaters again.

Verses 8, 9. Therefore I will wail and howl—I will mourn and lament. I will go stripped and naked—That is, without an upper garment ; or,
with garments rent and torn. This would fitly denote the naked condition to which the ten tribes were to be reduced by their enemies. I will make a wailing like dragons—The word rendered dragons, according to Pocock on the place, may “signify a kind of wild beast like a dog, between a dog
and a fox, or a wolf and a fox, which the Arabians,
from the noise which they make, call Ebn Awi, (filius Eheu,) and our English travellers jackals ; which,
abiding in the fields and waste places, make in the night a lamentable, howling noise ;” see *Encycl.
Brit.* And mourning as the owls—Or rather, ostriches : see note on Job xxx. 29. “It is affirmed
by travellers of good credit,” says Pocock, “that ostriches make a fearful, screeching, lamentable noise.” Shaw also observes, that “during the lonesome part of the night, they often make a very dole-ful and hideous noise ;” and that he had “often heard them groan, as if they were in the greatest agonies.”
For her wound is incurable—The wound of Samaria and Israel, namely, their own sins and God’s just displeasure : the calamities coming upon them will end in their destruction : nothing can prevent it. It is come even unto Judah—The contagion of her sins, and the indignation of God against them, have reached to Judah also, yea, to Jerusalem. This was accordingly fulfilled : for a few years after the Assyrians had destroyed Samaria, and spoiled all the land of Israel, their conquering army, led by Sennacherib, entered the kingdom of Judah, and took all the fenced cities ; and a part of it, termed a great host,
was sent up to the gates of Jerusalem, as is related,
2 Kings xviii. 17.

Verses 10–12. Declare ye it not in Gath—Lest the Philistines triumph. The words seem to be taken out of David’s lamentation over Saul and Jonathan, 2 Sam. i. 20, where see the note. Weep ye not at all—Or, weep ye not with loud weeping, as Archbishop Newcome renders it. Do not make any loud lamentations, lest the evil tidings be spread. In the

at all : in the house of ⁶ Aphrah ^a roll ^{A. M. 3254.}
thyself in the dust. ^{B. C. 750.}

11 Pass ye away, ⁷ thou ⁸ inhabitant of Sa-phir, having thy ⁹ shame naked : the inhabitant of ⁹ Zaanan came not forth in the mourning of ¹⁰ Beth-ezel ; he shall receive of you his standing.

12 For the inhabitant of Maroth ¹¹ waited

⁶ That is, dust.—⁷ Jer. vi. 26.—⁸ Or, thou that dwellest fairly.—⁹ Heb. inhabitress.—¹⁰ Isaiah xx. 4 ; xlvii. 2, 3 ; Jer.
xiii. 22 ; Nah. iii. 5.—⁹ Or, the country of flocks.—¹⁰ Or, place near.—¹¹ Or, was grieved.

*house of Aphrah roll thyself in the dust—Or, wal-
low in the ashes*, as was commonly practised in times of great mourning. The word Aphrah signifies dust ; and the prophet, it is likely, puts it here for Ophrah, a town in the tribe of Benjamin, that the name might better suit their present condition. *Pass
ye away, thou inhabitant of Saphir*—Houbigant says that Eusebius places this city, the name of which signifies fair, or elegant, in the tribe of Judah, between Eleutheropolis and Askelon. Some think, however, that Saphir is not a proper name, and that there was no place so called in Judea ; but that the clause ought to be rendered, *Pass away,
thou inhabitant of a delightful place*, that is, Samaria, which was very pleasantly situated. The prophet here threatens the inhabitants of that place
that they should go into captivity, in a way very unsuitable to their former softness and luxury, even stripped by the conquering enemy, and without so much as a covering to hide their nakedness. The inhabitant of Zaanan—A place in the tribe of Judah, called Zenan, Josh. xv. 37 ; came not forth in the mourning of Beth-ezel—“There was no burial of her dead with solemn mourning out of the precincts of her city, but she was besieged and put to the sword.”—Newcome. Or, the meaning may be, the inhabitants of Zaanan were so much concerned
to provide for their own safety, that they took no
notice of the mournful condition of their near neighbour Beth-ezel, which seems to have been a place near Jerusalem, termed Azal, Zech. xiv. 5. Gro-tius, however, supposes Zaanan to denote Zion, and Beth-ezel to signify Beth-el, called here by another name, importing the house of separation, because it was the principal seat of idolatrous worship. He shall receive of you his standing—The standing, or encamping of an army against the city ; that is, the enemy shall encamp among you, shall stand on your ground, so that you will have no opportunity of coming out to the help of your neighbours. For the inhabitant of Maroth—A town in Judea, (the same probably that is called Maarath, Josh. xv. 59,) waited, &c.—Or rather, as the words may be translated,
*Although the inhabitant of Maroth waited for good,
yet evil came, &c., unto the gate of Jerusalem*—Such a calamity as stopped not at Maroth, but reached even to Jerusalem. By Maroth, which signifies bitterness, or trouble, Grotius understands Ramah, or, expressed as it often is in the plural, Ramoth, a place

A. M. 3254. carefully for good: but ^u evil came
B. C. 750. down from the LORD unto the gate of Jerusalem.

13 O thou inhabitant of ^x Lachish, bind the chariot to the swift beast: she is the beginning of the sin to the daughter of Zion: for the transgressions of Israel were found in thee.

14 Therefore shalt thou ^y give presents ¹² to ^u Amos iii. 6.—^x 2 Kings xviii. 14, 17.—^y 2 Sam. viii. 2;

2 Kings xviii. 14, 15, 16.—¹² Or, for.—¹³ That is, a lie.
^z Josh. xv. 44.—^a Josh. xv. 44.

in the tribe of Benjamin, near Beth-lehem, and not far from Jerusalem.

Verses 13-15. O thou inhabitant of Lachish—
This was a strong fortress in the tribe of Judah: see Josh. xv. 39. Bind the chariot to the swift beast—In order to flee from the approaching enemy. Lachish was one of the first cities that Sennacherib besieged, when he invaded Judea. She is the beginning of the sin to the daughter of Zion—She was the first among the cities of Judah which practised those idolatries which the kings and people of Israel had begun. Therefore shalt thou give presents to Mo-resheth-gath—Or, to Moresheth of Gath; that is, to the Philistines of that country, either to defend thee against the enemy, or to receive thee under their protection. The houses of Achzib shall be a lie to the kings of Israel—The word Achzib signifies a lie. There was a town of that name in the tribe of Judah, mentioned Josh. xv. 44. This place, the prophet here foretels, will answer its name, and disap-point the kings of Israel that depended upon its strength and assistance: see 2 Chron. xxi. 3; and xxviii. 19. Israel is sometimes used for Judah, and so it may probably be taken here. Yet will I bring an heir unto thee, O inhabitant of Mareshah—This was another town belonging to Judah, mentioned

Moresheth-gath: the houses of ¹³ Achib A. M. 3254.
^z shall be a lie to the kings of Israel. B. C. 750.

15 Yet will I bring an heir unto thee, O inhabitant of ^a Mareshah: ¹⁴ he shall come unto ^b Adullam the glory of Israel.

16 Make thee ^c bald, and poll thee for thy ^d delicate children; enlarge thy baldness as the eagle; for they are gone into captivity from thee.

¹⁴ Or, the glory of Israel shall come, &c.—^b 2 Chron. xi. 7.
^c Job i. 20; Isa. xv. 2; xxii. 12; Jer. vii. 29; xvi. 6; xlvii. 5;
xlviii. 37.—^d Lam. iv. 5.

Josh. xv. 44. The name signifies an inheritance;
so here, by way of allusion, it is said, that a new heir
or master should come and take possession of it, namely, a conquering enemy. He shall come unto Adullam the glory of Israel—Or, The glory of Israel shall come to Adullam; the Assyrians, whom Israel once gloried in as their ally, shall come to Adullam. This was a town in Judah not far from Lachish: see Josh. xv. 35. Some think the meaning of this clause is, that the chief men of Israel
should be forced to hide themselves from their enemies in the cave of Adullam, as David did when he fled from Saul, 1 Sam. xxiii.

Verse 16. Make thee bald—O Judah and Israel, tear off thy hair; and poll thee—Shave what thou canst not tear off; for thy delicate children, &c.—
For the loss of them, some being slain, others starved or swept away by pestilence, and the residue carried into captivity. Cutting the hair, or shaving it close, were expressions of mourning and lamentation anciently used among most nations. Enlarge thy baldness as the eagle—When she moults her feathers; for they are gone into captivity, &c.—By these phrases the prophet signifies, that the calamity would be so great as to deserve the strongest expressions of grief.

CHAPTER II.

We have here, (1.) A representation of the sins of Israel, and of the judgments hanging over them, 1-11. (2.) Gracious promises of comfort to the pious, 12, 13.

A. M. 3274. WO to them ^a that devise iniquity, B. C. 730. and ^b work evil upon their beds! when the morning is light, they practise
it, because ^c it is in the power of their hand.

^a Hos. vii. 6.—^b Psa. xxxvi. 4.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verses 1, 2. Wo to them that devise iniquity—
That design and frame mischief; and work evil upon their beds—Contrive how to work it, and actually execute their plans when they rise in the morning.
Because it is in the power of their hand—Because they can do it; because there is none that can hin-

2 And they covet ^d fields, and take A. M. 3274.
them by violence; and houses, and B. C. 730.
take them away: so they ¹ oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage.

^c Gen. xxxi. 29.—^d Isa. v. 8.—¹ Or, defraud.

der them. They make their strength the law of justice; and do whatsoever they have a mind to do,
whether right or wrong, because they have power in their hands. And they covet fields—Set their minds upon the estates of their meaner neighbours,
thinking how convenient they lie to theirs, as Ahab thought concerning the field of Naboth. And take

A. M. 3274. 3 Therefore thus saith the LORD;
B. C. 730.

Behold, against ^e this family do I devise an evil, from which ye shall not remove your necks; neither shall ye go haughtily: ^f for this time is evil.

4 ¶ In that day shall one ^g take up a parable against you, and ^h lament ² with a doleful lamentation, and say, We be utterly spoiled: ⁱ he hath changed the portion of my people: how hath he removed it from me! ³ turning away he hath divided our fields.

5 Therefore, thou shalt have none that shall ^k cast a cord by lot in the congregation of the LORD.

^e Jer. viii. 3.—^f Amos v. 13; Eph. v. 16.—^g Hab. ii. 6.
^h 2 Samuel i. 17.—ⁱ Heb. with a lamentation of lamentations.
^j Chapter i. 15.—^k Or, instead of restoring.—^l Deuteronomy xxxii. 8, 9.

them by violence—By power wrest the estates out of the hands of the owners of them. And houses, and take them away—They take both houses and lands. So they oppress a man and his house—They not only do injustice to a man himself, but to his whole family also, by taking away his heritage, whereby his family, as well as himself, and his posterity after him, were to be supported.

Verse 3. Therefore, behold, against this family do I devise evil—As they devise mischief against others, so will I devise an evil against them, as a due punishment for their sin. As they have unjustly deprived others of their inheritances, so a conquering enemy shall dispossess them and carry them into captivity. The word family is equivalent to people, as appears from Jer. i. 15. From which ye shall not remove your necks—They laid snares for others, where open force would not suffice, so that the poor could not get out of their hands, but were impoverished and enslaved; and God here threatens that he will deal thus with them by the Assyrians, from whose power they should not be able to defend themselves or to escape. Neither shall ye go haughtily—You have made others hang down their heads, and so shall you now; for this time is evil—You have made it an evil time for sins committed against me, and against the poor and innocent: and I will make it an evil time for calamities and miseries on the whole family of Jacob.

Verses 4-6. In that day shall one take up a parable—Shall use a figurative speech, against you—A parable signifies a speech out of the ordinary way, as the Greek word παροιμία imports, and illustrated with metaphors or rhetorical figures. So speaking in parables is opposed to speaking plainly, John xvi. 25, 29. And lament, &c.—Your friends for you, and you for yourselves. He hath changed the portion of my people—Their wealth, plenty, freedom, joy, and honour, into poverty, famine, servitude, grief, and dishonour. How hath he removed it—How dreadfully hath God dealt with Israel; removing their persons

6 ⁴ Prophecy ⁵ ye not, say they to ⁶ them that prophecy: they shall not ⁷ prophecy to them, that they shall not take shame.

7 ¶ O thou that art named The house of Jacob, is the Spirit of the LORD ⁸ straitened? are these his doings? do not my words do good to him that walketh ⁹ uprightly?

8 Even ¹⁰ of late my people is risen up as an enemy: ye pull off the robe ¹¹ with the garment from them that pass by securely as men averse from war.

9 The ¹² women of my people have ye cast out from their pleasant houses; from their

⁴ Or, Prophecy not as they prophecy.—⁵ Heb. Drop, &c.; Ezek. xxi. 2.—⁶ Isa. xxx. 10; Amos ii. 12; vii. 16.—⁷ Heb. shortened.—⁸ Heb. upright.—⁹ Heb. yesterday.—¹⁰ Heb. over against a garment.—¹¹ Or, wives.

into captivity, and transferring their possessions to their enemies! Turning away he hath divided our fields—Turning away from us in displeasure, God hath divided our fields among others. Thou shalt have none that shall cast a cord—None that shall ever return to this land, to see it allotted by line, and given them to possess it. In the congregation of the Lord—They shall no more be the congregation of the Lord, nor their children after them. They shall not prophecy—The people often said to the prophets, Prophecy ye not; and God here declares that he would, in his displeasure, grant their desire: and that the time should come, when the prophets should no longer prophecy unto them, that they might no longer bring contempt upon themselves, or be ignominiously treated by the people, as they had long been.

Verse 7. O thou that art named The house of Jacob—But dost not act suitably to the piety of thy father Jacob, and therefore, though thou art in name, yet not in truth the genuine seed of Jacob. Is the Spirit of the Lord straitened—Is God's hand shortened? Are his power, wisdom, and kindness less now than formerly? Are these his doings—Are these severe proceedings the doings your God delights in? Are the judgments he brings upon you the genuine effects of his power and goodness? and not rather such acts as your sins do, in a manner, constrain him to exercise? Thus punishments are called his strange work, Isa. xxviii. 21. Do not my words do good to him that walketh uprightly?—Certainly, both God's laws, and the words delivered by his prophets, would do you great and lasting good if you would obey them.

Verses 8, 9. Of late my people is risen up as an enemy—AGAINST ME is to be here understood, namely, against God; for this is still spoken in the person of God. The sense is more evident in the Hebrew than in our translation, namely, But they who were yesterday (or lately) my people rise up (now, or to-day) as an enemy. Ye pull off the robe

A. M. 3274. children have ye taken away my
B. C. 730. glory for ever.

10 Arise ye, and depart ; for this is not your rest : because it is ^a polluted, it shall destroy you, even with a sore destruction.

11 If a man ¹¹ walking ^o in the spirit and falsehood do lie, saying, I will prophesy unto thee of wine and of strong drink ; he shall even be the prophet of this people.

12 ¶ ^p I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all

^m Deut. xii. 9.—ⁿ Lev. xviii. 25, 28 ; Jer. iii. 2.—¹¹ Or, walk with the wind, and lie falsely.

with the garment—Ye are guilty of grievous oppression and inhumanity : ye are not content with spoiling the poor, and those who are weaker than yourselves, of their cloak, but take their coat also. Taking the robe with the garment, or the cloak and coat also, seems to have been a proverbial expression to signify a high degree of oppression and injury. From them that pass by securely—Who, fearing no evil, are going about their private affairs ; as men averse from war—Who are willing to live peaceably with you, and give you no manner of provocation : even these, you in a violent manner strip of all their substance, even to their wearing apparel. The women of my people have ye cast out, &c.—The widows, wives, and daughters of my people have you, by acts of injustice and oppression, turned out of their habitations, which to them were pleasant, and in which they delighted. From their children have ye taken away my glory for ever—You have robbed their children, or posterity, of their houses and estates, which were secured to them by the law of God from any sale or alienation beyond the year of jubilee, which was the glory of my bounty to them : yet you have confiscated these their inheritances for ever. Or, as some think, the sense of this clause may be, “When you plunder their houses you take away their children, and sell them to strangers and idolaters ; and they are no longer esteemed my children, because they become the worshippers of false gods.”

Verse 10. Arise ye, and depart—Ye Israelites prepare for your departure out of this land, for it shall be no longer yours ; it is not your rest, because it is polluted—Though it was given to the posterity of Jacob for a place of rest, under my protection, yet this was on condition of their continued obedience. And because you have polluted it by your sins—You shall be cast out of it, or shall be destroyed in it ; even with a sore destruction—This threatening is to the same effect with the declaration made by Moses concerning the Canaanites whom God drove out before Israel. The land is defiled, therefore do I visit the iniquity thereof upon it, and the land itself vomiteth out her inhabitants. And it accords with the solemn caution which God then gave his people, saying, Ye shall therefore keep my statutes, and shall not commit any of these abominations ; that the land spew not you out also, when of thee ; I will surely gather the remnant of Israel ; I will put them together ^a as the sheep of Bozrah, as the flock in the midst of their fold : ^r they shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men.

13 The breaker is come up before them : they have broken up and have passed through the gate, and are gone out by it ; and ^s their king shall pass before them, ^t and the LORD on the head of them.

^o Ezek. xiii. 3.—^p Chap. iv. 6, 7.—^a Jer. xxxi. 10.—^r Ezek. xxxvi. 37.—^s Hos. iii. 5.—^t Isa. lii. 12.

ye defile it, as it spewed out the nations that were before you, Lev. xviii. 25–28.

Verse 11. If a man walking in the spirit and falsehood—If a man falsely pretending to have the spirit of prophecy, do lie—Speak things very false, and utter pretended predictions of events that shall never take place. Saying, I will prophesy unto thee of wine and strong drink—I will discourse to you of sensual enjoyments : or, I will give you assurance of peace, prosperity, and plenty. You shall live long, eat, drink, and be merry. He shall even be the prophet of this people—Such as they like and choose, a man perfectly to their minds. Some render the clause, I will prophesy unto thee for wine and strong drink, understanding Micah (who here speaks in his own person) as telling them, if he were one who would prophesy lies unto them, and bring them pleasing tidings, however false, for the sake of having his belly filled with wine and strong drink ; that then they would extol him, and look upon him as a choice prophet ; for that such a one only as spoke smooth things unto them, with whatever selfish views it was apparent he did it, was a prophet to their liking ; and that, therefore, if he had been a false prophet, he should have prophesied so as to get wine and strong drink of them instead of reproaches.

Verses 12, 13. I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee, &c.—Many commentators, connecting these verses with the preceding, interpret them as a prediction of the captivity of Israel and Judah. By assembling all of Jacob, and gathering the remnant of Israel, as a flock in the midst of their fold, they understand bringing them together into Samaria and Jerusalem, to be besieged in those cities, and thence taken out for slaughter or captivity. By the breaker being come up before them, breaking up and passing through the gate, they understand the enemies assaulting their cities, (namely, the Assyrians and Chaldeans,) breaking down their walls, and entering in and going out the gates of them, just as the citizens used to do ; and by their king passing before them, his being carried into captivity along with them. By the Lord on (or, at) the head of them, they understand, God being on the side of, or prospering the Assyrians and Chaldeans in their attempts against the Israelites and Jews. Others, however, interpret these verses of the restoration of the Jewish people from captivity, and therefore understand by the breaker coming up before them, him who was to break the bonds of their captivity, or break through all obstacles that hindered their restoration, and open to them the way home. The following expressions, They have broken up, and have passed through the gate, and are gone out by it, they consider as metaphorical, describing their return, in allusion to a flock of sheep, which, as soon as a passage is opened for one to get out, do all of them follow; and that these expressions are made use of because it is said, in the foregoing verse, that they should be put or gathered together as a flock of sheep in the midst of their folds. The last clause they render, Their king shall pass before them, even the Lord on the head of them—That is, the Messiah, who is both the Lord and their King, shall lead and conduct them as their captain-general. Thus the Jewish commentators generally understand the breaker and their king of the same person, namely, the Messiah, as may be seen in Dr. Pocock on the place. Bishop Pearson cites the words of Moses Hadarson to the same purpose, in his exposition of the Sixth Article of the Creed. It may be observed further, that most of those who understand the Messiah as being meant by the breaker and their king, though they consider the promise as receiving its first accomplishment in the restoration of the Jews from Babylon, yet suppose it will receive a much more complete fulfilment in the latter days, when the general conversion of the Jews and Israelites, and their restoration to their own land, shall take place; it being very usual with the prophets, after they have denounced the destruction of the Jewish republic, to foretel their grand and spiritual deliverance; that the people might not think themselves entirely forsaken of God, before the promises made to their fathers were completed. As this passage is so extremely obscure, it has been thought best to lay both these interpretations before the reader, that he may judge which is most consistent with the words of the text.

CHAPTER III.

In this chapter the prophet reproves oppressing princes, 1-4; and false prophets, 5-7; and threatens both, 8-12.

A. M. 3278. AND I said, Hear, I pray you, O heads of Jacob, and ye princes of the house of Israel: ^a Is it not for you to know judgment?

2 Who hate the good, and love the evil; who pluck off their skin from off them, and their flesh from off their bones;

3 Who also ^b eat the flesh of my people, and flay their skin from off them; and they break their bones, and chop them in pieces, A. M. 3278. as for the pot, and ^c as flesh within B. C. 726. the caldron.

4 Then ^d shall they cry unto the LORD, but he will not hear them: he will even hide his face from them at that time, as they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.

5 ¶ Thus saith the LORD ^e concerning the prophets that make my people err, that ^f bite

^a Jer. v. 4, 5.—^b Psa. xiv. 4.—^c Ezek. xi. 3, 7.—^d Psa. xviii. 41; Proverbs i. 28; Isaiah i. 15; Ezekiel viii. 18; Zech.

vii. 13.—^e Isaiah lvi. 10, 11; Ezekiel xiii. 10; xxii. 25. ^f Chap. ii. 11; Matt. vii. 15.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verses 1-4. Hear, O heads of Jacob, &c.—That the justice of God, in bringing upon them the punishments which he had threatened, might more evidently appear, the prophet here shows that there was no rank of them free from very grievous crimes; that even those, who ought to have excelled others in piety and virtue, were the first in offences. We find Ezekiel making the same complaint, chap. xxii. 6, &c. Is it not for you to know judgment—Ought not you to understand and conform to the just laws of your God? You princes, magistrates, and ruling officers, ought of all men to know and do right. And, as it is your province to judge and punish those who break human laws, this ought to make you reflect that God will certainly execute judgment on the breakers of his laws. If you make any reflection, you must needs be sensible, that punishment must await you for your crimes. Who hate the good—Ye who hate, not only to do good, but the good which is done, and those that do it; and love the evil—Choose and delight in both evil works and evil workers; who pluck off their skin from off them—Who use the people, whom you govern, as cruelly as the shepherd would use his flock, who, instead of shearing the fleece, would pluck the skin and flesh from off their bones. Who eat the flesh of my people, &c.—Who devour the goods and livelihood of your brethren. And break their bones, &c.—An allusion to lions, bears, or wolves, which devour the flesh, and break the bones of the defenceless lambs. And chop them in pieces as for the pot, &c.—All these are metaphorical expressions, to signify the oppressions of the people by their heads, or great men; and how they, by one means or other, deprived them of their substance, and divided it among themselves. Then shall they—Namely, the heads of the people and princes spoken of above; cry unto the Lord—When these miseries come upon them; but he will not hear them, he will even hide, &c.—As they have showed no pity to others, he will have no pity on them.

Verse 5. Thus saith the Lord concerning the prophets—As the prophets prophesied falsely, and

A. M. 3278. with their teeth, and cry, Peace; and
B. C. 726. ^s he that putteth not into their mouths,
they even prepare war against him:

6 ^h Therefore, night shall be unto you, ¹ that ye shall not have a vision; and it shall be dark unto you, ² that ye shall not divine; ¹ and the sun shall go down over the prophets, and the day shall be dark over them.

7 Then shall the seers be ashamed, and the diviners confounded: yea, they shall all cover their ³ lips; ^k for there is no answer of God.

^s Ezek. xiii. 18, 19.—^h Isa. viii. 20, 22; Ezek. xiii. 23, 24;
Zech. xiii. 4.—¹ Heb. from a vision.—² Heb. from divining.
³ Amos viii. 9.—^k Heb. upper lip.—^k Psalm lxxiv. 9; Amos

it was chiefly through their means that the princes bore rule, the prophet next addresses them, and lets them hear their doom; that make my people err—
That lead them into mistakes, both concerning what they should do, and what God would do with them:
that tell them they do well, and all shall be well with them, whereas they are in the paths of sin, and within a step of ruin. It is ill indeed with a people when their leaders cause them to err, and those draw them out of the way that should guide them and go before them in it. That bite with their teeth,
and cry, Peace—Who speak smooth things, and promise peace and prosperity to the people, while they are bringing destruction upon them; or, who compliment and flatter those that will furnish them with gifts, and feed them well. And he that putteth
not into their mouths—That will not entertain them
at his table, and treat them with wine and strong drink; they even prepare war against him—They raise false accusations against him, as if he were an enemy to the government, and thereby bring him into trouble; or in some other way do him all the mischief they can.

Verses 6, 7. Therefore night shall be unto you— Darkness, uncertainty, perplexity, and heavy troubles, shall be to you prophets; that ye shall not have a vision—You shall see your predictions so fully confuted, that you shall no more pretend to have a vision, or dare to foretel any thing. And the sun
shall go down over the prophets, and the day shall be dark, &c.—As they shall have no light, or revelation, from heaven; so dark days, or dismal calamities, shall overtake them, as a just punishment for their frauds and impostures. Or, if the prophet be considered as addressing the people, the meaning of the verse is, Since ye have given ear to such prophets, and rejected the true ones, the time shall come when there shall be no true vision among you, no divine counsel to direct you; but ye shall be involved in darkness and uncertainty, without knowing what course to take. Then shall the seers be ashamed, &c.—For the false pretences which they have made to the gift of prophecy; yea, they shall cover their lips—Covering the lips, or lower part of the face, was used as a sign to express being under some great affliction, or shame; for there is no an-

8 ¶ But truly I am full of power A. M. 3278.
by the Spirit of the LORD, and of B. C. 726.
judgment, and of might, ¹ to declare unto Jacob his transgression, and to Israel his sin.

9 Hear this, I pray you, ye heads of the house of Jacob, and princes of the house of Israel, that abhor judgment, and pervert all equity.

10 ^m They build up Zion with ^a blood, ⁴ and Jerusalem with iniquity.

11 ^o The heads thereof judge for reward, and ^p the priests thereof teach for hire, and the pro-

viii. 11.—¹ Isa. lviii. 1.—^m Jer. xxii. 13.—^a Ezek. xxii. 27;
Hab. ii. 12; Zeph. iii. 3.—⁴ Heb. bloods.—^o Isaiah i. 23;
Ezek. xxii. 12; Hos. iv. 18; Chap. vii. 3.—^p Jer. vi. 13.

swer of God—Because the answer, which they pretended to be from God, now appears not to have been from him.

Verse 8. Truly I am full of power by the Spirit of the Lord—Here Micah speaks of himself by way of contrast to the false prophets, and declares that he was filled with a divine prophetic influence, and not with dainties, wine, and strong drink, like those false pretenders to prophecy; and of judgment—To discern truth from error, right from wrong, and to judge properly of times and seasons, and improve them accordingly. And of might—Of courage, constancy, and resolution to speak whatever God commands me, without being deterred from it by the fear of any one, however great, or in whatever station.

Verses 9–11. Hear this, ye heads of the house of Jacob, &c.—This address to the great men, shows
the prophet's courage and impartiality. That abhor
judgment, &c.—Who do not love to pass a right judgment in matters that come before you, because you make no advantage to yourselves by so doing;
but covet to have large bribes given you, to pervert
equity, and make wrong decisions. They build up Zion with blood, &c.—Who build houses with the riches gotten by violence, and by the condemnation of the innocent. The heads thereof judge for re- ward—The judges pass sentence, not according to the right of the case, but according as they have been bribed. The priests thereof teach for hire—The priests for the sake of lucre teach those things which are agreeable to the kings and people, and not what God hath commanded to be taught. It was the duty of the priests to instruct the people, as well as to attend upon the service of the temple; for which cause they had cities allotted to them in all parts of the land: but, not being content with that plentiful revenue which the law allowed them, they made a corrupt gain of their office. And the prophets divine
for money—This is to be understood of the false prophets. Yet will they lean upon the Lord—Pretend to trust in him, and expect his favour, protection,
and blessing. And say, Is not the Lord among us—
As our God and our shield? None evil—Such as war, famine, and captivity, can come upon us—
While we have him with us to defend and help us.

A. M. 3278. phets thereof divine for money: ^a yet
B. C. 726. will they lean upon the LORD, ^e and say, Is not the LORD among us? none evil
can come upon us.

^a Isa. xlviii. 2; Jer. vii. 4; Rom. ii. 17.—^e Heb. saying.

Verse 12. Therefore shall Zion for your sake—That is, because of your transgressions, ye judges, priests, and prophets; be ploughed as a field—“There is nothing which hinders us from referring this prophecy to the first destruction of Jerusalem: for though the foundations of the walls were left, yet a great number of houses within the city were overturned, as well by the Chaldeans as by the Jews themselves; who possibly used the materials to repair the breaches made in the walls during the long siege they underwent; when there could be no wonder if many places were ploughed as a field, for the purposes of corn, which before were gardens and houses: see 1 Mac. iv. 38. The prophecy, however, may have a further respect to the total destruction of

12 Therefore shall Zion for your A. M. 3278 sake be ^r ploughed as a field, ^a and Je- B. C. 726.
rusalem shall become heaps, and ^t the mountain
of the house as the high places of the forest.

^r Jer. xxvi. 18; Chap. i. 6.—^a Psa. lxxix. 1.—^t Chap. iv. 2.

Jerusalem when Terentius Rufus, by the order of Titus, ploughed up the very foundations of it.” See Houbigant and Calmet. And Jerusalem shall become heaps—The word heaps alludes to the heaps of stones laid up together in fields newly ploughed. And the mountain of the house—That is, of the Lord’s house; as the high places of the forest—The place where the temple stood, which was upon mount Moriah, shall be overrun with grass and shrubs, like mountains situated in a forest. This is that passage, quoted Jer. xxvi. 18, which Hezekiah and his princes took in good part, yea, it seems, they believed and laid it to heart, in consequence whereof they repented, and so the execution of it did not come in their days.

CHAPTER IV.

In this chapter we have a prediction, (1,) Of the prosperity of the church, 1-10. (2,) Of the destruction of her enemies, 11-13.

A. M. 3284. BUT ^a in the last days it shall
B. C. 720. come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the LORD shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it.

2 And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

^a Isa. ii. 2, &c.; Ezek. xvii. 22, 23.—^b Isa. ii. 4; Joel iii. 10.
¹ Or, scythes.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verses 1-5. In the last days it shall come to pass, &c.—The first three of these verses are the same as Isa. ii. 2-4, where see the notes. They evidently “contain a prophecy which was to be fulfilled by the coming of the Messiah; when the [believing] Gentiles were to be admitted into covenant with God, and the apostles were to preach the gospel, beginning at Jerusalem; when Christ was to be the spiritual Judge and King of many people, was to convince many nations of their errors and vices, and was to found a religion which had the strongest tendency

3 ¶ And he shall judge among A. M. 3284.
many people, and rebuke strong na- B. C. 720.
tions afar off; and they shall beat their swords
into ^b ploughshares, and their spears into ¹ pruning-hooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, ^c neither shall they learn war
any more.

4 ^d But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig-tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the LORD of hosts hath spoken it.

5 For ^e all people will walk every one in the name of his god, and ^f we will walk in the ^c Psa. lxxii. 7.—^d 1 Kings iv. 25; Zech. iii. 10.—^e Jer. ii.

11.—^f Zech. x. 12.

to promote peace.”—Newcome. They shall sit every man under his vine, &c.—This shall be the effect of that peace foretold in the foregoing verse, every man shall securely enjoy his own possessions, and the fruits of his labours. The expressions are figurative, signifying a state of uninterrupted tranquillity. All people will walk every one in the name of his god—It is the practice of all people to serve their gods, and to be attached to the religion of their forefathers, though false and absurd. And surely it much more becomes us to cleave steadfastly to the service of the true God, and not to disobey his laws

A. M. 3284. name of the LORD our God for ever
B. C. 720. and ever.

6 ¶ In that day, saith the LORD, ^g will I assemble her that halteth, ^h and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted;

7 And I will make her that halted ⁱ a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the LORD ^k shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever.

8 And thou, O tower of ² the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem.

^g Ezek. xxxiv. 16; Zeph. iii. 19.—^h Psa. cxlvii. 2; Ezek. xxxiv. 13; xxxvii. 21.—ⁱ Chapter ii. 12; v. 3, 7, 8; vii. 18. ^k Isa. ix. 6; xxiv. 23; Dan. vii. 14, 27; Luke i. 33; Rev. xi. 15.

or forsake his ordinances, as we have too often done. This prophecy will be remarkably fulfilled at the time of the general conversion of the Jews, as has been observed in the notes on the parallel place in Isaiah.

Verses 6, 7. In that day—At that time; will I assemble her that halteth—Or, her that is weak, or bowed down; namely, the Jewish people, weakened with the hard usage of oppressing conquerors. And I will gather her that is driven out—Captive Judah, driven out from their own land. And her that I have afflicted—That I have subjected to great calamities. The calamity of the seventy years' captivity in Babylon seems to be chiefly referred to: as if he had said, "Though I have broken the power of my people, removed them into captivity afar off, and afflicted them; yet will I restore them to their country, I will send them the Messiah, and will be always their king." I will make her that halted a remnant—A part of them shall be preserved, as a seed which shall take root and increase, which shall continue to the coming of the Messiah, and in which the designs of my providence shall be accomplished.

Verse 8. And thou, O tower of the flock—Or, of Eder, as Archbishop Newcome and many others translate the word, considering it as a proper name; a tower in or near Beth-lehem; see Gen. xxxv. 21. Or, as some think, a tower near the sheep-gate in Jerusalem, (Neh. iii. 1, 32,) put here for the whole city. The word signifies a flock; the strong hold of the daughter of Zion—Hebrew, Ophel, a strong fort. Both expressions seem to be put for the whole city. Unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion—This was intended to signify the great honour coming to mount Zion, that the former dominion, the government, after seventy years' captivity, should return to the former royal family, the house of David, and continue in it till Shilo came. This, in the type, was fulfilled after the restoration of the Jews to their own land under Zerubbabel and his successors; but the whole antitype concerns the Messiah's kingdom.

9 Now, why dost thou cry out aloud? ^{A. M. 3284.}
^{B. C. 720.} is there no king in thee? is thy counsellor perished? for ^m pangs have taken thee as a woman in travail.

10 Be in pain, and labour to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail: for now shalt thou go forth out of the city, and thou shalt dwell in the field, and thou shalt go even to Babylon; there shalt thou be delivered; there the LORD shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies.

11 ¶ ⁿ Now also many nations are gathered against thee, that say, Let her be defiled, and let our eye ^o look upon Zion.

² Or, Edar, Genesis xxxv. 21.—¹ Jer. viii. 19.—^m Isaiah xlii. 8; xxi. 3; Jeremiah xxx. 6; l. 43.—ⁿ Lament. ii. 16. ^o Obad. 12; Chap. vii. 10.

Verses 9, 10. Now—Now I have promised such great things to you, why dost thou cry out aloud—As a woman in the anguish of her travail? Here the Jewish people are addressed, as bewailing themselves under the miseries of their captivity. Is there no king in thee?—Thou hast lost the king Zedekiah, but thy God, thy king, is with thee. Is thy counsellor perished?—Hast thou none among thy wise counsellors left? Yet the Wonderful Counsellor is with thee. Messiah, the wisdom of the Father, hath the conduct of thy sufferings, deliverance, and re-establishment. For pangs hath taken thee as a woman in travail—This may be understood of the time when Zedekiah and his counsellors were seized by the Chaldeans. Be in pain, and labour to bring forth—Be like a woman in her pangs; bow thyself down, and show all the signs of excessive pain, for there is a sufficient cause. For now shalt thou go forth out of the city, &c.—Thou shalt not only have troubles, sorrows, and dangers, in the wars against the Babylonians; but shortly thou shalt be driven out from thy city and country, and have no habitation of thy own, but be forced to dwell in a foreign land. The Jews' captivity is expressed thus, because their city and temple being destroyed, they should live in an obscure state. The same condition is elsewhere expressed by their living in the wilderness, Ezek. xx. 35. And thou shalt go even to Babylon; there shalt thou be delivered—Thou shalt be carried away, even as far as Babylon; but there, where, according to all human probability, and the expectations of thine enemies, thou mayest seem to be cut off from all relief, even there shalt thou be delivered:—such is the power, and loving-kindness, and faithfulness of Jehovah thy God.

Verses 11, 12. Now also—The time is at hand; many nations are gathered against thee—This may be understood of the Chaldeans and their associates, who pleased themselves with the thoughts of profaning the temple, laying waste the city of Jerusalem, and looking upon it in that condition. Or, it may be understood of the heathen nations round about

A. M. 3284. 12 But they know not ^p the thoughts
B. C. 720. of the LORD, neither understand they his counsel: for he shall gather them ^q as the sheaves into the floor.

13 ^r Arise and thrash, O daughter of Zion:

^p Isa. lv. 8; Rom. xi. 33.—^q Isa. xxi. 10.—^r Isa. xli. 15, 16;
Jer. li. 33.

Jerusalem, who should take occasion to insult the Jews in their calamity, should please themselves with seeing the temple profaned, and should gratify their spite with viewing Jerusalem in a forlorn condition. To look upon an enemy, signifies, in Scripture phrase, to behold his fall with delight. But they know not the thoughts of the Lord—But while they act in such a manner, and take pleasure in insulting over thee in thy calamitous condition, they are altogether ignorant of God's designs in permitting this, and what is soon to follow, namely, that he will gather them as sheaves into the floor, to be trodden under foot, and broken in pieces, while he will deliver and restore to their own land his people, whose miseries these their enemies now please themselves with the thoughts of beholding.

Verse 13. Arise and thrash, O daughter of Zion—The daughter of Zion means the Jewish people, whose power and victory over their enemies are here foretold. The expressions made use of are figurative, alluding to the manner of separating the corn from the chaff in Judea, which was done chiefly by treading it with the feet of oxen. The purport of the passage is, that the Jews are here called upon to arise and tread down their enemies. For I will make thy horn iron, and thy hoofs brass—Thou shalt be enabled to do this with ease and safety. And thou shalt beat in pieces—Or, thalt bruise, many people—This might be spoken of the victories which the Jewish people, some time after their

for I will make thy horn iron, and I ^{A. M. 3284.}
will make thy hoofs brass: and thou ^{B. C. 720.}
shalt ^s beat in pieces many people: ^t and I will consecrate their gain unto the LORD, and their substance unto ^u the LORD of the whole earth.

^s Dan. ii. 44.—^t Isa. xviii. 7; xxiii. 18; lx. 6, 9.—^u Zech.
iv. 14; vi. 5.

return, were to gain over the neighbouring nations, especially under the Maccabees and their successors. But the prophecy does not appear to have had a full accomplishment in these victories: nor has any event yet occurred in the history of the Jewish people which fully answers to it. This consideration has induced some commentators to expound the passage in a spiritual sense, namely, of bringing the Gentiles into subjection to Christ and his gospel, and of the victory which the Christian Church should obtain over her persecuting enemies after the conversion of the Roman emperor Constantine to the faith of Christ. Thus Dr. Pocock, Lowth, and many others understand it. The nations thought to have ruined Christianity in its infancy, but it proved victorious over them; those that persisted in their enmity were broken to pieces, Matt. xxi. 44; particularly the Jewish nation: but multitudes, by divine grace, were gained to the church, and, as is signified in the next clause, they and their substance were consecrated to the Lord Jesus, the Lord of the whole earth. We have reason to believe, however, that this prophecy will have a still more eminent and evident accomplishment, when all the enemies of the church shall be subdued, and the saints reigning with Christ shall have complete power over the nations, and shall rule the refractory with a rod of iron, Rev. ii. 26, 27: compare this text with chap. v. 8-15 of this prophecy, and with Isa. xiv. 2; xli. 15; lx. 12; lxi. 5; on which places see the notes.

CHAPTER V.

In this chapter we have, (1.) The troubles of Israel, 1. (2.) The birth and advancement of the Messiah, 2-4. (3.) His protection of his people, and victory over their enemies, 5, 6. (4.) The increase of the church and destruction of her enemies, 7-15.

A. M. 3284. NOW gather thyself in troops, O
B. C. 720. daughter of troops; he hath laid siege against us: they shall ^a smite the judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek. ^{A. M. 3284.}

2 But thou, ^b Beth-lehem Ephratah, though thou be little ^c among the ^d thousands

^a Lam. iii. 30; Matt. v. 39; xxvii. 30.—^b Matt. ii. 6;

John vii. 42.—^c 1 Sam. xxiii. 23.—^d Exod. xviii. 25.

NOTES ON CHAPTER V.

Verse 1. Now gather thyself, &c.—It seems this verse ought to be joined to the foregoing chapter, as it evidently belongs to it, and not to this, which is upon a quite different subject. Thus considered, after the promises given of a restoration from the captivity into which they should be carried, and of victory over their surrounding enemies, the prophesy concludes with bidding them first expect an enemy to come against them, who should lay siege to their chief city, and carry their insolence so far as to treat the judge of Israel in the most indignant and despightful manner, such as striking him on the cheek, or face, with a rod, or stick. This, it is likely, was fulfilled on Zedekiah, who was treated in a contumelious manner by the Chaldeans, as if he

A. M. 3284. of Judah, yet out of thee shall he
B. C. 720. come forth unto me that is to be “Ruler in Israel;” whose goings forth have been from of old, from ¹everlasting.

3 Therefore will he give them up, until the

• Gen. xlix.¹ 10; Isa. ix. 6.—^f Psa. xc. 2; Prov. viii. 22, 23;
John i. 1.—¹ Heb. the days of eternity.

had been a common captive, 2 Kings xxv. 6, 7. And as the singular number is often used for the plural, by the judge of Israel may be meant the judges of Israel, including their principal men, as well as the king, for they doubtless were treated no better than he was; nay, probably, still more indignantly.

Verse 2. But thou, Beth-lehem Ephratah—Here we have evidently the beginning of another subject, quite different from any thing that the first verse can relate to, and with which it seems to have no connection. The word Ephrah, or Ephratah, is here added, to distinguish Beth-lehem in the tribe of Judah, from another Beth-lehem in the tribe of Zebulun. It is called Ephratah, from the fruitfulness of the land where it stood: the word whence that term is derived importing fruitfulness. Though thou be little—The word though is not in the Hebrew, but supplied by our translators. And the sense of the sentence, it seems, is unnecessarily altered by its introduction. Many interpreters render the clauses interrogatively, thus; Art thou little among the thousands of Judah? The expression, the thousands of Judah, seems to have been used in allusion to the first division of the people, into thousands, hundreds, and other subordinate divisions. The rendering of the clause thus, Art thou little, &c., which implies the contrary, thou art not little, is certainly the right way of rendering it, because St. Matthew understood it, and quotes it, in this sense, chap. ii. 6. And thou Beth-lehem, in the land of Judah, art not the least among the princes of Judah. Bishop Newcome’s translation of the clause accords still more exactly with St. Matthew’s, “Thou, Beth-lehem Ephratah, art thou too little to be among the leaders of Judah? Out of thee shall come, &c.” the word אלפי, rendered thousands, often signifying heads of thousands. Yet out of thee, &c.—The word yet also is not in the Hebrew; and if the preceding clause be rendered, as is here proposed, interrogatively, it is not necessary to complete the sense of the verse; indeed, it would only obscure it. Out of thee shall come forth, &c., that is to be ruler in Israel—This prophecy can be applied, with no propriety, to any other but the Messiah. The words must be very much wrested and changed from their natural meaning, or deprived of their full force or signification, before they can be applied to any other person. The Jews, even the most learned ones, before and at our Saviour’s time, understood this to be spoken of the Messiah; for St. Matthew informs us, chap. ii. 5, 6, that when Herod inquired of the chief priests and scribes, assembled together, to give him information where Christ should be born, they agreed unanimously that it was in Beth-lehem time that ^gshe which travaileth hath A. M. 3284.

brought forth: then ^hthe remnant of B. C. 720.
his brethren shall return unto the children of Israel.

4 ¶ And he shall stand and ²feed ⁱin the

g Chap. iv. 10.—^h Chap. iv. 7.—² Or, rule.—ⁱ Isa. xl. 11;
xlix. 10; Ezek. xxxiv. 23; Chap. vii. 14.

of Judea, alleging these very words as a certain and undeniable proof of it. And so did the generality of the Jews of that age, who speak of it as an undoubted truth, that Christ was to come of the seed of David, and of the town of Beth-lehem, where David was, John vii. 42. The Chaldee agrees with their sentiments, and expressly applies the prophecy to the Messiah; and our Lord was born at Beth-lehem by an especial act of Providence, that this prophecy might plainly be fulfilled in him: see Luke ii. 4. The expression, come forth, is the same as to be born. Whose goings forth have been of old from everlasting—Hebrew, מקדם ימי עולם, rendered by the LXX., απ αρχης, ες ημεραν αιωνος; and exactly in the same sense by the Vulgate, ab initio, a diebus æternitatis, from the beginning, from the days of eternity. So these Hebrew expressions must of necessity signify in divers places of Scripture, being used to signify the eternity of God: see Psalm lv. 19, and xc. 2; Prov. viii. 23; Hab. i. 12. The words naturally import an original, distinct from the birth of Christ mentioned in the foregoing sentence, which original is here declared to be from all eternity.

Verse 3. Therefore will he give them up—The particle לכן rendered therefore, should rather be here rendered, nevertheless. The meaning is, Notwithstanding the promise of so great a blessing, God would give up his people into the hands of their enemies, or leave them to be exercised with troubles and afflictions, till the appointed time of their deliverance should come. Until the time that she which travaileth hath brought forth—Until the daughter of Zion, compared here to a woman in travail, shall be delivered out of captivity. Or rather, till the church of God, of which the daughter of Zion was a type, shall bring forth spiritual children of Jew and Gentile extraction unto God, by the preaching of the gospel; see Gal. iv. 27. This prophecy will be more fully completed in the general conversion and restoration of the Jewish nation in the latter days: see Isa. lxvi. 7–11. Then the remnant of his brethren—The brethren of the Messiah, those of Judah and Benjamin especially, who were carried captive; shall return unto the children of Israel—Or, be converted with the children of Israel. Then the remnant of the dispersed Jews, upon their conversion, shall join themselves to the true Israelites, and make one church with them. Both the LXX. and Chaldee read, the remnant of their brethren: but if we follow the present Hebrew, we may understand it of the believers that were to be added to the church; for Christ vouchsafes to call all believers his brethren: see Heb. ii. 11; Matt. xii. 50.

Verse 4. And he shall stand and feed—Or rule

A. M. 3284. strength of the LORD, in the majesty
B. C. 720. of the name of the LORD his God;
and they shall abide: for now ^kshall he be great unto the ends of the earth.

5 And this man ^lshall be the peace, when the Assyrian shall come into our land: and when he shall tread in our palaces, then shall

^k Psa. lxxii. 8; Isa. lii. 13; Zech. ix. 10; Luke i. 32.—^l Psa. lxxii. 7; Isa. ix. 6; Zech. ix. 10; Luke ii. 14; Eph. ii. 14.

as the word רעה, here rendered feed, often signifies: that is, he shall go on, he shall continue to rule, or feed, his people. Christ shall diligently perform the office of a shepherd, or governor, over his church. In the strength of the Lord, in the majesty of the name of the Lord—God, or the indwelling Deity, strengthening and exalting his human nature. The expression, the name of the Lord his God, might be intended to signify the Messiah's acting by commission from the Father, in whose name he came, preached, wrought miracles, and instituted his gospel church. And they shall abide—His church, made up of converted Jews and Gentiles, shall continue; the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. For now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth—Some interpret this as signifying the making the true God known over all the earth: but it seems rather to be intended of the Messiah; for the angel, who foretold his conception to his virgin mother, as is related Luke i. 32, 33, seems plainly to allude to this prophecy, saying, He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, &c. And he is dignified with such titles as were never given to any creature, as the apostle proves at large, Hebrews i. 4–14.

Verse 5. This man shall be the peace—Christ is our peace as a priest, making atonement for sin, and reconciling us to God: he is our peace as a king, conquering our enemies, protecting us against their attacks, and preserving our minds in peace and tranquillity. In this latter sense the expression seems to be taken here: as if he had said, The Messiah, in all ages, whether before or after his incarnation, secures the peace and welfare of his church and people, against all the attempts of his and their enemies. When the Assyrian, &c.—After the illustrious prophecy relating to the Messiah, in the foregoing verses, the prophet passes on to the subversion of the Assyrian empire, and, under the type of that ancient enemy of God's people, foretels the overthrow of all their enemies, especially of the antichristian powers which should attack his church in the latter days. Shall come into our land—As Sennacherib did with an overwhelming army, within a few years after this prophecy was delivered, when, by the power and authority of the Messiah, the Son of God, in his pre-existent state, (see verse 2,) the Assyrian army was defeated, and Judea's peace secured. When he shall tread in our palaces—Which Sennacherib did in all the cities of Judah, except Jerusalem, against which he could not prevail, because we raise against him seven shep- A. M. 3284.

herds, and eight ³ principal men. B. C. 720.

6 And they shall ⁴waste the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of ^mNimrod ⁵in
the entrances thereof: thus shall he ⁿdeliver us from the Assyrian, when he cometh into our land, and when he treadeth within our borders.

³ Heb. princes of men.—⁴ Heb. eat up.—^m Gen. x. 8, 10, 11.
⁵ Or, with her own naked swords.—ⁿ Luke i. 71.

Immanuel was with Hezekiah and that city, as foretold Isa. viii. 8–10, and xxxvii. 32–35, where see the notes. Then shall we raise against him—Namely, Hezekiah, and with him the prophets and people, by prayer shall prevail with God to send deliverance. This seems primarily to refer to the deliverance of Hezekiah and his kingdom from the Assyrian army who invaded them. Seven shepherds and eight principal men—Or, seven rulers and eight princes of men, as Archbishop Newcome renders it, who thinks the prophet means the chiefs of the Medes and Babylonians, the prefects of different provinces, who, some time after the fall of Sennacherib, took Nineveh, overthrew the Assyrian empire, and thereby delivered the Jews from that oppressive power. Their number, he thinks, may have been what is here specified. Or, seven and eight may stand for an indefinite number, as similar expressions often do.

Verse 6. And they—The seven shepherds and eight principal men; or, the rulers and princes of men, mentioned in the preceding clause; those great and successful instruments of God's revenge, and his church's deliverance, shall waste the land of Assyria with the sword—Which the Medes and Babylonians did, under the conduct of Merodach-baladan, king of Babylon, who, taking advantage of the weakness of the Assyrian kingdom, humbled partly by the great destruction of Sennacherib's army, and the murder of that mighty monarch, and partly by the civil wars which ensued between the regicides and Esar-haddon, took arms, and succeeded in the attempt of subduing the Assyrian kingdom, with much slaughter and bloodshed. This Merodach-baladan was the person who sent the congratulatory letter and embassy to Hezekiah, lately cured by a miracle of his otherwise mortal disease, and delivered from the Assyrian power, Isa. xxxix. 1, 2. And the land of Nimrod—The same with the land of Assyria. In the entrances thereof—The fortified frontiers, the garrisons, which kept all the entrances of the kingdom. Or, by the land of Nimrod, the Babylonish empire may be understood, which afterward by Nebuchadnezzar's hand destroyed the Jews, Jerusalem, and the temple, and was overthrown by the Medes and Persians, whom God raised up to punish Babylon, and release the Jews. Thus shall he deliver us from the Assyrian—Whether considered literally as the present enemies of God's people, or as types of all their other and future enemies.

A. M. 3284. 7 And ° the remnant of Jacob shall
B. C. 720. be in the midst of many people ^p as a dew from the LORD, as the showers upon the grass, that tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men.

8 ¶ And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a lion among the beasts of the forest,
as a young lion among the flocks of ^e sheep:
who, if he go through, both treadeth down,
and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver.

9 Thy hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off.

10 ^a And it shall come to pass in that day,
saith the LORD, that I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, and I will destroy ^{A. M. 3284.}

thy chariots: ^{B. C. 720.}

11 And I will cut off the cities of thy land, and throw down all thy strong holds:

12 And I will cut off witchcrafts out of thy hand; and thou shalt have no more ^r sooth-sayers:

13 ^s Thy graven images also will I cut off,
and thy ⁷ standing images out of the midst of thee; and thou shalt ^t no more worship the work of thy hands.

14 And I will pluck up thy groves out of the midst of thee: so will I destroy thy ⁸ cities.

15 And I will ^u execute vengeance in anger and fury upon the heathen, such as they have not heard.

° Verse 3.—^p Deut. xxxii. 2; Psalm lxxii. 6; cx. 3.—^e Or, goats.—^a Zech. ix. 10.—^r Isa. ii. 6.—^s Zech. xiii. 2.

⁷ Or, statues.—^t Isa. ii. 8.—⁸ Or, enemies.—^u Psal. cxlix. 7;
Verse 8; 2 Thess. i. 8.

Verse 7. And the remnant of Jacob—Those who remained after the Assyrian invasion in the days of Hezekiah and Josiah, in whose reigns a considerable reformation was effected; and the remnant that should be carried captive into Babylon, who during their captivity should contribute to spread the knowledge of the one true God among the Chaldeans; (see Dan. ii. 47, and iii. 29, and iv. 34, and vi. 26;) and more especially those that should return from captivity under Zerubbabel; shall be in the midst of many people as the dew, &c.—Shall multiply, and become numerous as the drops of dew. Or rather, as the dew refreshes and fertilizes the earth, so shall they be a blessing to all around them that use them friendly. The remnant, however, here principally meant, is that spoken of by Joel, chap. ii. 32, the remnant which the Lord should call, on which the Spirit should be poured out, and which should be saved, (Rom. ix. 27,) namely, the Jewish converts to Christianity, among whom were the apostles, evangelists, and other first ministers of the word. These, dispersed through divers countries, like the drops of dew, or showers of rain scattered over the face of the earth, and refreshing and fertilizing the vegetable creation, shall, by their doctrine, example, exhortations, and prayers, refresh and render fruitful, in piety and virtue, the formerly barren nations, and make them grow in grace and goodness, like the grass that tarrieth not for man, but flourishes in places on which man bestows no culture, only by the divine blessing. Thus shall God, by the gospel of his grace, and the influence of his Spirit, unaided by human wisdom or power, render the barren deserts of the Gentile world fruitful to his praise, in a large increase of spiritual worshippers, and holy faithful servants to him.

Verse 8. And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles as a lion—For strength and courage, which the beasts of the forest dare not oppose, and cannot resist. This seems to be a prediction of what was to be effected in the times of the Maccabees, and those following them, when the Jewish people gained great advantages over the Idumeans, Moabites, Ammonites, Samaritans, &c. Or, as the former verse describes the benefits which the converted Jews should bring to those Gentiles that were disposed to embrace the gospel; this shows us what the enemies and opposers of the truth had to expect: see notes on Psal. ii. 5, 9; Isa. lx. 12.

Verses 10, 11. And in that day—Namely, in that time when the threatenings against the enemies, and the promises to the people of God shall be made good; I will cut off thy horses, &c.—Not in judgment, but in mercy, for there shall be no need of them, nor shall the church of God any more rely on them. And will destroy thy chariots—Chariots prepared for war. And I will cut off the cities, &c.—Cut off the occasion of fortifying thy cities: thou shalt need no other defence than what I will be to thee. And throw down all thy strong holds—Demolish thy forts, watch-towers, and garrisons. In the preceding verse, offensive preparations for annoying the enemy are intended; here, means of defence against the assaults of the enemy; in both which Israel had too much trusted. But in that time of peace and safety here spoken of, as there would be no enemy to invade the Israel of God, or put them on their defence; so neither should they have any need to make an attack upon any enemies.

Verses 12–15. And I will cut off witchcrafts, &c.—Here is foretold the downfall of all unlawful arts and devices, which had been used by the Jews in former ages, to obtain the knowledge of future events: that God would, in mercy to his people, take away these occasions of sinning. Thy graven images also will I cut off—I will abolish every species of idolatry. This was effected, even among the Jews, by that severe judgment the Babylonish captivity, from which time they have abhorred the use of images in divine worship, and indeed have been kept from worshipping any false god. And I will pluck up thy groves—The usual scenes of idolatrous worship. It is justly observed by Mr. Scott here, that though the reformation of the Jews, after their return from Babylon, might be alluded to in this passage, yet the purification of the Christian Church from all antichristian corruptions of faith and worship, and all idolatry and superstition, seems more immediately to be predicted. “The reliance on human merits for justification, the external pomp used in worship, and the oppressive exercise of human authority in mere matters of conscience, will be entirely destroyed by the clear light of divine truth, and the power of divine grace; and simplicity and purity in doctrine, worship, and practice, will prevail, when the enemies of the church shall be destroyed.” And I will execute vengeance in anger, &c.—When I have purged my people from their corruptions, I will severely vindicate their cause, to the utter destruction of all their unbelieving enemies. Such as they have not heard—In an unprecedented manner. God will give his Son either the hearts or necks of his enemies, and make them either his friends or his footstool.

CHAPTER VI.

In this chapter God, (1.) Charges his people with ingratitude, 1–5. (2.) Shows them the way to please him, 6–8. (3.) Sets their sins in order before them, and the ruin coming upon them, 9–16.

A. M. 3294. HEAR ye now what the LORD saith; Arise, contend thou ¹ before the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice.

2 ^a Hear ye, O mountains, ^b the LORD's controversy, and ye strong foundations of the earth: for ^c the LORD hath a controversy with his people, and he will plead with Israel.

3 O my people, ^d what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? testify against me. A. M. 3294. B. C. 710.

4 ^e For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.

5 O my people, remember now what ^f Balak king of Moab consulted, and what Balaam the son of Beor answered him from ^g Shittim unto

¹ Or, with.—^a Deut. xxxii. 1; Psalm l. 1, 4; Isaiah i. 2. ^b Hosea xii. 2.—^c Isa. i. 18; v. 3, 4; xliii. 26; Hosea iv. 1. ^d Jer. ii. 5, 31.—^e Exod. xii. 51; xiv. 30; xx. 2; Deuteron.

iv. 20; Amos ii. 10.—^f Num. xxii. 5; xxiii. 7; xxiv. 10, 11; Deut. xxiii. 4, 5; Joshua xxiv. 9, 10; Rev. ii. 14.—^g Num. xxv. 1; xxxiii. 49; Josh. iv. 19; v. 10.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VI.

Verses 1, 2. Hear now what the Lord saith—Here begins a new discourse, respecting the causes of the evils which hung over the Jewish nation. Arise—This is God's command to Micah; contend thou before the mountains—Argue the case between God and thy people; and speak as if thou wouldst make the mountains hear thee, to testify for me. Hear, O ye mountains—God often appeals to inanimate creatures for the justice of his proceedings, thereby to upbraid the stupidity of men; the Lord's controversy—Or the Lord's cause or matter of complaint. Here the prophet begins to execute what he had been commanded in the preceding verse. And ye strong foundations of the earth—He alludes to a fabric raised on immoveable foundations, but, strictly speaking,

“The earth self-balanced on her centre hangs.”

For the Lord hath a controversy with his people—He will enter into judgment with them, for their impieties, as being injurious to his honour, and for which his justice demands satisfaction.

Verses 3, 4. O my people, what have I done unto thee?—What injustice or unkindness? Wherein have I wearied thee?—What grievous, burdensome impositions have I laid upon thee? Or, what have I done, or said, or enjoined, to cause thee to be weary of me? The words allude to the forms of courts of justice, wherein actions are tried between man and man. God allows his people to offer any plea which they could in their own behalf. For I brought thee out of Egypt, &c.—Here, on the other hand, God puts them in mind of the great favours he had bestowed upon them in delivering them out of the Egyptian bondage, by the conduct of Moses and Aaron, and Miriam their sister, who is here mentioned as having been endued with the spirit of prophecy, and raised up to be an assistant to her brothers, and an example and counsellor to the women.

Verse 5. O my people, remember, &c.—Call to remembrance what Balaam said in answer to Balak, when he consulted him, namely, that there was no enchantment against Jacob, &c., nothing that could be done against them, nothing that could overthrow them but their own sins; that they were blessed, and it could not be reversed by any thing but their own forsaking God and his service, under whose particular protection they were. From Shittim unto Gilgal—From the encampment at Shittim, Num. xxv. 1, on the way to that at Gilgal, Josh. iv. 19. Balaam gave different answers in the interval

A. M. 3294. Gilgal; that ye may know ^h the B. C. 710. righteousness of the LORD.

6 ¶ Wherewith shall I come before the LORD, and bow myself before the high God? shall I come before him with burnt-offerings, with calves ² of a year old?

7 ⁱ Will the LORD be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of ^k rivers of oil? ^l shall I give my firstborn for my trans-between those places. But some think this sentence should not be connected with what goes before, but that it begins a new sentence, the purport of which is, Remember, O my people, from Shittim unto Gilgal; that is, what things I did, what benefits I bestowed upon you, from the time you were at Shittim till you came to Gilgal. God had indeed before bestowed upon them great benefits, but at this particular time they received more than ordinary instances of his kindness toward them, particularly in causing the waters of Jordan to run back, to let them pass through; and in the fall of the walls of Jericho. That ye may know the righteousness of the Lord—His mercy, justice, truth, and faithfulness.

^h Judg. v. 11.—² Heb. sons of a year?—ⁱ Psa. l. 9; li. 16; Isa. i. 11.—^k Job xxix. 6.—^l 2 Kings xvi. 3; xxi. 6; xxiii. 10; Jer. vii. 31; xix. 5; Ezek. xxiii. 37.—³ Heb. belly.

Verses 6, 7. Wherewith shall I come before the Lord—After the preceding reproof of the people's ingratitude, they are here introduced as anxiously inquiring how they may propitiate God's displeasure, and avert his judgments. They intimate that they are ready to offer any expiatory sacrifices, though never so costly, for that purpose. Shall I come before him with burnt-offerings, &c.—Will God accept of the ordinary sacrifices, such as we have offered on other occasions, as an atonement for sin? Will the Lord be pleased with thousands of rams, &c.—With a prodigious number; or ten thousands of rivers of oil—Were it possible to give them? Doth he expect more costly sacrifices than ordinary? We are ready, if that will appease him, to offer up to him multitudes of rams, and to add meat-offerings, prepared with oil, in proportion, though it should cost us an immeasurable quantity of that article. Shall I give my firstborn, &c.—The dearest of my offspring, or any other of my children, to Jehovah, by way of atonement for my transgression? It is well known that the Phenicians, and their descendants the Carthaginians, sacrificed their children to Saturn or Molech, and in their great dangers they were wont to offer the dearest of them. And some of the idolatrous Jews and Israelites imitated this horrid practice: see note on Lev. xviii. 21, where God in a solemn manner prohibits it, as he frequently does elsewhere. These two verses give us an exact description of the character of hypocrites and habitual sinners, who hope to obtain God's favour by performing certain external ceremonies; and are willing to purchase their own par-gression, the fruit of my ³ body for the sin of my soul? A. M. 3294. B. C. 710.

8 He hath ^m showed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but ⁿ to do justly, and to love mercy, and to ⁴ walk humbly with thy God?

9 The LORD's voice crieth unto the city, and ⁵ the man of wisdom shall see thy name: hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it.

^m Deut. x. 12; 1 Sam. xv. 22; Hos. vi. 6; xii. 6.—ⁿ Gen. xviii. 19; Isa. i. 17.—⁴ Heb. humble thyself to walk.—⁵ Or, thy name shall see that which is.

don upon any terms, except that of reforming their lives.

Verse 8. He hath showed thee, O man, what is good—He hath showed thee that there is no forgiveness without repentance, and that repentance is but a name, unless there be a ceasing to do evil, and learning to do well: and that this implies the practice of every branch of piety and virtue; the performance of every duty that we owe to God, our neighbour, and ourselves; 1st, To do justly—To render to all their dues, to superiors, equals, inferiors; to be true and just to all, and to oppress none, in their persons, property, or reputation; in our dealings with others to carry a chancery in our own breasts, and to act according to equity. 2d, To love mercy—Not to use severity, or exercise malice, envy, revenge, enmity, or hatred toward any, but to be compassionate, merciful, forgiving, kind, and beneficent toward all, according to our ability. And, 3d, To walk humbly with thy God—To humble thyself before the holy and just God, under a deep sense of thy past guilt and present unworthiness, renouncing all high thoughts of thyself, and all dependence on thy own righteousness for justification before him, but relying solely on his mercy, through the Mediator. The words imply, too, that we should keep up constant communion with God, by the exercise of an humble, holy, loving, and obedient faith, serving the Lord, as the apostle says of himself, in all humility of mind, and with continual reverence and godly fear. "See here the true spirit of the divine law! See here what makes a true Israelite! a truth which the carnal Jews could never comprehend: in vain did their legislator and their prophets inculcate it upon every occasion. They always had recourse to their gross conceptions, their attachment to sacrifices, and merely external services: herein they imagined their perfection to consist; while they neglected the more essential duties of man, and the practice of the most solid virtues, justice, benevolence, and piety."

Verse 9. The Lord's voice crieth—Either by his judgments, each of which is his voice, or by his prophets; unto the city—To every city in Israel and Judah, but principally to Jerusalem and Samaria. The man of wisdom—Every wise man; shall see thy name—Will perceive God in that cry. Hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it—Who hath

A. M. 3294. 10 ¶⁶ Are there yet the treasures
B. C. 710. of wickedness in the house of the wicked, and the ⁷ scant measure ⁸ that is abominable?

11 ⁹ Shall I count them pure with ¹⁰ the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights?

12 For the rich men thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies, and ¹¹ their tongue is deceitful in their mouth.

13 Therefore also will I ¹² make thee sick in smiting thee, in making thee desolate because of thy sins.

14 ¹³ Thou shalt eat, but not be satisfied; and

⁶ Or, Is there yet unto every man a house of the wicked.—⁷ Heb. measure of leanness, Amos viii. 5.—⁸ Deut. xxv. 13, 16; Prov. xi. 1; xx. 10, 23.—⁹ Or, Shall I be pure with.—¹⁰ Hos. xii. 7. ¹¹ Jer. ix. 3, 5, 6, 8.—¹² Leviticus xxvi. 16; Psalm cvii. 17, 18. ¹³ Lev. xxvi. 26; Hos. iv. 10.

chosen it out, and strikes with it; that is, Hear ye the voice of God in the punishments he is now sending. Or, Hear what severe judgments are threatened against you, and who it is that threatens them, and is able to put them in execution.

Verses 10–12. Are there yet the treasures of wickedness, &c.—Notwithstanding all the express laws, the exhortations and reproofs given you upon this subject, and so many examples of punishment set before you; still are there many that use unjust and fraudulent means to enrich themselves? who keep scant measures to sell their goods by, which the law of God often declares to be an abomination to him? The reproof is the same with that of Amos, chapter viii. 5, where see the note. Shall I count them pure with the wicked balances, &c.—Shall I approve or acquit them, as if they were righteous? For the rich men thereof—Namely, of the city, spoken of verse 9; are full of violence—Not only of fraud and injustice, but oppression, tyranny, and cruelty. And the inhabitants have spoken lies—Have gone aside from truth, integrity, and fidelity, and have deceived each other by falsehood.

Verses 13–15. Therefore will I make thee sick in smiting thee—Therefore, upon account of these thy sins, I will, ere long, so smite thee, O Israel, that the strokes shall reach thy heart, and make thee sick unto death of thy wounds. Or, the punishment wherewith I will afflict thee shall waste thy strength like a consuming sickness which preys upon the vitals. Thou shalt eat, but not be satisfied—See note on Hos. iv. 10. And thy casting down shall be in the midst of thee—Thou shalt be depressed within thee, or have no courage, or spirits, left to support thee. Thou shalt take hold, but not deliver, &c.—Thou shalt lay hold on things to secure them to thee, but thou shalt not be able to save them from the enemy. All the advantages that thou hast made by any means shall become a prey to them. Archbishop Newcome translates it, Thou shalt take hold, but shalt not carry away; contrary to what is said of thy casting down shall be in the A. M. 3294.

midst of thee; and thou shalt take B. C. 710.
hold, but shalt not deliver; and that which thou deliverest will I give up to the sword.

15 Thou shalt ¹⁴ sow, but thou shalt not reap; thou shalt tread the olives, but thou shalt not anoint thee with oil; and sweet wine, but shalt not drink wine.

16 ¶ For ¹⁵ the statutes of ¹⁶ Omri are ¹⁷ kept, and all the works of the house of ¹⁸ Ahab, and ye walk in their counsels; that I should make thee ¹⁹ a ²⁰ desolation, and the inhabitants thereof a hissing: therefore ye shall bear the ²¹ reproach of my people.

¹⁴ Deut. xxviii. 38, 39, 40; Amos v. 11; Zeph. i. 13; Hagai i. 6.—¹⁵ Or, he doth much keep thee.—¹⁶ 1 Kings xvi. 25, 26. ¹⁷ Hos. v. 11.—¹⁸ 1 Kings xvi. 30; xxi. 25, 26; 2 Kings xxi. 3. ¹⁹ 1 Kings ix. 8; Jer. xix. 8.—²⁰ Or, astonishment.—²¹ Isaiah xxv. 8; Jer. li. 51; Lam. v. 1.

thy enemies, Isa. v. 29; They shall lay hold of the prey, and carry it away safe, and none shall deliver it, or retake it. Thou shalt sow, but shalt not reap—Thou shalt not enjoy the fruit of thy labour: a curse often threatened for disobedience.

Verse 16. For the statutes of Omri are kept—An idolatrous king, of whom it is said, 1 Kings xvi. 25, that he did worse than all that were before him, and therefore we may judge of the corruption of the people who imitated the example, and followed the institutions of such a one. By his statutes, seem to be intended some idolatrous rites, which he instituted while he was king of Israel. And all the works of the house of Ahab, &c.—Ahab was the son of Omri, and exceeded his father and all his predecessors in impiety. He did more (it is said, 1 Kings xvi. 33) to provoke the Lord God than all the kings of Israel that were before him. For he not only walked in the sins of Jeroboam, who instituted the worship of the golden calves, under which idolatrous representation Jehovah was worshipped, but he also went and served Baal, a false god, and built a house, or temple, and erected an altar for him in Samaria, &c., 1 Kings xvi. 30–33. But, impious as Ahab was, he found imitators, not only in Israel, where he had power to command, but also in Judah. It is said, The works of the house of Ahab, because all his posterity followed his example in idolatry. And we learn, 2 Kings xxi. 3, that even the king of Judah, Manasseh, reared up an altar for Baal, and made a grove, as did Ahab king of Israel. That I should make thee a desolation—The event will be, that the country and city shall be laid desolate; and the inhabitants thereof a hissing—That is, a subject of scorn and derision to their enemies. Therefore ye shall bear the reproach of my people—This is addressed to the rich men, spoken of verse 12, and the meaning is, that the people in general should reproach them with being the principal cause of their calamities and desolation.

CHAPTER VII.

In this chapter the prophet, (1,) Laments the total corruption of the people, 1-6. (2,) Directs those who feared God to take courage, to be patient, but to expect long trouble, 7-13. And, (3,) To encourage themselves with God's promises and faithfulness, and the future downfall of their enemies, 14-20.

A. M. 3294.
B. C. 710.

WO is me! for I am as ¹when they have gathered the summer fruits, as ^athe grape-gleanings of the vintage: there is no cluster to eat: ^bmy soul desired the first ripe fruit.

2 The ^cgood ²man is perished out of the earth: and there is none upright among men: they all lie in wait for blood; ^dthey hunt every man his brother with a net.

3 ¶ That they may do evil with both hands

¹ Heb. the gatherings of summer.—^a Isaiah xvii. 6; xxiv. 13.
^b Isa. xxviii. 4; Hos. ix. 10.—^c Psa. xii. 1; xiv. 1, 3; Isaiah lvii. 1.—^d Or, godly, or, merciful.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VII.

Verses 1, 2. Wo is me, &c.—Judea, or rather the prophet himself, is here introduced as complaining, that though good men once abounded in the land, there were now few or none to be found. I am as when they have gathered the summer fruits, &c.—I am like one who gathers up the ears of corn after the harvest, or grapes after the vintage: who meets with very few. There is no cluster, &c.—Good men, that used to be found in clusters, are now as the grape-gleanings of the vintage, here and there a berry. No societies of pious men are to be found, assembling together for the purposes of devotion and mutual edification: those that are such, are individuals, unconnected with, and standing aloof from each other. And these are but very imperfectly pious, like the small withered grapes, the refuse, left behind, not only by the gatherer, but by the gleaner. My soul desired the first ripe fruit—I wish to see such worthy good men as lived in the former ages, were the ornaments of the primitive times, and as far excelled the best of the present age, as the first and full ripe fruits do those of the later growth, that never come to maturity. To meet with such as these would be a refreshment, to me like that which a thirsty traveller receives when he finds the early fruits in the summer season. The good man—Hebrew, חסיד, the pious, kind, merciful, and beneficent; is perished out of the earth—Rather, out of the land, namely, Judea. There are few or none that are so truly and consistently pious as to delight in doing good to others, or making them as happy as lies in their power. And there is none upright—“As the early fig, of excellent flavour, cannot be found in the advanced season of summer, or the choice cluster of grapes after vintage, so neither can the good and upright man be discovered by diligent searching in Israel.”—Newcome. They hunt every man his brother, &c.—They make a prey, each one of his neighbour, or those they have to do with, and use all arts to deceive and injure them.

Verses 3, 4 That they may do evil with both earnestly, ^ethe prince asketh, ^fand ^{A. M. 3294.}the judge asketh for a reward; and ^{B. C. 710.}the great man, he uttereth ³his mischievous desire: so they wrap it up.

4 The best of them ^gis as a brier: the most upright is sharper than a thorn-hedge: the day of thy watchmen and thy visitation cometh; now shall be their perplexity.

5 ¶ ^hTrust ye not in a friend, put ye not confidence in a guide: keep the doors of thy

^d Hab. i. 15.—^e Hosea iv. 18.—^f Isa. i. 23; Chap. iii. 11.
^g Heb. the mischief of his soul.—^h 2 Sam. xxiii. 6, 7; Ezekiel ii. 6; Isa. lv. 13.—^h Jer. ix. 4.

hands, &c.—With all diligence; earnestly—Hebrew, להרטיב, to good it; that is, to do it thoroughly and effectually. “Their hands are bent on iniquity, to execute it fully.” So Dr. Wheeler. The prince asketh—Namely, a gift; to do any one a favour, or good. And the judge asketh for a reward—And the judge will not pass a decision till he has had a bribe to engage him to do it. And the great man uttereth his mischievous desire—The great man at court, who can do what he will there, is bold to declare plainly his unjust, oppressive design; or, the mischief of his soul, as דמיון נפש properly signifies. So they wrap it up—The prince, the judge, and the great man, agreeing in their ill designs, make a threefold cord of iniquity: or, they twist one sin upon another, the latter to maintain or cover the former, and all jointly promote injustice, violence, and cruelty. The best of them is a brier—Or, like a brier. They catch fast hold on, and retain, whatever they can lay their hands on. The most upright is sharper than a thorn—Even the best among them would wound and injure on every side all that come near them. The day of thy watchmen—The day in which they shall sound the alarm; and thy visitation cometh—Namely, surely and speedily. The time of vengeance is coming, which hath been foretold by the prophets of former times, as well as the present, called here watchmen, as they are by Ezekiel, chap. iii. 7, and by Hosea, chap. ix. 8; then God will visit for all the sins thou hast committed against him. Watchmen may signify magistrates as well as prophets, (see note on Isa. lvi. 10,) and then the words import the time when God will call both princes and prophets to account for their unfaithfulness in the discharge of their several offices. Now—When that day is come; shall be their perplexity—They shall be so entangled and insnared, as not to know what way to take.

Verses 5-7. Trust ye not in a friend—This and the next verse are descriptive of a general corruption of manners; so that all ties and duties of consanguinity were trampled upon, or paid no regard to.

A. M. 3294. mouth from her that lieth in thy
B. C. 710. bosom.

6 For ¹the son dishonoureth the father, the daughter riseth up against her mother, the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law; a man's enemies are the men of his own house.

7 Therefore ²I will look unto the LORD; I will wait for the God of my salvation; my God will hear me.

8 ¶ ¹Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy: ²when I fall, I shall arise; when I sit in darkness, ³the LORD shall be a light unto me.

9 ° I will bear the indignation of the LORD, because I have sinned against him, until he plead my cause, and execute judgment for me: ° he will bring me forth to the light, and I shall behold his righteousness.

¹ Ezek. xxii. 7; Matt. x. 21, 35, 36; Luke xii. 53; xxi. 16; 2 Tim. iii. 2, 3.—² Isa. viii. 17.—³ Prov. xxiv. 17; Lam. iv. 21.—⁴ Psalm xxxvii. 24; Prov. xxiv. 16.—⁵ Psa. xxvii. 1. ° Lam. iii. 39.—⁶ Psa. xxxvii. 6.—⁷ Or, And thou wilt see her that is mine enemy and cover her with shame.—⁸ Psa. xxxv. 26.

The friend proved treacherous to his friend, the wife to her husband: children set at naught their parents, and a man's own family, or domestics, plotted his injury, or destruction, or acted as enemies toward him. Therefore will I look unto the Lord—The church here expresses her confidence in God alone, since no trust could be placed in man. Or, they may be considered as the words of the prophet, and of those who feared God in Israel.

Verses 8, 9. Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy—Here begins a new subject; the Jewish nation in general being here introduced speaking in their captivity, and addressing themselves to the Chaldeans. When I fall I shall rise—Or, because I am fallen; for I shall rise. When I sit in darkness, the Lord shall be a light unto me—Neither rejoice nor triumph over me, because I at present sit in darkness, or misery, for Jehovah will again make me prosperous. I will bear the indignation of the Lord—I will patiently, or without repining, bear the affliction, or punishment, Jehovah has inflicted upon me. Because I have sinned against him—Because I am sensible I have highly offended him by my idolatry, injustice, and unmercifulness. Until he plead my cause, and execute judgment for me—Until he shall be pleased to acknowledge my cause, in consequence of my repentance and perseverance in the worship of him, and avenge my injuries on my enemies. It may well be supposed that the Chaldeans made a mock of the Jews for persevering in the worship of Jehovah, or that God who (as they supposed) had not been able to deliver them, his worshippers, out of their hands, the worshippers of Bel and Nebo; whom therefore they esteemed more powerful. He will bring me forth to the light—He will again bring me into a prosperous condition. And I shall behold his righteousness—Or rather, his 10 ¹Then she that is mine enemy A. M. 3294.

shall see it, and ²shame shall cover B. C. 710.

her which said unto me, ° Where is the LORD thy God? ° mine eyes shall behold her: now ° shall she be trodden down ° as the mire of the streets.

11 In the day that thy ° walls are to be built, in that day shall the decree be far removed.

12 In that day also ° he shall come even to thee from Assyria, ° and from the fortified cities, and from the fortress even to the river, and from sea to sea, and from mountain to mountain.

13 ° Notwithstanding, the land shall be desolate because of them that dwell therein, ° for the fruit of their doings.

¹ Psa. xlii. 3, 10; lxxix. 10; cxv. 2; Joel ii. 17.—² Chap. iv. 11.—³ Heb. she shall be for treading down.—⁴ 2 Samuel xxii. 43; Zech. x. 5.—⁵ Amos ix. 11.—⁶ Isaiah xi. 16; xix. 23; xxvii. 13; Hos. xi. 11.—⁷ Or, even to.—⁸ Or, After that it hath been.—⁹ Jer. xxi. 14; Chap. iii. 12.

goodness. What we render righteousness, often signifies, according to the Hebrew, beneficence, or goodness.

Verses 10–13. Then she that is mine enemy—Namely, the Chaldean nation. Which said unto me, (namely, when she held me captive,) Where is the Lord thy God?—Where is now Jehovah, whom thou worshippest, and sayest is the only God? Why does he not now deliver thee? Why does he not free thee from my hands, who am not his worshipper? Mine eyes shall behold her: now shall she be trodden down, &c.—As the heathen beheld the desolations of God's church and temple with delight, (see chap. iv. 11,) so it shall come to my turn to see God's judgments executed upon the Babylonish empire, which shall be brought down to as low a condition as ever they had reduced God's people. In the day that thy walls shall be built, &c.—When God shall visit his people, and repair their decayed estate, (compare Amos ix. 11,) then the tyrannical edicts of their persecutors shall be utterly abolished. This may partly relate to the recalling those edicts, which put a stop to the rebuilding of the city and temple of Jerusalem: see Ezra iv. 23, 24, and vi. 14; Neh. ii. 8, 17. In that day—At that time also; he shall come even to thee from Assyria, &c.—This may be rendered, They shall come, &c.; that is, thy restored inhabitants; and from the fortress—Or rather, from Egypt, even unto the river—That is, the Euphrates; for the word כְּצִיר, which we translate fortress, likewise means Egypt. All this signifies the return of the Jews from the various parts to which they had been scattered. Notwithstanding, the land shall be desolate, &c.—Nevertheless the land shall, before this, be reduced to a state of desolation, on account of the heinous wickedness of those who at present inhabit it.

A. M. 3294. 14 ¶ ^a Feed thy people with thy
B. C. 710. rod, the flock of thy heritage, which dwell solitarily ⁱⁿ the wood, in the midst of Carmel: let them feed in Bashan and Gilead,
as in the days of old.

15 ¶ ^a According to the days of thy coming out of the land of Egypt will I show unto him marvellous things.

16 The nations ^b shall see, and be confounded at all their might: ^c they shall lay their hand upon their mouth, their ears shall be deaf.

^a Or, Rule, Psa. xxviii. 9; Chap. v. 4.—^b Isaiah xxxvii. 24.
^c Psa. lxxviii. 22; lxxviii. 12.—^d Isa. xxvi. 11.—^e Job xxi. 5;
xxix. 9.—^f Psa. lxxii. 9; Isa. xlix. 23.—^g Psa. xviii. 45.

Verse 14. Feed thy people with thy rod, &c.—This seems to be a prayer which the prophet broke out into on this occasion, beseeching God to take his people again under his peculiar protection and care; which is the meaning of feeding them with his rod, or pastoral crook: the flock of thy heritage, which dwell solitarily—That is, that peculiar people, which thou hast separated from the rest of the world, or caused to live apart by themselves, that they might maintain among them, and preserve uncorrupted, thy pure worship. In the wood, in the midst of Carmel—Called the forest of Carmel, Isa. xxxvii. 24, and spoken of as a place remarkable for its fruitfulness. Therefore, to feed in the midst of Carmel, implied giving them great plenty. Let them feed in Bashan and Gilead, &c.—These parts of Canaan were noted for their rich pastures, and therefore this implies the same as the foregoing sentence, namely, Bless them with plenty of every thing, as was the case formerly.

Verses 15, 16. According to the days of thy coming—These words are an answer to the prophet's prayer in the foregoing verse; wherein God tells him that the wonders he will perform in bringing back his people into their own country shall be as conspicuous as those which he showed in their deliverance out of Egypt, and giving them the first possession of it. The sense is equivalent to that of Psa. lxxviii. 22, The Lord hath said, I will bring my people again, as I did from Bashan, &c. The nations shall see, and be confounded at all their might—The heathen shall feel the same confusion as men do under a great disappointment. Or, the meaning may be, They shall be ashamed of their might; namely, to see all the might of the Chaldean empire so soon laid low. This seems to be spoken of the nations in alliance with, or who were friends to, the Chaldeans. Others, by their might, understand the might and power of God's people, whom no force will be able to withstand: see chap. v. 8. They shall lay their hand upon their mouth—The evident tokens of God's presence with his people shall strike their adversaries with astonishment. Their ears shall be deaf—They shall be so struck with surprise, as not to hear what is said to them: or, they shall 17 They shall lick the ^d dust like A. M. 3294.

a serpent, ^e they shall move out of B. C. 710.
their holes like ^a worms of the earth: ^f they shall be afraid of the LORD our God, and shall fear because of thee.

18 ¶ ^g Who is a God like unto thee, that ^h pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of ⁱ the remnant of his heritage? ^k he retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy.

19 He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us; he will subdue our iniquities;

^a Or, creeping things.—^b Jer. xxxiii. 9.—^c Exodus xv. 11.
^d Exodus xxxiv. 6, 7; Jer. l. 20.—^e Chapter iv. 7; v. 3, 7, 8
^f Psa. ciii. 9; Isa. lvii. 10; Jer. iii. 5.

hardly believe their own ears, when they hear of those wonderful works which God will work for his servants.

Verse 17. They shall lick the dust like a serpent—They shall fall to the earth through fear, and carry themselves very humbly and submissively toward God's people. They shall move out of their holes like worms—They shall be afraid to stir out of their lurking-places; and if they creep out like worms, they shall presently hide their heads again. They shall be afraid of the Lord our God—Overthrowing the Babylonish empire by Cyrus. This is expressed Isa. xlv. 1, by loosing the loins of kings. And fear because of thee—When they shall see Almighty God appear so conspicuously in thy favour. The text is parallel to that of Jeremiah, chap. xxxiii. 9, They shall fear and tremble for all the goodness and the prosperity that I procure unto it; that is, unto Jerusalem. Or, if the prophet be considered as addressing God, the meaning is, When they understand that it was long before denounced by the prophets that destruction should come upon them, and thy people be delivered, and they see all things tending to bring this to pass, then shall they begin to be afraid of thy power.

Verses 18, 19. Who is a God like unto thee—That is, there is no God like unto thee; that passeth by the transgression of the remnant, &c.—That pardons the offences of the remainder of his people, namely, of those that shall survive the various punishments and destructions brought upon their forefathers for their sins. He retaineth not his anger for ever—Though in his just displeasure he suffered their enemies to destroy their city, and lay their country desolate, and sent them into captivity; yet will he restore them again, and raise them to a state of great prosperity. He will chastise, but not consume his remnant. Because he delighteth in mercy—Because it is his nature to delight in pardoning the penitent, and communicating blessings; whereas to punish, or inflict evil, is contrary to it. He will turn again, he will have compassion—Or, he will again have compassion upon us. He will subdue our iniquities—He will deliver us not only from the guilt, but also from the power of them, so that they shall not have

A. M. 3294. and thou wilt cast all their sins into
B. C. 710. the depths of the sea.

20 ¹Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob,

¹ Luke i. 72, 73.

dominion over us. Thou wilt utterly destroy them, as thou didst destroy Pharaoh and his army in the Red sea: a victory this, which can only be obtained by the merits of Christ, and the grace of the gospel. And therefore the remnant, here spoken of, to which God will show such mercy, seems to be chiefly those Jews which should be reserved to be made partakers of the benefits which should be conferred on that nation, upon their conversion to Christianity. Then especially shall God make manifest his mercy toward them, in pardoning all their former stubbornness and disobedience, and receiving them into his favour as formerly; and that in a degree greater than was ever experienced in the preceding ages of their church.

Verse 20. Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob—Thou wilt perform to his posterity what thou didst

978

and the mercy to Abraham, ^m which A. M. 3294.
thou hast sworn unto our fathers B. C. 710.
from the days of old.

^m Psalm cv. 9, 10.

promise to Jacob. And the mercy to Abraham—As the promises given to Abraham were made to him and to his seed after him, so the Scriptures speak of the blessings bestowed upon his children, as if they were actually made good to him their progenitor. Among the promises made to Abraham and the other patriarchs, one important one was, that their seed should possess the land of Canaan. This promise, with those of a spiritual nature, will receive its final accomplishment in the conversion and restoration of the Jewish nation in the latter times. That people are said to be beloved for their fathers' sakes, Rom. xi. 28; and therefore we have reason to expect, that the mercies promised to their fathers will be made good to them, in God's due time; for the gifts and callings of God are without repentance, Rom. xi. 29.

(62)

3

THE BOOK OF NAHUM.

ARGUMENT.

NAHUM was a native of Elkoshai, or Elkosh, a little village of Galilee, the ruins of which remained in the time of St. Jerome. It appears, from chap. ii. 2, that he prophesied after the captivity of the ten tribes, which took place in the ninth year of Hezekiah, and after the war of Sennacherib in Egypt, because he speaks of the taking of No-ammon in that country as of an event past, chap. iii. 8. But it is probable that the first chapter at least of this prophecy was delivered before the invasion of Judah by Sennacherib, as in the latter part of it, namely, from verses 8-15, he seems to predict that attempt, and the defeat thereof. "And probably," says Henry, "it was delivered a little before it, for the encouragement of God's people in that time of treading down and perplexity." The other two chapters are thought by some to have been delivered some years after, perhaps in the reign of Manasseh; in which reign the Jewish chronologers generally place this prophet, somewhat nearer the time when Nineveh was conquered. He must have prophesied, however, before the captivity of the two tribes, as he supposes them to be still in their own country, and there celebrating their festivals as usual.

The subject of this prophecy is, the destruction of Nineveh, and the overthrow of the Assyrian empire, which Nahum describes in a manner so pathetic and picturesque, and yet so plain, as is not to be exceeded by the greatest masters of oratory. And all his predictions were exactly verified in the siege and taking of that city, by Nabopolassar and Astyages, in the year of the world 3378, about 100 years after they were uttered. "The conduct and imagery of this prophetic poem," says Archbishop Newcome, "are truly admirable. The exordium grandly sets forth the justice and power of God, tempered by lenity and goodness, chap. i. 2-8. A sudden address to the Assyrians follows; and a prediction of their perplexity and overthrow, as devisers of evil against the true God, verses 9-11. Jehovah himself then proclaims freedom to his people from the Assyrian yoke, and the destruction of the Assyrian idols; upon which the prophet, in a most lively manner, turns the attention of Judah to the approach of the messenger who brings such glad tidings; and bids her celebrate her festivals, and offer her thank-offerings, without fear of so powerful an adversary, verses 12-15. In the next place, Nineveh is called on to prepare for the approach of her enemies, as instruments in the hand of Jehovah; and the military array and muster of the Medes and Babylonians, their rapid approach to the city, the process of the siege, the capture of the place, the captivity, lamentation, and flight of the inhabitants, the sacking of the wealthy city, and the consequent desolation and terror, are described in the true spirit of eastern poetry, and with many pathetic, vivid, and sublime images, chap. ii. 1-10. A grand and animated allegory succeeds this description, and is explained and applied to the city of Nineveh, verses 11-13. The prophet then denounces a woe against Nineveh for her perfidy and violence; and strongly places before our eyes the number of her chariots and cavalry, her burnished arms, and the great and unrelenting slaughter which she spread around her, assigning her idolatries as one cause of her ignominious and unpitied fall, chap. iii. 1-7." To overthrow her false confidence in her forces and alliances, he reminds her of the destruction of No-ammon, her rival in populousness, confederacies, and situation, which had shared a fate like that which awaited her; beautifully illustrating the ease with which her strong holds should be taken, and her pusillanimity during the siege, verses 8-13. "He pronounces that all her preparations, her numbers, her opulence, her multitude of chief men, would be of no avail, and that her tributaries would all desert her, verses 14-18. He concludes with a proper epiphonema; the topics of which are, the greatness and incurableness of her wound, and the just triumph of others over her, on account of her extensive oppressions, verse 19." To sum up all with the decisive judgment of an eminent critic: "None of the minor prophets seem to equal Nahum, in boldness, ardour, and sublimity. His prophecy too forms a regular and perfect poem; the exordium is not merely magnificent, it is truly majestic; the preparation for the destruction of Nineveh, and the description of its downfall and desolation, are expressed in the most glowing colours, and are bold and luminous in the highest degree." Prel. Hebr. xxi. p. 282.

CHAPTER I.

We have here, (1.) The inscription of the book, 1. (2.) A magnificent description of the glory of God, in his just wrath against his enemies, and merciful kindness to his people, and of his majesty and power in both, 2-8. (3.) A particular application of this to the destruction of Sennacherib's army, 9-15.

A. M. 3284.
B. C. 720.

THE burden ^a of Nineveh. The book of the vision of Nahum the Elkoshite.

2 ¹ God is ^b jealous, and ^c the LORD revengeth; the LORD revengeth, and ² is furious; the LORD will take vengeance on his adversaries, and he reserveth wrath for his enemies.

3 The LORD is ^d slow to anger, and ^e great in power, and will not at all acquit the wicked: ^f the LORD hath his way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet.

^a Zeph. ii. 13.—¹ Or, The LORD is a jealous God, and a revenger, &c.—^b Exod. xx. 5; xxxiv. 14; Deut. iv. 24; Josh. xxiv. 19.—^c Deut. xxxii. 35; Psalm xciv. 1; Isaiah lix. 18. ² Heb. that hath fury.—^d Exod. xxxiv. 6, 7; Neh. ix. 17; Psa. ciii. 8; Jonah iv. 2.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. The burden of Nineveh—Of Nineveh, see note on Jonah iii. 3. When the prophets were sent to denounce judgments against a nation, or city, their message, or prophecy, was usually called the burden of that people, or place: see note on Isa. xiii. 1. The book of the vision—As prophets were of old called seers, so their prophecies were called visions: of Nahum—Nahum, according to St. Jerome, signifies a comforter: for the ten tribes being carried away by the king of Assyria, this vision was to comfort them in their captivity: nor was it less a consolation to the other two tribes, who remained in the land, and had been besieged by the same enemies, to hear that these conquerors would in time be conquered themselves, their city taken, and their empire overthrown.—Bishop Newton.

Verses 2, 3. God is jealous—For his own glory; and the Lord revengeth—Or rather, avengeth, namely, the cause, or ill treatment, of his people, as being the Supreme Governor, who, by office, is bound to deliver the oppressed, and punish the oppressor: he also vindicates his own insulted honour. And is furious—Or rather, is angry. In the Hebrew it is literally, And is the Lord of anger, or wrath; that is, can easily give effect to his anger, or execute what it prompts him to. It would be well if the epithet furious were for ever banished from the sacred writings; and, indeed, from all others, when speaking of God. He reserveth wrath for his enemies—There is nothing in the Hebrew to answer the word wrath; it is only, He reserveth for his enemies. Some supply the word punishment; He has punishment in store to execute upon his enemies, when he pleaseth. The Lord is slow to anger, and great [rather, although he be great] in power, and [or, but] will not at all acquit the wicked—The

4 ^g He rebuketh the sea, and maketh ^{A. M. 3284.} it dry, and drieth up all the rivers: ^{B. C. 720.}

^h Bashan languisheth, and Carmel, and the flower of Lebanon languisheth.

5 ⁱ The mountains quake at him, and ^k the hills melt, and ^l the earth is burned at his presence, yea, the world, and all that dwell therein.

6 Who can stand before his indignation? and ^m who can ⁿ abide in the fierceness of his anger? ^o his fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by him.

^g Job ix. 4.—^f Psalm xviii. 7, &c.; xcvii. 2; Hab. iii. 5, 11, 12.—^h Psalm cvi. 9; Isa. i. 2; Matt. viii. 26.—ⁱ Isaiah xxxiii. 9.—^j Psalm lxviii. 8.—^k Judg. v. 5; Psalm xcvii. 5; Micah i. 4.—^l 2 Pet. iii. 10.—^m Mal. iii. 2.—ⁿ Heb. stand up.—^o Rev. xvi. 1.

sense of the clause seems to be, that although God defers punishment, yet he has it in his power to inflict it at all times; and though it be long delayed, yet it will, in the end, overtake the wicked, unless the long-suffering of God lead them to repentance. The Lord hath his way—The method of his providence; in the whirlwind—Which often riseth suddenly, and beareth before it all things that stand in its way. Thus God's judgments often come unexpectedly, and are irresistible, and most terribly destructive. And the clouds are the dust of his feet—He makes the clouds his chariot, and employs them to whatever purpose he pleases. This and the two following verses are a very noble and majestic description of the power of the Almighty.

Verses 4-6. He rebuketh the sea, and maketh it dry—The rivers and the sea itself are dried up at his rebuke, as the Red sea and Jordan were of old; and the most pleasant and fruitful countries, such as Bashan, Carmel, and Lebanon, are parched up with drought when he is displeased. The mountains quake at him—See notes on Psa. cxiv. 3-8. And the earth is burned at his presence, yea, the world—The brightness of his presence is sufficient to set the whole world on fire, with all that is in it. This is, indeed, a most magnificent description of the omnipotence of God. He walketh, or rideth, amidst the whirlwind, or in the storm; the clouds are but the dust of his feet; the sea is dried up at his word, the mountains are moved, and tremble at his presence; and the whole earth is consumed with the brightness that is before him. Who can stand before his indignation?—Who, or what people, however strong they may think themselves, can withstand the effects of his power when he is angry with them, and is determined to execute his wrath upon them? His fury—Rather, his indignation, or the

A. M. 3284. 7 ° The LORD is good, a 4 strong-
B. C. 720. hold in the day of trouble; and 2 he knoweth them that trust in him.

8 4 But with an overrunning flood he will make an utter end of the place thereof, and darkness shall pursue his enemies.

9 2 What do ye imagine against the LORD? 2 he will make an utter end: affliction shall not rise up the second time.

° 1 Chron. xvi. 34; Psa. c. 5; Jer. xxxiii. 11; Lam. iii. 25.
4 Or, strength.—2 Psa. i. 6; 2 Tim. ii. 19.—4 Dan. ix. 26;
xi. 10, 21, 40.—2 Psa. ii. 1.—1 Sam. iii. 12.—2 Sam.
xxiii. 6, 7.—2 Chap. iii. 11.—2 Mal. iv. 1.

ardour of his anger; is poured out like fire, &c.—Is as consuming in its effects as fire. And the rocks are thrown down by him—That is, as fire is of sufficient force to dissolve the hardest rocks, so God's power overthrows all opposition, however strong; and his vengeance, with infinite ease, can humble the most obdurate sinners.

Verse 7. The Lord is good—But though God is thus terrible in his power, yet he is merciful, gracious, and beneficent in his nature, and is a sure refuge and protection to those who worship and serve him sincerely, and put their trust in him; and he knows and pays a particular regard to all such, so that they are never overlooked or neglected by him; he approves, owns, and preserves them.

Verse 8. With an overrunning flood he will make an utter end—This seems to be spoken of Nineveh, and Bishop Newton is of opinion that the words allude to the manner in which it was taken. "Diodorus informs us," says he, "that there was an old prophecy, that Nineveh should not be taken till the river became an enemy to the city; and in the third year of the siege, the river, being swollen with continual rains, overflowed part of the city, and broke down the wall for twenty furlongs; then the king, thinking that the oracle was fulfilled, and the river become an enemy to the city, built a large funeral pile in the palace, and, collecting together all his wealth, and his concubines and eunuchs, burned himself and the palace with them all; and the enemy entered the breach that the waters had made, and took the city." Or, as a great destruction, or an army overrunning a country, is often compared to an inundation, the meaning of the passage may only be, that God's judgments, like a mighty flood, which overflows all banks, should overwhelm and swallow up both Nineveh and the whole Assyrian empire. And darkness shall pursue his enemies—That is, troubles and destructive calamities.

Verses 9, 10. What do ye imagine against the Lord?—Having declared the dreadfulfulness of God's power and anger against the wicked, his goodness toward his people, and denounced future destruction against the Ninevites; he now expostulates with them, inquiring what it is they design against God, and on what ground they flatter themselves into such an attempt: as if he had said, What a foolish and wicked thing it is for you to plot against Jeho-

10 For while they be folden together as thorns, and while they are drunken as drunkards, 2 they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry.

11 There is one come out of thee, 2 that imagineth evil against the LORD, 5 a wicked counsellor.

12 Thus saith the LORD; 6 Though they be quiet, and likewise many, yet thus 2 shall they

2 Kings xix. 22, 23.—5 Heb. a counsellor of Belial.—6 Or, If they would have been at peace, so should they have been many, and so should they have been shorn, and he should have passed away.—2 Kings xix. 35, 37.

vah, as if you could outwit infinite wisdom, and overcome almighty power. He will make an utter end—He will cause your utter desolation to be the issue of your projects, and the punishment of your sins. Affliction shall not rise up the second time—God will at once, and for ever, destroy your city and empire. He will lay you low at one stroke, so that there will be no occasion to repeat it. For while they be folden together as thorns—Or, For as thorns folden or entangled together are thrown into the fire all at once, and easily burned, yea, help to destroy each other; so shall the Ninevites be easily and surely destroyed. And while they are drunken as drunkards—As men drunken and unable to help themselves; who, when any sudden danger arises, are all involved in the same fate. They shall be devoured as stubble fully dry—Which soon catches fire, and breaks out into a flame. The meaning of the whole verse is, that on a sudden they should be involved in a general destruction. Diodorus relates, it was while all the Assyrian army were feasting for their former victories, that their enemies, being informed by some deserters of the negligence and drunkenness in their camp, "assaulted them unexpectedly by night, and falling orderly on them disorderly, and prepared on them unprepared, became masters of the camp, slew many of the soldiers, and drove the rest into the city."

Verses 11–13. There is one come out of thee—Or, one hath gone forth of thee. This is probably meant of Sennacherib, who uttered so many reproaches and blasphemies against the true God, one of whose royal seats was Nineveh, and who probably went forth from thence to invade Judea. But the term, a wicked counsellor, seems to be intended of Rabshakeh, whom Sennacherib sent against Jerusalem, while he himself warred against Lachish, and who uttered those blasphemous speeches against God, of which we have an account 2 Kings xviii. 19. Though they be quiet—Though the Assyrians be secure, and fear no danger. And likewise many—An immense host; yet shall they be cut down—Irresistibly, suddenly, and universally; when he shall pass through—When the angel of the Lord shall pass through their camp, in which he slew in one night 185,000 men: see Isa. xxxvii. 36. Though I have afflicted thee—O Israel, I will afflict thee no more—I will no more chastise thee by the Assyrian, the rod of mine

A. M. 3284. be ⁷cut down, when he shall ^apass
B. C. 720. through. Though I have afflicted thee, I will afflict thee no more.

13 For now will I ^bbreak his yoke from off thee, and will burst thy bonds in sunder.

14 And the LORD hath given a commandment concerning thee, that no more of thy name be sown: out of the house of thy gods

⁷ Heb. shorn.—^a Isaiah viii. 8; Dan. xi. 10.—^b Jer. ii. 20;
xxx. 5.—^c 2 Kings xix. 37.

anger, by Sennacherib or his forces. For now I will break his yoke from off thee—Hezekiah and his people shall no longer be tributaries to the king of Assyria, as they have been for a considerable time: see 2 Kings xviii. 14. The words may also be considered as promising relief to the Israelites of the ten tribes, who were in a state of actual captivity among them at this time.

Verse 14. And the Lord hath given a commandment—God hath determined, concerning thee, that no more of thy name be sown—The meaning of this seems to be, God had decreed that Sennacherib's family should not long preserve their royal dignity. His son and successor, Esar-haddon, was now probably at man's estate, for he succeeded his father in a little time after his defeat, (2 Kings xix. 37,) and reigned with great prosperity for many years. But his next successor, or the next but one, was dispossessed of his kingdom by Nabopolassar, father to Nebuchadnezzar, whose family enjoyed the empire of Assyria, or Babylon, as it came then to be called, till the conquest of it by Cyrus. Out of the house of thy gods will I cut off the graven image, &c.—All the images which thou worshippest will I destroy. The army of the enemy shall lay all waste, and not spare even the images of thy gods. I will make thy grave, &c.—The sense must be supplied from the former sentence: as if he had said, The house of thine idol shall become thy grave. There Sennacherib was dishonourably slain by his own sons, and there, some suppose, he was buried. For thou art vile—Held in no esteem, not even by thine own offspring, but disgracefully murdered by them, as having lost all interest even in their natural affection. Or the words may be interpreted of the ignominious fall of the Assyrian monarchy itself, upon the ruins will I cut off the graven image and A. M. 3284.

the molten image: ^o I will make thy B. C. 720.
grave; for thou art vile.

15 Behold ^dupon the mountains the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace! O Judah, ^ekeep thy solemn feasts, perform thy vows: for ^o the ^o wicked shall no
more pass through thee: ^fhe is utterly cut off.

^d Isaiah lii. 7; Rom. x. 15.—^a Heb. feast.—^o Heb. Belial.
^e Verses 11, 12.—^f Verse 14.

of which that of Babylon was raised. Observe, reader, those that make themselves vile by scandalous sins, God will make vile by shameful punishments.

Verse 15. Behold upon the mountains—Which surrounded Jerusalem; the feet of him—Of the messenger; that bringeth good tidings—Tidings that Nineveh is destroyed; that publisheth peace—Deliverance from the tyranny and oppression of the Assyrians, through the destruction of their capital city, and the overthrow of their empire; or safety and prosperity to the Jews, which the word peace often signifies. Compare Isa. lii. 7, where the same expressions are used with relation to the destruction of Babylon, the overthrow of the Chaldean empire, and the release of the Jews, and their restoration to their own land. These deliverances being typical of the great redemption wrought out for us by the Messiah, the words are applied by the apostle (Rom. x. 15) to the gospel, which brings us glad tidings of that redemption, and of all the spiritual and eternal blessings consequent upon it. O Judah, keep thy solemn feasts—As thou now hast liberty to do, and mayest do with joy and gladness, being freed from thy fears; and to do which thou art now under peculiar obligations, having been so wonderfully delivered from the oppressive power of thy enemies; and having solemnly vowed to God, when thou wast in distress, that thou wouldest worship and serve him according to the precepts of his law, if thou shouldst be delivered from any further fear of thy oppressors. For the wicked shall no more pass through thee—The impious Assyrians, who set at naught and blasphemed Jehovah, thy God, shall no more come against thee. He is utterly cut off—The oppressor is taken away, and the Assyrian empire utterly and for ever ruined.

CHAPTER II.

Here is foretold, (1,) The approach of the enemy that should destroy Nineveh, and the terror of his military preparations 1-5. (2,) The taking of the city, the captivity of the queen, the flight of the inhabitants, the seizing of all the wealth of it, and the mighty consternation it should be in, 6-10. (3,) The true cause of all this, their sinning against God, and God's appearing against them, 11-13.

A. M. 3294. B. C. 710. HE ¹ that ^a dasheth in pieces is come up before thy face: ^b keep the munition, watch the way, make thy loins strong, fortify thy power mightily.

² For the LORD hath turned away ² the excellency of Jacob, as the excellency of Israel: for ^d the emptiers have emptied them out, and marred their vine-branches.

³ The shield of his mighty men is made ^e red, the valiant men are ³ in scarlet: the chariots shall be with ⁴ flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir-trees shall be terribly shaken.

¹ Or, The disperser, or, hammer.—^a Jer. l. 23.—^b Jer. li. 11, 12; Chap. iii. 14.—^c Isaiah x. 12; Jer. xxv. 29.—^d Or, the pride of Jacob as the pride of Israel.—^e Psalm lxxx. 12; Hosea x. 1.—^f Isaiah lxiii. 2, 3.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verse 1. He that dasheth in pieces is come up before thy face.—This is addressed to the city of Nineveh, and explains more fully how the change, described in the foregoing chapter, should be brought about. It begins with telling Nineveh, that he who should break down her walls, and discomfit her inhabitants, was coming against her, and was, as it were, already in sight. Keep the munition, watch the way.—Use thy utmost industry to defend thyself, by strengthening thy garrisons, and guarding the passes. Make thy loins strong.—Stir up all thy strength and courage. Fortify thy power mightily.—Increase thy forces as much as thou canst. The meaning of this is, that let the Ninevites take all the precautions they could, and strengthen themselves to the utmost, yet it would be all in vain.

Verses 2-4. For the Lord hath turned away the excellency of Jacob—Jacob and Israel stood in a nearer relation to God than Nineveh; yet God hath punished them: much more will he punish Nineveh. By the excellency of Jacob, the wealth, the strength, the valiant men, all that Jacob gloried in is here meant. For the emptiers have emptied them out.—This is spoken of the Assyrians having spoiled the kingdoms of Israel and Judah. And marred their vine-branches.—Ruined their towns and villages. Judah, or Israel, sometimes, is represented in the prophetic writings under the emblem of a vine, or vineyard; of consequence her towns and villages are her vine-branches. Some think, however, that the expression signifies here, their being bereaved of their children by the Assyrian conquerors. The shield of his mighty men is made red.—Is stained with blood: this appears to be a description of the Chaldeans, or Medes, assaulting Nineveh. The valiant men are in scarlet.—The eastern people were very fond of dressing themselves in scarlet, as we learn from Herodotus. Or, “As the preparation for battle is described, we may suppose,” says Bishop Newcome, that “it was customary among those who fought against Nineveh to carry red shields and

A. M. 3294. B. C. 710. 4 The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways: ⁵ they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings.

⁵ He shall recount his ⁶ worthies: they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the ⁷ defence shall be prepared.

⁶ The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be ⁸ dissolved.

⁷ And ⁹ Huzzab shall be ¹⁰ led away captive, she shall be brought up, and her maids shall

³ Or, died scarlet.—⁴ Or, fiery torches.—⁵ Heb. their show.—⁶ Or, gallants.—⁷ Heb. covering, or, coverer.—⁸ Or, molten.—⁹ Or, that which was established, or, there was a stand made.—¹⁰ Or, discovered.

to wear scarlet.” The chariots shall be with flaming torches.—Rather, the chariots shall shine like the fire of torches, in the day that they prepare themselves.—Namely, by the wheels continually striking fire against the stones and pavement by the quickness of the motion. And the fir-trees shall be terribly shaken.—Namely, by the rattling of the chariot wheels, in running up and down. Or this may be interpreted of the pikes and lances used by the Chaldeans, and made of fir, and here called fir-trees on account of their length and largeness. The chariots shall rage in the streets.—They shall drive furiously one against another. They shall seem like torches, &c.—See on the preceding verse. They run like the lightnings.—Or, with the swiftness of lightning.

Verses 5, 6. He.—The enemy that attacks Nineveh, namely, the king of Babylon; shall recount his worthies.—Shall select some of his choicest troops for the siege of it. They shall stumble in their walk.—They shall show such forwardness, and be so eager to begin the attack of the city and mount the walls, that they shall stumble and throw one another down in their haste. The defence shall be prepared.—Hebrew, הכנן, the covering. So the Vulgate, preparabitur umbraculum: “Testudo qua tecti subruant mœnia.”—Grotius. “The testudo, or fence, with which being covered, they might undermine and throw down the walls.” The gates of the river shall be open.—See note on chap. i. 8. The palace shall be dissolved.—Or, molten; shall be consumed with fire.

Verse 7. And Huzzab shall be led away captive.—By Huzzab the Chaldee understands the queen, who, without due respect to her royal dignity, should be hurried away, among other captives, into a strange land; and exposed, as they, to danger and insolence. And her maids.—The ladies that waited on her in her state of royalty, shall now be her companions in her captivity; shall lead her.—Shall support their sorrowful, weary, and fainting queen, spent with such travel as she had not been used to; with the

A. M. 3294. lead her as with the voice of ^f doves,
B. C. 710. tabering upon their breasts.

8 But Nineveh is ¹¹ of old like a pool of water: yet they shall flee away. Stand, stand, shall they cry; but none shall ¹² look back.

9 Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold: ¹³ for there is none end of the store and glory out of all the ¹⁴ pleasant furniture.

10 She is empty, and void, and waste: and the ^g heart melteth, and ^h the knees smite together, ⁱ and much pain is in all loins, and ^k the faces of them all gather blackness.

11 Where is the dwelling of ^l the lions, and

^f Isa. xxxviii. 14; lix. 11.—¹¹ Or, from the days that she hath been.—¹² Or, cause them to turn.—¹³ Or, and their infinite store, &c.—¹⁴ Heb. vessels of desire.—^g Isa. xlii. 7, 8.

voice of doves, tabering, &c.—Mourning like doves, and beating their breasts, instead of musical instruments. But, as the word Huzzab signifies a strong, or impregnable fortress, some understand thereby Nineveh itself. If this be the meaning of the term, Nineveh is here figuratively represented as a great princess carried captive, with her maids of honour attending her, and bewailing hers and their own condition: with every sign and expression of lamentation: whereby was denoted, that the lesser cities under her jurisdiction should be sharers with her in her calamity. Thus Babylon is represented by Isaiah as a tender and delicate lady, undergoing the hardships of a captivity, chap. xlvii. 1-8.

Verse 8. But Nineveh is of old like a pool of water—"Id est, supra modum populosa, nam aquæ populi." That is, above measure populous, for waters signify people.—Grotius. Yet they shall flee away—But they shall all flee for fear of the enemy, and run away like water: compare Psa. lviii. 7. Stand, stand, shall they cry, but none shall look back—Their commanders shall call out to them to stand, but none shall pay any regard to them, or cease to flee. The Hebrew is peculiarly animated, and highly poetical. It is literally, Nineveh is as a pool of water: waters is she, and they run away: Stand, stand, but none looketh back. As if he had said, Their commanders might as easily stop the flowing waters by bidding them stand, as cause the Ninevites to stand to their arms and resist the enemy. The words allude to what was foretold chap. i. 8, where see the note.

Verses 9, 10. Take ye the spoil of silver, of gold—Here the Babylonians are addressed as if they had just entered the city; and are bid to take the spoil of it, there being none to make any resistance. We read in Diodorus, that Arbaces carried many talents of gold and silver to Ecbatana, the royal city of the Medes. For there is none end of the store, &c.

the feeding-place of the young lions, A. M. 3294. where the lion, even the old lion, B. C. 710. walked, and the lion's whelp, and none made them afraid?

12 The lion did tear in pieces enough for his whelps, and strangled for his lionesses, and filled his holes with prey, and his dens with ravin.

13 ^m Behold, I am against thee, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will burn her chariots in the smoke, and the sword shall devour thy young lions: and I will cut off thy prey from the earth, and the voice of ⁿ thy messengers shall no more be heard.

^b Dan. v. 6.—ⁱ Jer. xxx. 9.—^k Joel ii. 6.—^l Job iv. 10, 11; Ezek. xix. 2-7.—^m Ezek. xxix. 3; xxxviii. 3; xxxix. 1; Chap. iii. 5.—ⁿ 2 Kings xviii. 17, 19; xix. 9, 23.

—The Vulgate reads, There is no end of the riches, from all the desirable vessels. The sense of the Hebrew, however, is, The glory (namely, of their riches) is above all precious vessels; that is, beyond all that is generally esteemed precious, and greatly coveted. She is empty, and void, and waste—She is spoiled of every thing. And the heart melteth—The inhabitants have no heart, or courage, to defend themselves, but leave the city to be plundered and laid waste by the enemy. The knees smite together—They are quite overcome with fear.

Verses 11-13. Where is the dwelling of the lions—Where is the lion-like courage and strength, which formerly characterized the king of Nineveh and his people? What is become of the stately palaces of the king and princes of Nineveh? who, like so many lions, cruel, violent, and irresistible, knew no other law than their pride and ambition; preying upon their own people, and the neighbouring countries, and filling their houses with the spoils they took from them, as the lions fill their dens with their prey. I will burn her chariots in the smoke—Or, even unto smoke. The LXX. read, καὶ ἐκκαύσω ἐν καπνῷ πλῆθος σου, I will burn thy multitude in the smoke. Some again render the clause, I will burn thy seat, or thy habitation, observing, that the simile taken from lions is continued; and therefore that the word chariots is quite improper here; the expression referring to the den or habitation of lions, which he threatens to suffocate with fire and smoke in their subterraneous caverns. The sword shall devour thy young lions—Shall destroy thy young people, and the most vigorous of thy soldiers. I will cut off thy prey from the earth—I will prevent thy spoiling any country any more. And the voice of thy messengers shall no more be heard—Thou shalt no more send ambassadors with thy orders to distant countries, either to encourage thine allies or to terrify thine enemies.

CHAPTER III.

Here we have, (1.) The sins of Nineveh, and judgments pursuing them, 1-7. (2.) Instances of similar judgments for the like sins, 8-11. (3.) The overthrow of all those things wherein they trusted, 12-19.

A. M. 3294. WO to the ¹bloody ^acity! it is all
B. C. 710. full of lies and robbery; the prey departeth not;

2 The noise of a whip, and ^bthe noise of the rattling of the wheels, and of the prancing horses, and of the jumping chariots.

3 The horseman lifteth up both ²the bright sword, and the glittering spear: and there is a multitude of slain, and a great number of carcasses; and there is none end of their corpses; they stumble upon their corpses:

4 Because of the multitude of the whoredoms of the well-favoured harlot, ^cthe mistress of witchcrafts, that selleth nations through her whoredoms, and families through her witchcrafts.

¹ Heb. city of bloods.—^a Ezek. xxii. 2, 3; xxiv. 6, 9; Hab. ii. 12.—^b Jer. xlvii. 3.—² Heb. the flame of the sword and the lightning of the spear.—^c Isa. xlvii. 9, 12; Rev. xviii. 2, 3. ^d Chap. ii. 13.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verse 1. Wo to the bloody city—Here God shows the cause of his bringing destruction on Nineveh, and overthrowing the Assyrian empire. And first, it is declared, that Nineveh was a city in which acts of cruelty abounded, and innocent blood was frequently shed; that it was also full of deceit, falsehood, and rapine; unjustly and continually increasing its riches by the plunder of the neighbouring countries, which had done them no injury.

Verses 2, 3. The noise of a whip, &c.—These verses are highly poetical; the prophet tells them, that he already hears the sound of the whips driving on the horses, and the rattling of the chariot wheels, &c., of their enemies coming against them. The horseman lifteth up both the bright sword, &c.—In the Hebrew it is, The horseman lifteth up the flame of the sword, and the lightning of the spear, which is more poetical than our rendering. The style of the whole passage is extremely fine; scarce any thing can be more picturesque, or strongly descriptive of a victorious army.

Verse 4. Because of the multitude, &c.—That is, this judgment is executed upon Nineveh because of the multitude of her whoredoms, by which idolatrous rites seem to be meant, for they are generally called whoredoms in the Scripture. Nineveh is called a well-favoured harlot, because, by her example and influence, she drew in other places to practise the same idolatries and other vices of which she was guilty. That selleth nations through her whoredoms—That makes whole nations a prey to their enemies, by encouraging them to worship idols, and thereby exposing themselves to the wrath of God: or by teaching them the arts of softness and effemi-

5 ^dBehold, I am against thee, saith A. M. 3294.
the LORD of hosts; and ^eI will dis- B. C. 710.

cover thy skirts upon thy face, ^fand I will show the nations thy nakedness, and the kingdoms thy shame.

6 And I will cast abominable filth upon thee, and ^gmake thee vile, and will set thee as ^ha gazing-stock.

7 And it shall come to pass, that all they that look upon thee ⁱshall flee from thee, and say, Nineveh is laid waste: ^kwho will bemoan her? whence shall I seek comforters for thee?

8 ^lArt thou better than ³populous ^mNo, that was situate among the rivers, that had the waters round about it, whose rampart was the sea, and her wall was from the sea?

^e Isa. xlvii. 2, 3; Jer. xlii. 22, 26; Ezek. xvi. 37; Mic. i. 11. ^f Hab. ii. 16.—^g Mal. ii. 9.—^h Heb. x. 33.—ⁱ Rev. xviii. 10. ^k Jer. xv. 5.—^l Amos vi. 2.—^m Or, nourishing.—ⁿ Heb. No-amon.—^o Jer. xli. 25, 26; Ezek. xxx. 14-16.

nacy, and so rendering them weak and defenceless. As the violence and injustice of the Ninevites had been represented under the emblem of a lion, the prophet here paints their irregularities, their idolatry, and corruption, under the idea of a prostitute enticing men to commit lewdness.

Verses 5-7. Behold, I will discover thy skirts, &c., upon thy face—Nineveh, as a harlot, had been proud, and appeared beautiful and gay in the gifts of her lovers, but now God would deal with her according to her ways, would send her into captivity naked and bare, exposed to the greatest infamy, or would deal with her as inhuman soldiers deal with captive women. And I will show, &c.—I will expose thy shame to the world, a punishment often inflicted upon harlots: see note on Ezek. xvi. 37. I will cast abominable filth upon thee—I will deprive thee of all thine ornaments, and cover thee with shame and reproach. And will set thee as a gazing-stock—I will make a public example of thee. All they that look upon thee shall flee from thee—As being affrighted at the sight of thy dismal condition, and not willing to lend thee any assistance. Who will bemoan her? &c.—Thou didst so offend all people in thy prosperity, that all will rejoice at thy fall, and none will be found to lament or condole with thee.

Verses 8-10. Art thou better than populous No—Art thou in a better or safer condition; or hast thou more merit than the famous populous city of No? The Hebrew reads, No-amon, the same city which is spoken of Jer. xli. 25; and Ezek. xxx. 15; where see the notes; and where our version reads, the multitude of No, as here, populous No. It is thought by some, that the place took its rise from Ham, by whose posterity Egypt was peopled, (thence called

A. M. 3294. 9 Ethiopia and Egypt were her B. C. 710. strength, and it was infinite; Put and Lubim were ^athy helpers.

10 Yet was she carried away, she went into captivity: ^aher young children also were dashed in pieces ^oat the top of all the streets: and they ^pcast lots for her honourable men, and all her great men were bound in chains.

11 Thou also shalt be ^adrunken: thou shalt be hid, thou also shalt seek strength because of the enemy.

12 All thy strong holds shall be like ^rfig-trees with the first ripe figs: if they be shaken, they shall even fall into the mouth of the eater.

13 Behold, ^athy people in the midst of thee are women: the gates of thy land shall be set wide open unto thine enemies: the A. M. 3294.

fire shall devour thy ^rbars. B. C. 710.

14 Draw thee waters for the siege, ^afortify thy strong holds: go into clay, and tread the mortar, make strong the brick-kiln.

15 There shall the fire devour thee; the sword shall cut thee off, it shall eat thee up like ^rthe canker-worm: make thyself many as the canker-worm, make thyself many as the locusts.

16 Thou hast multiplied thy merchants above the stars of heaven: the canker-worm ^ospoil-eth, and flieth away.

17 ^vThy crowned are as the locusts, and thy captains as the great grasshoppers, which camp in the hedges in the cold day, but when the sun ariseth they flee away, and their

^a Heb. in thy help.—^r Psa. cxxxvii. 9; Isa. xlii. 16; Hosea xlii. 16.—^o Lam. ii. 19.—^p Joel iii. 3; Obad. 11.—^a Jer. xxv. 17, 27; Chap. i. 10.

^r Rev. vi. 13.—^v Jer. l. 37; li. 30.—^o Psa. cxlvii. 13; Jer. li. 30.—^a Chap. ii. 1.—^r Joel i. 4.—^v Or, spreadeth himself. ^v Rev. ix. 7.

the land of Ham, Psa. cvi. 22,) and who was worshipped under the name of Jupiter-ammon. Accordingly the LXX. render it Diospolis, that is, the city of Jupiter. That was situate among the rivers—Which was defended by the river Nile on the one side, and the Red sea on the other, as by so many walls and ramparts. Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength—Their forces defended this city. And it was infinite—Houbigant renders the verse, The Ethiopians and Egyptians, who are innumerable, were her strength; the Africans and Libyans were her helpers. Yet was she carried away—It is evident that Nahum does not here foretel the destruction of No-ammon as an event yet to come, but speaks of it as a transaction past, although but lately. It therefore cannot be attributed to Nebuchadnezzar, for that would suppose it to have happened after the destruction of Nineveh, instead of before it. Dr. Prideaux, with more reason, believes that it was effected by Sennacherib, about three years before he besieged Jerusalem, in the time of Hezekiah. At that time Sevechus, the son of Sabaccon, or So, mentioned 2 Kings xvii. 4, was king both of Egypt and Ethiopia; so they are mentioned here as confederates, and Isaiah foretels that they should be vanquished by Sargon, or Sennacherib. They cast lots for her honourable men—Conquerors used to cast lots what captives should come to each man's share: see note on Obad. 11.

Verses 11–13. Thou also shalt be drunken—Thou shalt drink deep of the bitter cup of God's displeasure. Thou shalt be hid, &c.—Thou shalt not dare to appear in the open field. Thou shalt seek strength because of the enemy—Thou shalt retire into thy strong holds, or fortified places, for fear of the enemy. All thy strong holds shall be like fig-trees—As figs when quite ripe drop off from the trees by the least shaking, so shall thy strong holds fall into the enemies' hands upon the first assault. The gates of thy land shall be set wide open, &c.—The several passages, by which the enemy may invade thee, shall be open to them, either through fear or treachery, or shall be easily forced. The fire shall devour thy bars—With which the gates were shut and strengthened.

Verses 14, 15. Draw thee waters for the siege—Fill all thy cisterns, and draw the waters into the ditches. Go into the clay, &c.—Set thy brickmakers on work to prepare store of materials for thy fortifications. There shall the fire devour thee—After all that thou canst do, the fire of the enemy shall reach even thy inmost works, and their darts shall drive off the defenders of them. The sword shall cut thee off—The Hebrew word, which we render here sword, properly signifies any kind of dart; and this seems to be spoken of the fire, and missile weapons which the enemy should throw, in order to burn their inner works, or drive them from off them. It shall eat thee up like the canker-worm—The sword of the enemy shall destroy thee, as the canker-worm eats up the fruits of the earth. Or, as some interpret the expression, Thou shalt be devoured as the canker-worm is eaten up; because the Assyrians were wont to eat these kinds of worms, which were a species of locusts, which are still eaten in the eastern countries. Make thyself many as the canker-worm—Though thou multiply thine armies like locusts, or caterpillars, yet the enemy shall destroy them.

Verses 16, 17. Thou hast multiplied thy merchants above the stars—Thou hast drawn more merchants to thee than there are stars in the heavens. This is a hyperbolic expression, to signify the great number of them. The canker-worm spoileth, and fleeth away—As the locusts destroy the fruits of the earth, and then fly away to another place; so shall thy soldiers pillage all the wealth thou hast gained by traffic, and then leave thee. Thy crowned (or, thy princes) are as the locusts, &c.—For as they fly away when the heat comes on, so thy princes and captains will fly away from the heat of battle, or danger.

A. M. 3294. place is not known where they are.
B. C. 710.

18 ^aThy shepherds slumber, O ^aking of Assyria: thy ⁷nobles shall dwell in the dust: thy people is ^bscattered upon the mountains, and no man gathereth them.

^a Exodus xv. 16; Psa. lxxvi. 6.—^a Jer. l. 18; Ezek. xxxi. 3.
⁷ Or, valiant ones.—^b 1 Kings xxii. 17.

Verses 18, 19. Thy shepherds slumber, O king of Assyria—Thy rulers and counsellors are remiss, heartless, or dead. Thy nobles—Or valiant ones, shall dwell in the dust—These words are not in the Hebrew, but are supplied by our translators. The strict rendering of the Hebrew would rather be, Have lain down, as Grotius renders it; that is, have indulged themselves in ease, and not concerned themselves about the public affairs. The Vulgate, however, renders this former part of the verse, Thy shepherds have slept, thy princes shall be buried: understanding it, probably, of their being slain in battle, or having died through famine or pestilence during the siege. Thy people is scattered upon the mountains—Thy people, or common soldiers, for want of commanders, are scattered about, and there is no chief officer, or head commander, to collect them together. There is no healing of thy bruise—Or binding up of thy wound. Thy destruction is inevitable. The state of thy affairs is so bad, that there is no hope of recovering them. All that hear the bruit of thee—That is, the report of thee; (as the obsolete word bruit signifies;) all to whom the account of thy fall shall come; shall clap the hands over thee—Namely, for joy. For upon whom hath not thy wickedness, &c.—To whom hast thou not been injurious?

Thus it is evident, upon the whole of this prophecy of Nahum, that the entire desolation and complete destruction of Nineveh were most expressly and particularly foretold therein: yet one can hardly imagine any event more improbable than this was, at the time when Nahum predicted it. Surely there was no probability that the capital of a great kingdom, a city which was sixty miles in compass, a city which contained so many myriads of inhabitants, which had walls one hundred feet high, and so thick that three chariots could go abreast upon them, and which had one thousand five hundred towers of two hundred feet in height; surely there was no probability that such a city should ever be totally destroyed; and yet so totally was it destroyed, that authors are not agreed about its situation. From the general suffrage, indeed, of ancient historians and geographers, it seems to have been situated upon the Tigris; but yet no less authors than Ctesias and Diodorus Siculus represent it as situated upon the river Euphrates. Nay, authors differ, not only from one another, but also from themselves. For the learned Bochart hath shown, that Herodotus, Diodorus Siculus, and Ammianus Marcellinus, all three speak differently of it, sometimes as if it was situated upon the river Tigris, and sometimes as if upon the river Euphrates. So that, to reconcile these authors with themselves and with others, it is supposed by Bo-

19 There is no ^ahealing of thy ^abruise; ^cthy wound is grievous: ^dall ^athat hear the bruit of thee shall clap the hands over thee: for upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually?

^a Heb. wrinkling.—^c Mic. i. 9.—^d Lam. ii. 15; Zeph. ii. 15; Isaiah xiv. 8.

chart that there were two Ninevehs, and by Sir John Marshman that there were three; the Syrian, upon the river Euphrates; the Assyrian, upon the river Tigris; and a third, built afterward upon the Tigris by the Persians, who succeeded the Parthians in the empire of the East in the third century, and were subdued by the Saracens in the seventh century after Christ: but whether this latter Nineveh was built in the same place as old Nineveh is a question that cannot be decided. Lucian, who flourished in the second century after Christ, affirms, that Nineveh was utterly perished, and there was no footstep of it remaining, nor could one tell where once it was situated. And the greater regard is to be paid to his testimony, as he was a native of Samosata, a city upon the river Euphrates; and, coming from a neighbouring country, he must have known whether there had been any remains of Nineveh or not. "Even the ruins," says Bishop Newton, "of old Nineveh have been, as I may say, ruined and destroyed; such an utter end hath been made of it, and such is the truth of the divine predictions! This, perhaps, may strike us the more strongly, by supposing only a parallel instance: let us, then, suppose that a person should come in the name of a prophet preaching repentance to the people of this kingdom, or otherwise denouncing the destruction of the capital city within a few years. I presume we should look upon such a prophet as a madman, and show no further attention to his message than to deride and despise it: and yet such an event would not be more strange and incredible than the destruction and devastation of Nineveh. For Nineveh was much the larger, and much the stronger and older city of the two; and the Assyrian empire had subsisted and flourished more ages than any form of government in this country; so that we cannot object the instability of the eastern monarchies in this case. Let us, then, since this event would not be more improbable and extraordinary than the other, suppose again, that things should succeed according to the prediction, the floods should arise, and the enemy should come, the city should be overflowed and broken down, be taken and pillaged, and destroyed so totally, that even the learned could not agree about the place where it was situated. What would be said or thought in such a case? Whoever of posterity should read and compare the prophecy and event together, must they not, by such an illustrious instance, be thoroughly convinced of the providence of God, and of the truth of this prophet, and be ready to acknowledge, Verily this is the word that the Lord hath spoken! Verily there is a God who judgeth in the earth!"

THE BOOK OF HABAKKUK.

ARGUMENT.

THE Prophet Habakkuk is said to have been of the tribe of Simeon, and a native of Beth-zaker. As he makes no mention of the Assyrians in his prophecy, and speaks of the invasions of the Chaldeans as near at hand, it is probable he prophesied after the destruction of Nineveh, and the overthrow of the Assyrian empire, and not long before the kingdom of Judah was destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar. It seems he was cotemporary with Jeremiah, and prophesied in the reign of Josiah, probably toward the close of his reign, and in the beginning of Jehoiakim's. The subject of his prophecy is the same with that of Jeremiah, and upon the same occasion; namely, the destruction of Judah and Jerusalem by the Chaldeans, for their idolatries and other heinous sins and provocations. This destruction he foretels in the first chapter, as also that of the adjacent countries. In the second, he predicts the overthrow of the Chaldeans, for their unprovoked invasion of other nations, and their various acts of violence, oppression, and bloodshed, and he encourages the Jews patiently to wait for it. Thus, as the preceding prophet, Nahum, foretold the destruction of the Assyrians, who carried the ten tribes captive; so Habakkuk foretels the judgments that should come upon the Chaldeans, who completed the captivity of the two remaining tribes. In the third chapter, he, in a most lofty manner, celebrates God's former appearances for Israel, in bringing them through the Red sea; in giving his law to them; and in casting out the Canaanites before them: he professes his terrible apprehension of the Chaldean invasion; begs the Lord would at least mitigate the stroke; and concludes, rejoicing in God his Saviour. Habakkuk is repeatedly quoted as an inspired writer in the New Testament, as the reader will see if he will compare chap. i. 5, with Acts xiii. 40, 41; and ii. 3, 4, with Rom. i. 17; Gal. iii. 11; Heb. x. 37, 38: and "his predictions of the devastations" that should be made by the Chaldeans, and of the judgments that would be inflicted on them, are considered by many as foretelling also "the temporary success and final ruin of the oppressors and corrupters of the Christian Church, and the final and universal prevalence of true religion throughout the earth."—Scott. "The Prophet Habakkuk," says Archbishop Newcome, "stands high in the class of the Hebrew poets. The beautiful connection between the parts of his prophecy, its diction, imagery, spirit, and sublimity, cannot be too much admired." Bishop Lowth bears a similar testimony, observing, "The style of Habakkuk is poetical, especially in his ode, chap. iii., which may deservedly be accounted among the most perfect specimens of that class." See his 21st Prelection.

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter, (1.) The prophet complains to God of the injustice and violence practised among the Jews, and of the sufferings hereby brought upon the righteous, 1-4. (2.) God by him foretels the punishment of this abuse of power by the sword of war, and the desolations which the army of the Chaldeans should make among them, 5-11. (3.) The prophet complains of the mischief done by the Chaldeans, and prays for his own people and against their enemies, 12-17.

A. M. 3378.
B. C. 626.

THE burden which Habakkuk
the prophet did see.

2 O LORD, how long shall I cry, A. M. 3378.
and thou wilt not hear! even cry B. C. 626.

^a Lam.

iii. 8.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. The burden—The grievous calamities, or heavy judgments; which Habakkuk did see—That is, foresee, and was commissioned to foretel.

This burden, or prophetic vision, communicated to Habakkuk, was against the Chaldeans as well as the Jews. For while the prophet was complaining of iniquity among the Jews, 1st, God foreshows him

A. M. 3378. out unto thee of violence, and thou
B. C. 626. wilt not save!

3 Why dost thou show me iniquity, and cause me to behold grievance? for spoiling and violence are before me: and there are that raise up strife and contention.

4 Therefore the law is slacked, and judgment doth never go forth: for the ^bwicked doth compass about the righteous; therefore ¹wrong judgment proceedeth.

5 ¶ Behold ye among the heathen, and regard, and wonder marvellously: for I will work the desolations which the Chaldeans would make in Judea and the neighbouring countries, as the ministers of divine vengeance: and, 2d, Upon the prophet's falling into an expostulation with God about these proceedings, moved thereto probably by his compassion for his own people, God shows him the judgments which he would execute upon the Chaldeans.

^b Job xxi. 7; Psa. xciv. 3, &c.; Jer. xii. 1.—¹ Or, unrested.
^c Isa. xxix. 14; Acts xiii. 41.—^d Deut. xxviii. 49, 50; Jer. v. 15.—² Fulfilled, 2 Chron. xxxvi. 6.

Verses 2-4. *O Lord, how long shall I cry, &c.—*How long shall I complain unto thee of might overcoming right, and thou wilt not save or prevent it? The prophet here proposes the common objection against Providence, taken from the prosperity of the wicked, and their oppression of the righteous, which has often been a stumbling-block even to good men: see Jer. xii. 1; Job xii. 6; and xxi. 7; Psa. xxxvii. lxxiii. *Why dost thou show me iniquity?—*Why hast thou caused me to live in such times of iniquity? for I see nothing but scenes of rapine, and the most unjust oppression. *And there are that raise up strife, &c.—*Or, there is strife, and contention carries it. There is much cause for complaining, but those best skilled in the arts of contention carry the cause. *Therefore the law is slacked—*The divine law, given us for the regulation of our conduct, hath lost its force. *And judgment doth never go forth—*Causes remain undetermined, and justice is not duly administered. *For the wicked, &c.—*For the wicked, by their deceitful arts, prevail against the righteous, and overpower them; therefore [rather, moreover] *wrong judgment proceedeth—*Not only judgment is delayed, but, what is still worse, unjust judgment is given, and causes are evidently decided in a manner quite contrary to what is equitable and just.

Verse 5. *Behold, &c.—*For a punishment of such exorbitant practices, behold, God is about to make the heathen the instruments of his vengeance. *Ye among the heathen, and regard—*Consider and weigh it well, in its nature and consequences; for it is intended as a warning to you, and assures you that judgment will overtake you also. *And wonder marvellously—*As astonished at judgments too great to be described, and so strange that they will appear to many, even of God's professing people, to be ina work in your days, which ye will not believe though it be told you. A. M. 3378. B. C. 626.

6 For lo, ^aI² raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter and hasty nation, which shall march through the ³breadth of the land, to possess the dwelling-places that are not theirs.

7 They are terrible and dreadful: ⁴their judgment and their dignity shall proceed of themselves.

8 Their horses also are swifter than the leopards, and are more ⁵fierce than the ^eevening wolves: and their horsemen shall spread credible. *For I will work a work, &c., which ye will not believe—*The judgment shall be such, as you despisers of God's word will not believe to be coming upon you. These words are referred to, and indeed quoted, by St. Paul, Acts xiii. 41; not, however, according to the Hebrew text, but the translation of the LXX., who, instead of בְּגִימִים, begoim, among the heathen, seem to have read בְּגָדִים, begadim, despisers, or perfidious persons. This reading of the LXX. is preferred by Grotius, because, he observes, "God addresses the Jews who were despisers of his deity."

³ Heb. breadths.—⁴ Or, from them shall proceed the judgment of these, and the captivity of these.—⁵ Heb. sharp.—^e Jer. v. 6; Zeph. iii. 3.

Verse 6. *For lo, I raise up the Chaldeans—*This is spoken of as a matter of great wonder and astonishment, because the Chaldeans, in the times of Hezekiah, Manasseh, and Josiah, were allies of the Jewish nation, and seemed linked to them in the greatest friendship; so that they had no fear on that side, but all their fear was from the Egyptians. Therefore the coming of the Chaldeans into the country is spoken of here as a thing entirely new, and as if that people had been called into existence for the very purpose of punishing the Jewish nation. There is a prophecy similar to this in Isaiah, with regard to the Assyrians, in whom the Jewish nation then placed their chief confidence, and thought of nothing less than of the evils which Isaiah threatened should be brought upon them by that nation: so weak and short-sighted often is human policy! see Isa. vii. *That bitter and hasty nation—*That people cruel in their disposition, quick in executing their purposes, and hasty in their marches, Isa. v. 26, 27; Jer. v. 16, 17. *Which shall march through the breadth of the land, to possess, &c.—*This is spoken of the Chaldeans extending their conquests to a vast distance from the original seat of their empire.

Verses 7-9. *Their judgment, &c., shall proceed of themselves—*They will judge themselves of what they shall do, without paying regard to any thing but their own will, and shall have power to put in execution whatever they resolve upon. Their horses also are swifter than the leopards—"Leopards tamed and taught to hunt are, it is said, made use of [in Palestine] for hunting, and seize the prey with-

A. M. 3378. themselves, and their horsemen shall
B. C. 626. come from far; ^f they shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat.

9 They shall come all for violence: ⁶ their ⁷ faces shall sup up as the east wind, and they shall gather the captivity as the sand.

10 And they shall scoff at the kings, and the princes shall be a scorn unto them: they shall deride every strong hold; for they shall heap dust, and take it.

^f Jer. iv. 13.—⁶ Or, the supping up of their faces, &c., or, their faces shall look toward the east.—⁷ Heb. the opposition of their faces toward the east.—⁸ Dan. v. 4.—^h Psa. xc. 2; xciii. 2;

surprising agility. When the leopard leaps, he throws himself seventeen or eighteen feet at a time.”—Harmer, ii. 438. And are more fierce than the evening wolves—Which, having fasted in the day, were wont to come forth in the evening fierce and ravenous. And their horsemen shall spread themselves—Namely, all over the land; that is, they shall be very numerous. They shall come all for violence—To enrich themselves by making a prey of all. Their faces shall sup up as the east wind—They shall destroy every thing where they march, as the east wind blasts the fruits of the earth. And they shall gather the captivity [or, captives] as the sand—Not only in Judea, but in all the neighbouring countries which they conquer. Houbigant renders the clause, A burning wind goes before them, and gathers captives as the sand. They shall carry desolation, destruction, and fire, everywhere before them. The winds which blew from Arabia the Desert were extremely hot, and very dangerous, not only on account of their own heat, but on account of the dust and sand which they brought with them.

Verses 10, 11. And they shall scoff at the kings, &c.—The Hebrew use the singular number here, (He shall scoff, &c.), as well as in the following verse, and it is to be understood of the king of Babylon, who treated the kings he conquered with scorn and contempt: so he used Zedekiah and his princes. They shall deride every strong hold—They shall contemn, or count as nothing, the most strongly fortified places. They shall heap dust and take it—They shall cast up mounds against them, and so take them. Then shall his mind change, and he shall pass over—Rather, And shall pass over, (without the personal pronoun he), that is, his mind shall change, and pass beyond the bounds of moderation. By this and the next clause, imputing this his power unto his god, was foretold that the king of Babylon should be made arrogant by his victories, and should impute them to the power of the false gods he worshipped. This was remarkably true of Belshazzar, Nebuchadnezzar's successor, who, with his thousand lords, when he was drinking wine in the golden and silver vessels taken out of God's temple, and was thereby triumphing over Jehovah and his people, praised the gods of gold and silver, &c., as the 11 Then shall his mind change, A. M. 3378.

and he shall pass over, and offend, B. C. 626.
⁸ imputing this his power unto his god.

12 ¶ ^h Art thou not from everlasting, O LORD my God, my Holy One? We shall not die. O LORD, ⁱ thou hast ordained them for judgment; and, O ⁸ mighty God, thou hast ⁹ established them for correction.

13 ^k Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on ¹⁰ iniquity: ¹ where-

Lam. v. 19.—ⁱ 2 Kings xix. 25; Psa. xvii. 13; Isa. x. 5, 7; Ezek. xxx. 25.—⁸ Heb. rock, Deut. xxxii. 4.—⁹ Heb. founded.
^k Psa. v. 5.—¹⁰ Or, grievance.—¹ Jer. xii. 1.

authors of their successes and victories. It was also remarkably verified in Nebuchadnezzar himself, who, as we find from Dan. iii., cast three otherwise innocent persons, and faithful to him, into a furnace of fire, because they would not fall down before the idol which he had set up. But Grotius, and many others, interpret the latter part of the verse thus: Saying this his strength is his god; that is, imputing all his success to his own skill and prowess; a sense of the words which answers remarkably to the character of Nebuchadnezzar, as given in the book of Daniel: see chapter iii. 17, and iv. 30, and v. 20. Probably the extraordinary insanity which befell Nebuchadnezzar, as the punishment of his pride and arrogance, might be also here intended in the first clause of this verse, which in the Hebrew is, Then shall his spirit change and pass over, &c. Here, then, is a remarkable proof of what the psalmist says, namely, that God understandeth our thoughts afar off: for here the alteration that should in after times be made in Nebuchadnezzar's mind by his prosperity is expressly foretold, together with the punishment that should follow upon it.

Verse 12. Art thou not, &c.—Here the prophet, upon being made sensible that the king of Babylon should attribute all his victories to some false or fictitious deity, or to his own abilities, breaks out into a passionate exclamation to Jehovah, Art thou not from everlasting, O Lord my God?—Art not thou he, who only hath been from everlasting; while all others that are called gods have had a beginning, and there was a time when neither they nor the men that set them up had any being? Thou, therefore, art infinitely superior, both to the most powerful men, and to all that are called gods. We shall not die—We shall not utterly perish by the Chaldeans, though we shall suffer severely from them. Or, as Seeker renders it, Let us not die. Thou hast ordained them for judgment—Thou hast appointed the Chaldeans to execute thy judgments on sinners. And, O mighty God—Whose sovereignty is unquestionable, and power irresistible; thou hast established them for correction—The Hebrew is, thou hast founded them as a rock for correction, namely, of the Jewish people.

Ver. 13-17. Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil—Thou art of too just and pure a nature to ap-

A. M. 3378. fore lookest thou upon them that deal
B. C. 626. treacherously, and holdest thy tongue when the wicked devoureth the man that is more righteous than he?

14 And makest men as the fishes of the sea,
as the ¹¹ creeping things, that have no rule over
them?

15 They ^m take up all of them with the angle,

¹¹ Or, moving.—^m Jeremiah xvi. 16; Amos iv. 2.—¹² Or,
flue-net.

prove of wickedness: it must ever be an abomination
to thee. Thou canst not look upon iniquity—Except with infinite abhorrence. Wherefore lookest thou upon them—Seemest to connive at, or dost not show any particular dislike at the violence of those idolatrous Chaldeans? And makest men as the fishes of the sea, &c.—By delivering them to Nebuchadnezzar, who takes them in his net, as a fisherman takes fishes; which creatures suffer themselves to be taken without resistance, because they have no power to defend themselves. As the creeping things that have no ruler, &c.—No chief to conduct or guard them.
The Hebrews give the common name of reptiles to all fishes. They take up all of them with the angle
—The prophet, having in the preceding verse compared men to fishes, continues here, by way of metaphor, to describe the advantages which the Chaldeans gained over other nations, by the several ways used by fishermen in taking fishes, as by catching them with the angle, enclosing them in nets,
and gathering them in drags. Therefore they rejoice and are glad—On account of the prey they

they catch them in their net, and A. M. 3378 gather them in their ¹² drag: there- B. C. 626.
fore they rejoice and are glad.

16 Therefore ⁿ they sacrifice unto their net, and burn incense unto their drag; because by them
their portion is fat, and their meat ¹³ plenteous.¹⁴

17 Shall they therefore empty their net, and not spare continually to slay the nations?

ⁿ Deut. viii. 17; Isaiah x. 13; xxxvii. 24, 25.—¹³ Or, dainty.
¹⁴ Heb. fat.

take; that is, the Chaldeans rejoice in taking a great number of captives, and gathering rich spoils, as fishermen rejoice when they catch a great number of fishes. *Therefore they sacrifice unto their net,
&c.*—They impute all their victories to their own strength and skill, or to idols of their own making,
and render no acknowledgments to God for their success. Because by them their portion is fat, &c.—
Because by means of their victories they get abundance of rich spoil. Shall they therefore empty their net—Carry away the riches and spoils of their conquests, (see 2 Kings xxiv. 13,) in order to undertake more; just as fishermen empty their nets to fill them again. But the words may be properly rendered, Shall he therefore spread his net? in which sense the Vulgate, as also the Greek and Chaldee, here interpret the Hebrew verb ירוק, a word often used of drawing or unsheathing a sword or spear.
And not spare continually to slay the nations—Wilt thou suffer them to go on to make havoc continually of all other nations? Shall they never be stopped in their career?

CHAPTER II.

Here, (1.) God answers the complaints of the prophet made in the foregoing chapter, telling him that in due time, after he has sufficiently tried the faith of his people, and distinguished hypocrites from saints, he will reckon with the proud Chaldeans, and bring them to ruin for their oppressions and murders, 1-8. (2.) He denounces fearful curses against them and their associates in wickedness; as being greedy of wealth and honour, 9-11; injurious and oppressive raisers of estates by injustice, rapine, and robbery, 12, 13, 17; promoters of drunkenness, and destroyers of others, 15-17; and worshippers of idols, 18, 19. (3.) He promises that by these judgments he would spread the knowledge and fear of himself among the nations, 14-20.

A. M. 3378. I WILL ^a stand upon my watch,
B. C. 626. and set me upon the ¹ tower, ^b and will watch to see what he will say ² unto me,

^a Isaiah xxi. 8, 11.—¹ Heb. fenced place.—^b Psalm lxxxv. 8.
^a Or, in me.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verse 1. I will stand upon my watch—The Hebrews often express one thing by a multiplicity of words, as here several expressions are used to signify the same thing, namely, watching. As the prophets were considered as watchmen, and as the watchmen were placed on high towers, and it was

and what I shall answer ³ when ⁴ I A. M. 3378.
am reproved. B. C. 626.

2 ¶ And the LORD answered me, and said,

^a Or, when I am argued with.—^a Hebrew, upon my reproof,
or, arguing.

their duty to look around very diligently to see what messengers or enemies, or what dangers or deliverances were approaching, and to continue steadfast
in their posts; so here the prophet declares that he would as diligently watch and wait for God's answer
to what he had complained of in the foregoing chapter, namely, the great success of the Chaldeans

A. M. 3378. ° Write the vision, and make it plain
B. C. 626. upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.

3 For ^d the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie :

° Isa. viii. 1 ; xxx. 8.—^d Dan. x. 14 ; xi. 27, 35.—° Heb. x. 37.

though they were guilty of greater crimes than the Jewish nation. And what I shall answer when I am reproved—Or rather, As to what I have argued, meaning the expostulations which he had uttered just before. Archbishop Newcome, who renders the verbs in the first three clauses of this verse in the past time, (namely, I stood on my watch-tower, &c.) interprets the latter part of it thus: And I looked to see what he would speak by me, and what I should reply to my arguing with him; that is, what I should reply, “to my own satisfaction, and to that of others, as to the difficulties raised chap. i. 13-17, why the idolatrous and wicked Chaldeans and their king are to be prosperous and triumphant.”

Verses 2, 3. The Lord said, Write the vision—Write down what I am going to say. Every divine communication, by whatever means made, is often spoken of in the prophetic writings under the title of a vision. When the prophets were commanded to write any thing, it denoted the great importance of it, and that the fulfilling of it was at some distance. Make it plain upon tables—Write it in legible characters; that he may run that readeth—That it may be read with ease. For the vision is yet for an appointed time—What I am now about to reveal to thee will not be fulfilled till a certain time which God hath appointed, but which is yet at a distance. As this vision undoubtedly related to the destruction of the Babylonish monarchy, which is plainly foretold from verse 5 to the end of the chapter, so that event was not to take place till about one hundred years from this time. But at the end it shall speak—When the period appointed by God shall come, it shall be accomplished, and not disappoint your expectation. The Hebrew is, At the end it shall break forth, namely, as the morning light, which the word פֹּהַ, here used, properly and emphatically expresses: that is, the event spoken of shall break forth, or appear, with great clearness and evidence, and then this prophecy shall be proved a true one. Though it tarry, wait for it—Although it may be long deferred, and much time may intervene before it be accomplished; yet, nevertheless, continue confidently to expect it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry—Hebrew, לא יאחר, It will not be prolonged, or go beyond, namely, the appointed time; that is, it will certainly be fulfilled at the time that is appointed. The word here used is not the same with that rendered tarry in the former clause. All this is addressed to the Jewish nation in answer to their complaints, represented in the foregoing chapter, respecting the success and prosperity of the Chaldeans, notwithstanding their crimes; in reply to which, God, by a prophetic vision, informs the prophet, that the

though it tarry, wait for it; because A. M. 3378.
it will ° surely come, it will not tarry. B. C. 626.

4 Behold, his soul which is lifted up, is not upright in him: but the ¹ just shall live by his faith.

† John iii. 36; Rom. i. 17; Gal. iii. 11; Heb. x. 38.

Chaldean nation should not go unpunished at the appointed time, namely, when they had filled up the measure of their iniquity, but they should be involved in a much greater destruction than the nations which they had conquered; that most of these nations would survive to see the entire overthrow and final ruin of the Chaldeans. Though God may defer the execution of his promises and threatenings a long time, according to our computation, yet they are no less sure than if they were immediately accomplished; and indeed it is only long with respect to our finite and narrow capacities; for with God, the Scriptures tell us, a thousand years are but as one day.

Verse 4. Behold, his soul which is lifted up—That does not humbly adore and acquiesce in the justice and wisdom of the divine dispensations, but contends against them, and provides for his safety in a way of his own devising. The Vulgate renders this clause, Ecce qui incredulus est, non erit recta anima ejus in semetipso, “Behold he who is unbelieving, his soul will not be right in him.” And the version of the LXX. differs still more from our translation, Εαν υποστειληται, ουκ ευδοκει η ψυχη μου εν αυτο, If he (that is, the just man, as it follows) draw back, my soul shall have no pleasure in him. As these translations do not accord with the present Hebrew text, it is supposed by some learned men that it was written otherwise in the ancient copies; especially as the rendering of the LXX. is sanctioned by the author of the epistle to the Hebrews, chap. x. 38. According to this translation the sense of the passage is, that God having, in the foregoing verse, ordered the Jewish nation confidently to expect the fulfilling of the prophecy, and assured them that it would most certainly come to pass, he in this verse declares that his soul should have no pleasure in the man who should draw back, or whose faith should fail him in waiting for the fulfilling of the prophecy; but that the just should live by his faith—That is, that the truly righteous man, as both the Hebrew and Greek expression signifies, namely, the humble and upright one, who, adoring the depths of the divine dispensations, and being persuaded of the truth of God’s promises, should confide in him for the fulfilment of them, and remain constant in the expectation thereof, as well as of whatever else God had spoken; that he should thereby be supported under all the seeming irregular and trying dispensations of providence, and also be blessed with God’s favour and peculiar love, through the means of his faith. Our rendering, however, (namely, his soul which is lifted up, &c.) “furnishes,” as Bishop Newcome observes, “a good sense, if we understand the passage of the Chaldeans; who, as appears

A. M. 3378. 5 ¶⁵ Yea also, because he trans-
B. C. 626. gresseth by wine, he is a proud man, neither keepeth at home, who enlargeth his desire ^{as} hell, and is as death, and cannot be satisfied, but gathereth unto him all nations,
and heapeth unto him all people:

6 Shall not all these ^{take up} a parable against him, and a taunting proverb against him, and say, ^{Wo} to him that increaseth that

⁵ Or, How much more.—⁶ Proverbs xxvii. 20; xxx. 16.
^h Micah ii. 4.

from chap. i. 7, 12, 15-17, may be addressed in the singular number throughout this chapter, though Nebuchadnezzar and Belshazzar (Dan. v.) may be alluded to at the same time. But the idea of elation of mind does not occur in the ancient versions or paraphrase.²

Verse 5. Yea also, because he—Namely, the king of Babylon; transgresseth by wine—Hereby Belshazzar, his city and kingdom, fell a prey to Darius and Cyrus. He is a proud man—Insolent in his behaviour toward all, whether subjects, strangers, or conquered enemies; such pride shall have a fall. Neither keepeth at home—Is always abroad, warring upon some nation or other. The sense, some think, would be plainer, if the words were thus translated: Moreover, like a man transgressing by wine, he is proud, and shall not continue, or prosper. So the Chaldee paraphrase and Vulgate interpret the words. Who enlargeth his desire as hell—Or rather, as the grave. He is most insatiably greedy to devour all, and as far from saying, It is enough, as the grave is. And is as death—As pernicious and ravenous. And cannot be satisfied—All is too little for him. But gathereth unto him all nations—Addeth one after another of the neighbouring nations to his kingdom; and heapeth unto him all people—Another expression of the same import. Now all these things, predicted of the future disposition of the kings of Babylon and their kingdom, were sure presages of their not continuing long in power and grandeur, but that divine vengeance would soon overtake them. Accordingly at this verse begins the denunciation against the Chaldean, or Babylonian empire, which is spoken of as comprised under one head, who is described as intoxicated with his successes, and not knowing how to set any bounds to his ambition; but still, as his conquests enlarged, his desire of having more increased. Death and the grave are proverbial emblems of an insatiable temper.

Verse 6. Shall not these take up a parable against (or, concerning) him, and a taunting proverb—A parable, or proverb, signifies a metaphorical or figurative saying, out of the common way. And say, Wo to him that increaseth, &c.—Wo to him that is still increasing his own dominions, by invading those of his neighbours. How long?—Namely, will he be permitted to do this? Surely he will not be suffered to continue to act thus, without some remarkable check from Providence: and so what he thus inwhich is not his! how long? and to him that ladeth himself with thick clay!

7 Shall they not rise up suddenly that shall bite thee, and awake that shall vex thee, and thou shalt be for booties unto them?

8 ⁱ Because thou hast spoiled many nations, all the remnant of the people shall spoil thee; ^k because of men's ⁷ blood, and for the violence

⁶ Or, Ho, he.—ⁱ Isaiah xxxiii. 1.—^k Verse 17.—⁷ Heb. bloods.

creases will not be his, or for himself, (for so the words in the former part of the sentence may be translated,) but for the Medes and Persians, who shall conquer him, and enrich themselves with his spoils: see the following verse. And to him that ladeth himself with thick clay—Gold and silver, so called, being nothing originally but earth, or clay, and what should not turn to his benefit, but rather be his burden; adding weight to his sins and punishment.

Verses 7, 8. Shall they not rise up suddenly that shall bite thee?—Is it not just, or what thou deservest, that others should suddenly rise against thee, and bite and tear thee? It is a metaphor taken from the hunting of wild beasts. And awake that shall vex thee—As thou hast been a vexation to others by thy tyranny and cruelty. And thou shalt be for booties unto them—Unto the Medes and Persians. The expression, rise up suddenly, very fitly describes the suddenness with which the Babylonian empire was afterward overthrown. For though Cyrus could not be said to come upon them suddenly, or unexpectedly, yet the blow, whereby the Babylonian empire was overturned, was struck extremely suddenly; for, after all Cyrus's victories, they thought themselves very secure within the walls of Babylon; and that Cyrus must be wearied out, and his army mouldered away, before he could make himself master of it: but by an unexpected stratagem, in draining the Euphrates, he got possession of the city, and destroyed the king and all his principal men in a few hours time: see notes on Isa. xiii. 20; Jer. i. 38; and Dan. v. 30. Because, &c.—The prophet proceeds to give an account of the reasons on which divine vengeance proceeded in this affair. Thou hast spoiled many nations—Hast slain or led captive their people, destroyed their cities, robbed their treasures, deposed their kings; and hast done this to many nations, whose cry for vengeance is come up to heaven. All the remnant of the people shall spoil thee—Now shalt thou be paid in thine own coin: the remnant of the nations, unspoiled by thee, shall combine against thee, and execute the Lord's just sentence upon thee. This was evidently verified in the destruction of the Babylonian empire; for Cyrus's army was made up of a great many different nations. Because of men's blood—As a just return for thy cruelty, in the slaughter thou hast made of mankind. And for the violence of—Or rather, against, the land

A. M. 3378. of the land, of the city, and of all
B. C. 626. that dwell therein.

9 ¶ Wo to him that ¹coveteth ²an evil covetousness to his house, that he may ³set his nest on high, that he may be delivered from the ⁴power of evil!

10 Thou hast consulted shame to thy house by cutting off many people, and hast sinned against thy soul.

11 For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the ¹⁰beam out of the timber shall ¹¹answer it.

12 ¶ Wo to him that buildeth a town with ¹²blood, ¹²and establisheth a city by iniquity!

¹ Jer. xxii. 13.—² Or, gaineth an evil gain.—³ Jer. xlix. 16; Obad. 4.—⁴ Heb. palm of the hand.—¹⁰ Or, piece, or, fasting.—¹¹ Or, witness against it.—¹² Jer. xxii. 13; Ezek. xxiv. 9; Mic. iii. 10; Nah. iii. 1.

—And particularly for the violence offered to the land of Judea, and the city of Jerusalem, and its temple and inhabitants.

Verses 9-11. Wo to him that coveteth an evil covetousness to his house—"Which Nebuchadnezzar strove to aggrandize, and which Cyrus cut off."—Newcome. The translation of the LXX. accords exactly with ours: but the Hebrew, בצע בצע רע, seems to be more exactly rendered by Dr. Wheeler, "Wo unto him that procureth wicked gain for his family:" that is, who endeavours to raise it to a state of wealth and pre-eminence by sinful means. That he may set his nest on high—May exalt himself and his family to such power and greatness, that they shall be out of the reach of all their enemies; that he may be delivered from the power of evil—May be kept secure and out of danger from all below him. This is spoken of Nebuchadnezzar, his family and kingdom; that as birds, guided by instinct, build their nests on the top of rocks and trees, or other places; so the king of Babylon thought, by getting possession of many places strong by their situation, on lofty eminences difficult to come at, as well as by their fortifications, that he, his family, and kingdom, should always be safe and out of danger from any enemy; or, as it is expressed in the text, from the hand of evil. Thou hast consulted shame to thy house by cutting off many people, &c.—Thy cruelty toward others will turn at last to thy own confusion, and utter extirpation. And hast sinned against thy own soul—Hast done that which will bring destruction on thyself. For the stone shall cry out of the wall, &c.—The walls of so many cities thrown down, and the ruins of a multitude of houses, will bear witness of thy injustice and cruelty.

Verses 12-14. Wo to him that buildeth a town with blood—Wo to those mighty conquerors who have augmented Babylon by unjustly spoiling and ruining many other cities, and destroying their inhabitants. Here we see that God does not approve

13 Behold, is it not of the LORD ¹³of hosts ¹³that the people shall labour ¹³in the very fire, and the people shall weary themselves ¹³for very vanity?

14 For the earth shall be filled ¹⁴with the ¹⁴knowledge of the glory of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea.

15 ¶ Wo unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, that puttest thy ¹⁵bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest ¹⁵look on their nakedness!

16 Thou art filled ¹⁶with shame for glory: ¹⁶drink thou also, and let thy foreskin be uncovered: the cup of the LORD's right hand shall

¹² Heb. bloods.—¹³ Jer. li. 58.—¹³ Or, in vain.—¹⁴ Or, by knowing the glory of the LORD.—¹⁴ Isa. xl. 9.—¹⁵ Hos. vii. 5. ¹⁶ Genesis ix. 22.—¹⁶ Or, more with shame than with glory. ¹⁶ Jeremiah xxv. 26, 27; li. 57.

of those mighty conquerors who ravage the world, or carry their arms into divers countries. Though he makes use of them for the wise purposes of his providence, in chastising or punishing the wicked, yet, amidst all the pomp of their victories, they are often hateful in his sight; and, while they are in the midst of their triumphs, he is preparing the sword to cut them off. What is said in this verse is applicable to all covetous, unjust, and oppressive methods whatever of raising a fortune. Behold, is it not of the Lord that the people shall labour in the very fire? &c.—The latter part of the verse occurs with very little alteration Jer. li. 58, where the destruction of Babylon is described: see the note there. The sense is, All the pains which the Chaldeans have taken, in enlarging and beautifying their city, shall be lost in the flames, which shall consume their stately buildings; and nothing of all that they have obtained, or collected, by their toilsome victories, shall be of any use to them. For the earth shall be filled—For God's power and providence, in governing the world, shall conspicuously appear, and be widely displayed in the humiliation of Nebuchadnezzar, (Dan. iv. 37,) in the downfall of the Chaldean empire, and the destruction of Babylon; especially as it is described in the prophets as an earnest and type of the fall of mystical Babylon, which will be a decisive stroke of divine justice, that will thoroughly vindicate oppressed truth and innocence, and open the way for the universal spread of true religion: see note on Isa. xi. 9.

Verses 15, 16. Wo unto him that giveth his neighbour drink—By the metaphorical expressions used in this verse is signified the perfidy of Nebuchadnezzar and the Chaldeans, who gained advantage over other nations by cunning arts of policy, and taking them off their guard by pretences of friendship, and the like; just as some men gain advantage over others by persuading them to drink too much. Thou art filled with shame for glory, &c.—Thy glory shall now be turned into shame. Perhaps

A. M. 3378. be turned unto thee, and shameful
B. C. 626. spewing shall be on thy glory.

17 For the violence of Lebanon shall cover thee, and the spoil of beasts, which made them afraid, ¹ because of men's blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein.

18 ¶ ^a What profiteth the graven image that the maker thereof hath graven it; the molten image, and a ^x teacher of lies, that ^a the maker of his work trusteth ^{B. C. 626.} therein, to make ^y dumb idols?

19 Wo unto him that saith to the wood, Awake; to the dumb stone, Arise, it shall teach! Behold, it is laid over with gold and silver, ^z and there is no breath at all in the midst of it.

20 But ^a the LORD is in his holy temple: ¹⁷ let ^b all the earth keep silence before him.

¹ Verse 8.—^a Isa. xlv. 9, 10; xlv. 2.—^x Jer. x. 8, 14; Zech. x. 2.—¹⁶ Heb. the fashioner of his fashion.—^y Psalm cxv. 5;

1 Cor. xii. 2.—^z Psa. cxxxv. 17.—^a Psa. xi. 4.—¹⁷ Heb. be silent all the earth before him.—^b Zeph. i. 7; Zech. ii. 13.

this might be intended to signify the rejoicing of the nations at the downfall of the Chaldean empire. Drink thou also—Now it is come to thy turn to drink of the cup of God's anger. Be thou also naked, as thou hast made others naked. All this is spoken in derision, or by way of mockery. The cup of the Lord's right hand shall be turned unto thee—Or, upon thee; that is, thou shalt drink out the whole cup, or experience all the indignation of God. "Grotius justly observes, that these two verses contain an allegory. The Chaldeans gave to the neighbouring nations the cup of idolatry and of deceitful alliance, and in return they received from Jehovah the cup of his fury."—Newcome.

Verse 17. For the violence of Lebanon [that is, the violence done to Lebanon] shall cover thee—That is, says Grotius, thou shalt suffer the punishment of having destroyed the temple, which is here called Lebanon, because it was built, in a great measure, with the cedars of Lebanon. And the spoil of beasts, which made them afraid—The relative which, added by our translators, obscures the text, which might be more plainly rendered, The spoil of (or, made by) beasts shall make them afraid, or make thee afraid, as the LXX. and Chaldee, with very little alteration, read the text. As thou hast spoiled others, without any sense of common humanity, so the army of the conqueror shall deal by thee, and shall tear thee in pieces as wild beasts do their prey. See Isa. xiii. 15–18. Because of men's blood—See note on verse 8.

Verses 18, 19. What profiteth the graven image—The last sin that the prophet takes notice of, for which God would execute his judgments upon Babylon, is idolatry. Compare Jer. l. 2; and li. 44, 47. But what he says was not intended to be confined to Nebuchadnezzar and the idols of Babylon: it is equally applicable to idols in general. What will they avail their worshippers in the day of danger, and when the Lord ariseth to take vengeance on them? The molten image, and a teacher of lies—

Rather, a molten image, teaching lies. This was a very proper epithet for the image of an idol; because the worshippers of them thought that a deity, or a divine power, resided in them, when there was no such thing; and that God was like the work of men's hands. That the maker of his work trusteth therein—Or, that the maker trusteth in his work; that any one should be so unreasonable and foolish as to trust in that as a god which he has made and fashioned with his own hands! To make him dumb idols—Which have mouths and speak not; which can neither hear nor answer his prayers, nor do him good or harm. Behold, it is laid over with gold and silver—They are beautified with a great deal of cost, on purpose to delude their ignorant worshippers, and make them fancy some divinity lodges within them. And there is no breath at all, &c.—They are altogether without life, sense, and motion.

Verse 20. But the Lord is in his holy temple—But Jehovah, the true God, is not like one of these, but lives for ever in his holy temple, the heavens, from whence he beholds and governs all things, and is the fountain of being, life, power, and salvation to his people. Let all the earth keep silence before him—Or, as the LXX. render it, stand in awe, or fear before him. The consideration of his infinite perfections, his self-existence, independence, supremacy, immensity, eternity; his omnipresence, omniscience, and omnipotence; his unspotted holiness, his inviolable truth, and impartial justice; and especially his sovereign authority and dominion, should strike all men with a reverential awe, and should dispose them to the most perfect submission toward him; particularly when they see him executing his judgments in the world, as he would shortly do upon the Chaldeans. The expression is taken from the reverent behaviour which young persons, servants, and others are wont to manifest by keeping silence in the presence of their superiors. Or, it alludes to such a silence as is kept in courts of justice, when a judge pronounces the sentence.

CHAPTER III.

This chapter contains Habakkuk's prayer, in which he, (1.) Earnestly begs that God would help and relieve his afflicted people, 1, 2. (2.) Calls to mind God's glorious and gracious appearances for the Israelites in bringing them out of Egypt and into Canaan, 3–15. (3.) Deeply affected with the impending troubles of his nation, he comforts himself and others that, even without any visible means, God could and would bring every thing to a happy issue, 16–19.

A. M. 3378.
B. C. 626.

A PRAYER of Habakkuk the prophet ^a upon ¹ Shigionoth.

2 O LORD, I have heard ² thy speech and was afraid: O LORD, ³ revive ^b thy work in the midst of the years, in the midst of the years make

^a Psa. vii. title.—¹ Or, according to variable songs, or, tunes, called in the Hebrew Shigionoth.—³ Heb. thy report, or, thy hearing.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verse 1. A prayer of Habakkuk, &c.—The word prayer is here taken in a general sense for an act or exercise of devotion, including adoration, praise, and thanksgiving. The word shigionoth signifies wanderings, and may denote "cantio erratica, vel mixta," a desultory, various, or mixed hymn; or, as Bishop Newcome thinks, "a musical instrument of great compass, with which the Jews accompanied this piece of poetry."

Verse 2. O Lord, I have heard thy speech and was afraid—I have heard what thou hast revealed to me concerning thy judgments to be executed, first upon thy own people, and afterward upon their enemies the Chaldeans, and the terribleness of them hath filled me with a reverential awe and dread. O Lord, revive, or preserve alive, thy work in the midst of the years—Habakkuk having understood, by divine revelation, that some time would intervene between the desolation of Judea and the punishment of the Chaldeans, here entreats God, that, during that interval, he would preserve or take care of his work; that is, his Israel, that work of his hands which he had formed for himself, that they might show forth his praise: (see Isa. xliii. 21; xlv. 11:) together with the work of his grace in and among them; that he would keep that spark alive amidst the waters of tribulation and temptation through which they had to pass. Although all men are the work of God, yet the Jews might be called so more emphatically, because he had, by many extraordinary interpositions, raised them to be a peculiar people to himself, and had formed them such by laws given to them in a singular manner, not used with regard to any other people. In the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy—Or, as Grotius interprets the clause, In that intervening time show, that although thou art angry, thou rememberest mercy. In the midst of these years of calamity let thy people experience, that even in thy indignation thou thinkest upon mercy, and dost not lay more upon them than thou enablest them to bear. The years here referred to seem plainly to be those in which the Jews were under the power of the Chaldeans, and Judea lay desolate. Mr. Green translates the verse, O Jehovah, I have heard thy report: (that is, what thou hast revealed concerning the captivity:) I am in pain, O Jehovah, for thy work: (that is, the Jewish people:) in the midst of the years revive it: (restore the Jews to their own land before the years appointed for their captivity are expired:) in the midst of the years show compassion; in wrath remember mercy.

known; in wrath remember mercy. A. M. 3378. B. C. 626.
3 ¶ God came from ⁴ Teman, ^c and the Holy One from mount Paran. Selah. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise.

^a Or, preserve alive.—^b Psalm lxxxv. 6.—⁴ Or, the south.
^c Deut. xxxiii. 2; Judg. v. 4; Psa. lxviii. 7.

Verse 3. God came from Teman, &c.—Bishop Lowth observes, that "this chapter affords us a remarkable instance of that sublimity which is peculiar to the ode, and which is principally owing to a bold and yet easy digression, or transition. The prophet, foreseeing the judgments of God, the calamities which were to be brought upon his countrymen by the Chaldeans, and then the punishments which awaited the Chaldeans themselves; partly struck with terror, partly revived with hope and confidence in the divine mercy, he prays that God would hasten the redemption and deliverance of his people, verse 3. Now here immediately occurs to every one's mind a similitude between the Babylonish and Egyptian captivity; that it was possible an equal deliverance might be procured by the help of God; and how aptly the prophet might so have continued his prayer, namely, that God, who had wrought so many miracles in ancient days for the sake of his people, would likewise continue his providential regard toward them; and how much it would contribute to confirm and strengthen the minds of the pious, who should remember, that the God who formerly had manifested his infinite power in rescuing the Israelites out of such great calamities, was able to do the same by avenging their posterity likewise. But the prophet has omitted all these topics, for this very reason, because they so readily occur to the mind; and instead of expatiating in so large a field, he bursts forth with an unexpected impetuosity, God came from Teman, &c."—Psal. Heb. 28. Habakkuk, therefore, having offered up his petitions to God for the preservation and support of his people during their captivity, proceeds, from hence to verse 16, to recount, for their encouragement, the wonderful works which Jehovah had formerly wrought for them to deliver them from Egyptian slavery, and to put them in possession of the land of Canaan, intimating by this, that he would in due time show himself equally powerful in delivering them from the Babylonish captivity, and restoring them to their own land. In recounting these wonderful works he first exhibits a description of Jehovah, as king and commander of the thousands of Israel, marching at their head in a pillar of a cloud, to conduct them, and put them in possession of the promised land. When Jehovah sets out from Teman and Paran, so great is the majesty and glory with which he is arrayed, that the heaven and the earth are too little to contain them, verse 3. His brightness, like that of the meridian sun, is insupportable, and his power irresistible, verse 4. The pestilence and devouring fire attending him to do execution upon the enemy at his command, verse 5.—As

A. M. 3378. 4 And his brightness was as the light; he had ⁵ horns coming out of his hand; and there was the hiding of his power.

5 ^a Before him went the pestilence, and ⁶ burning coals went forth at his feet.

6 He stood, and measured the earth: he be-

^a Or, bright beams out of his side.—^d Nah. i. 3.—^e Or, burning diseases, Deut. xxxii. 24.

soon as he enters the land of Canaan, (verse 6,) he takes possession of it as rightful Lord; and the seven nations of Canaan, conscious that they had forfeited it by their wickedness, flee at the sight of him. The mountains of the land disperse to make way for him, the hills bow to pay him obeisance, and the highways own him for their Lord; and so great is the dread of him, that the neighbouring nations tremble while he passes by, verse 7. "Throughout the whole passage the prophet preserves the same magnificence with which he begins, choosing the noblest images which so copious a subject could afford, and illustrating them with the most splendid colours, images, figures, and the most elevated style. What crowns the sublimity of this piece, is the singular elegance of the close; and were it not that antiquity hath here and there thrown its veil of obscurity over it, there could not be conceived a more perfect and masterly poem of the kind."—Bishop Lowth. "The grandest images," adds Bishop Newcome, "are selected; and the diction is as splendid as the subjects." Teman is thought to have been first the name of an encampment, and afterward of an Idumean city: see Job ii. 11; Jer. xlix. 7. Paran was a part of Arabia Petræa, near mount Sinai: see Gen. xxi. 21; Deut. xxxiii. 2. His glory covered the heavens—That excessive splendour which filled the air when God descended on mount Sinai, in flames of fire, lightnings, and thunders, to give the law to his people. And the earth was full of his praise—Green reads, And his glory filled the earth.

Verses 4, 5. And his brightness was as the light—Green renders this verse thus: His brightness was as the brightness of the sun; he had rays of light beaming from his hand; and there was the hiding-place of his power. The Hebrew word אור, here rendered light, is translated the sun, Job xxxi. 26; and that rendering seems to improve the sense here. The word קרנִים, rendered horns, being derived from קרַן, to shine, or emit rays of light, is much better rendered rays, or splendours, here, than horns: see Parkhurst on the word. In this illustrious passage, then, we see the brightness, or splendour, poetically represented as streaming from the hand of God, that awful hand which is mighty in operation, and which has so often manifested the divine power to a wondering world. Or, as others explain it, The Shechinah, or symbol of the divine presence, had rays of light issuing out on every side, and yet that was but a hiding, or veil, to the Divine Majesty, who covereth himself with light as with a garment, (Psa. civ. 2,) and who dwelleth in light inaccessible, or of too reheld, and drove asunder the nations; A. M. 3378. ^f and the ^g everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual hills did bow: his ways are everlasting.

7 I saw the tents of ⁷ Cushan ⁸ in affliction: and the curtains of the land of Midian did tremble.

^g Psalm xviii. 8.—^f Nahum i. 5.—^g Gen. xlix. 26.—⁷ Or, Ethiopia.—⁸ Or, under affliction, or, vanity.

splendent brightness to be approached, or gazed at, by mortals. Before him went the pestilence—Occasionally inflicted on the Israelites for their guilt: see Num. xi. 33, and xiv. 37, and xvi. 46. And burning coals—Or rather, as the expression would be better translated, devouring fire, or lightning, went forth at his feet—See Lev. x. 2; Num. xi. 1, and xvi. 35, in which passages we read of the Israelites being consumed by a fire which went out from Jehovah. And (Lev. ix. 24) we learn, that the burnt-offering was consumed by a fire which came out from before him.

Verse 6. He stood and measured the earth—"It was customary for a conqueror, as soon as he became possessed of a country, to measure it out, and divide it among his people. Thus David, (Psa. lx. 6,) I will divide Shechem, and mete out the valley of Succoth. Hence Jehovah, who takes possession of the land of Canaan, upon the flight and cession of its guilty inhabitants, is represented as dividing it among the tribes of Israel."—Green, who translates the former part of the verse thus: He stood and measured out the land; he beheld and scattered the nations: the eternal mountains dispersed, the perpetual hills bowed. The passage is certainly extremely poetical; representing, not only the inhabitants of Canaan, but the land itself, as struck with conscious terror at the approach of Jehovah. His ways are everlasting—His purposes, foreknown from all eternity, will infallibly be executed in their appointed time: or, his wisdom, goodness, justice, holiness, and power, exerted and manifested in governing his people, are immutable and eternal.

Verse 7. I saw the tents of Cushan in affliction—Since Moses's wife, who was a Midianite, is called (Num. xii. 1) a Cushite, Cushan may be here another name for Midian, and then the two members of this period will be equivalent; but if they be different, then the Cushites must have been an Arabian nation who dwelt in tents near the Midianites, and were seized with the same consternation, at the approach of Jehovah and his people Israel, as the latter were. The total overthrow which the Israelites gave the Midianites and their allies, as recorded Num. xxxi. 7–12, is probably here referred to. We can never sufficiently admire the strength and spirit, as well as justness and propriety, of this whole description. "The glory with which Jehovah is arrayed, is such as fills the heaven and the earth; a glory arising not from the pomp of external grandeur, and the parade of honourable followers, but from himself. His power is the terror of all the

A. M. 3378. B. C. 626. 8 Was the LORD displeased against the rivers? was thine anger against the rivers? was thy wrath against the sea, ^hthat thou didst ride upon thy horses, and ⁹thy chariots of salvation?

9 Thy bow was made quite naked, according to the oaths of the tribes, even thy word. Selah. ¹⁰Thou ⁱdidst cleave the earth with rivers.

10 ^kThe mountains saw thee, and they trembled: the overflowing of the water passed

^h Deuteron. xxxiii. 26, 27; Psal. lxxviii. 4; civ. 3; Verse 15. ⁹ Or, thy chariots were salvation.—¹⁰ Or, Thou didst cleave the rivers of the earth.—Psal. lxxviii. 15, 16; cv. 41.—^k Exod. xix. 16, 18; Judges v. 4, 5; Psalm lxxviii. 8; lxxvii. 18;

world around him; the insignia of it being, not the sword or the fasces, but the pestilence and devouring fire; and so great is the dread of him, that the Canaanites flee at his approach, the land trembles at his presence, and the nations around are not able to hide their dismay. Such is Habakkuk's description of Jehovah, simple and plain, but yet grand and sublime; as much excelling every pagan description of Jupiter, as light surpasses darkness."—Green and Houbigant.

Verses 8-10. Was the Lord, &c.—After the description of Jehovah, given in the preceding verses, the first of his wonderful works, recounted by the prophet, is the passage through the Red sea, where he represents the Lord as appearing at the head of the Israelites in his chariot of war, with his bow drawn in his hand, to rescue them from their cruel oppressors the Egyptians, and to give them the land of Canaan, according to the oath which he swore unto them, verses 8, 9. The next is his giving them water to drink in the wilderness, where the mountains moved at his presence. The next, his passage over Jordan, where the waters, testifying their ready obedience to his will, opened to the right and left to make way for his people to pass through. The next, his interposition at Joshua's engagement with the Amorites, when the sun and moon stood still to give them time to discomfit their enemies, verses 9-11. The last wonderful works which the prophet recounts were performed after this engagement, when Jehovah marched before them to execute vengeance on the Canaanites, and to protect the Israelites; destroying utterly the princes of Canaan and their states, at a time when they made sure of Israel for their prey; and giving his own people entire possession of their country, from the river Jordan on the east, to the Mediterranean sea on the west, verses 12-15.—Green.

Was the Lord displeased against the rivers—Can it be imagined, that when God caused the Red sea to be dry in the midst of it, and the waters of the river Jordan to stop, it was done out of displeasure against the waters? Surely not. But it was done out of God's singular care of, and regard for, his people, for whose deliverance he appeared in as illustrious a manner, as if he had been seen riding in the

by: the deep uttered his voice, and ¹lifted up his hands on high. A. M. 3378. B. C. 626.

11 ^mThe sun and moon stood still in their habitation: ¹¹at the light of thine ⁿarrows they went, and at the shining of thy glittering spear.

12 Thou didst march through the land in indignation, ^othou didst thrash the heathen in anger.

13 Thou wentest forth for the salvation of thy people, even for salvation with thine anoint-

cxiv. 4.—¹ Exod. xiv. 22; Josh. iii. 16.—^m Josh. x. 12, 13. ¹¹ Or, thine arrows walked in the light, &c.—ⁿ Joshua x. 11; Psalm xviii. 14; lxxvii. 17, 18.—^o Jeremiah li. 33; Amos i. 3; Micah iv. 13.

clouds, (here termed his horses;) and carried upon the wings of the wind as in a chariot: see notes on Deut. xxxiii. 26; Psal. civ. 3; Isa. xix. 1. Thy bow was made quite naked—Or, Thou didst lay bare thy bow, to fight for Israel; that is, thou didst fight for Israel, as evidently as if thou hadst been seen with a bow in thy hand; according to the oath, &c.—That thou mightest fulfil the oaths and promises which thou hadst made, to give the tribes of Israel full possession of Canaan. Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers—Thou didst cleave the hard rocks, and the earth about them, and make the waters to run down in great streams, like rivers, which followed them a great part of their journey. The mountains saw thee, and they trembled—Mount Sinai, and the hills adjoining, felt the effects of thy presence. The overflowing of the water passed by—Or, hasted away, as Green renders it. "At the season when the Israelites passed over Jordan, this river overflowed its banks; but as soon as the priests who bore the ark entered into it, the waters, rearing themselves upon the right hand and upon the left, parted asunder with a mighty noise; here nobly described by the deep uttering its voice, and lifting up its hands on high:" see Josh. iii. 15, 16.

Verses 11, 12. The sun and moon stood still in their habitation—At the command of Joshua. At the light of thine arrows they went—Or rather, by their light (namely, the light of the sun and moon) thine arrows flew abroad, and by their shining, thy glittering spear. It was to give the Israelites time for the destruction of their enemies, that God caused the sun and moon to stand still; and while these gave them light, Jehovah sent out his arrows and scattered them, &c., Psal. xviii. 14. He alludes to God's casting down great hailstones and lightnings from heaven, to discomfit the Amorites: see the margin. Thou didst march, &c.—Jehovah is here represented as marching before his people, through the land of Canaan, in his chariot of war, and trampling under foot those that rose up against him; which seems to be the meaning of the second clause, Thou didst thrash, &c.

Verses 13-15. Thou wentest forth for the salvation of thy people—For their deliverance and protection; even for salvation with thine anoint-

A. M. 3378. ed; ¹⁰ thou woundedst the head out of
B. C. 626. the house of the wicked, ¹² by discovering the foundation unto the neck. Selah.

14 Thou didst strike through with his staves the head of his villages: they ¹³ came out as a whirlwind to scatter me: their rejoicing was as to devour the poor secretly.

15 ^a Thou didst walk through the sea with thy horses, through the ¹⁴ heap of great waters.

16 When I heard, ^r my belly trembled; my lips quivered at the voice: rottenness entered

^P Josh. x. 24; xi. 8, 12; Psalm lxxviii. 21.—¹² Heb. making naked.—¹³ Hebrew, were tempestuous.—^a Verse 8; Psalm lxxvii. 19.

With those appointed and qualified to be leaders and rulers of thy people; such as Moses, Joshua, Samuel, and David. Thou woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked—That is, the heads, or confederate princes, of the Canaanites, Josh. x. 3, and xi. 1; by discovering the foundation unto the neck—Or, as Green renders it, Thou rasedst the foundations even to the rock. Thou didst strike through with his staves, &c.—Waterland reads, Thou didst strike through the head of his warriors among his tribes; and Houbigant, Thou, with thy sceptre, didst strike through the head of his princes. Thou didst discomfit all the petty kings of the several clans carrying on the war against Joshua. They came out as a whirlwind to scatter me—The prophet here assumes the person of the Israelitish people, and therefore says, They came out to scatter me. Armies are sometimes spoken of as whirlwinds: see Zech. ix. 14. Their rejoicing was as to devour the poor secretly—Or, in secret, that is, to devour those who were weak and defenceless, and should keep themselves in secret for fear. So the enemies of the Israelites, who came out as a whirlwind to scatter them, thought that they were not able to oppose them, but would hide themselves through fear; and they therefore exulted, as if they were marching to certain victory. Thou didst walk through the sea with thy horses—This seems to be a highly figurative expression, to signify God's dividing the waters of the Red sea and the river Jordan, and making them to stand on a heap, while the Israelites went through with as much safety as if they had rode on horses.

Verse 16. When I heard, my belly trembled—The prophet, having recounted, for the present encouragement of the faithful, the wonderful works which God had formerly wrought for his people, here returns again to his first subject, namely, the revelation which he had received from God, concerning the calamities which should be brought on the Jewish people by the Chaldeans. My belly trembled, my lips quivered, &c.—A consternation and shaking seized me, and I could not speak for grief and astonishment, at being informed what great miseries were coming upon my nation. Rottenness entered into my bones—I could no more stand than a person into my bones, and I trembled in A. M. 3378. myself, that I might rest in the day B. C. 626. of trouble: when he cometh up unto the people, he will ¹⁵ invade them with his troops.

17 ¶ Although the fig-tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive shall ¹⁶ fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls:

18 ^s Yet I will ^t rejoice in the LORD, I will joy in the God of my salvation.

¹⁴ Or, mud.—^r Psa. cxix. 120; Jeremiah xxiii. 9.—¹⁵ Or, cut them in pieces.—¹⁶ Heb. lie.—^s Job xiii. 15.—^t Isaiah xlii. 16; lxi. 10.

whose bones are rendered rotten by disease. That I might rest in the day of trouble—These words are interpreted in different ways: some suppose that the prophet here expresses a desire of being gathered to his fathers in peace, before the king of Babylon should invade Judea, and carry the people away captive; and that he adds, as a reason of his prayer, a description of the desolation which should then come upon the land. In this sense the clause is understood by Mr. Green, who therefore interprets it, O that I might be at rest before the day of distress, when the invader shall come up against the people with his troops! But Noldius, whose interpretation is approved by Lowth, reads, Yet I shall rest in the day of trouble, when he shall come up against the people, even he who shall invade them with his troops. The prophet may be considered as speaking in the person of every truly pious Jew; I shall rest secure under the divine protection, when the Chaldeans shall come to invade Judea. This sense of the clause accords well, perhaps better than any other, with the following verses; in which we have a plain and noble description of the confidence we ought to have in God, in the most trying times, and when involved in the greatest calamities.

Verses 17, 18. Although the fig-tree shall not blossom—Though all outward means of support should fail, yet will I still have a firm confidence in the power, goodness, and faithfulness of God, that he will preserve me, and supply me with all things necessary; and therefore, amidst the most threatening appearances of affairs, I shall still preserve inward peace and serenity of mind, as; trusting in him in whom is everlasting strength, Isa. xxvi. 3, 4. The state of the land during the captivity may be here prophetically described, when the vineyards, oliveyards, fields, and pastures, would be in a desolate and barren state: or the prophet may be considered as declaring, that even such circumstances should not shake his confidence in God. Yet will I rejoice in the Lord—I shall have him to rejoice in, and will rejoice in him. I will joy in the God of my salvation—In the knowledge and love, the favour and friendship, the care and kindness of him in whom I have present, and hope to have future and eternal

A. M. 3378. 19 The Lord God is "my strength,
B. C. 626. and he will make my feet like x hinds' feet, and he will make me to y walk

x Psa. xxvii. 1.—x 2 Sam. xxii. 34; Psa. xviii. 33.

salvation. Observe: reader, this is the principal ground of our joy in God, that he is the God of our salvation; our everlasting salvation, the salvation of our souls; and if he be so, we may rejoice in him as such in our greatest distresses, since by them our salvation cannot be hindered, but may be furthered. Instead of, the God of my salvation, the LXX. read, ἐπὶ τῷ Θεῷ τῷ σωτηρὶ μου, in God my Saviour; and the Vulgate, in Deo Jesu meo, in God my Jesus, or, in Jesus my God. "That Jesus," says Calmet, "who is the joy, the consolation, the hope, the life of believers; without whom the world can offer us nothing but false joys; who was the object of the desires, and the perpetual consolation of the prophets and patriarchs:" see Joon viii. 56.

Verse 19. The Lord God is my strength—He that is the God of our salvation in another world, will be our strength in this world, to carry us on in our journey thither, and help us over the difficulties and oppositions we meet with in our way, even then when provisions are cut off, to make it appear that man does not live by bread alone, but may have the want of bread supplied by the graces and comforts of God's Spirit. Observe, reader: 1st, We may be upon my high places. To the chief A. M. 3378.

1000

singer on my ¹⁷ stringed instru- B. C. 626.
ments.

y Deut. xxxii. 13; xxxiii. 29.—¹⁷ Heb. neginoth, Psa. iv. title.

strong for our spiritual warfare and work, The Lord God is my strength, the strength of my heart, Psa. lxxiii. 26. 2d, We may be swift for our spiritual race, He will make my feet like hinds' feet, that with enlargement of heart I may run the way of his commandments. 3d, We may be successful in our spiritual enterprises, He will make me to walk upon my high places: that is, I shall gain my point, shall be restored unto my land, and tread upon the high places of the enemy: see the notes on Psa. xviii. 33; Deut. xxxii. 13, and xxxiii. 29. Thus the prophet, who began his prayer with fear and trembling, concludes it with joy and triumph; for prayer is the support and consolation of a pious soul. And as he seems to have had the beginning of Moses's blessing in his eye, at verse 3, so in this he alludes to the conclusion of it. Some think it appears from the last words, To the chief singers, &c., that this prayer was sung in the temple service. Houbigant, however, gives the last words another turn, rendering them thus: And shall bring me to the tops of the mountains to victory in my song; or, that I may overcome, when those things which I here sing shall have their completion.

8

THE BOOK OF ZEPHANIAH.

ARGUMENT.

ACCORDING to Epiphanius, Zephaniah was of the tribe of Simeon. He prophesied in the reign of Josiah, as he himself tells us, verse 1, but in what part of his reign is not certain; although it is probable, from the description which he gives of the disorders which prevailed in Judea in his time, that it was before the eighteenth year of it: that is, before that prince began to exert himself to effect a reformation in his kingdom, according to what we read, 2 Kings xxii., xxiii. Some think, however, that Zephaniah uttered these prophecies toward the close of Josiah's reign, when religion had greatly declined among the Jews, through the hypocrisy of those who had at first concurred with that pious king, in endeavouring to bring about a reformation. The first chapter of this prophecy contains divers threatenings against the kingdom of Judah in general, and the city of Jerusalem in particular. In the second he calls the people to repentance, and prophesies against the Philistines, Moabites, Ammonites, Assyrians, &c. The third and last consists of two parts: the first, a prophecy against Jerusalem and its inhabitants; the second, a promise of a return from their captivity upon their repentance, and a restoration of the Jewish state to a flourishing condition. The style of this prophet is poetical; but his book contains nothing remarkable or striking, either with respect to the arrangement of his matter, or the colouring of his diction. His method and his subject bear so near a resemblance to those of Jeremiah, that St. Isidore asserts him to have been his abbreviator. Nor is this the only prophet whom Zephaniah resembles, as every one must own who compares him with Joel. See Calmet and Bishop Lowth.

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter, after an account of the prophet, and the date of his mission, we have, (1.) Denunciations of utter destruction to Judah and Jerusalem, particularly to such as worshipped idols, and neglected the worship of God, 2-6. (2.) A command to submit to the divine judgments in silence, because they had greatly sinned, 7-9, 12, 17; and to howl, because the judgments would extend to all ranks and all places, and would be most terrible and unavoidable, 10-18.

A. M. 3374. THE word of the LORD which
B. C. 630. came unto Zephaniah the son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hizkiah, in the A. M. 3374.

days of Josiah the son of Amon, B. C. 630.
king of Judah.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. The word that came to Zephaniah—The divine revelation that was made to him. The son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, &c.—If these were not prophets, as the Jewish doctors make them, yet 't is probable they were persons of some note in Judah. The son of Hizkiah—Although both the letters and points of this name in the Hebrew are the same with those of King Hezekiah, and some therefore have thought that the prophet was his great-grandson; yet that could not be the case, because there was not a sufficient distance of time between King Hezekiah and Josiah, in whose time he flourished, for four descents: nor do we read of Hezekiah's having any son but Manasseh. In the days of Josiah—The Jews were wont to allege, that their kings obliged them to practise idolatry, and rendered them in other respects corrupt in their manners; but God, by raising up the pious Josiah to be their king, deprived them of that excuse. For so far was he from encouraging them in any branch of impiety or vice, that he used his utmost efforts to effect a thorough reformation among them, although, alas! to little purpose, for they continued to be exceeding corrupt, both in their principles and practices; or, if any change took place among them for the better, it seems to have been but very partial, and of very short duration.

A. M. 3374. 2 ¶¹ I will utterly consume all things
B. C. 630. from off ² the land, saith the LORD.

3 ^a I will consume man and beast; I will consume the fowls of the heaven, and the fishes of the sea, and ^b the ³ stumbling-blocks with the wicked; and I will cut off man from off the land, saith the LORD.

4 I will also stretch out my hand upon Judah, and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and ^c I will cut off the remnant of Baal from

¹ Heb. By taking away I will make an end.—² Heb. the face of the land.—^a Hosea iv. 3.—^b Ezekiel vii. 19; xiv. 3, 4, 7; Matt. xiii. 41.—³ Or, idols.—^c Fulfilled about B. C. 624; 2 Kings xxiii. 4, 5.—^d Hosea x. 5.—^e 2 Kings xxiii. 12;

Verses 2, 3. I will utterly consume all things, &c.—That is, I will make the land of Judea quite desolate. I will consume man and beast, &c.—That is, beasts of the tame and domestic kind. I will consume the fowls of the heaven and the fishes of the sea—Or of the waters, as we are wont to speak, for the Jews called every large collection of waters a sea. The meaning is, I will bring a judicial and extraordinary desolation on the land, which shall extend itself even to the birds and fishes: see notes on Hos. iv. 3; Jer. iv. 23–25. Virgil speaks of pestilential disorders affecting both the fishes of the sea and the fowls of the heaven.

“Jain maris immensi prolem, et genus omne natantum
Litore in extremo, ceu naufraga corpora, fluctus Proluit.” GEORG. iii. l. 541.

“Ipsis est aër avibus non æquus; et illæ Præcípites altâ vitam sub nube relinquunt.”

Ib. l. 546.

“The scaly nations of the sea profound,
Like shipwreck’d carcasses, are driven aground:
And mighty phocæ, never seen before,
In shallow streams, are stranded on the shore.
To birds their native heavens contagious prove,
From clouds they fall, and leave their souls above.”

DRYDEN.

“It is known,” says Bishop Newcome, “that birds are affected by pestilential disorders arising from putrified carcasses. They fall dead when they alight on bales of cloth infected by the plague.” And St. Jerome upon this place says, that there are sufficient proofs when cities are laid waste, and great slaughter is made of men, that it creates also a scarcity or solitude of beasts, birds, and fishes; and he mentions several places which, in those days, bore witness to this, where he says, there was nothing left but earth and sky, and briars and thick woods. And the stumbling-blocks with the wicked—In the Hebrew it is, The offences with the wicked; that is, the idols with their worshippers. I will cut off man from the land—The land shall be depopulated, either by its inhabitants being slain, or carried away captive.

Verses 4–6. I will also stretch out my hand upon Judah—I will manifest my power upon Judah, as I have done upon Israel. And I will cut off the rem-

this place, and the name of ^d the A. M. 3374.
Chemarims with the priests; E. C. 630.

5 And them ^e that worship the host of heaven upon the house-tops; ^f and them that worship and ^g that swear ⁴ by the LORD, and that swear ^h by Malcham;

6 And ⁱ them that are turned back from the LORD; and those that ^k have not sought the LORD, nor inquired for him.

7 ¹ Hold thy peace at the presence of the

Jeremiah xix. 13.—¹ 1 Kings xviii. 21; 2 Kings xvii. 33, 41. ² Isa. xlviii. 1; Hos. iv. 15.—³ Or, to the LORD.—⁴ Joshua xxiii. 7; 1 Kings xi. 33.—⁵ Isaiah i. 4, Jer. ii. 13, 17; xv. 6. ⁶ Hos. vii. 7.—⁷ Hab. ii. 20; Zech. ii. 13.

nant of Baal—The altars, or places of worship, dedicated to Baal, which still remain in this place, namely, Jerusalem; and the name of the Chemarims—Of the idolatrous priests, for so the same word is rendered 2 Kings xxiii. 5, where see the note; with the priests—That is, I will destroy these together with the priests of the tribe of Levi, who have been joined in the worship of idols, in which, as we learn from Ezek. viii. 11, xxii. 26, some of them were joined. And them that worship the host of heaven upon the house-tops—They were wont to worship the moon and stars upon the roofs of their houses, which were made flat. And that swear by the Lord, and by Malcham—That join the worship of idols to that of the true God. Malcham is the same with Meloch, to whom many of the people of Judah continued to offer their children, as Jeremiah upbraids them, chap. vii. 31; xix. 5; and that, it seems, after the reformation that Josiah had made. Swearing is an act of religious worship, or a solemn invocation of God, as a witness and a judge, Deut. x. 20; and therefore the Israelites were expressly forbidden to swear by idols, Josh. xxiii. 7. And them that are turned back, &c.—That are apostates to idolatry. And those that have not sought the Lord—That live without any sense of religion, and, as it were, without God in the world.

Verse 7. Hold thy peace at the presence of the Lord—Keep silence in token of an awful reverence toward God. For the day of the Lord is at hand—Now he is coming to execute his judgments upon the land. Humble thyself under his mighty hand, without repining or murmuring at his corrections, which thy sins do so justly deserve. For the Lord hath prepared a sacrifice—The slaughter of the wicked is called a sacrifice, because it is, in some sense, an atonement to God’s justice. He hath bid his guests—This is an allusion to the custom of those who offered sacrifices, which was to invite their friends to partake of the feasts which accompanied them. So here God is said to invite his guests, that is, the Babylonians, who were to reap the spoils of the destruction of Judah and Jerusalem, and of the desolation of Judea; or, as some explain it, the guests may mean ravenous birds wild beasts, and dogs, collected to devour the carcasses of the slain.

A. M. 3374. Lord GOD: ^mfor the day of the B. C. 630.

LORD is at hand: for ⁿthe LORD hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath ⁵bid his guests.

8 And it shall come to pass in the day of the LORD's sacrifice, that I will ⁶punish ^othe princes, and the king's children, and all such as are clothed with strange apparel.

9 In the same day also will I punish all those that leap on the threshold, which fill their masters' houses with violence and deceit.

10 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD, that there shall be the noise of a cry from ^pthe fish-gate, and a howling

¹² Isa. xiii. 6.—¹³ Isa. xxxiv. 6; Jer. xli. 10; Ezek. xxxix. 17; Rev. xix. 17.—¹⁴ Heb. sanctified, or, prepared.—¹⁵ Heb. visit upon.—¹⁶ Jer. xxxix. 6.

Verses 8, 9. In that day I will punish the princes and the king's children—In 2 Kings xxv. 7, 21, we read of the fulfilling of both these particulars; the sons of King Zedekiah, and the principal officers of the state, being slain by the order of the king of Babylon. And all such as are clothed with strange apparel—Used for idolatrous purposes: see Deut. xxii. 11. There were peculiar vestments belonging to the worship of each idol; hence the command of Jehu, 2 Kings x. 22, Bring forth vestments for all the worshippers of Baal. The text may likewise be explained of such men as wore women's apparel, and such women as wore that of men, which was contrary to an express law, Deut. xxii. 5, and was a rite observed in the worship of some idols. In the same day will I punish all those that leap on the threshold—Or rather, over the threshold. The expression is thought to denote some idolatrous rite, like that which was practised in the temple of Dagon, where the priests did not tread upon the threshold, 1 Sam. v. 5. Thus the Chaldee paraphrast interprets it of those who walked after the laws or rites of the Philistines. Capellus, however, understands it of those who invaded the house of their neighbours, joyfully bounding on the threshold. "This sense is favoured by what follows."—Newcome. Which fill their masters' houses with violence and deceit—Who enter into other men's houses, and take away their goods by fraud or violence, and carry them to the houses of their masters. The iniquitous officers of the kings and princes seem to be here intended, who employed all the arts of deceit and oppression, as well as of open violence, to fill their master's coffers.

Verses 10, 11. In that day there shall be the noise of a cry from the fish-gate—Mentioned Neh. iii. 3. It was opposite to Joppa, according to Jerome, and at the entering of the city from that quarter. The sundry expressions of this verse are intended to describe the cries and shrieks that should arise from all parts of the city, upon the taking of it by the Ba-from the second, and a great crash—A. M. 3374. B. C. 630. ing from the hills.

11 ^aHowl, ye inhabitants of Maktesh, for all the merchant people are cut down; all they that bear silver are cut off.

12 And it shall come to pass at that time, that I will search Jerusalem with candles, and punish the men that are ⁷settled ^ron their lees: ^sthat say in their heart, The LORD will not do good, neither will he do evil.

13 Therefore, their goods shall become a booty, and their houses a desolation: they shall also build houses, but ^tnot inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, but ^unot drink the wine thereof.

^p 2 Chron. xxxiii. 14.—^q James v. 1.—^r Heb. curded, or, thickened.—^s Jer. xlviii. 11; Amos vi. 1.—^t Psalm xciv. 7. ^u Deut. xxviii. 30, 39; Amos v. 11.—^v Mic. vi. 15.

bylonians. The great crashing from the hills might be intended to signify the noise that should be heard from the palace and temple, which were situated on the mountains, Zion and Moriah. Howl, ye inhabitants of Maktesh—The inhabitants of some particular part in or near Jerusalem. The Chaldee interprets it of the inhabitants near the brook Cedron. Bishop Newcome renders the clause, Howl ye inhabitants of the lower city, understanding it of the valley in Jerusalem, which divided the upper from the lower city, "This," says he, "is agreeable to the etymology of the word, which signifies a hollow place, a mortar." In this sense the word is understood by Buxtorf. For all the merchant people are cut down—All they who used to traffic with you shall be destroyed. All they that bear silver are cut off—All the money-changers: the rich merchants in general, or the money-changers in particular, may be meant.

Verses 12, 13. At that time, I will search Jerusalem with candles—I will deliver up Jerusalem to the hands of the Chaldeans, who shall let no corner of it escape them, but shall diligently search the houses, even with lights or torches, that they may plunder them of every thing. And punish the men that are settled on their lees—Who live securely in ease and plenty: see notes on Jer. xlviii. 11, and Amos vi. 1. That say in their heart, The Lord will not do good, &c.—Who have not God in all their thoughts, or imagine that he doth not concern himself with the affairs of the world, and that neither good nor evil is brought to pass by his providence. The prophet especially describes those men, who, trusting in their riches, paid very little regard to the threats of the prophets, and seemed entirely safe in their own eyes, while they kept their beloved treasures. Therefore their goods shall become a booty, &c.—The enemy shall plunder their goods, and turn them out of their houses and possessions, so that they shall not inherit the houses they have built, nor drink the wine of the vineyards which they have planted.

A. M. 3374. 14 *The great day of the LORD is
B. C. 630. near, it is near, and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the day of the LORD: the mighty man shall cry there bitterly.

15 †That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wasteness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness,

16 A day of ‡the trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities, and against the high towers.

* Joel ii. 1, 11.—† Isaiah xxii. 5; Jeremiah xxx. 7; Joel ii. 2, 11; Amos v. 18; Verse 18.—‡ Jer. iv. 19.—§ Deut.
xxviii. 29; Isa. lix. 10.

Verses 14–16. The great day of the Lord is near—The time of God's executing his terrible judgments is nigh at hand. Even the voice, &c.—The word even is not in the Hebrew. This latter part of the sentence may, it seems, be better rendered thus: The voice of the day of the Lord is bitter, and it vehemently resoundeth there. Or, Then the mighty man crieth out. The general sense is, that great noise, or distraction, should attend the taking of Jerusalem by the Chaldeans. That day is a day of wrath, &c.—That time will be a time of executing wrath. A day of wasteness and desolation—Hebrew, שָׂחָה וּמְשֹׁחָה, of tumult and devastation. A day of darkness and gloominess, &c.—Of perplexity, terror, and dismay. A day of the trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities—A day of attacking and taking fortified cities and strong holds, the attacks on which were used to be made by the sound of trumpets; and probably trumpets sounded all the time of the attack, as also when an entrance was gained into them.

Verses 17, 18. I will bring distress, &c., that they shall walk as blind men—I will bring them into such straits that they shall no more know whither to turn themselves, or which way to go for safety, than if they were blind: compare Deut. xxviii. 29, and Isa. lix.

17 And I will bring distress upon A. M. 3374.
men, that they shall † walk like blind B. C. 630.
men, because they have sinned against the LORD: and ‡ their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh § as the dung.

18 † Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the LORD's wrath; but the whole land shall be § devoured by the fire of his jealousy: for † he shall make even a speedy riddance of all them that dwell in the land.

† Psalm lxxix. 3.—‡ Psalm lxxxiii. 10; Jeremiah ix. 22;
xvi. 4.—§ Proverbs xi. 4; Ezekiel vii. 19.—|| Chapter iii. 8.
¶ Verses 2, 3.

10; in both which places the image is heightened by the circumstance of groping, or stumbling, like the blind, even at noon-day. And their blood shall be poured out as dust—That is, as if it were of no value at all; and their flesh as dung—The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be slain in the streets of the city, and their carcasses left there to rot and putrefy. Neither their silver nor gold shall deliver them—This is spoken of the merchants, and other rich citizens. The whole land shall be devoured by the fire of his jealousy—God's vengeance is frequently compared to fire: see Nah. i. 6. This, it is here threatened, should consume the land and its inhabitants for their heinous offences, and chiefly for their idolatry; because that sin gives that honour which is only due to the one living and true God, to images, or fictitious gods, and therefore, in a peculiar manner, intrinches on God's glory; is so contrary in its nature to the truth and fitness of things, and to all that is reasonable, just, and proper; has so great a tendency to corrupt and debase men's minds, and the practice of it is so unfit in every point of view, that the Scriptures, to give men some idea how odious it is, and what a great provocation to the Most High, represent him as jealous of having that honour which is only due to him, given to another.

CHAPTER II.

In this chapter we have, (1.) An earnest exhortation to the Jews to repent, and make their peace with God, in order to prevent the judgments threatened before it was too late, 1–3. (2.) A denunciation of desolating judgments to the neighbouring nations, which had assisted in bringing calamities on Israel, or had rejoiced therein; particularly the Philistines, 4–7; the Moabites and Ammonites, 8–11; the Ethiopians and Assyrians, 12–15.

A. M. 3374. GATHER † yourselves together,
B. C. 630. yea, gather together, O nation ‡ not desired;

* Joel ii. 16.—† Or, not desirous.—‡ Job xxi. 18; Psalm

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verses 1, 2. Gather yourselves together, &c.—Assemble yourselves to make a public humiliation: see Joel ii. 16. O nation not desired—Or coveted,

2 Before the decree bring forth, A. M. 3374.
before the day pass † as the chaff, B. C. 630.
before ‡ the fierce anger of the LORD come

i. 4; Isaiah xvii. 13; Hosea xiii. 3.—† 2 Kings xxiii. 26.

as the word נִכְפָּף properly signifies. The Vulgate renders it, non amabilis, not lovely; and the Greek, ρο ἀμαδευτος, uninstructed, or, that will not receive instruction; that is, not to be amended but by the dis-

A. M. 3374. upon you, before the day of the LORD's anger come upon you. B. C. 630.

3 ^d Seek ye the LORD, ° all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness: ° it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the LORD's anger.

4 ¶ For ° Gaza shall be forsaken, and Ashkelon a desolation: they shall drive out Ashdod ^h at the noon-day, and Ekron shall be rooted up.

5 Wo unto the inhabitants of ⁱ the sea-coasts, the nation of the Cherethites! the word of the LORD is against you; O ^k Canaan, the land of the Philistines, I will even destroy thee, that there shall be no inhabitant.

6 And the sea-coast shall be dwellings, and cottages for shepherds, ^l and folds for flocks.

7 And the coast shall be for ^m the remnant of the house of Judah; they shall feed there—

^d Psa. cv. 4; Amos v. 6.—° Psa. lxxvi. 9.—^f Joel ii. 14; Amos v. 15; Jonah iii. 9.—^g Jer. xlvii. 4, 5; Ezek. xxv. 15; Amos i. 6, 7, 8; Zech. ix. 5, 6.—^h Jer. vi. 4; xv. 8.—ⁱ Ezek. xxv. 16.—^k Josh. xiii. 3.—^l Isa. xvii. 2; Verse 14.—^m Isa. xi. 11; Mic. iv. 7; v. 7, 8; Hag. i. 12; ii. 2; Verse 9.—ⁿ Or, when.—^o Ezek. iv. 31; Luke i. 68.

cipline of God's judgments. Before the decree bring forth, before the day, &c.—Before the decree of God shall bring forth the day that shall be like the passing of chaff; that is, wherein the wicked shall be dispersed, as the chaff is by the wind. God's consuming the wicked is often compared in Scripture to the dispersing of chaff.

Verse 3. Seek ye the Lord, all ye meek—Here the prophet addresses some others, different from those addressed before, namely, the few pious, who still remained in Jerusalem and Judah amidst the general corruption; which have wrought his judgment—Who have obeyed his laws, and done his will. Seek righteousness—That is, continue to seek it; persevere in the practice of every branch of piety and virtue. Seek meekness—Patiently wait on the holy and gracious God. It may be ye shall be hid, &c.—That ye shall be protected and preserved by the divine providence, amidst the dangers and calamities of that dreadful time, when God shall execute his judgments.

Verses 4-7. For Gaza shall be forsaken—The prophet digresses here to foretel the fate of some cities and nations bordering on Judea; probably with a view to show that when Judea should be invaded, and Jerusalem attacked, there would be no place for the Jews to escape to, since all the neighbouring cities would be brought to ruin, as well as those of Judea. Nebuchadnezzar, as history informs us, took many of the cities of the Philistines. Wo to the inhabitants of the sea-coasts—Wo to the Philistines who live upon the coast of the Mediterranean sea: compare Ezek. xxv. 16, where, as well as here, they are called Cherethites, or Cherethims. The LXX.

upon: in the houses of Ashkelon shall they lie down in the evening: A. M. 3374. B. C. 630.

² for the LORD their God shall ^a visit them, and ^o turn away their captivity.

8 ¶ ^p I have heard the reproach of Moab, and ^a the revilings of the children of Ammon, whereby they have reproached my people, and ^r magnified themselves against their border.

9 Therefore, as I live, saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Surely ^s Moab shall be as Sodom, and ^t the children of Ammon as Gomorrah, ^u even the breeding of nettles, and salt-pits, and a perpetual desolation: ^x the residue of my people shall spoil them, and the remnant of my people shall possess them.

10 This shall they have ^y for their pride, because they have reproached and magnified themselves against the people of the LORD of hosts.

^o Psalm cxxvi. 1; Jeremiah xxix. 14; Chap. iii. 20.—^p Jer. xlviii. 27; Ezek. xxv. 8.—^a Ezek. xxv. 3, 6.—^r Jer. xlix. 1. ^s Isa. xv.; Jer. xlviii.; Ezek. xxv. 9; Amos ii. 1.—^t Amos i. 13.—^u Genesis xix. 25; Deuteron. xxix. 23; Isaiah xlii. 19; xxxiv. 13; Jer. xlix. 18; l. 40.—^x Verse 7.—^y Isa. xvi. 6; Jer. xlviii. 29.

read, παροικοὶ Κρητῶν, strangers of the Cretans. They are supposed to have been a colony removed from Crete to Palestine. O Canaan, the land of the Philistines, I will even destroy thee—The Canaanites, properly so called, were the same with the Philistines, and seated in that part of Palestine: see Josh. xiii. 3. And the sea-coast shall be dwellings for shepherds—The merchants, who inhabited there before, being driven far away by the calamities of the times, or carried into captivity, and no others resorting thither. And the coast shall be for the remnant of the house of Judah—This is a declaration that the sea-coasts, of which the Philistines should be dispossessed, should afterward come into the possession of the Jewish people, namely, after their return from their captivity; and that they should feed their flocks there, which should lie down in the evening in the desolate or ruined houses of Ashkelon.

Verses 8-11. I have heard the reproach of Moab, and the revilings of Ammon—These countries were destroyed by Nebuchadnezzar, about five years after the destruction of Jerusalem: see the places referred to in the margin, where, as well as here, they are threatened with destruction, for their insulting over the Jews in their calamities. And magnified themselves against their border—Have invaded their territories: see Jer. xlix. 1. Surely Moab shall be as Sodom, and Ammon as Gomorrah—Proverbial expressions signifying utter destruction; and a perpetual desolation—That shall never more be possessed by its former inhabitants. The residue of my people shall spoil them—Judas Maccabeus and his brethren subdued the Ammonites: see 1 Mac. v. 6

A. M. 3374. 11 The LORD will be terrible unto
B. C. 630. — them; for he will ³famish all the gods of the earth; ²and men shall worship him, every one from his place, even all ^athe
isles of the heathen.

12 ¶ ^bYe Ethiopians also, ye shall be slain
by ^cmy sword.

13 ¶ And he will stretch out his hand against the north, and ^ddestroy Assyria; and will make

² Heb. make clean.—^a Mal. i. 11; John iv. 21.—^a Genesis
x. 5.—^b Isa. xviii. 1; xx. 4; Jeremiah xlv. 9; Ezek. xxx. 9.
^c Psalm xvii. 13.—^d Isaiah x. 12; Ezek. xxxi. 3; Nah. i. 1;

“But this and the seventh verse,” says Lowth, “will receive their utmost completion at the general restoration of the Jewish nation. Those that then escape, and return from their several dispersions, are elsewhere called by the name of the residue, and the remnant.” compare chap. iii. 13; and see note on Mic. iv. 7. The Lord will be terrible unto them—Or, The Lord, who is to be feared, is against, or above them, and will make it appear that he is terrible in his judgments. For he will famish all the gods of the earth—Such as Dagon, Chemosh, Moloch, &c., all those that are gods nowhere else but upon the earth, among the deceived sons of earth, vile, spurious gods. Though their altars are now filled with sacrifices, and their bowls run over, as if it were designed to make them fat, they shall be famished, or starved, by being deprived of their sacrifices and drink-offerings. Instead of, He will famish, Houbigant reads, He will dissipate: but it is justly observed by Bishop Warburton, that the expression, as it stands in our version, is noble, alluding to the popular superstitions of paganism, which conceived that the gods were nourished by the steam of sacrifices. And men shall worship him, every one from his place—Or, in his place: that is, not only at Jerusalem, but everywhere: see the margin. Even all the isles of the heathen—“By the earth the Jews understood the great continent of all Asia and Africa, to which they had access by land; and by the isles of the sea they understood the places to which they sailed by sea, particularly all Europe.”—Sir I. Newton, on Daniel, p. 216. Chrysostom cites this passage, according to the version of the LXX., and applies it to gospel times, as an argument against the Jews, and surely it was chiefly meant of those times; for never were the false gods so famished, or so destroyed, as they were by the preaching of the gospel. Then especially did men, in every place where the gospel prevailed, worship the true God alone. It is true, many of the people, among whom the Jews were dispersed in the time of their captivity, and also with whom they had commerce after their return, were instructed by them in the knowledge of the one living and true God; yet, what is said here seems to be much more applicable to the times of the gospel, than to any conversion of the heathen to the worship of Jehovah, which was ever effected by the Jews, before Christ sent out his apostles to preach his gospel through all the world.

Nineveh a desolation, and dry like A. M. 3374.
a wilderness. B. C. 630.

14 And ^eflocks shall lie down in the midst of her, all ^fthe beasts of the nations: both the ⁴cormorant ^gand the bittern shall lodge in the ⁵upper lintels of it; their voice shall sing
in the windows; desolation shall be in the thresholds: ⁶for he shall uncover the ^hcedarwork.

ii. 10; iii. 15, 19.—^e Verse 6.—^f Isa. xiii. 21, 22.—⁴ Or, pelican.—^g Isaiah xxxiv. 11, 14.—⁵ Or, knops, or, chapters.
⁶ Or, when he hath uncovered.—^h Jer. xxii. 14.

Verse 12. Ye Ethiopians also shall be slain—Here a denunciation of divine wrath is uttered against the Ethiopians, as, verse 8, against the Moabites and Ammonites. It is said that they should be slain by God's sword; because Nebuchadnezzar, who was to subdue them, was raised up by the divine providence, in order to execute its purposes; and to cut off those whose wickedness called for the infliction of divine vengeance. This denunciation against the Ethiopians was fulfilled by Nebuchadnezzar, by whom they were overthrown, when they came to assist the king of Egypt against him.

Verses 13, 14. And he will stretch out his hand against the north—Nor will the southern nations only be punished, but judgments will be executed by the divine justice on the nations lying toward the north; and will make Nineveh a desolation—What is here foretold was fulfilled before the predictions recorded in the foregoing verses. Dr. Prideaux observes, that “Chyniladanus being king of the Assyrian and Babylonian empire, Nabopolassar, his general, took the latter from him, in the sixteenth year of Josiah; fourteen years after which Saracenus the king was slain, and Nineveh destroyed, which completed the fall of Assyria.” And dry like a wilderness—A multitude of people are often compared to, and called waters, in Scripture language; and therefore, figuratively speaking, to make Nineveh dry like a wilderness, may signify depopulating her. Or the words may be taken literally; for “Rauwolf observes, in his Travels, that on this side the river Tigris, in Mesopotamia, the ground is so sandy and dry, that you would think you were in the middle of the deserts of Arabia.”—Prid. Con., Ann. 612 and 626. And flocks shall lie down, &c., all the beasts of the nations—The several kinds of wild beasts that are in the country. What is said in this verse, is descriptive of a place lying in ruins and desolation; for in such a case it soon becomes a haunt of wild beasts and birds of every kind. Both the cormorant and the bittern, &c.—Bishop Newcome reads, Both the pelican and the porcupine shall lodge in the carved lintels thereof; observing of the former, “These birds fed in the Tigris, and made their nests in the deserted ruins of the city.” The next clause he renders, A cry shall resound in the window: the raven shall be in the porch. For he shall uncover—Or lay bare, the cedar-work—God will reduce the houses of Nineveh to such a state of desolation, that

A. M. 3374. 15 This is the rejoicing city ⁱ that
B. C. 630. dwelt carelessly, ^k that said in her heart, I am, and there is none besides me: how

ⁱ Isa. xlvii. 8.—^k Rev. xviii. 7.—^l Job xxvii. 23;

the floors and ceilings of cedar shall lie open to the injuries of the weather, and to birds to roost and build their nests there. "This reference" (in mentioning cedar-work) "to the former elegance of the city, is finely introduced; and, in the next verse, the grand and affecting description of her desolate state is beautifully contrasted, by her late festivity and pride."

Verse 15. This is the rejoicing city—This is supposed to be said by those who should pass by it after its desolation; that said in her heart, I am, and there is

is she become a desolation, a place for A. M. 3374.
beasts to lie down in! every one that B. C. 630.
passeth by her ^l shall hiss, and ^m wag his hand.

Lam. ii. 15; Ezek. xxvii. 36.—^m Nahum iii. 19.

none besides me—Its inhabitants indulged themselves in their ease and pleasures; and they arrived at that degree of presumption, as to fancy that no strength or power could bring them down from the height of grandeur at which they were arrived. Babylon is charged with the same degree of pride and carnal security, Isa. xlvii. 8. Every one that passeth by her shall hiss, &c.—In astonishment at the condition to which she is reduced: see a like topic, of a great city laid waste, pursued in a train of images full of sublimity and terror, Isa. xxxiv. 11–17.

CHAPTER III.

Returning to Jerusalem, God, by his prophet, (1.) Sharply reproves and threatens her for the abundance of wickedness found in her, of which divers instances are given, with their aggravations, 1–7. (2.) He exhorts the people to wait on him, graciously promising to destroy their enemies, 8, 15, 19; to reform their manners, 9–13; and restore their happiness and honour, 14–20.

A. M. 3374. WO to ¹her ²that is filthy and
B. C. 630. polluted, to the oppressing city.

2 She ^a obeyed not the voice; she ^b received not ³ correction; she trusted not in the LORD; she drew not near to her God.

3 ^c Her princes within her are roaring lions; her judges are ^d evening wolves; they gnaw not the bones till the morrow.

¹ Or, gluttonous.—² Heb. craw.—^a Jer. xxii. 21.—^b Jer. v. 3.—³ Or, instruction.—^c Ezek. xxii. 27; Mic. iii. 9, 10, 11.
^d Hab. i. 8.—^e Jer. xxiii. 11, 32; Lam. ii. 14; Hos. ix. 7.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verses 1, 2. Wo to her that is filthy—(Bishop Newcome reads, rebellious, and the Vulgate, provoking), and polluted—That is, defiled with various crimes; to the oppressing city—It is well deserving of our notice, that the oppression of the poor is always ranked by God among those things which are most offensive to him. She obeyed not the voice—Namely, of God's messengers, the prophets. She received not correction—Or instruction, as כוֹסֵר may be rendered: she did not attend to it; was not amended by it. She trusted not in the Lord—Did not place her confidence and hopes in the power and goodness of God, but in other things. She drew not near to God—In prayer and praise, and other acts of worship.

Verses 3, 4. Her princes are roaring lions—Are like devouring lions, who roar in the act of seizing their prey. Her judges are evening wolves—Like so many beasts of prey. The princes and judges devour the people by injustice and oppression. They

4 Her ^e prophets are light and trea- A. M. 3374.
cherous persons: her priests have B. C. 630.

polluted the sanctuary, they have done ^f violence to the law.

5 ^g The just LORD ^h is in the midst thereof; he will not do iniquity: ⁴ every morning doth he bring his judgments to light, he faileth not; but ⁱ the unjust knoweth no shame.

^f Ezek. xxii. 26.—^g Deuteron. xxxii. 4.—^h Verses 15, 17; Mic. iii. 11.—ⁱ Heb. morning by morning.—^j Jeremiah iii. 3; vi. 15; viii. 12.

gnaw not the bones till the morrow—That is, they greedily devour every thing immediately, as soon as they lay hold on it. This expresses very forcibly the violence and oppression of which the great men in Jerusalem were guilty toward the poor, and their greediness after gain. Her prophets are light and treacherous persons—This is to be understood of the false prophets, who seduced the people by lying pretences to inspiration. Her priests have polluted the sanctuary, &c.—They have presumed to attend upon my service in the temple, after they had polluted themselves with idolatry, and thereby have profaned my holy place, (see chap. i. 4.) and have broken the ordinances of my law in many things.

Verse 5. The just Lord is in the midst thereof—Namely, of Jerusalem, and sees all these things. He will not do iniquity—He is just and holy, and will do nothing but what is right; nor will he suffer wickedness to pass unpunished. Every morning doth he bring his judgment to light—"The sense is, not a day passes but we see instances of his goodness to

A. M. 3374. 6 I have cut off the nations: their
B. C. 630.

^a towers are desolate; I made their streets waste, that none passeth by: their cities are destroyed, so that there is no man, that there is none inhabitant.

7 ^k I said, Surely thou wilt fear me, thou wilt receive instruction; so their dwelling should not be cut off, howsoever I punished them: but they rose early, and ^l corrupted all their doings.

8 ¶ Therefore, ^m wait ye upon me, saith the ^e Or, corners. — ^k So Jer. viii. 6. — ^l Gen. vi. 12. — ^m Psalm xxvii. 14; xxxvii. 34; Prov. xx. 22.

righteous men, and of his vengeance on the wicked." — Newcome. The expression, every morning, alludes to the custom of the Jews and neighbouring nations, who passed judgment only in the morning. He faileth not—He never omits thus to act. But the unjust knew not shame—The wicked continue to be hardened in their sins, and will not be induced to forsake them by any consideration, either of the baseness and evil of their conduct, or of the judgments of God continually inflicted on transgressors.

Verses 6, 7. I have cut off the nations—I have executed vengeance upon that great city Nineveh, chap. ii. 15, and have brought my judgments nearer to you, by giving up your brethren of the ten tribes into the hands of Shalmaneser; who hath put an end to that kingdom, and hath carried its inhabitants captive into a strange land: see 2 Kings xvii. 6. I said, Surely thou wilt fear me, thou wilt receive instruction—This is addressed to the city of Jerusalem. And God is here introduced as speaking after the manner of men, and signifying what effect it was reasonable to conclude the execution of his judgments upon the ten tribes would have had upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem; that it would have caused them to fear him, and to have taken example, from the destruction of their brethren, to avoid similar crimes, and obey the laws which God had given them. So their dwelling should not be cut off—In order that by that means their city and country might be saved from destruction. But they rose early, and corrupted all their doings—But they, as it were with diligence and assiduity, corrupted their ways, and daily proceeded to greater and greater acts of wickedness. The expression, to rise early to do a thing, signifies to do it with assiduity, and with a great inclination, or good-will toward it.

Verse 8. Therefore—Rather, Nevertheless, wait ye upon me, saith the Lord—"Notwithstanding these provocations, saith God, I exhort the godly among you to expect the fulfilment of the promises I have made, of restoring the Jewish nation to my wonted favour in the latter ages of the world: in order to which great crisis, I will execute remarkable judgments upon the unbelievers and disobedient." Thus Lowth. It is very common with the prophets to subjoin the most comfortable promises to the most fearful threatenings, and, after having denounced the captivity, to foretel the deliverance of his people;

LORD, until the day that I rise up to A. M. 3374.
the prey: for my determination is to B. C. 630.

ⁿ gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth ^o shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy.

9 For then will I turn to the people ^p a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one ^q consent.

ⁿ Joel iii. 2. — ^o Chap. i. 18. — ^p Isaiah xix. 18. — ^q Heb. tip.
⁷ Heb. shoulder.

but the prophet here seems to look further, even to the gospel times, and perhaps to the future and final restoration of the Jews. Until the day that I rise up to the prey—Until, as an enemy, I rise up to destroy first, and next to take the spoil: as if he had said, Since you, by your sins, continue to be mine enemies; so I will, by my judgments, show myself in arms against you as your enemy, namely, by the Chaldeans, who shall invade your country, and destroy and spoil you. For my determination—My fixed purpose, that which I have unalterably resolved on; is to gather the nations, &c.—All that are subject to the Chaldean monarchy; with all that are confederate with, or tributary to, the king of Babylon; to pour upon them—Upon the obstinate, incorrigible, and impious Jews first; mine indignation—Which by their sins they have kindled against themselves; for all the earth—Or, all the land, namely, the whole land of Judea, and her cities; shall be devoured—Consumed, as if burned up; with the fire of my jealousy—That jealousy wherewith God is concerned for his own glory, for his ordinances and statutes, which the Jewish people, their princes, prophets, and priests, had notoriously violated. Lowth thinks this may perhaps be meant of the same general summons which Joel speaks of, whereby the nations of the earth shall be gathered into the valley of Jehoshaphat: see notes on Joel iii. 2, 12.

Verse 9. For then—Or, afterward, as the particle then seems to signify here, will I turn, or restore, to the people a pure language—I will turn them from their idolatries, and other wickedness, (see verse 13,) to glorify me with one mind and one mouth. The same thing is expressed by speaking the language of Canaan, Isa. xix. 18. This promise seems primarily to respect the Jewish captives in Babylon, and to imply that God would, by the captivity, and other methods of his providence, so reform them and wean them from their idolatries and other sins, that they should, upon their return to their own land, all join together to glorify him with one mind and one mouth, and serve him alone in sincerity and truth. And this was accordingly, in a great measure, accomplished. For they never after their restoration worshipped different gods, as they had done before; but all joined, as well those of the ten tribes that returned, as those of Judah and Benjamin, in the worship of Jehovah alone; nor did the nation

A. M. 3374. 10 ^a From beyond the rivers of
B. C. 630. Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering.

11 In that day shalt thou not be ashamed
for all thy doings, wherein thou hast transgressed against me: for then I will take away out of the midst of thee them that ^arejoice in

^a Psalm lxxviii. 31; Isaiah xviii. 1, 7; lx. 4; Mal. i. 11; Acts viii. 27.—^a Jer. vii. 4; Micah iii. 11; Matt. iii. 9.—^a Heb.
in my holy.

in general ever afterward fall into gross idolatry.
And it is not to be doubted that their morals in general were much more pure when they returned from Babylon, than at the time they were carried thither.
It is, however, generally supposed by commentators,
that the full accomplishment of this promise is reserved for the latter days, after the conversion of the Jews, and the coming in of the fulness of the Gentiles, when *there shall be one Lord, and his name
one*, Zech. xiv. 9. Accordingly the word rendered people in the first clause is in the plural, עַמִּים, peoples, I will restore to the peoples a pure language:
an expression which could hardly be intended of the Jews only, but seems evidently to include the Gentiles also. To serve him with one consent—Hebrew, with one shoulder; that is, unanimously, and with joint endeavours. The metaphor is taken from beasts drawing together in one yoke, or men setting
their shoulders together to one burden.

Verse 10. From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia—
The expression, כְּעֵבֶר, rendered from beyond, may be translated, from the borders of, as it signifies indifferently the hither or further side of a river. In the war with Pharaoh-necho, king of Egypt, many of the Jews were made captive and carried into Egypt, and from thence were sold into Ethiopia, properly so called. This prophecy, therefore, in its primary sense, seems to signify, that the posterity of these, termed here by God the daughter of his dispersed, should bring him an offering, namely, into his temple. And accordingly Cyrus, entering into an alliance with the Ethiopians, obtained that the Jews, who were captives among them, should have their liberty restored to them, that so they might return with others to their own country. In like manner Ptolemy Philadelphus, as Josephus relates,
purchased the liberty of a vast number of the Jews,
who were captives, or slaves, in very distant countries. Thus were the prophecies of bringing them from the east and the west, and from the north and the south, and from beyond the sea, very remarkably fulfilled. There can be no doubt, however, that this promise ultimately relates to the time when all Israel shall be saved, Rom. xi. 26; when “the Jews, who are dispersed in the most distant countries, such as was Ethiopia, which lay beyond Egypt, shall come into the Christian Church, and make their religious acknowledgments there.”—Lowth.

Verse 11. In that day—Or, after that time; shalt
VOL. III. (64)

thy pride, and thou shalt no more ^abe haughty ^abecause of my holy mountain. A. M. 3374.
B. C. 630.

12 I will also leave in the midst of thee ^aan afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the LORD.

13 ^aThe remnant of Israel ^ashall not do iniquity, ^anor speak lies; neither shall a de-

^a Isaiah xiv. 32; Zech. xi. 11; Matt. v. 3; 1 Cor. i. 27, 28;
Jam. ii. 5.—^a Mic. iv. 7; Chap. ii. 7.—^a Isa. lx. 21.—^a Isa.
lxiii. 8; Rev. xiv. 5.

thou not be ashamed for all thy doings—Thy guilt
and thy punishment shall cease: thou shalt be pardoned and reformed. *For then will I take away
them that rejoice in thy pride*—Or, greatness:
or, as some render it, that exult in their pride. And thou shalt no more be haughty because of my holy mountain—That is, because of mount Zion, my temple, the sacrifices offered there, and the ordinances of my worship. I will purge out from thee those hypocrites who continue in their sins, unconcerned
and unreformed, and yet rely on outward privileges, ordinances, and forms of worship. Thus Jeremiah represents them as exclaiming, The temple of the Lord! the temple of the Lord! while they little regarded the Lord of the temple. Thus the Popish clergy cry out, The church, the church, the Catholic Church! while in the mean time they neither enter into the true church themselves, nor permit those to enter that are so inclined.

Verses 12, 13. I will also leave in the midst of thee—Of Judea and Jerusalem; an afflicted and poor people—Hebrew, עַם עֲנִי ורָר, a people humble, or meek, and poor. When the Chaldeans carried away the Jews into captivity, they left of the poor of the land for vine-dressers and husbandmen; and such as returned from the Babylonish captivity were generally both poor and lowly, and dead to all confidence in external privileges. These were a type and figure of God's spiritual remnant, who, at the coming of the Messiah, should believe on him, and embrace his gospel; who were both poor in spirit,
and generally poor as to this world, and were *meek
and lowly in heart*, and very different in their dispositions from the proud, self-righteous Pharisees, who rejected Christ on account of his appearing among them in a state of poverty, reproach, and humiliation. And they shall trust in the name of the Lord—Not in their descent from Abraham, their rite of circumcision, their city or temple, or any of their civil or religious advantages, but only in the Lord, in his mercy, power, and faithfulness. The remnant of Israel—Preserved in the captivity and dispersion, purified in the furnace of affliction, and now restored to their own land; shall not do iniquity
—Shall not commit the sins they formerly committed, nor provoke God with their idolatries and other abominations as before; they shall be reformed and righteous. Nor speak lies—Nor shall they deceive each other, as they had been wont to do: they shall

A. M. 3374. B. C. 630. ceitful tongue be found in their mouth: for ^r they shall feed and lie down, and none shall make them afraid.

14 ¶ ^z Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel; be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem.

15 The LORD hath taken away thy judgments, he hath cast out thine enemy: ^a the King of Israel, even the LORD, ^b is in the midst of thee: thou shalt not see evil any more.

16 In that day ^c it shall be said to Jerusalem,

^r Ezek. xxxiv. 28; Mic. iv. 4; vii. 14.—^z Isa. xii. 6; liv. 1; Zech. ii. 10; ix. 9.—^a John i. 49.—^b Verses 5, 17; Ezek. xlviii. 35; Revelation vii. 15; xxi. 3, 4.—^c Isaiah xxxv. 3, 4. ^d Heb. xii. 12.

be honest and upright, men of veracity and fidelity. Neither shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth—Their spirit being without guile, their speech shall be without deceit. For they shall feed—Or, They shall also feed, and lie down—That is, they shall abound in necessary things, and live securely; a blessing which shall be added as a crown of their piety and truth. And none shall make them afraid—So as to induce them to commit iniquity, or speak lies; or, they shall be in no fear of any of the neighbouring nations, but shall have perfect peace on all sides. But this promise undoubtedly was to receive its full accomplishment only in the holy and happy state of the Christian Church, fed and protected by the good Shepherd, and safe under his watchful care; especially in the latter days, and during his millennial reign. Compare the places referred to in the margin.

Verses 14, 15. Sing, O daughter of Zion—At that time, O daughter of Zion, thou shalt break forth into loud and joyful praises to Jehovah, for his goodness toward thee; and thou mayest even now do it, for thou shalt certainly enjoy this prosperous state. The injunction here to Zion, to be thankful and joyful, is trebled, sing, shout, and rejoice, as it is elsewhere in both Testaments; and it is a sin for the people of God not to rejoice, as well as not to repent. Thus, after the promises to take away sin, here follow promises of the taking away of trouble; for when the cause is removed, the effect will cease. What makes a people holy, will make them happy of course. But the precious promises here made to God's purified people, although in some measure fulfilled to the Jews at their return from captivity, yet, in their full propriety of meaning, belong to the times of the gospel, and have their full accomplishment only in the comforts and joyful hopes of future felicity, which are the portion of the true disciples of the Lord Jesus. The Lord hath taken away thy judgments—That is, thy punishments. The prophet speaks of what was future, as though it were already past; of what God certainly would do, as if it were done already. He hath cast out thine enemy—Hath taken away the power of hurting thee from those who were before injurious to thee; or,

Fear thou not: and to Zion, ^d Let A. M. 3374. B. C. 630. not thy hands be ^e slack.

17 The LORD thy God ^e in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, ^f he will rejoice over thee with joy; ^g he will rest in his love, he will joy over thee with singing.

18 I will gather them that ^h are sorrowful for the solemn assembly, who are of thee, to whom ⁱ the reproach of it was a burden.

19 Behold, at that time I will undo all that afflict thee: and I will save her that ^j halteth,

^g Or, faint.—^e Verse 15.—^f Deut. xxx. 9; Isaiah lxii. 5; lxv. 19; Jer. xxxii. 41.—^h Heb. he will be silent.—ⁱ Lam. ii. 6.—^j Heb. the burden upon it was reproach.—^k Ezekiel xxxiv. 16; Mic. iv. 6, 7.

hath removed thine enemies, who were the instruments of his vengeance. The King of Israel, &c., is in the midst of thee—He is returned to redeem and save thee, and gives manifest tokens of his presence in thee, and protection over thee. Thou shalt not see evil any more—While thy conduct is as becomes my presence with thee, thou shalt neither feel, nor have cause to fear, such evils as thou hast formerly suffered.

Verses 16, 17. In that day—Or, time of restitution, when the captives shall return and be settled in their own land; it shall be said to Jerusalem—By prophets, or by friends congratulating and encouraging them; Fear thou not—Disquiet not yourselves with unnecessary fears, though you may apprehend some danger from Sanballat, Tobiah, and the Samaritans: see Neh. iv. 1, 2; and though you shall have troublesome times, Dan. ix. 25. Let not thy hands be slack—In the work of the Lord, in rebuilding the city and temple, and restoring the worship of God. The Lord—Hebrew, Jehovah; thy God—Thine in a covenant never to be repealed or forgotten; in the midst of thee is mighty—He can and will restrain and destroy thine enemies, and support and defend his own people. He will save, &c.—Will deliver thee from thy fears, and thine enemies' rage. Will rejoice over thee with joy—Will greatly rejoice in thee, and take pleasure in blessing and doing thee good. He will rest in his love—Will continue peculiarly to love thee, and will take satisfaction in so doing. These promises also, in their full sense, belong only to the Christian Church, composed of converted Jews and Gentiles, and shall be completely fulfilled during the millennium, when believers will have, as it were, a heaven on earth.

Ver. 18–20. I will gather them that are sorrowful for the solemn assembly—I will collect together those Israelites who are dispersed in their several captivities, both that of Babylon, and those of following times; who mourn for the loss of the public ordinances, and are grieved at the reproaches wherewith their enemies upbraid them, as if they were utterly forsaken of God. Behold—Mark well; at that time I will undo all that afflict thee—I will break the power, and dissolve the kingdom of thy

A. M. 3374. and gather her that was driven out; B. C. 630. and ¹² I will get them praise and fame in every land ¹³ where they have been put to shame.

20 At that time ¹ will I bring you again, even

¹² Hebrew, I will set them for a praise.—¹³ Hebrew, of their shame.

enemies and oppressors, particularly of the Babylonians. And I will save her that halteth—Who is in trouble, and ready to fall; and gather her that was driven out—Into remote countries. And I will get them praise, &c., where they have been put to shame—I will cause them to have fame, even in those places where they have been scoffed at and held in contempt. I will make you a name, &c., when I turn back your captivity—When I cause you to return out of captivity, I will make your name great, and ye shall be the subject of men's praise among all in the time that I gather you: for I A. M. 3374. will make you a name and a praise B. C. 630. among all people of the earth, when I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith the LORD.

3

¹ Isaiah xi. 12; xxvii. 12; lvi. 8; Ezek. xxviii. 25; xxxiv. 13; xxxvii. 21; Amos ix. 14.

the nations around. So the Christian Church was, when it was made to flourish in the world, for there is that truth and grace, that piety and virtue in it, which may justly recommend it to the value and esteem of all the people of the earth; and so the universal church of the firstborn will be in the great day, when the saints shall be brought together to Christ, that he may be admired and glorified in them, and they admired and glorified in and through him, before angels and men. Then will God's Israel be a name and a praise to all eternity.

1011

THE BOOK OF HAGGAI.

ARGUMENT.

THE nine preceding minor prophets preached before the captivity; but the last three some time after it. Haggai was the first that was sent to the Jews, after their return to their own land. It is thought that he was born in Chaldea, and that he came from thence into Judea with Zerubbabel. He began his public work of prophesying and preaching in the sixth month of the second year of Darius Hystaspes, about seventeen years after the return of the captives. He, together with Zechariah, who, about two months after, was raised up to second him, mightily excited and encouraged the Jews to resume and proceed with the work of rebuilding the temple, which they had intermitted for fifteen or sixteen years. He remonstrated how improper it was for them to let the temple lie in ruins, while their own houses were finished and elegantly adorned; and that their neglect of God's house and honour had provoked him to blast their outward enjoyments. To stir them up to use greater diligence in this work, he assured them from God, that, after terrible convulsions of the nations, the Messiah should appear in the flesh, should teach in the courts of this latter temple, and thereby render it more glorious than the first. It appears that all Haggai's prophecies, that are recorded, were delivered in the second year of Darius, and within the space of four months. Zechariah, however, prophesied longer, for we have prophecies delivered by him which were dated two years after. The Jews ascribed to these two prophets the honour of being members of the great synagogue, as they call it, which was formed after the return from captivity. But it is more certain, and doubtless it was much more to their honour, that they both prophesied of Christ. Haggai spoke of him, as has just been observed, as the glory of the latter house; and Zechariah, as the man, the Branch, that should build the spiritual temple of the Lord, should bear the glory, should sit and rule upon his throne, and be a priest upon his throne. In and by these two prophets, and Malachi, who succeeded them, the light of the morning-star shone more bright than in and by the foregoing minor prophets, as they lived nearer the time of the rising of the Sun of righteousness, and saw more clearly than their predecessors had done his day approaching. The LXX. make Haggai and Zechariah to be the penmen of Psalms cxxviii., cxlvi., and the two following.

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter, after an account of the date and direction of this prophecy, we have, (1.) A sharp reproof of the Jews from the Lord, for their delay in building the temple, which had provoked God to punish them with a famine; and an exhortation earnestly to resume and finish that work, 1-11. (2.) An account of their ready obedience, and of the Lord's further animating and encouraging them to their work, 12-15.

A. M. 3484. IN the second year of Darius the first day of the month, came the word A. M. 3484.
B. C. 520. king, in the sixth month, in the of the LORD¹ by Haggai the prophet B. C. 520.

^a Ezek. iv. 24; v. 1; Zech. i. 1.

¹ Heb. by the hand of Haggai.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verse 1. In the second year of Darius—Namely, the son of Hystaspes, king of Persia. Blair places the second year of his reign five hundred and twenty years before Christ. In the sixth month, in the first day of the month—Therefore, about two months before Zechariah received a similar commission, for the word of God came to him in the eighth month of the same year: see Zech. i. 1. These two prophets were sent to the Jews chiefly, it seems, to exhort them to go on with the rebuilding the temple. And the historical book of Ezra records, chap. v., that the rebuilding of the temple was resumed and carried on again through the exhortations and en-

A. M. 3484. unto ^b Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, ² governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of ^d Josedech, the high-priest, saying,

2 ¶ Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, This people say, The time is not come, the time that the LORD's house should be built.

3 Then came the word of the LORD ^e by Haggai the prophet, saying,

4 ^f Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your ceiled houses, and this house lie waste?

5 Now, therefore, thus saith the LORD of hosts; ³ Consider ^g your ways.

6 Ye have ^h sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you,

but there is none warm; and ⁱ he that earneth wages, earneth wages to ⁴ put it into a bag with holes.

7 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Consider your ways.

8 Go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, saith the LORD.

9 ^k Ye looked for much, and lo, it came to little; and when ye brought it home, ¹ I did ⁵ blow upon it. Why? saith the LORD of hosts. Because of my house that is waste, and ye run every man unto his own house.

10 Therefore, ^m the heaven over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit.

^b 1 Chron. iii. 17, 19; Ezra iii. 2; Matt. i. 12; Luke iii. 27.
^c Or, captain.—^e Ezra iii. 2; v. 2.—^d 1 Chronicles vi. 15.
^f Ezra v. 1.—^g 2 Sam. vii. 2; Psalm cxxxii. 3.—^h Heb. Set your heart on your ways.—ⁱ Lam. iii. 40; Verse 7.

^j Deut. xxviii. 38; Hos. iv. 10; Mic. vi. 14, 15; Chap. ii. 16.
^k Zech. viii. 10.—^l Heb. pierced through.—^m Chapter ii. 16.
ⁿ Chap. ii. 17.—^o Or, blow it away.—^p Lev. xxvi. 19; Deut. xxviii. 23; 1 Kings viii. 35.

couragements of these prophets. Unto Zerubbabel son of Shealtiel—And grandson of Jeconiah, who was carried captive to Babylon: see the margin. It is likely that Zerubbabel was regarded with as much respect by the Jews as if he had been their king, being of the royal family of David; but they did not give him the title of king, or invest him with the splendour of royal dignity, for fear of giving offence to the Persian kings, under whose protection they lived, and upon whom they were in a great measure dependant. And to Joshua the son of Josedech—Son of Seraiah, who was high-priest when Jerusalem was taken, and who was slain at Riblah: see 1 Chron. vi. 14; 2 Kings xxv. 18–21. Haggai seems to have addressed Zerubbabel and Joshua probably in the hearing of the people: see verse 12.

Verses 2–4. This people say, The time is not come, &c.—They had no just cause for saying this; but their own private concerns and conveniences (as appears from what follows) employed all their thoughts, and they preferred them to the rebuilding of the temple. Then—When the people were thus sluggish, made excuses, and delayed the work; came the word of the Lord to Haggai—To reprove them for their neglect, and excite them to their duty. Is it time for you, &c.—You think it full time to build your own houses: you judge it seasonable enough to lay out much cost on adorning them; what pretence then can you make, that it is not seasonable to build my house? Ought not that first to be set about, and the ornamenting of your own houses to be left till afterward? The reproof here given seems to allude to the different spirit with which David was actuated, Psal. cxxxii., who vowed that he would not come into the tabernacle of his house, &c., until he found out a place for the Lord. It certainly argues a contempt of God, when men give the preference to themselves before him, or think no cost or grandeur is too much for themselves, but the meanest accommodation good enough for the service of God. It is true an humble and devout mind is the only temple which God delights to dwell in; and he dwells not in, nor regards, temples made with hands; but yet, for the public solemnization of his worship, and as an outward testimony of men's respect toward him, it is proper that places should be erected for, and appropriated to his worship; which places ought not to be neglected, but made as decent and becoming the design of their erection as the circumstances of things will admit of.

Verses 5, 6. Therefore consider your ways—Reflect seriously upon this affair, whether it is consistent with the reason of things, or whether you have even promoted your own happiness by it as you thought to do. Ye have sown much, and bring in little—Namely, into your barns. Ye eat, but ye have not enough—To satisfy your hunger; ye drink, but ye are not filled—Ye have not wine enough for your support. Ye clothe you, but there is none warm—Ye have not been able to get sufficient clothing to keep yourselves warm. And he that earneth wages, &c.—And whatever you gain by your labour, it is very quickly required for your necessary expenses, every thing being at a very dear rate. This has been the case with you, and this has arisen from your neglect of rebuilding God's temple; for as you have neglected him, so hath he withdrawn his blessing from you; the consequence of which has been, that nothing has prospered with you.

Verses 8–11. Go up to the mountain—Go to any of the forests upon the mountains: see Neh. ii. 8; and cut down timber to carry on the building; or go to the mountain of Moriah, which I have chosen to build my temple upon it; and I will take pleasure in it—I will accept your offerings, and hear your prayers. And I will be glorified—Will show my majesty, and account myself glorified by you also. Ye looked for much and lo, it came to little—It did

A. M. 3484. B. C. 520. 11 And I ^a called for a drought upon the land, and upon the mountains, and upon the corn, and upon the new wine, and upon the oil, and upon that which the ground bringeth forth, and upon men, and upon cattle, and ^o upon all the labour of the hands.

12 ¶ ^p Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech, the high-priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God, and the words of Haggai the prophet, as the LORD their God had sent him, and the people did fear before the LORD.

^a 1 Kings xvii. 1; 2 Kings viii. 1.—^o Chap. ii. 17.—^p Ezra v. 2.—^q Matt. xxviii. 20; Rom. viii. 31.

not answer the expectation you had formed. When ye brought it home, I did blow upon it—I blasted it; or, blowed it away: when you brought your gains home, I caused them to be soon scattered again, or expended. The dearth with which God punished them for their neglect of rebuilding the temple, made all the necessities of life so dear, that whatever gains they got were quickly expended. Why? saith the Lord, &c.—For what reason have ye been visited with this calamity? Because of my house that is waste—All this evil is come upon you for your ungodly neglect of my house, leaving it waste. And ye run every man to his own house—You with eagerness carry on your own particular buildings, and mind only your own private affairs, and you take no manner of care about those things which concern my worship. Therefore the heaven over you is stayed from dew—I have punished you with great drought, wherein the dew itself has ceased to fall: see 1 Kings xvii. 1. And the earth is stayed

A. M. 3484. B. C. 520. 13 Then spake Haggai the LORD's messenger in the LORD's message unto the people, saying, ^a I am with you, saith the LORD.

14 ¶ And ^r the LORD stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, ^s governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high-priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; ^t and they came and did work in the house of the LORD of hosts, their God.

15 In the four and twentieth day of the sixth month, in the second year of Darius the king.

^r 2 Chron. xxxvi. 22; Ezra i. 1.—^s Chapter ii. 21.—^t Ezra v. 2, 8.

from her fruit—From bringing forth those fruits which otherwise it would have produced. And I called for a drought—I caused a dearth of every thing in the land, or a general barrenness to take place. And upon the mountains—Upon the hills, where your cattle and flocks used to feed, and to find sufficient nourishment; upon the new wine, and upon the oil—Upon your vineyards and olive-yards; and upon men, and upon cattle—I made both men and cattle unfruitful. Or the meaning is, their very constitutions were changed, and many diseases afflicted them.

Verses 12, 13. Then Zerubbabel, &c., obeyed the voice of the Lord—Compare Ezra v. 1, 2; where see the notes. Then spake Haggai the Lord's messenger—Or prophet; in the Lord's message—That is, who spake what follows, not in his own name, but in the name of God, saying, I am with you, saith the Lord—To afford you all the help you need, and to give success to your undertaking.

CHAPTER II.

Haggai assures the builders, (1,) That the glory of this house should exceed the glory of the former, 1–9. (2,) That God would bless them and give them success, 10–19. (3,) That he would peculiarly bless Zerubbabel, 20–23.

A. M. 3484. B. C. 520. IN the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month, came the word of the LORD ¹ by the Prophet Haggai, saying,

2 Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of

¹ Heb. by the hand of.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verses 1–3. In the seventh month, &c.—For the further encouragement of the people to proceed in rebuilding the temple, Haggai was sent again to them, about a month after he had been sent the first time, to assure them from God, that the glory of

A. M. 3484. B. C. 520. Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech the high-priest, and to the residue of the people, saying,

3 ^a Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory? and how do ye see it

^a Ezra iii. 12.

this latter temple, how little appearance soever there might be of it now, should be greater than that of the former. This message, or prophecy, of Haggai, was communicated a little before Zechariah was sent to them for the like purpose. Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory?—About

A. M. 3484. now? ^b is it not in your eyes in comparison of it as nothing?

4 Yet now ^a be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the LORD; and be strong, O Joshua, son of Josedech the high-priest; and be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the LORD, and work: for I am with you, saith the LORD of hosts:

5 According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so ^a my

^b Zechariah iv. 10.—^c Zech. viii. 9.—^d Exod. xxix. 45, 46; Jer. vii. 23.—^e Neh. ix. 20; Isa. lxiii. 11.

sixty-six years had elapsed from the destruction of the former temple, (before Christ 587,) to the time when this prophecy was delivered; (see notes on Ezra vi. 15, and Blair's tables;) nevertheless, it appears by this question of the prophet, that some of the Jews there present had seen the former temple when young, before they were carried to Babylon, and could remember what a magnificent building it was. Is it not in your eyes as nothing—That is, in comparison of the former. The words are an elegant Hebraism. We learn from Ezra iii. 12, (where see the note,) that when the foundation of the second temple was laid, in the second year of Cyrus, many of the ancient men, that had seen the first house, wept to see how much this second was likely to fall short of the glory of it. Undoubtedly the slender substance of the Jews at this time, and the haste they were in to rebuild the temple, that they might have a place for public worship, made them lay the foundation of it at first of much smaller dimensions than those of the former temple, and also to build it with less strength and magnificence.

Verses 4, 5. Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel—Do thou and all the rest of you exert yourselves, and proceed in rebuilding the temple with spirit and pleasure; for I am with you, saith the Lord of hosts—And will enable you to bring the work to a happy issue. According to the word that I covenanted with you—I will fulfil to you what I promised to your ancestors, namely, that I would be their God, and that it should be well with them, if they obeyed my voice; that I would keep them from evil, and moreover, bless and prosper them; (see the margin;) and so will I act toward you upon the same conditions, namely, your obeying my voice. So my Spirit remaineth—Rather, So my Spirit shall remain among you, namely, as a source of strength and courage, of wisdom and understanding, of zeal and fervency, to carry you through this work. Fear ye not—Let no discouraging fears or apprehensions have place in your minds, or weaken your hands.

Verses 6, 7. Yet once—Or, once more, εν αναξ, as the LXX. render it, whom St. Paul follows, Heb. xii. 26. The phrase implies such an alteration, or change of things, as should be permanent, and should not give place to any other, as the apostle there expounds it. The expression, says Bishop Newcome, "has a clear sense, if understood of the evangelical age: for many political revolutions suc-

Spirit remaineth among you; fear ye not. A. M. 3484. B. C. 520.

6 For thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^f Yet once, it is a little while, and ^g I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land;

7 And I will shake all nations, ^h and the Desire of all nations shall come: and I will fill this house with glory, saith the LORD of hosts.

^f Verse 21; Heb. xii. 26.—^g Joel iii. 16.—^h Gen. xlix. 10; Mal. iii. 1.

ceeded, as the conquest of Darius Codomanus, and the various fortunes of Alexander's successors; but only one great and final religious revolution;" namely, a revolution, not introductory to, but consequent upon the coming of the Messiah; the change of the Mosaic economy for that of the gospel. A little while—Though it was five hundred years from the time of the uttering of this prophecy to the coming of the Messiah, which was the event here intended, yet it might be called a short time, when compared with that which had elapsed from the creation to the giving of the law, or from the giving of the law to the return of the Jews from Babylon, and the erection of this second temple. And I will shake the heavens and the earth, &c.—These and similar figurative expressions are often used in the prophetic Scriptures, to signify great commotions and changes in the world, whether political or religious. The political ones here intended began in the overthrow of the Persian monarchy by Alexander, within two centuries after this prediction, which event was followed by commotions, destructive wars and changes among his successors, till the Macedonian empire, which had overturned the Persian, with the several kingdoms into which it was divided, was itself subdued by the Roman. The expressions, the sea and the dry land, are added as a particular explication of what is meant by the general term earth, and signify only what is expressed without a figure in the next clause. I will shake all nations—All nations were more or less involved in, and shaken by, the wars that overthrew the Persian kingdom, and still more in and by those that overturned the empire of the Greeks. Grotius explains this prophecy as being, in part, at least, accomplished by the extraordinary phenomena in the heavens, and on the earth, at the birth, death, and resurrection of Christ, and mission of the Holy Spirit. But certainly the other is the interpretation chiefly intended. And the Desire of all nations—Christ, most desirable to all nations, and who was desired by all that knew their own misery, and his sufficiency to save them; who was to be the light of the Gentiles, as well as the glory of his people Israel: such a guide and director as the wise men among the heathen longed for; and whose coming was the expectation of the Jewish nation, and the completion of all the promises made to their fathers. And I will fill this house with glory—A glory no-

A. M. 3484. 8 The silver is mine, and the gold
B. C. 520. is mine, saith the LORD of hosts.

9 ⁱ The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the LORD of hosts: and in this place will I give ^k peace, saith the LORD of hosts.

10 ¶ In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying,

11 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, ^l Ask now the priests concerning the law, saying,

12 If one bear holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch A. M. 3484.

bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or B. C. 520.
any meat, shall it be holy? And the priests answered and said, No.

13 Then said Haggai, If one that is ^m unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priest answered and said, It shall be unclean.

14 Then answered Haggai, and said, ⁿ So is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the LORD; and so is every work of their hands; and that which they offer there is unclean.

ⁱ John i. 14.—^k Psalm lxxxv. 8, 9; Luke ii. 14; Ephesians ii. 14.

^l Lev. x. 10, 11; Deut. xxxiii. 10; Mal. ii. 7.—^m Num. xix. 11.
ⁿ Titus i. 15.

consisting in the magnificence of its structure, its rich ornaments, or costly sacrifices, which would have been only a worldly glory; but a glory that was spiritual, heavenly, and divine.

Verses 8, 9. The silver is mine—Solomon's temple was more richly adorned with silver and gold than this, and I, that am the Lord of all the world, could easily command the riches of it, and bring them together for beautifying this my house, if I took delight in, or wanted any thing of this sort. A like expression as this is used, Psa. l. 10, with regard to sacrifices. The glory of this latter house, &c.—The glory of this second temple shall exceed that of the former, not in riches or costly ornaments, but in this, that there the Prince of peace shall make his appearance, and there the gospel of peace shall be preached and published. See Isa. ix. 6; Mic. v. 5; Eph. ii. 14. "Notwithstanding the former temple had the Urim and Thummim, the ark containing the two tables of the law, (written with the finger of God,) the pot of manna, Aaron's rod that budded, and the cloud that overshadowed the mercy-seat, and was the symbol of the divine presence; yet the glory of this latter house shall be greater by the appearance, doctrines, and miracles of Christ. Some interpret this passage of the richer decorations in the latter temple; but it may well be doubted whether the second temple could exceed that of Solomon in the splendour and costliness of its ornaments. The presumption is, that the former temple was more magnificent and sumptuous in its furniture than the latter, though inferior to it in point of magnitude. Prideaux values the gold, with which the holy of holies alone was overlaid, at four million three hundred and twenty thousand pounds sterling. P. I. B. iii. Ann. 534."—Newcome. What were the magnificence and beauty which adorned the former temple? What was even the Shechinah, the resplendent cloud of glory, which rested upon the mercy-seat, compared with the emanations of the divine perfections from Immanuel: the almighty power and boundless goodness exerted in acts of beneficence which shone forth in Christ, when the blind and the lame came to him in the temple, and he healed them; and the infinite wisdom displayed in his divine discourses, when he taught daily in the temple, Luke xix. 47, and his doctrine dropped as the rain, and his speech distilled as the dew? And never, surely, was such peace given to men by any other as was imparted by and through him; peace between God and man, between Jews and Gentiles, and between man and man, wherever his religion is received in the truth and power of it: peace, spiritual, internal, and heavenly; peace of conscience, tranquillity of mind, serenity of heart; a peace which, as the apostle observes, passeth all understanding, all purely rational conception, or, which no one can comprehend, save he that receives it.

Verses 10–14. In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month—At which time, as appears from verses 16, 19, (the materials being collected,) they began to go on again with the building of the temple. Ask now concerning the law—What the law saith in this case. The question was put to the priests, whose office it was to put a difference between holy and unholy, between clean and unclean, Lev. x. 10: that is, to be thoroughly acquainted with all the ceremonial laws, and to instruct others concerning them. If one bear, or carry, holy flesh—Part of the sacrifice, legally sanctified, or made holy, by the altar on which the whole was sanctified; in the skirt—In the lap; of his garment—Or in any other cloth; and if this cloth touch any common thing, as bread, &c., shall that become legally holy? And the priests said, No—By the answer of the priests in this, compared with the following verse, we find, that legal holiness was not so easily communicated as legal impurity: for the holy flesh did not make any thing that was touched by it holy; but the touch of a person who was unclean rendered holy things unclean. Thus is vice much more easily contracted than virtue! Broad and easy is the way that leadeth to sin, but narrow and difficult is that which leads to holiness! Then said Haggai—Now a second case is proposed; If one that is unclean by a dead body touch any of these—Namely, the things mentioned in the former verse, bread, pottage, wine, &c.; shall it be unclean?—Shall that which the unclean per-

A. M. 3484. 15 And now, I pray you, ° consider
B. C. 520. from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the LORD:

16 Since those days were, ° when one came to a heap of twenty measures, there were but ten: when one came to the press-fat for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty.

17 ° I smote you with blasting, and with mildew, and with hail, ° in all the labours of your hands; ° yet ye turned not to me, saith the LORD.

18 Consider now from this day and upward,
from the four and twentieth day of the ninth

° Chapter i. 5.—° Chap. i. 6, 9; Zech. viii. 10.—° Deut.
xxviii. 22; 1 Kings viii. 37; Chap. i. 9; Amos iv. 9.—° Chap.
i. 11.—° Jer. v. 3; Amos iv. 6-11.

son doth touch become unclean? Though a touch of what is holy will not make holy, yet, will not a touch of what is polluted defile? and the priests answered, It shall be unclean—The law was plain in this case: see Num. xix. 11. The least defect is sufficient to make a thing evil, whereas, to make it good and perfect, a concurrence of all good qualities is requisite. So is this people before me—In like manner, saith God, your neglect of my temple, and your disregard of my worship, have made you unclean, as if you had contracted legal pollution by touching a dead body; and rendered every thing
you undertake, even the sacrifices you offer on my altar, unclean and unacceptable.

Verses 15-17. And now, consider from this day, &c.—Reflect on what has happened to you, from the time that a stop was put to the building of the temple, after the first foundation of it was laid, till you began again to rebuild it. And upward—Or, forward. He had bid them look back, chap. i. 5, 7;
now he bids them look forward. Since those days
—All the time the temple lay neglected. When one came to a heap—Namely, of corn, which seemed likely to produce twenty measures; there were but ten—Only half the quantity expected was found to be produced, through the poverty of the ear.
The verse, it must be observed, according to the present rendering, is very elliptical; but if the first clause be explained by the second, which it ought to be, the sense will clearly appear to be this: When one came to a heap for twenty measures; that is,
when a person came to a heap of corn on his floor,
either of sheaves unthrashed, or of corn unwinnow-
ed, and expected that it would have produced twenty measures after it was thrashed and winnowed, to his great disappointment he had but ten out of it.
Such also was the case of those who came to draw out fifty measures of wine from the wine-press. I smote you with blasting—Burning and scorching
winds; and with hail—Which even in cold countries many times destroys corn, fruits, and trees, by month, even from ° the day that the A. M. 3484. foundation of the LORD's temple was B. C. 520.

laid, consider it.

19 ° Is the seed yet in the barn? yea, as yet
the vine, and the fig-tree, and the pomegranate, and the olive-tree, hath not brought forth:
from this day will I bless you.

20 ¶ And again the word of the LORD came unto Haggai in the four and twentieth day of the month, saying,

21 Speak to Zerubbabel, ° governor of Judah, saying, ° I will shake the heavens and the earth;

22 And ° I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the ° Zechariah viii. 9.—° Zechariah viii. 12.—° Chapter i.

14.—° Verses 6, 7; Hebrews xii. 26.—° Daniel ii. 44;
Matthew xxiv. 7.

its violence; but in those hot countries does it much oftener. In all the labours of your hands—In all that you sowed or planted; yet ye turned not to me
—Ye did not lay my judgments to heart, nor consider that they were inflicted for your sin, in neglecting to rebuild my temple, and restore my worship
in it.

Verses 18, 19. Consider now, from this day and upward—That is, forward. In the 15th verse the prophet exhorted them to reflect upon the calamities they had suffered, from the time the rebuilding of the temple was intermitted. Now he bids them look forward, from the day the building was recommenced, (see chap. i. 15,) and they would find a visible change in their affairs for the better. Even from the day that the foundation was laid, &c.—The prophet expresses the carrying on of the building
as if it were laying the foundation anew, because the work had been so long interrupted; (compare Zech. viii. 9;) but yet there is no doubt to be made that they built upon the same foundation which had been laid some years before, of which we have an account Ezra iii. 8, and did not lay a new foundation. Is the seed yet in the barn—Is the harvest already laid up in the barn? or any fruits of the earth gathered in? No, certainly: for this is but the ninth month, (answering to our November,) when no judgment can be formed what will be the increase of the year following; yet, from this time, I promise you
the blessing of a fruitful year, as an encouragement to you to carry on the building. Yea, as yet the vine and the fig-tree hath not brought forth—No sign yet appears what vintage you shall have, what store of wine, oil, figs, and pomegranates; yet by the word of God I tell you, you shall be blessed in them all, and have a large produce.

Verses 20-22. Again the word of the Lord came unto Haggai—Probably on the same day that he uttered what precedes, from verse 10; speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah—The same title which is given to him chap. i. 1; in which character he was

A. M. 3484. kingdoms of the heathen; and ^aI
B. C. 520. will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother.

^a Micah v. 10; Zech. iv. 6; ix. 10.

the type of the Messiah, to whom the following words chiefly belong. I will shake the heavens and the earth—I will cause great commotions, and bring great things to pass. I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms—This is supposed to be spoken of the overthrow of the Persian empire, in Egypt, which, lying near to the Jewish territories, was regarded by them with great awe; and therefore its subversion was foretold to them, to encourage them to go on in the rebuilding of the temple. I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen—Or, of the nations. The strength of the Persians, whose empire consisted of many kingdoms, or nations, was broken in a most remarkable manner by the little country of Greece. Such vast overthrows, both by sea and land, as they received from the Greeks, are scarcely to be paralleled. The horses and their riders shall come down—Shall fall to the earth; every one by the sword of his brother—That is, of his fellow-creature. Perhaps the different nations which should be concerned in these commotions, namely, the Persians, Egyptians, and Greeks, are here called brothers, because they were all idolaters, or worshippers of fictitious gods.

Verse 23. In that day will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, &c.—Amidst the commotions which I will cause in the world, I will so order it, that Judea shall remain safe under thy government, O Zerubbabel, and thy successors, and be molested by none. A signet, or seal, particularly a royal one, is kept with great care; therefore the promise of making Zerub-

23 In that day, saith the LORD of ^{A. M. 3484.}
hosts, will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, ^{B. C. 520.}
my servant, the son of Shealtiel, saith the LORD, ^band will make thee as a signet; for ^cI have chosen thee, saith the LORD of hosts.

^b Cant. viii. 6; Jer. xxii. 24.—^c Isa. xlii. 1; xliii. 10.

babel as a signet, signified keeping him safe, or preserving him as a person of great estimation. For I have chosen thee—To be the ruler of my people. This whole prophecy, from verse 21, addressed to Zerubbabel, is considered by Bishop Chandler, Mr. Lowth, and many others, as parallel to that contained in verses 6-9; that the same commotions and shaking of nations are intended in both passages; and therefore that by Zerubbabel here, the Messiah, typified by him, is chiefly intended. That the prediction could not be properly and fully accomplished in Zerubbabel, personally considered, is evident, as in all likelihood he did not live many years after the finishing of the temple, and certainly did not see any of those great changes here foretold; and therefore the Messiah must be here described under the name of Zerubbabel, as he elsewhere is under that of David. He is, indeed, the signet on God's right hand; for all power is given to him, and derived from him, he being constituted Head of the church, and Judge of the world. In him the great charter of the gospel is signed and sanctified, and it is in him that all the promises of God are yea and amen. And what is foretold, verse 22, respecting the overthrow of the throne of kingdoms, may probably ultimately refer to his second coming, or to that illustrious display of divine power, whereby a period shall be put to all anti-christian empires, and the kingdoms of this world shall be made the kingdoms of our God and of his Christ, Daniel ii. 44; Revelation xi. 15.

BOOK OF ZECHARIAH.

ARGUMENT

ZECHARIAH, one of the last of that succession of prophets whom God sent at sundry times to signify his will to the Jewish nation, was the son of Barachiah, and the grandson of Iddo, mentioned Ezra v. 1; vi. 14. He is, indeed, in these passages, called simply the son of Iddo; but that is merely because a person's descendants, though remote, are frequently termed his sons, or daughters, in the Scriptures. The time and place of his birth are not certainly known. Dr. Blayney, however, thinks it unquestionable, that he was of the number of the captives who returned from Babylon to Jerusalem in consequence of the decree of Cyrus; but that he was very young when he came thither, being styled הַנֶּעֱר, a youth, chap. ii. 4, sixteen or seventeen years afterward, even when he had begun to exercise his prophetic function; a title which would scarcely have been given him had he much exceeded the age of twenty. "It was in the eighth month of the second year of the reign of Darius Hystaspes, king of Persia, that is, about the year 520 before the Christian era, that he first opened his divine commission with a serious and solemn call to repentance. In the same year he is found, together with the Prophet Haggai, employed in assisting the endeavours of Zerubbabel and Joshua, to excite and animate the people at Jerusalem to a vigorous prosecution of the work of rebuilding their temple. For this purpose he communicated the visions which are contained in the first six chapters, and which he was favoured with on the 24th day of the 11th month, in the year aforesaid; all evidently calculated to inspire the strongest hopes and assurance of future prosperity, through the returning favour of the Almighty. The same design is further carried on in a subsequent revelation, made to him about two years afterward;" as is recorded chap. vii., viii. But though the time and occasion of this former part of his prophecies be thus ascertained, by the dates annexed to them, we have not the same certainty with respect to those that follow. "It is, however, highly probable, from the apparent difference both of style and subject, that they came forth at a different and more advanced period of our prophet's life. This difference, indeed, has been urged as a proof that the last six chapters are not Zechariah's, but by a different hand. But the argument is inconclusive; for it is very possible for the same man to alter his style, and write differently at different periods of time. Nor would it be at all surprising if this writer, as he advanced in years and dignity, should have learned to express himself in a tone of more elevation and energy." At such distant periods also, as we suppose, the subject of his predictions and discourses would be materially changed. For he would no longer have occasion to stimulate his countrymen to the building of the temple, which was already completely finished; but he was actually engaged in predicting some remarkable occurrences that would distinguish his own and the neighbouring nations in remote periods, some of them perhaps not yet arrived; and in urging an immediate reformation of national manners. In so doing, what more natural to expect, than that he would encounter hatred and opposition from those whose corruptions he was called upon to censure and repress. "The sequel," says Dr. Blayney, "may easily be guessed at; for from similar causes, similar effects may naturally be looked for. His enraged adversaries, after thwarting and defeating all his endeavours for the public good, at length so far succeeded as to turn the tide of popular prejudice and resentment against him; and he was barbarously murdered, as his namesake Zechariah the son of Jehoiada had been, for the same cause, and in the self-same place, between three and four hundred years before. For this we have no less authority than that of our blessed Lord himself, who expressly calls the person of whom he speaks, Matt. xxiii. 35, Zecharias, son of Barachias, distinguishing him from the before-mentioned Zechariah son of Jehoiada by his patronymic as effectually as two men bearing the same Christian name in our days would be distinguished by their family names. That the Scriptures of the Old Testament are silent in regard to this latter instance can be no objection, if it be considered that a very small portion of them was written after the supposed date of this transaction; and that nothing occurs in this part which would naturally lead to the mention of it. But no sooner is the line of sacred history resumed in the New Testament, than we find the subject brought forward with such precision, that it requires no small degree of prejudice to controvert it. Add to this, how very improbable it is that our Saviour, who has taken his first term from the earliest date of history, should have chosen for his last one which would not include the whole series of prophets and divine messengers, who suffered for their testimony to the cause of religious truth." In this particular, however, it must be observed, Dr. Blayney's opinion differs from that of many commentators, who suppose that Zechariah the son of Jehoiada is intended in the passage of St. Matthew's gospel above referred to, and that the expression, the son of Barachias, was the officious addition of some early transcriber of that gospel, and not inserted by St. Matthew himself. See the note on Matt. xxiii. 35.

It has been urged by some, that many parts of this book are very hard, if not impossible, to be understood. "That Zechariah is in some degree obscure," says Dr. Blayney, "is not to be questioned. And which of the ancient prophets is not so? It is of the nature of prophecy to affect a degree of enigmaticalness previous to the accomplishment, in order not to clash with the freedom of human agency. And there is no doubt, that some of Zechariah's predictions relate to matters that are still involved in the womb of futurity. No wonder, then, that these fall not within the reach of our perfect comprehension. Others there are, which we have good reason to believe have already been fulfilled, but do not appear with such a degree of evidence, as they probably would have done if we had been better informed concerning the times and facts to which they relate. With respect to the emblems and types that are exhibited, they are most of them of easy and determinate application. And, in favour of the importance of his subject matter, it must be acknowledged that, next to Isaiah, Zechariah is the most evangelical of all the prophets; having more frequent, and more clear and direct allusions to the character and coming of the Messiah, and his kingdom, than any of the rest. Nor in his language and composition do we find any particular bias to obscurity; except that the quickness and suddenness of the transitions are sometimes apt to confound the boundaries of discourse, so as to leave the less attentive reader at a loss to whom the several parts of it are to be ascribed. But, upon the whole, the diction is remarkably pure, the construction natural and perspicuous, and the style judiciously varied, according to the nature of the subject; simple and plain in the narrative and historical parts; but in those that are wholly prophetic, the latter chapters in particular, rising to a degree of elevation and grandeur scarcely inferior to the sublimest of the inspired writings."

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter, after the introduction, 1, we have, 1st, An awakening call to a sinful people to repent, and to return to God, 1-6. 2d, Great encouragement to hope for mercy, (1,) By a vision of horses and their riders among the myrtle-trees, 7-11. (2,) By the prayer of an angel for Jerusalem, and the answer to that prayer, 12-17. (3,) By a vision of four carpenters, that were employed to cut off the four horns with which Judah and Jerusalem were scattered, 18-21.

A. M. 3484.
B. C. 520.

IN the eighth month, ^a in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD ^b unto Zechariah, the son of Barachiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying, A. M. 3484.

B. C. 520.
2 The LORD hath been ¹ sore displeased with your fathers.

^a Ezra iv. 24; Hag. i. 1.

^b Ezra v. 1; Matt. xxiii. 35.—¹ Heb. with displeasure.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verses 1, 2. In the eighth month—This month, according to that reckoning which begins the year with the month Abib, or Nisan, Exod. xii. 2, falls in with the latter part of our October, and the beginning of November. Haggai had begun to exhort the Jews to resume the work of building the temple two months before this, and they had actually resumed it on the 24th day of the sixth month, that is, in the beginning of September. In the second year of Darius—That is, Darius the son of Hystaspes, as Dr. Blayney and many other learned men have proved to a demonstration. Came the word of the Lord to Zechariah—Here we see the prophet did not run before he was sent, or undertake a work to which he was not called: as also, that what he communicated to the people, was first communicated to him by the Lord. Saying, The Lord, &c.—Blayney here supplies, Speak unto all the people of the land, saying, &c. He supposes that some words, expressive of that or a similar sense, have been omitted by the carelessness of some transcriber. The Lord hath been sore displeased with your fathers—He was so long and so much provoked, that his displeasure at last broke out into that flame which consumed your city and temple, and even desolated your country, nay, and punished the inhabitants thereof, and their children, with the captivity of seventy years; yet now he declares himself willing to be reconciled to you upon your repentance.

A. M. 3484. 3 Therefore say thou unto them,
B. C. 520. Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Turn ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts.

4 Be ye not as your fathers, ^a unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; * Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings: but they did not hear, nor hearken unto me, saith
the LORD.

5 Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever?

6 But ^f my words and my statutes, which I commanded my servants the prophets, did they not ² take hold of your fathers? and they

^c Jeremiah xxv. 5; xxxv. 15; Micah vii. 19; Malachi iii. 7;
Luke xv. 20; James iv. 8.—^d 2 Chronicles xxxvi. 15, 16.
* Isaiah xxxi. 6; Jeremiah iii. 12; xviii. 11; Ezekiel xviii. 30;

Verses 3-6. Therefore say—Rather, but say thou unto them, Thus saith the Lord, Turn ye unto me—The word turn, as it related to the people, signified, that they should change their corrupt manners and turn to God in newness of life; and by God's turning to them, was meant, that he would take them again into his favour, and perform for them acts of manifest kindness, instead of displeasure. Be ye not as your fathers—Do not persist in impenitence as your fathers did. Instead of being hardened in your evil courses by the example of your fathers' sin, rather be deterred from those courses by the example of your fathers' punishment. Your fathers, where are they—Where are your disobedient fathers? Were they not consumed with famine and the sword, as God threatened them? And the prophets, do they live for ever—Though the prophets, and those to whom they delivered their message, are dead, yet the commandments delivered by their ministry still continue in full force; which appears by the judgments that came upon your fathers, for not hearkening to them; as they themselves could not but acknowledge. And the same punishments will overtake you, if you continue disobedient. But my words—The dreadful menaces which I delivered; and my statutes—The decreed judgments which I resolved to execute on them: did they not take hold on your fathers?—Overtake them as a pursuing enemy overtakes and seizes on the object of his hostility? In other words, Did not the evils which I had denounced by the prophets come upon your fathers? And they returned, &c.—They were forced to acknowledge with sorrow, that all those calamities which I had threatened against them, and forewarned them of, if they did not obey my voice, were actually come upon them.

Verses 7, 8. Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month—That is, about three months after he had received the former vision; which is the month Sebat—This was the Chaldee or Syriac name of the eleventh month, not the Hebrew name returned and said, ^e Like as the LORD A. M. 3484. of hosts thought to do unto us, accord- B. C. 520.

ing to our ways, and according to our doings, so hath he dealt with us.

7 ¶ Upon the four and twentieth ^{About} day of the eleventh month, which ^{B. C. 519} is the month Sebat, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Barachiah, the son of Iddo the prophet,
saying,

8 I saw by night, and behold ^h a man riding upon a red horse, and he stood among the myrtle-trees that were in the bottom; and behind him were there ⁱ red horses, ³ speckled,
and white.

Hosea xiv. 1.—^f Isaiah lv. 1.—² Or, overtake.—^e Lament.
i. 18; ii. 17.—^h Joshua v. 13; Revelation vi. 4.—ⁱ Chap. vi.
2-7.—³ Or, bay.

This month corresponded with the latter end of January and the beginning of February. Came the word of the Lord unto Zechariah—This second revelation contains eight distinct visions, following each other in the same night. "The first vision is of an angel in a human form, sitting on horseback, in a low valley among myrtle-trees, attended by others upon horses, of different colours. The prophet asks the meaning, and is informed that they were the ministers of Providence, sent to examine into the state of the whole earth, which they report to be quiet and tranquil. The angel hereupon intercedes for Judah and Jerusalem, which he represents to have suffered under the divine indignation seventy years. He receives a consolatory answer. The prophet is directed to proclaim, that God's wrath against Judah was at an end; that he would cause the temple and Jerusalem to be rebuilt; and would fill the country with good, as a token and consequence of his renewed favour, verses 7-17."—Blayney. Saying, I saw, &c.—That is, the word came to the prophet, who said, I saw, &c., or, thus recited the divine vision which had been sent him. What now follows (which extends to the end of the sixth chapter) was uttered when the people had made a great progress in the work of the temple, and were now to be excited to the new labour of fortifying Jerusalem. And behold a man—The prophet terms him so, according to his appearance; till, perceiving by his answer, verse 10, that he had a divine commission, he afterward gives him the respectable title of the angel, or messenger of Jehovah; riding upon a red horse—A horse of a red or bloody colour was an emblem of the slaughters of war, as appears from Rev. vi. 4. But the myrtle being a tree of pleasure, and an emblem of peace, therefore the red horse appearing among the myrtle-trees, signified that the slaughters of war were, or soon would be, repressed or restrained by a profound peace, namely, in the Persian empire, for that is here referred to: and accordingly there was a profound peace in it in the

A. M. 3484. 9 Then said I, O my Lord, what
B. C. 520. are these? And the angel that talked with me said unto me, I will show thee what these be.

10 And the man that stood among the myrtle-trees answered and said, ^k These are they whom the LORD hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth.

11 ^l And they answered the angel of the LORD that stood among the myrtle-trees, and fourth, fifth, and sixth years of Darius. It is doubtful what angel or other being was represented by the figure of a man on this red horse. Some suppose Michael, whom the Prophet Daniel seems to mention as the guardian angel of the Jews, or the angel presiding, under God, over the affairs of their nation, and taking care of them. Others suppose the λογος, or Son of God, is meant; which opinion seems probable. The reason of his appearing in a bottom, or low place, amidst myrtles planted by the waters, is thought to have been to mark out the affliction, humiliation, and sorrow to which Judea was reduced. The myrtle flourishes best in shady and watery places. Littora myrtetis latissima, says Virgil. See Calmet. Behind him were red horses—With riders on them, as appears from verse 10, “who were angels, verse 11. They had horses to show their power of celerity; and horses of different colours, to intimate the difference of their ministries.”—Newcome. Or, as others explain it, to signify the various events of the wars waged by Darius, which were sometimes fortunate, at other times unsuccessful.

* Heb. i. 14.—^l Psa. ciii. 20, 21.—^m Psa. cii. 13; Rev. vi. 10.

Verses 9-11. Then said I, O my Lord, what are these—What is the meaning of these appearances, or visions? And the angel that talked with me said—“This was another heavenly minister, sent, probably, to present the visions to the prophet’s imagination, as well as to explain them. Angelus comes et interpretes, “an accompanying angel and interpreter.” And under his direction the prophet receives satisfactory information from the mouth of the first angel and his attendants.”—Blayney. I will show thee what these be—“I will cause that it shall be explained to thee by the angel who stands first among the myrtles. This may have been done by a sign given to that angel, or by words omitted in the relation.”—Newcome. And the man that stood among the myrtle-trees—This was an angel of an order superior to him mentioned in the preceding verse, who either prevents that angel, and takes upon him to return an answer to the prophet’s question, or else sends his answer to Zechariah by that angel, as Christ sent his revelation to St. John by an angel, Rev. i. 1. These are they whom the Lord hath sent—They are the messengers or ministering spirits of Jehovah. And they—The rest of the angels, implied at the end of verse 8, and who came after the first; answered, We have walked to and fro through the

A. M. 3484. said, We have walked to and fro
B. C. 520. through the earth, and behold, all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest.

12 ¶ Then the angel of the LORD answered and said, ^m O LORD of hosts, how long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem and on the cities of Judah, against which thou hast had indignation ⁿ these threescore and ten years?

13 And the LORD answered the angel that

ⁿ Jer. xxv. 11, 12; Dan. ix. 2; Chap. vii. 5.

earth—We have been diligent to execute that office which was allotted to us. And behold all the earth sitteth still, &c.—This must be understood here, and in many other places, in a restricted sense, for all the nations with whom the Jews had a connection. It means here chiefly the Persian empire, which enjoyed peace at that time. But the state of the Jews was unsettled: see verse 16: which circumstance gives occasion to the following intercession.

Verse 12. Then the angel of the Lord said—“Christ the mediator,” as Bishop Hall explains it, “prayed for the salvation of his church, which was now troubled, when all the countries around were at rest.” But, as we find by the next verse that God’s answer to this petition was given to the angel interpreter, or the angel who talked with the prophet, this seems to determine that the petition was made by that angel. How long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem—At this time Jerusalem lay without any walls or defence, and was not wholly rebuilt; and on the cities of Judah—These still lay wholly in ruins; against which thou hast had indignation these threescore and ten years—There are three ways of computing the seventy years of the captivity, taken notice of in Scripture. The first is, beginning from the fourth year of Jehoiakim to the first of Cyrus: this is Jeremiah’s account, chap. xxv. 1, 11; which Daniel follows, chap. ix. 2. Another may be computed from the besieging of Jerusalem in the ninth year of Zedekiah, in the tenth month, for which a solemn fast was kept by the Jews: compare 2 Kings xxv. 1, with Zech. viii. 19. This computation ends with the second year of Darius, which is the reckoning Zechariah here follows. Or lastly, if we compute the beginning of the seventy years from the destruction of Jerusalem and the first temple, which came to pass in the eleventh year of the same reign, they will be accomplished in the fourth year of Darius, and this computation agrees with what is said chap. vii. 1, 5. The last two ways of reckoning the seventy years may be reduced to one, only by supposing, that the prophet, in this verse, sets down a complete for an incomplete number, and calls that space of time seventy years, which wanted but little of it: a way of speaking of which several instances may be produced.

Verses 13-17. And the Lord answered the angel—“By a voice, or impulse; and the angel communicated the reply to Zechariah.”—Newcome. So the

A. M. 3484. talked with me with ° good words
B. C. 520. and comfortable words.

14 So the angel that communed with me said unto me, Cry thou, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; I am ° jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with a great jealousy.

15 And I am very sore displeased with the heathen that are at ease: for ° I was but a little displeased, and they helped forward the affliction.

16 Therefore thus saith the LORD; ° I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies: my house shall be built in it, saith the LORD of hosts, and ° a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem.

17 Cry yet, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; My cities through ° prosperity shall yet be spread abroad; ° and the LORD A. M. 3484.

shall yet comfort Zion, and ° shall B. C. 520.
yet choose Jerusalem.

18 ¶ Then lifted I up mine eyes, and saw, and behold four horns.

19 And I said unto the angel that talked with me, What be these? And he answered me, ° These are the horns which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem.

20 And the LORD showed me four carpenters.

21 Then said I, What come these to do? And he spake, saying, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, so that no man did lift up his head: but these are come to fray them, to cast out the horns of the Gentiles, which ° lifted up their horn over the land of Judah to scatter it.

° Jer. xxix. 10. — ° Joel ii. 18; Chap. viii. 2. — ° Isa. xlvii. 6.
° Isa. xii. 1; liv. 8; Chap. ii. 10; viii. 3. — ° Chap. ii. 1, 2.

° Heb. good. — ° Isa. li. 3. — ° Isa. xiv. 1; Chap. ii. 12; iii. 2.
° Ezra iv. 1, 4, 7; v. 3. — ° Psa. lxxv. 4, 5.

angel said, Cry thou—Now publish what thou hearest, and assure God's poor, captive, impoverished church, that he will do her good. Saying, Thus saith the Lord of hosts—The God of armies, and the Father of his people; I am jealous for Jerusalem—I have been jealous against, but now am jealous for Jerusalem; my love is now raised to a very high degree of compassion for my people, and of indignation against her enemies and oppressors. The words may be rendered, I am jealous for Jerusalem with great zeal, for so the word קנאה often signifies. So that the meaning is, I have a great concern for the welfare of my people, and I will not any longer suffer them to be ill treated. I am very sore displeased with the heathen, &c.—The remnant of the Babylonians, Philistines, Edomites, Samaritans, &c., which had not been made such examples of God's severity as the Jews were. For I was but a little displeased—Namely, with the Jewish nation; and they—Namely, their enemies; helped forward the affliction—They added to, or lengthened out, the time of the affliction, namely, by hindering the accomplishment of Cyrus's decree in favour of the Jews: see Ezra iv. 1-6. Or the meaning is, "Mine anger did not rise so high, as the punishment which the enemies of my people inflicted." I made the Babylonians instruments of my vengeance; but they exceeded their commission, and acted as they were prompted by their own ambition and cruelty; and I was displeased with them for their extreme cruelty, and with the nations who insulted over my people in their distress. Therefore I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies—I will have compassion on Jerusalem, and cause her to experience the effects of my favour. And a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem—That is, the architect's measuring-line, for laying out the buildings. And Jerusalem shall be wholly rebuilt, and fortified with walls, &c. This accordingly was fulfilled not many years after, as we read Neh. iii., iv. My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad—Over the face of Judea: or, the cities of Judea shall be rebuilt, enlarged, and adorned, throughout the land. And the Lord shall yet comfort Zion—By showing his wonted kindness to her after her affliction.

Verses 18-21. Then, behold, four horns—Horns often signify the power of princes or people, the metaphor being taken from those cattle whose strength lies in their horns. The horns here mentioned denote the powers which had scattered Israel and Judah, or that should scatter them, as a bull, in his fury, tosses into the air whatever opposes him. It is uncertain whether the number four is here used indefinitely, or to denote that specific number; and if the latter, what particular powers are pointed out by it. Calmet supposes the Assyrians, Chaldeans, Persians, and Egyptians. But "the most ancient and prevailing opinion among the Jews themselves, and perhaps the most probable of any, is, that the four great empires, the Assyrian, or Babylonian, the Persian, Grecian, and Roman, are intended; namely, the empires alluded to by the four beasts, Dan. vii. By each of these the Jewish nation hath been in turns oppressed, and all of them have been successively brought down and annihilated; although, from the depression of the last, the Jews have not as yet apparently derived any considerable advantage." —Blayney. The Lord showed me four carpenters—Or workmen, as Bishop Newcome renders the word, observing, "Vitringa supposes that the horns were iron, and that these were fabri ferrarii malleis dolabris que instructi," blacksmiths furnished with hammers and axes. Then said I, What come these to do?—He inquires not who or what they were, but what was their business and design. And he spake, (or said,) These are the horns—In order to satisfy the inquiry of the prophet, the angel first points to the four horns, mentioned verses 18, 19, as if he had said, See, there are four horns, which have scattered Judah. The LXX. add, καὶ τὴν Ἰσραὴλ κατέσταν, and have broken Israel. Instead of which addition the Arabic has, and destroyed Jerusalem. So that no man did lift up his head—No one had either strength or courage to make any resistance: so dispirited and dejected were all the people. But these are come to fray them—These are principal commanders, or powers, raised up by God to dismay and deter them. To cast out the horns of the Gentiles—To break, or cast down, the power of these nations; which lifted up their horn over the land of Judah—Who employed their strength, and used all possible efforts, to hinder the Jewish people from flourishing again in Judea. Observe, reader, in what way soever the church is threatened with mischief, and whatever opposition is given to its interests, God can find out ways and means to check the force, or restrain the wrath of its enemies, and make it turn to his praise.

CHAPTER II.

In this chapter we have a third vision; (1.) In conformity to what was said chap. i. 16, a man, or angel, appears with a measuring-line in his hand, going to take the dimensions of Jerusalem, in order to its being rebuilt, according to its former extent, 1, 2. (2.) A message is delivered to the prophet, showing the great increase of its population and wealth, and its perfect security under the divine protection, 3-5. (3.) The recall of the Jewish exiles from the north country, and the punishment of those that oppressed them, 6-9. (4.) The return of God's presence to dwell in Jerusalem, and the conversion of many heathen nations, 10, 11. (5.) The reinstatement of Judah and Jerusalem in the full possession of all their ancient privileges; and a warning to all men not to prescribe to or limit God, but patiently to wait for the fulfilment of his promises, 13.

A. M. 3484.
B. C. 520.

I LIFTED up mine eyes again, and looked, and behold ^a a man with a measuring-line in his hand.

2 Then said I, Whither goest thou? and he said unto me, ^b To measure Jerusalem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof.

^a Ezek. xl. 3.—^b Rev. xi. 1; xxi. 15, 16.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verses 1-5. I lifted up mine eyes, &c., and behold a man—An angel in the form of a man, probably representing Nehemiah, under whose direction the wall was rebuilt, according to the ancient line marked out by the ruins. See Nehemiah iii., &c., &c. And the angel that talked with me went forth—Went away from me, as if he had performed his commission in regard to me, and was to commune with me no longer. And another angel went out to meet him—But, as he was going away, I saw another angel meet him. This appears to have been an angel sent with fresh commands, from the superior personage among the myrtle-trees, to the angel who communed with the prophet. And said, Run, speak to this young man—Hasten with all diligence, and communicate to the young and inexperienced prophet what will check his fears, and encourage him to proceed in the execution of his prophetic office. Saying, Jerusalem—Which hath so long lain in ruins, and seemed to be in a hopeless state, shall be inhabited as towns, &c.—Shall overflow with inhabitants, who shall occupy spaces beyond the circuit of the walls: that is, its inhabitants will multiply so fast, that the houses within the walls will not be able to contain them, and they will be obliged to seek habitations in the neighbouring country in villages, which shall be of as great extent as towns,

3 And behold, the angel that talked ^c with me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, A. M. 3484.
B. C. 520.

4 And said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, ^e Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein:

^c Jer. xxxi. 27; Ezek. xxxvi. 10, 11.

which, although without walls, shall be safe and secure against the attacks of enemies; their own multitude of men being a sufficient defence to them. And their cattle will increase in proportion. That this was a fact with regard to Jerusalem, see Josephus, De Bell. Jud., lib. v. chap. 4, where we learn that "the city, overflowing with its number of inhabitants, by degrees extended itself beyond its walls;" and that Herod Agrippa fortified the new part called Bezetha. For I, saith the Lord, will be unto her a wall of fire—Which cannot be scaled or undermined, as it would soon consume any that might attempt to do the one or the other. Thus, in regard to her inhabiting without walls, God engages to secure her as effectually as if she were surrounded with a wall of fire. "The image is most sublime, and expresses very strongly the protection of God. It must have reminded the Jews of the pillar of fire by which God directed and defended their ancestors."—Newcome. He says, Round about, to signify that no part should be left unguarded, or open to the enemy. And will be the glory in the midst of her—My presence and favour shall render her glorious. He alludes to the symbol of the divine presence in the holy of holies. Observe, reader, those that have Jehovah for their God have him for their glory: and they that have him in the midst of them have glory in the midst of them. And all

A. M. 3484. 5 For I, saith the LORD, will be
B. C. 520. unto her ^d a wall of fire round about,
• and will be the glory in the midst of her.

6 ¶ Ho, ho, come forth, and flee ^f from the land of the north, saith the LORD: for I have ^g spread you abroad as the four winds of the heaven, saith the LORD.

7 ^h Deliver thyself, O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon.

8 For thus saith the LORD of hosts: After the glory hath he sent me unto the nations

^d Isaiah xxvi. 1; Chap. ix. 8.—^e Isa. lx. 19; Rev. xxi. 23.
^f Isa. xlviii. 20; lli. 11; Jer. i. 14; l. 8; li. 6, 45.—^g Deut.
xxviii. 64; Ezek. xvii. 21.—^h Rev. xviii. 4.—ⁱ Deut. xxxii.
10; Psa. xvii. 8; 2 Thess. i. 6.

those persons and places that have God in the midst of them, have him for a wall of fire round about them; for upon all that glory, there is, and shall be, a defence, Isa. iv. 5. This prophecy was fulfilled in part in that Jerusalem, which, in process of time, became a very flourishing city, and made a very great figure in those parts of the world, much beyond what could have been expected, considering how low it had been brought, and how long it was before it recovered itself. But it was to have its full accomplishment in the gospel church, which is extended far, like towns without walls, by the admission of the Gentiles into it; and which hath the Son of God, and God himself, for its prince and protector.

Verses 6-9. Ho, Ho!—Ye sleepy Jews, come forth—Come out from your prisons; and flee—Make all the haste you can, from the land of the north—From Chaldea, and Babylon, the chief city of it, which lay northward of Judea. The Jews, who still remained in those parts, are here exhorted to return with all speed from them, for a reason assigned, verse 9. For I have spread you abroad—As I executed my threats in scattering you, and your brethren of the ten tribes, all over the world; so, in due time, I will gather you from your several dispersions, of which your present restoration from Babylon shall be an earnest. Deliver thyself, O Zion, &c.—O ye citizens of Zion, that still dwell in Babylon, make haste to come out from thence. For after the glory hath he sent me unto the nations which spoiled you—After that he is become your glory, saith the angel, I am to avenge you of your enemies. Or, the words may be considered as spoken by the prophet, and then the sense is, (as the Chaldee explains it,) “After I have given you the promise of restoring Jerusalem to such a glorious state, I (the Prophet Zechariah) am sent to execute God’s judgments, that is, to foretel that they shall be executed, upon the Chaldeans, who spoiled you of your wealth and ornaments. For he that toucheth you, &c.—God is very sensible of every injury offered to his people. See Psa. cv. 15. It is like hurting the eye, which is the most tender and sensible part of the body: compare Psa. xvii. 8. And thou hast made the Babylonians instruments of his which spoiled you: for he that ^{A. M. 3484.} ^{B. C. 520.} toucheth you, toucheth the apple of his eye.

9 For behold, I will ^k shake my hand upon them, and they shall be a spoil to their servants:
and ^l ye shall know that the LORD of hosts
hath sent me.

10 ¶ ^m Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion:
for lo, I come, and I ⁿ will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the LORD.

11 ^o And many nations shall be joined to the ^k Isaiah xi. 15; xix. 16.—^l Chap. iv. 9.—^m Isaiah xii. 6;

liv. 1; Zeph. iii. 14.—ⁿ Lev. xxvi. 12; Ezekiel xxxvii. 27;
Chap. viii. 3; John i. 14; 2 Cor. vi. 16.—^o Isaiah ii. 3; xlix.
22; lx. 3; Chap. viii. 22, 23.

vengeance, yet now he will call them to an account for exceeding their commission.”—Lowth. See note on chap. i. 15. For behold, I will shake my hand upon, or over them, &c.—Namely, the nation that doth violence to my people, meaning chiefly the Babylonians. And they shall be a spoil to their servants—They shall be spoiled by, or become subject to, those to whom they were superior, and who were their servants. This seems to be a prediction of some new calamity to be brought upon the Babylonians. And accordingly we find from history, that, very soon after this time, the Babylonians revolting from Darius, he marched against Babylon with a great army; and having, after a siege of twenty months, made himself master of it, beat down its walls, put 3,000 of its principal inhabitants to death, and made captives, or slaves, of a great number. Before Cyrus, the Persians were subject to the Babylonians, and therefore are here called their servants. And ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me—These words are a continuation of the prophet’s speech: as if he had said, When this judgment is executed upon the Chaldeans, it will be an undoubted sign and proof of the truth of my mission. Compare Ezek. xxxiii. 33.

Verses 10-12. Sing and rejoice, &c.—Here the prophet calls the daughter of Zion, or the whole Jewish nation, being redeemed and restored, to rejoice in the goodness showed them, and to proclaim the praises of Him who showed it. For lo, I come, &c.—To execute judgments on thine adversaries, and to complete thy deliverance and salvation. And I will dwell in the midst of thee—To defend and bless thee. This was fulfilled in part to the Jews, but more fully to the gospel church. And many nations shall be joined to the Lord—The church shall be greatly enlarged by the accession of the Gentiles to it; and shall receive a still further increase when, upon the conversion of the Jews, the fulness of the Gentiles shall be brought in. And shall be my people—My true worshippers, subjects, and servants. This promise relates chiefly to the latter times. Compare chap. viii. 21-23. And thou shalt know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me—The fulfilling of these my words shall be an unde

A. M. 3484. LORD ^p in that day, and shall be
B. C. 520.

^a my people: and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and ^r thou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto thee.

12 And the LORD shall ^s inherit Judah his

^p Chap. iii. 10. — ^q Exod. xii. 49. — ^r Ezek. xxxiii. 33; Ver. 9.
^s Deut. xxxii. 9. — ^t Chap. i. 17. — ^u Hab. ii. 20; Zeph. i. 7.

niable evidence that my mission is divine. And the Lord shall inherit Judah his portion—Shall claim, recover, possess, and delight in Judah, as a man doth in his paternal inheritance. God will give visible tokens that the land of Judea is, in a peculiar sense, his land; and its inhabitants his peculiar people, according to the tenor of the covenant he made with their fathers. And shall choose Jerusalem again—Will have a regard to Jerusalem, as he portion in the holy land, and ^t shall choose Jerusalem again. A. M. 3484.

B. C. 520.

13 ^u Be silent, O all flesh, before the LORD: for he is raised up ^v out of ¹ his holy habitation.

^x Psalm lxviii. 5; Isaiah lvii. 15. — ¹ Heb. the habitation of his holiness, Deut. xxvi. 15; Isa. lxiii. 15.

formerly had. This prophecy will be more fully accomplished at the general restoration of the Jewish nation.

Verse 13. Be silent—Reverence and adore God, and expect the accomplishment of his word. O all flesh—Both Jews and Gentiles. He is raised up out of his holy habitation—God is engaged in this work already, and will not rest till he has accomplished his whole work.

CHAPTER III.

In this chapter, (1.) Zechariah sees Joshua the high-priest standing before an angel of the Lord, as it were soliciting to be admitted to the discharge of his sacred functions, and Satan standing by in the act of opposing him, 1. (2.) The adversary receives a rebuke from the Lord himself, by whose special command Joshua is stripped of his filthy garments, and invested with the priestly robes of service, 2-5. (3.) The angel delivers to him a solemn charge, 6, 7. (4.) A clear and interesting prediction of the coming of the Messiah follows, and of the establishment of his church; and pardon and peace are held forth as the blessed effects of Christ's coming, 8-10.

A. M. 3484. AND he showed me ^a Joshua the
B. C. 520. high-priest standing before the angel of the LORD, and ^b Satan ¹ standing at his right hand ² to resist him.

2 And the LORD said unto Satan, ^c The LORD rebuke thee, O Satan; even the LORD

^a Haggai i. 1. — ^b Psalm cix. 6; Rev. xii. 10. — ¹ That is, an adversary. — ² Heb. to be his adversary.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verse 1. And he showed me—He, that is, the angel, who talked with him, after delivering the message in the preceding chapter, proceeded to another representation; Joshua the high-priest, &c.—We find from Haggai, that Joshua the son of Josedech was at this time high-priest. He stands here as representing the whole Jewish people. Standing before the angel of the Lord—This angel was Christ, or the Logos, mentioned chap. i. 11, and called the Lord in the following verse, whose minister, or servant, the high-priest was, as well as a type of him. And Satan—Or the adversary, as the word may be rendered; standing at his right hand to resist him—That is, to be his accuser, as he is called Rev. xii. 10. "So here he is represented as aggravating the faults of Joshua, the representative of the whole body of the Jews, (see verse 2,) by this means to prevail with God to continue the Jews under the

that ^d hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke ^e thee:—^e is not this a brand plucked out of the fire? A. M. 3484.
B. C. 520.

3 Now Joshua was clothed with ^f filthy garments, and stood before the angel.

4 And he answered and spake unto those

^a Jude 9. — ^d Chapter i. 17; Rom. viii. 33. — ^e Amos iv. 11; Rom. xi. 5; Jude 23. — ^f Isa. lxiv. 6.

power of their adversaries. It was the custom in courts of judicature, for the accuser to stand at the right hand of the accused."—See Lowth, and notes on Job i. 6; and Ps. cix. 6. "It appears to me," says Blayney, "the most probable, that by Satan, or the adversary, is here meant the adversaries of the Jewish nation in a body, or perhaps some leading person among them, Sanballat for instance, who strenuously opposed the rebuilding of the temple, and of course the restoration of the service of the sanctuary, and the re-establishment of Joshua in the exercise of his sacerdotal ministry."

Verses 2-5. And the Lord said, &c.—The Logos, or Son of God, said unto Satan; The Lord—Namely, God the Father; rebuke thee—And not suffer thy mischievous imagination against Jerusalem and the temple to prosper. Even the Lord that hath chosen Jerusalem—Who hath chosen that place for his especial residence. Christ, as a mediator, rather chooses

A. M. 3484. that stood before him, saying, Take away the filthy garments from him. And unto him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, ^s and I will clothe thee with change of raiment.

5 And I said, Let them set a fair ^h mitre upon his head. So they set a fair mitre upon his head, and clothed him with garments. And the angel of the LORD stood by.

^s Isaiah lxi. 10; Rev. xix. 8; Luke xv. 22.—^h Exod. xxix. 6; Chap. vi. 11.—¹ Lev. viii. 35; 1 Kings ii. 3; Ezek. xlv. 16.

to rebuke the adversary in his Father's name than in his own. Is not this a brand plucked out of the fire—"Is not this small remnant returned from captivity," represented here by Joshua, "miraculously rescued from utter destruction, like a brand plucked out of the fire? and can it be thought that God will not preserve them?" Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments—Denoting the sins and pollutions of the people, of whom he was the representative. And he spake unto those that stood before him—Christ spake to the inferior angels, his servants; Take away the filthy garments from him—Remove, or cause them to be removed. These filthy garments those angels removed, but another and superior hand takes away the sins and pollutions signified by that emblem. And he—Namely, Christ, the Lamb of God; said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee—I have, by my merits and Spirit, removed the guilt, power, and pollution of thine iniquity. And I will clothe thee with change of raiment—With other garments, namely, such as are not filthy or polluted, but clean and rich, an emblem of holiness. As the filthy garments denoted the sins of the people, whose representative Joshua was, the taking them away denoted God's pardoning their public and national transgressions, and his restoring them to his favour and protection. "The Jews used to change their garments under any public calamity; which calamity being over, they expressed the change of their condition, and the greatness of their joy, by clothing themselves in garments adapted to their circumstances:" see Calmet. And I said—I, the Lord, further said, or commanded. The LXX. omit these words, prefixing and to the following expression: and the Syriac and Vulgate read, He said, Let them set a fair mitre upon his head—As the new garments put upon Joshua were such as belonged to the high-priest, and were contrived for glory and beauty, Exod. xxviii. 2, so the mitre was the proper ornament for his head. And the angel of the Lord stood by—Namely, Christ, through whose mediation, and at whose command, the above was done.

Verses 6, 7. And the angel of the Lord protested—Solemnly declared; unto Joshua, If thou wilt walk in my ways—If thou wilt diligently observe the commandments of my law; and wilt keep my charge—The special charge and office of the high-priest. Then thou shalt also judge my house—Thou shalt,

6 ¶ And the angel of the LORD protested unto Joshua, saying, A. M. 3484. B. C. 520.

7 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; If thou wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt ⁱ keep my ³ charge, then thou shalt also ^k judge my house, and shalt also keep my courts, and I will give thee ⁴ places to walk among these that ¹ stand by.

8 ¶ Hear now, O Joshua the high-priest, thou and thy fellows that sit before thee: for

^s Or, ordinance.—^k Deut. xvii. 9; Mal. ii. 7.—⁴ Heb. walks. ¹ Chap. iv. 14; vi. 5.

for a long time, be ruler in my temple, and exercise all the authority and jurisdiction which belongs to the high-priest's office; and shalt also keep my courts—Not as a servant, but as the chief, on whom others wait, and at last thou shalt have a place among my angels: so many interpret the following clause. Some, however, render it, And I will appoint thee ministers among those that stand by; and by the ministers, Blayney understands, "not the angels attending upon God's throne, but some of the subordinate priests who attended upon Joshua;" observing, "as it is promised to him that he should be reinstated in the honours of his high office, so it is also added, that he should be waited upon by those inferior priests, whose business it was to officiate in the service of the temple, under the authority of the high-priest. And the same persons are presently after designed, under the name of the companions of Joshua, that sat before him."

Verse 8. Hear now, O Joshua, and thy fellows that sit before thee—The angel directs his speech to Joshua and his assessors, or assistants in council. "Possibly these may have been some of those who were called chief priests; who, though subordinate to the high-priest, were entitled by their rank to assist in his councils."—Blayney. The rabbins call these, of whom doubtless Zerubbabel was one, the heads of the captivity, and the men of the great synagogue, by whom they suppose the Jewish affairs, both ecclesiastical and civil, to have been settled after the captivity, and the canon of the Old Testament to have been completed. The angel bespeaks their attention to what follows, as containing matter of great importance. For they are men wondered at—Hebrew, מופת המה אנשי, men of wonder, or, men of sign are they: men intended for signs or tokens, or typical men, as some render the phrase. Thus Isaiah, walking naked and barefoot, was for a sign and wonder, or rather a type or example, to Egypt and Ethiopia, Isa. xxiv. 3; that is, a sign, or emblem, that they should be carried away without covering. So Ezekiel, in digging through the wall, &c., (as commanded chap. xii. 7–12,) and in not mourning for his wife, chap. xxiv. 24, was to be a sign, type, or emblem, to the Jews: in all which passages the same word, מופת, is used in the original. To this sense the Vulgate translates it here, virī portendentes, men foreshowing, namely, something to come, that is, the men that composed this council, with

A. M. 3484. they are ^mmen^s wondered at: for
B. C. 520. behold, I will bring forth ^mmy servant
The ^oBRANCH.

^m Psa. lxxi. 7; Isa. viii. 18; xx. 3.—^s Heb. men of wonder, or, sign, as Ezek. xii. 11; xxiv. 24.—^m Isa. xlii. 1; xlix. 3, 5; lii. 13; liii. 11; Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24.

Joshua at the head of them, were an emblem, or figure, of the restoration of the church, under the government of the Messiah. Their wonderful deliverance from the Babylonish captivity; the fortitude and resolution which they manifested in returning to Jerusalem, when it lay in ruins; their perseverance amidst the various difficulties, hardships, and perils, which they had to encounter on their journey, and when they arrived in Judea; their preservation among their numerous, powerful, and inveterate enemies; not only rendered them objects of wonder to many, but proper types of the deliverance, restoration, and preservation of the church of God under the Messiah.

The next clause points out the person, of whom Joshua was to be a figure; as the verse following does those of whom his companions were to be representatives, or signs. For behold, I will bring forth my servant the BRANCH—Namely, the Messiah, to whom this title, the BRANCH, is often given in the prophets, as descended from the stock of David: see the places referred to in the margin; in all which the word in the original is צֶמַח, tsemach, as here; and all which texts the Chaldee explains of the Messiah; who is elsewhere called God's servant in an eminent sense, because he was sanctified and sent into the world upon a message of the highest importance. Some, indeed, would explain this passage, and chap. vi. 12, of Zerubbabel; but, as Dr. Blayney justly observes, there is no reasonable ground to conclude that he is designed in either place. "It is true he was a descendant from David, and appointed under the authority of the kings of Persia to be a subordinate governor of the Jews who returned from Babylon, and in that capacity he presided, and took an active part with Joshua the high-priest, and with the chief of the fathers, in forwarding the building of the temple. But there surely does not appear, in what we know of his character or performances, any thing to merit the particular notice imagined to be here taken of him. The same person must needs be intended here as is spoken of under the same title Jer. xxxiii. 5; nor is it conceivable that terms so magnificent as those used in this latter place especially can be applicable to one of so limited power and authority as Zerubbabel enjoyed. Besides, it is evident that the Branch is promised as one that was to come, or be brought forth, and not as one that had already enjoyed his estate, such as it was, for many years past. In short, for these and for many other reasons, it may be concluded against Zerubbabel; and, I think, against any other of less consequence than the great Messiah himself, through whom alone iniquity is put away, and the reign of perfect peace and righteousness is to be established: compare Psa. cxxxii. 17; Isa. iv.

9 For behold the stone that I have A. M. 3484 laid before Joshua; ^p upon one stone B. C. 520 shall be ^q seven eyes: behold, I will engrave

^o Isaiah iv. 2; xi. 1; Jeremiah xxiii. 5; xxxiii. 15; Chap. vi. 12; Luke i. 78.—^p Psa. cxviii. 22; Isa. xxviii. 16.—^q Chap. iv. 10; Rev. v. 6.

2; Jer. xxxiii. 15, 16." The word which here, and in the places above referred to, is translated Branch, is by the LXX. rendered Ανατολή, the east, or sun-rising, from whence it is applied to Christ, Luke i. 78, and is translated there the day-spring. Hence the name of Oriens was probably given to the supposed king of the Jews by the Roman writers: see Tacit. Hist., lib. v. cap. 13.

Verse 9. For behold the stone, &c.—Or, as some render the former part of the verse, For this is the stone which I lay before Joshua; there are in the same stone seven eyes: I will engrave it with its engravings, saith the Lord—There seems to be an allusion in these words to the foundation, or chief corner stone of the temple, which probably was laid with great solemnity in the presence of Joshua. Christ is not only the rod out of the stem of Jesse, and the branch that should grow out of his roots, the fruit of which is excellent and comely for the remnant of Israel that escape the corruption which is in the world, but the foundation of the spiritual temple laid in Zion. And it is here foretold, that when he should be brought forth, seven, that is, many, eyes should be upon him. "The eye of the Father was upon him, to take care of him and protect him, especially in his sufferings. The eyes of all the prophets and Old Testament saints were upon this one stone: Abraham rejoiced to see Christ's day, and he saw it and was glad. The eyes of all believers are upon him, as the eyes of the stung Israelites were upon the brazen serpent. They look unto him and are saved."—Henry. Or, the seven eyes upon this stone may be explained, as the eyes upon the wheels in Ezekiel's vision: they may signify the perfection and plenitude of knowledge and wisdom which were in Jesus Christ for the good of his church, and his ever watchful care of his people: or the various gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, with which he was endued: for he hath the seven spirits of God, as well as the seven stars, Rev. iii. 1; and his eyes are as a flame of fire, piercing through all disguises, and searching the reins and the heart of every human creature, and especially of every one that professes to be his disciple. "The Branch and the Stone," says Dr. Dodd, "are the same; which stone hath seven eyes, because the Messiah is the searcher of hearts, whom God engraved with his engraving; as in John the evangelist, him the Father sealed, endowed him with those gifts, virtues, and powers of the Spirit, which the prophets had foretold should be in the Messiah, by whom, dying on the cross, God removed the iniquity of that land in one day. In a day when every man (verse 10) called his neighbour, &c., that is, when the whole world was in profound peace." But, instead of, Upon one stone shall be seven eyes, Blayney reads, From one stone seven

A. M. 3484. the graving thereof, saith the LORD
B. C. 520. of hosts, and [†]I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day.

^{*} Jer. xxxi. 34; 1. 20; Mic. vii. 18, 19; Chap. xiii. 1.

fountains, the word פַּי signifying a fountain as well as an eye. "It seems," says he, "as if the prophet saw in his vision a stone or rock, set before Joshua, with seven fountains springing out of it, which God says were opened by himself." There is, he thinks, here "a plain allusion to the rock which Moses smote in the wilderness, and brought waters out of it for the refreshment of the people of God; and that rock, St. Paul says, was Christ, 1 Cor. x. 4. In speaking of which transaction, the psalmist says, He opened the rock and the waters gushed out, Psalm cv. 41:" in which passage the same verb, פָּתַח, is used, which in the next clause is translated, I will engrave, &c., which Blayney renders, Behold, I open the passage thereof; that is, the hole or orifice through which the fountains shall flow. Again, it is said, Isa. xli. 18, I will open rivers in the high places, where not only the same verb is used, but is followed by the same preposition as is here placed before the word rendered stone. And it is said chap. xiii. 1, In that day shall there be opened a fountain (the same verb being again used) to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem. For what purpose? for sin and for uncleanness. "This was spoken of the gospel times; and, in like manner, it is here said of the same, And I will remove, or take away, the iniquity of the land in one day, namely, that one day on which Christ died to put away sin by the offering of himself. There cannot, surely, remain a doubt of what is intended, nor that עֲוֹנוֹ must signify fountains of living waters, issuing from Christ. The living waters are the doctrines of the gospel, and the fountains, the dispensers of them, the apostles and evangelists, who are said to be fellow-workers with Christ, and therefore aptly represented by the companions of Joshua. The number seven is frequently used in Scripture to

10 ^{*}In that day, saith the LORD of A. M. 3484.
hosts, shall ye call every man his neigh- B. C. 520.
bour [†]under the vine and under the fig-tree.

^{*} Chap. ii. 11.—[†] 1 Kings iv. 25; Isa. xxxvi. 16; Mic. iv. 4.

denote multitudes, 1 Sam. ii. 5; Jer. xv. 9, &c., &c." It must be observed, however, that both the LXX. and the Vulgate read seven eyes, and not seven fountains.

Verse 10. In that day—In the day of removing the sins of my people; literally referring to the returned captive Jews, and mystically to the whole church in gospel days, when Christ the chief corner stone should have purged away sin and established his church; and when sinners should come to him in repentance and faith, and obtain reconciliation with God and peace of conscience; shall ye call every man his neighbour—Invite, with love and kindness, such as become neighbours by partaking of the same divine grace and blessing of the gospel; under the vine, and under the fig-tree—To associate together in holy duties and godly fellowship, sitting under the shadow of the true vine with delight, and finding its fruits sweet to your taste; as in Judea men used to feast together under the shade, and upon the fruit of their vines and fig-trees. When the guilt and power of iniquity are taken away, and we are in Christ new creatures, we receive precious privileges and blessings, as the fruit of our justification, regeneration, and union with Christ; yea, more precious than the products of the vine or fig-tree. And we repose ourselves in sweet tranquillity under his protection and care, being saved from the fear of evil, and possessed of a peace that passeth all understanding. "This may perhaps have a special reference to that day when the eyes of the Jews shall be fixed upon Christ, the precious corner stone, which they have hitherto rejected. Then their load of national guilt shall at once be removed; and they shall enjoy spiritual peace and temporal security in their own land, as in the days of Solomon."—Scott.

CHAPTER IV.

In this chapter the prophet is called to contemplate a fifth vision of the most sublime and mysterious import. (1.) He sees a candlestick of pure gold, with its seven lamps, communicating, by seven pipes, with a bowl at the top, which serves for a reservoir, and is constantly supplied with oil from two olive-trees standing on each side of the candlestick, 1-3. (2.) He inquires into the meaning of the vision, and receives an answer, which, though it might, in some sort, apply to the circumstances of the temple then building, yet, from the solemnity of the manner and terms used, must be considered as pointing to something far higher, even the final and complete establishment of Christ's holy, catholic church, not by any human means, but by the power of the Holy Spirit, surmounting all obstacles thrown in the way, 4-7. (3.) A special prediction is annexed, that Zerubbabel, who had begun, should have the honour of finishing the building of the temple; the accomplishment of which is made a sign, or proof, of Zechariah's divine mission, 8-10. (4.) The meaning of the seven lamps is explained, and of the two over-hanging branches of the olive-trees on each side of the candlestick, 11-14: see Blayney.

A. M. 3484.
B. C. 520.

AND ^a the angel that talked with me came again, and waked me, ^b as a man that is wakened out of his sleep,

2 And said unto me, What seest thou? And I said, I have looked, and behold ^c a candlestick, all of gold, ¹ with a bowl upon the top of it, ^d and his seven lamps thereon, and ² seven pipes to the seven lamps, which are upon the top thereof:

3 ^e And two olive-trees by it, one upon the right side of the bowl, and the other <sup>A. M. 3484.

B. C. 520.</sup> upon the left side thereof.

4 So I answered and spake to the angel that talked with me, saying, What are these, my lord?

5 Then the angel that talked with me answered and said unto me, Knowest thou not what these be? and I said, No, my lord.

6 Then he answered and spake unto me, saying, This is the word of the LORD unto

^a Chap. ii. 3.—^b Dan. viii. 18.—^c Exod. xxv. 31; Rev. i. 12.
¹ Heb. with her bowl.—^d Exod. xxv. 37; Rev. iv. 5.

² Or, seven several pipes to the lamps, &c.—^e Verses 11, 12; Revelation xi. 4.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verses 1-3. And the angel came again, and waked me—This seems to indicate, that the prophet's attention was very deeply engaged by the foregoing vision; that all the powers of his mind were wholly engrossed by it; so that he had even fallen into a kind of trance, or ecstasy, when he was roused again by the angel, to attend to what follows. And said unto me, What seest thou?—Thus the angel still further excites his attention. And I said, Behold a candlestick of gold—This represented the church of God, Jewish and Christian, set up for the enlightening of this dark world, by diffusing the light of divine truth. The candle, or lamp, is God's, the church is but the candlestick; but it is all of gold, signifying the great worth of the church, composed of the excellent of the earth. This golden candlestick had seven lamps, branching out from it by so many sockets, in each of which was a burning and shining light. The Jewish Church was but one; and though the Jews that were dispersed had probably synagogues in other countries, yet they were but as so many lamps belonging to one candlestick; but now, under the gospel, Christ is the centre of unity, and not Jerusalem, or any one place; and, therefore, seven particular churches are represented, not as seven lamps, but as seven several golden candlesticks, Rev. i. 20. This candlestick had one bowl, or common receiver, on the top, into which oil was continually dropping; and from it, by seven pipes or conduits, it was conveyed to the seven lamps; so that, without any further care, they received oil as fast as they wasted it, and so were kept always burning. And the bowl too was continually supplied, without any care or attendance of man, from two olive-trees, (verse 3,) one on each side of the candlestick, which were so fat and fruitful, that, of their own accord, they poured plenty of oil continually into the bowl. So that nobody needed to attend to this candlestick, to furnish it with oil; it carried not for man, nor waited for the sons of men: the scope of which is to show, that God easily can, and often doth, accomplish his gracious purposes concerning his church by his own wisdom and power, without any art or labour of man. And though sometimes he makes use of instruments, yet he neither needs them, nor is confined to them, but can do his work without them, and will, rather than it shall remain undone.

Verses 4, 5. So I answered, &c.—Namely, after I had seen and discerned; What are these, my lord—Observe how respectfully he speaks to the angel, calling him his lord; those that would be taught, must give honour to their teachers. He saw what these things were, but inquired what they signified. It is very desirable to know the meaning of God's manifestations of himself, and of his mind, both in his word and by his ordinances and providences. The angel answered, &c., Knowest thou not what these be?—This might be said, not with a view of reflecting on the prophet's want of discernment, but merely to excite his attention: so Capellus observes. Blayney, however, thinks that, by this question, the angel meant to censure the prophet's dulness in not perceiving "what a reasoning and reflecting mind, versed in the allegories of prophecy, might in some measure at least have discovered." Thus also Henry: "If he had considered and compared spiritual things with spiritual, he might have guessed at the meaning of these things: for he knew that there was a golden candlestick in the tabernacle, which it was the priest's constant business to supply with oil, and to keep it burning; when, therefore, he saw in vision such a candlestick, with lamps always burning, and yet no priests to attend it, nor any occasion for them, he might discern the meaning of this to be, that though God had set up the priesthood again, yet he could carry on his own work for and in his people without them." And I said, No, my lord—He makes an ingenuous confession of his ignorance.

Verse 6. Then he answered, Not by might nor by power, &c.—That is, Zerubbabel and Joshua, with the Jews under their conduct, shall finish the temple and re-establish the Jewish state, not by force of arms, nor by human power, but by the aid of my providence and grace; just as the lamps are supplied with oil in a secret and invisible manner, without the help of man. Thus the angel answers the prophet's question, "not by descending to an explanation of particulars, but by giving the general purport of the vision; the design being, not to gratify a partial curiosity, but to comfort and encourage an almost desponding people by the assurance that God would, not by those human means, in which they

A. M. 3484. Zerubbabel, saying, ^f Not by ^g might, B. C. 520. nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the LORD of hosts.

7 Who art thou, ^h O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain: and he shall bring forth ⁱ the headstone thereof ^j with shoutings, crying, Grace, grace unto it.

8 Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying,

^f Hosea i. 7.—^g Or, army.—^h Jeremiah ii. 25; Mal. xxi. 21.—ⁱ Psa. cxviii. 22.—^j Ezra iii. 11, 13.—^k Ezra iii. 10. ^l Ezra vi. 15.—^m Chap. ii. 9, 11; vi. 15.

were sufficiently sensible of their own deficiency, but by his own Spirit, render his church triumphant over all opposition.”—Blayney. We may observe further here, that what is done by God’s Spirit, is done by might and power; but this stands in opposition to visible force. Israel was brought out of Egypt, and into Canaan, by might and power: but they were brought out of Babylon, and into Canaan the second time, by the Spirit of the Lord of hosts; working upon the spirit of Cyrus, and inclining him to proclaim liberty to them, and upon the spirits of the captives, inclining them to accept the liberty offered them. It was by the Spirit of the Lord that the people were excited and animated to build the temple, and therefore they are said to be helped by the prophets of God, Ezra v. 2; because by their mouths the Spirit of God spoke to the people’s hearts. It was by the same Spirit that the heart of Darius was inclined to favour and further that good work, and that the sworn enemies of it were infatuated in their counsels, so that they could not hinder it as they designed. Observe, reader, the work of God is often carried on very successfully, when yet it is carried on very silently, and without the assistance of human force: the gospel temple is built, not by might or power, for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but spiritual; namely, the force of truth and love, which, through the Spirit of the Lord, are mighty to pull down strong holds, and bring men’s hearts and lives into captivity to the obedience of Christ. Thus the excellency of the power is of God, and not of man.

Verses 7–9. Who, rather, What art thou, O great mountain—O great obstacle, apparently as insurmountable and immovable as a high mountain. Before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain—Thou shalt sink into nothing. The obstacle shall give way, the difficulty vanish, the opposition cease. Removing mountains, or levelling them into plains, are proverbial expressions, denoting the overcoming the greatest difficulties, and removing all obstacles. So that the angel here encourages Zerubbabel to go on with his undertaking of rebuilding the temple, and restoring the Jewish state, assuring him that all the endeavours of the Samaritans, and of others of the neighbouring people to hinder him, would be fruitless, and that nothing should be able to withstand him. As the words of the text proceed immediately from Jehovah, Blayney thinks they appear

9 The hands of Zerubbabel ^k have A. M. 3484 laid the foundation of this house; B. C. 520. his hands ^l shall also finish it; and ^m thou shalt know that the ⁿ LORD of hosts hath sent me unto you.

10 For who hath despised the day of ^o small things? ^p for they shall rejoice, and shall see the ^q plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel with those seven; ^r they are the eyes of the LORD, more dignified, if considered as expressing the same sense by an interrogation, closed by a brief answer, thus: “What art thou, O great mountain? Before Zerubbabel, a level plain.” He shall bring forth the headstone—Namely, of the temple. He shall lay the top or headstone upon the walls of the temple: agreeably to what is said in the next verse, that he should finish the temple, as well as lay the foundation of it; with shoutings, crying Grace, grace unto it—Which action of Zerubbabel shall be accompanied with the joyful acclamations of the people, as also with their earnest prayers, wishing all prosperity, and a long continuance of it, to the temple, and those that should worship God therein. As if he had said, As the free favour of God began and finished the building, may the same favour ever dwell in it and replenish it. But although this be the literal sense of the passage, it has undoubtedly also a mystical meaning. As Christ is figuratively intended by the stone laid before Joshua, (chap. iii. 9,) so here it is figuratively signified that God would bring forth, or bring into the world, the Messiah, as the top, or headstone, the last or finishing ornament of the church, God’s spiritual house, Eph. ii. 21. To this sense the Chaldee paraphrase expounds the words: “His Messiah shall come forth, who was named from all eternity, and shall obtain the empire of all the kingdoms of the earth.” And St. Jerome tells us upon the place, that the ancient Jews explained it so. His hands also shall finish—He shall have the happiness of seeing the great work, which he hath begun, finished and brought to perfection. And thou shalt know, &c.—These may either be the words of the prophet to Zerubbabel, signifying, that when the prediction now uttered was accomplished, it would evidently appear to have been delivered by a divine commission, in which sense similar words must be understood, chap. ii. 9. Or they may be the words of the angel to the prophet, signifying that when the promise made in the preceding clause was fulfilled, then he would know that God had sent this divine instructor to him, and that the vision was really from God.

^a Isaiah xlviii. 16; Chap. ii. 8.—^b Hag. ii. 3.—^c Or, since the seven eyes of the LORD shall rejoice.—^d Heb. stone of tin. ^e 2 Chron. xvi. 9; Prov. xv. 3; Chap. iii. 9.

Verse 10. For who hath despised—The sense would be plainer if the particle for were omitted, as it is in most other versions; namely, thus: Who hath despised the day of small things? they shall rejoice, &c.—That is, who, or where are they, who despised the small beginnings of my temple, when

A. M. 3484. which run to and fro through the whole earth.
B. C. 520.

11 ¶ Then answered I, and said unto him, What are these ^a two olive-trees upon the right side of the candlestick and upon the left side thereof?

12 And I answered again, and said unto him, What be these two olive-branches which

^b through the two golden pipes ^c empty A. M. 3484.
^d the golden oil out of themselves? B. C. 520.

13 And he answered me and said, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord.

14 Then said he, ^e These are the two ^f anointed ones, ^g that stand by ^h the LORD of the whole earth.

^a Verse 3.—^b Heb. by the hand.—^c Or, empty out of themselves oil into the gold.—^d Heb. the gold.

^e Rev. xi. 4.—^f Heb. sons of oil.—^g Chap. iii. 7; Luke i. 19.
^h Josh. iii. 11, 13; Chap. vi. 5.

the foundations of it were laid again in order to rebuild it? They shall be made glad, or they shall now have occasion to break out into joyful acclamations; instead of sorrowing, as many of them did, Ezra iii. 12, on account of what seemed contemptible in their eyes. In the work of God, the day of small things is not to be despised. God often chooses weak instruments to bring about mighty things: and though the beginnings be small, he can make the latter end greatly to increase. Though many of the Jews undervalued the mean and unpromising appearance of the second temple when it began to be built, yet, it is here foretold, that when finished they should rejoice in it. "By the day of small things," says Blayney, "I suppose to be meant the time when the resources of the Jewish nation appeared in the eyes of many, even well wishers, so small and inadequate to the building of the temple, against a powerful opposition, that they despaired of seeing it carried into effect. Such persons would, of course, rejoice, when the event turned out so contrary to their expectations." Shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel—The perpendicular line with which he should try the finished work; with these seven—In subordination to the divine providence, expressed by the seven eyes which were on that stone. And those that have the plummet in their hand must look up to these eyes of the Lord, must have a constant regard to the divine providence, and act in dependance upon its conduct, and in submission to its disposals. But both the LXX. and the Vulgate render this clause more agreeably to the Hebrew, dividing it into two distinct sentences, thus: They shall rejoice, and see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel. Those seven [namely, eyes] are the eyes of the Lord, which run to and fro through the whole earth; that is, his wise and watchful providence is always attentive to the concerns of his church, and is continually superintending and ordering all events for its benefit. It must be observed, however, that here again, as in chap. iii. 9, (where see the note,) Blayney reads fountains instead of eyes, observing, "The lamps, considered as part of the furniture belonging to the candlestick, that is, the church, can represent no other than the ministers and dispensers of evangelical light and knowledge: in which sense our Saviour says of them, Ye are the light of the world, Matt. v. 14. These, taken in conjunction with their pipes, may not improperly be represented as fountains, or conduits, for conveying and communicating to others the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, with which they are replenished themselves. And as fountains they are said to run to and fro through the whole earth, which was, in an eminent degree, seen in the apostles and first preachers of the gospel; whose sound went into all the earth, and their words unto the ends of the world, Rom. x. 18."

Verses 11-14. Then answered I—Or, Then spake I, the Hebrew word אמר being not only used of giving an answer to a question, but likewise of beginning or continuing a discourse. What are these two olive-trees, &c.—The prophet had learned the meaning of the candlestick and its lamps, and now wants to know what the two olive-trees signify; and no answer being given to his question, he immediately proceeds to ask another; and in the answer given to it he acquiesces. Observe, reader, those that would be acquainted with the things of God, must be inquisitive concerning them. They must inquire of those who understand them, and they shall receive information; and if satisfactory answers be not given them at first, or quickly, let them renew their inquiries, praying for light from God, and the vision shall at length speak, and not lie. The prophet's second question differs a little, yet not much, from the former.

I answered again, says he, What be these two olive-branches?—Two principal branches, one from each tree, extending to the golden candlestick, and communicating to it, through two golden pipes, fastened to the golden bowl, the golden oil, out of themselves—That is, the clear, bright oil, the best of its kind, and of great value. And he answered, Knowest thou not what these be?—If thou knowest the candlestick to be the church, must thou not suppose that the olive-trees and the olive-branches are emblems of the means which God hath provided to communicate to it his truth and grace? The prophet having again acknowledged his ignorance, the angel says, These are the two anointed ones—Hebrew, בני הציור, sons of oil, as in the margin. As by the candlestick we understand the visible church, particularly that of the Jews at that time, for whose comfort this vision was primarily intended, these sons of oil, that stand by the Lord of the whole earth, are the two great ordinances and offices of the magistracy and ministry, at that time lodged in the hands of those two great and good men, Zerubbabel and Joshua. This prince, this priest, were sons of oil, anointed of God, or endued with the gifts and graces of his Spirit, to qualify them for the work to which they were called. They stood before the Lord of the whole earth, to minister to him, and to receive direction from him; and a great influence they had upon the affairs of the church at that time; for their wisdom, courage, and zeal were continually emptying themselves into the golden bowl, to keep the lamps burning; and when they should be removed, others would be raised up to carry on the same work, and Israel should not be left without prince and priest. Thus Grotius, Lowth, Henry, Dodd, and several later interpreters, understand the clause. By the two anointed ones, says Archbishop Newcome, "Zerubbabel and Joshua may be meant; who presided over the temporal and spiritual affairs of the Jews; were the ministers, or vicegerents, of Jehovah; and acted not by their own strength, but by the divine assistance;" verse 6. "It is plain," adds he, "that the golden candlestick is the Jewish state, both civil and religious: and that the oil, with which the lights are supplied, is the Spirit of God, in opposition to human efforts." But though the candlestick here may primarily signify the Jewish Church, yet, in a secondary sense, it was also undoubtedly intended to be a figure of the Christian Church; and Zerubbabel and Joshua were types of the Messiah, and their offices emblematical of his offices, who, as is said chap. vi. 13, sits and rules upon his throne, and is a priest upon his throne: who is not only the anointed one himself, but in his mysterious person, as God and man, is the good olive to his church, supplying it with the golden oil of saving grace, and communicating to believers out of his fulness the unction, or anointing of the Holy Spirit, John i. 16; 1 John ii. 20-27.

Dr. Blayney, however, gives a different explanation of this passage. By the candlestick, indeed, he understands the church of God, both under the Jewish and Christian dispensations: but, in verse 12, instead of two olive-branches, he reads, two orderers of the olive-trees, understanding by the olive-trees "the two dispensations of the law and the gospel, under which were communicated the precious oracles of divine truth, which illuminate the soul, and make men wise unto salvation;" and by the orderers, or directors, of these dispensations, Moses and Christ, the two sons of oil, or anointed ones, that stand by the Lord of the whole earth, fulfilling his will and executing his commands. "Of the latter of these," says he, "it is expressly said, Isa. lxi. 1, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me, &c. Nor do I conceive that any other can be meant by the two witnesses, appointed to prophesy for a certain time, clothed in sackcloth, Rev. xi. 3; the next verse plainly showing, that an allusion is there made to this prophecy of Zechariah, concerning the candlestick and olive-trees, though not with all that accuracy of citation which we should look for at present. These are the two olive-trees and the two candlesticks, standing before the God of the earth, Rev. xi. 4."

CHAPTER V.

In this chapter the prophet is shown two visions, (1.) That of an immense roll, or book, like that which Ezekiel describes, chap. ii. 9, 10, filled with curses, and in the act of flying, to denote the celerity and speed, as well as the certainty with which the thief and false swearer would be visited to their utter destruction, 1-4. (2.) The vision of an ephah, or measure, in which sat a woman representing a nation, whose wickedness was arrived at such a height as required an immediate check. Accordingly a heavy cover is cast over her, and she is carried into exile in a distant land, there to abide the full time allotted for her punishment, 5-11.

A. M. 3484. B. C. 520. THEN I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a flying * roll.

* Ezek. ii. 9.

NOTES ON CHAPTER V.

Verse 1. Then I turned and lifted up—Or, again I lifted up, mine eyes—For the verb שׁוּב, to return, is often used adverbially; and behold a flying roll—That is, a roll of a book, as the expression is Jer. xxxvi. 2; Ezek. ii. 9; the ancient way of writing being upon long scrolls of parchment, which used to be rolled up. This roll contained an account of the sins and punishments of the people, and is described as flying, both because it was open, and to denote the swiftness of God's judgments. Hitherto, from the beginning of this prophecy, "all has been consoling, and meant to cheer the hearts of the Jewish people, by holding forth to them prospects of

2 And he said unto me, What A. M. 3484. B. C. 520. seeest thou? And I answered, I see a flying roll; the length thereof is twenty approaching prosperity. But, lest they should grow presumptuous and careless of their conduct, it was thought proper to warn them of the conditions on which their happiness would depend; and to let them see, that however God was at present disposed to show them favour, his judgments would assuredly fall upon them with still greater weight than before, if they should again provoke him by repeated acts of wickedness." Accordingly, this warning and information are given them by the visions of this chapter, which are of a very different kind from the preceding ones.—Blayney.

Verses 2-4. The length thereof is twenty cubits, &c.—Such scrolls for writing were usually longer

A. M. 3484. cubits, and the breadth thereof ten
B. C. 520. cubits.

3 Then said he unto me, This is the ^b curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth: for ¹ every one that stealeth shall be cut off as on this side, according to it; and every one that sweareth shall be cut off as on that side, according to it.

4 I will bring it forth, saith the LORD of hosts, and it shall enter into the house of the thief, and into the house of ^c him that sweareth falsely by my name: and it shall remain in the midst of his house, and ^d shall consume it with the timber thereof and the stones thereof.

^b Mal. iv. 6.—¹ Or, every one of this people that stealeth holdeth himself guiltless, as it doth.

than they were broad; so this was represented as ten yards in length, and five in breadth. The roll was very large, to show what a number of curses would come upon the wicked. Then said he, This is the curse, &c.—This roll, or book, contains the curses, or judgments, due to sinners, particularly sinners of the Jews, who have been favoured with greater light and privileges than other people, and whose sins, therefore, are the more inexcusable. That goeth over the face of the whole earth—Or rather, of the whole land; for the land of Judea only seems to be here meant. Every one that stealeth shall be cut off as on this side, &c.—The roll was written on both sides, as that mentioned Ezek. ii. 10: and on one side were contained the judgments against stealing, and on the other against false swearing. These two sins are joined together, because in the Jewish courts men were compelled to purge themselves by oath, in case they were accused of theft; and they often would forswear themselves rather than discover the truth. Considering the time when Zechariah prophesied, it seems probable, that those who made use of fraud with respect to what had been dedicated to the rebuilding of the temple, and restoring the service of God, are here particularly referred to. According to Calmet, under the two names of theft and false swearing, the Hebrews and Chaldeans included all other crimes; theft denoting every injustice and violence executed against men, and perjury all crimes committed against God. Instead of on this side, and on that side, Newcome reads, from hence, namely, from the land. And instead of shall be cut off, the Vulgate reads, judicabitur, shall be judged; and Houbigant, shall be punished. It must be acknowledged, however, that the Hebrew word נָקָה, so rendered, rather means, carries himself as innocent, or, asserts himself to be innocent; or, is declared innocent, or, left unpunished, namely, by the magistrate. Blayney therefore translates the clause, Because, on the one hand, every one that stealeth is as he that is guiltless; and, on the other hand, every one that sweareth is as he that is guiltless. On which he observes,

5 ¶ Then the angel that talked A. M. 3484.
with me went forth, and said unto B. C. 520.
me, Lift up now thine eyes, and see what is this that goeth forth.

6 And I said, What is it? And he said, This is an ephah that goeth forth. He said moreover, This is their resemblance through all the earth.

7 And behold, there was lifted up a ² talent of lead: and this is a woman that sitteth in the midst of the ephah.

8 And he said, This is wickedness. And he cast it into the midst of the ephah; and he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof.

^c Lev. xix. 12; Chapter viii. 17; Mal. iii. 5.—^d Lev. xiv. 45.
² Or, weighty piece.

"The reason assigned for the curse going forth through the whole land is, that the good and the bad, the innocent and the guilty, were in every part of it looked upon and treated alike; so that it was time for the divine justice to interpose, and make the proper distinction between them." And it shall enter, &c.—This curse shall come with commission from me; into the house of the thief—Where he had laid up that which he got by theft, thinking to enjoy it to his satisfaction. Or, by his house may be understood his family, estate, and goods: it shall take hold of him, and all that belong to him, and shall never leave them till they are utterly destroyed. And it shall remain in the midst of the house—It shall stick close to them and theirs, as Gehazi's leprosy did to him and his posterity; or, like the leprosy that infects a house, and cannot be purged till the house itself be pulled down.

Verses 5-8. The angel that talked with me went forth—Or rather, went on, as the verb וָיָח often signifies; (see 2 Chron. xxi. 19; Jer. xxv. 32; and so it may signify at the end of this verse, and in the next, where it occurs again. And I said, What is it?—What does this signify, or, what thing is this? And he said, This is an ephah—An ephah was a measure containing somewhat less than our bushel, and consequently too small for a woman to sit in; we must therefore understand here a measure, in the form only of an ephah, but of a larger size, which was probably the reason why Zechariah did not know what it was: and being the measure whereby they bought and sold dry things, it seems to have been intended to denote the unjust dealings of the Jews in buying and selling; their fraud, deceit, and extortion in commerce, were sins abounding among them; as they are among that people at this day. He said moreover, This is their resemblance—Or, as the LXX. render it, This is their iniquity (reading וְיָח, instead of וָיָח) through all the earth—Or, through all the land; that is, by this you may make an estimate of their unjust dealings all over the land. Besides the intimation given by this vision of the ephah, that the dealings of the Jews with each

A. M. 3484. 9 Then lifted I up mine eyes, and
B. C. 520. looked, and behold, there came out two women, and the wind was in their wings;
for they had wings like the wings of a stork:
and they lifted up the ephah between the earth
and the heaven.

° Jeremiah xxix. 5, 28.

other were unjust, its largeness and its going forth corresponded with the iniquities that prevailed in the land, both as exceeding the ordinary measure, and also as continually increasing, so as already to have arisen to such a pitch as made it necessary to repress them. And behold there was lifted up a talent—Or, a huge mass; of lead—This seems to have been intended to denote the weight, or severity, of the judgments here threatened. And this is a woman, &c.—What thou seest besides, is a woman sitting carelessly upon the ephah, and fearing no evil. So Grotius, "super epha, superba et nihil mali metuens." That she appeared at first sitting upon the ephah, is evident from what is said in the following words, namely, that the angel cast her into the midst of the ephah; which implies that she was not there before. And he said, This is wickedness—This woman denotes wickedness: or, this is iniquity itself, or corruption of heart, the mother or spring of thefts, perjuries, and all kind of crimes. Blayney renders it, This is the wicked one. Public states, or societies, are often represented by women, as the mothers of their people, as we see in the ancient coins. By the same analogy, corrupt societies are expressed by harlots, and women of lewd characters; so here, the corrupt state of the Jews is set forth by a wicked woman. And he cast it—Rather, he cast her, into the midst of the ephah—So the LXX., ἐρριψεν αὐτὴν εἰς μέσον τῆς μετρῆς. So also the Vulgate. Newcome renders it, He cast her within the ephah, that is, (as he explains it,) "caused her to contract herself within the compass of the vessel, denoting the check given to her further progress." And he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof—That is, of the ephah, ne quis esset exitus, says Grotius, that there might be no exit, or way of escape. Or to signify, that when a people have filled up the measure of their iniquities, they sink under the weight of their sins, and cannot escape the judgment of God, and that thus it should fare with the Jewish people.

Verses 9–11. Then lifted I up mine eyes, &c.—Great difficulties attend the interpretation of this part of the vision, and commentators are much divided upon it. According to Calmet, the woman enclosed in the ephah denoted the iniquity of Babylon; the mass of lead which fell down upon her was the vengeance of the Lord; and the two women who lifted her up into the air were the Medes and Persians, who destroyed the empire of Babylon. Houbigant, however, observes, "that nobody has yet found out, nor ever will find out, why these women

10 Then said I to the angel that A. M. 3484.
talked with me, Whither do these B. C. 520.
bear the ephah?

11 And he said unto me, To ° build it a house in ° the land of Shinar: and it shall be established, and set there upon her own base.

° Genesis x. 10.

should carry the ephah into the land of Shinar, or of the Chaldees, if Shinar be understood literally, and not metaphorically. The Jews were not again carried captive into the land of the Chaldeans, after the rebuilding of the temple by Zerubbabel; nor can the Chaldeans be understood by the ephah which is carried into the land of Shinar with the woman, who abused it to fraudulent purposes; for the ephah is a Hebrew measure; and this woman, who is kept shut up in the ephah, is carried into a land not her own. Shinar will be more properly understood, as spoken metaphorically of the last captivity, under which the Jews now live; being, in the several kingdoms of the world, in the same state of servitude as they lived in under the kings of the Chaldeans; having their dwelling everywhere, with the deceitful ephah, to denote their usury and fraud. There is no necessity to be anxious about explaining why the ephah was to be carried by two women, and not by one only, or more, for the empire of the Greeks and Romans is not denoted hereby, but two women pertain only to the parable; as it might have seemed too much for one to have carried into a distant country an ephah burdened with lead, and with a woman shut up in it." Archbishop Newcome understands the words in this sense: considering the two women as "mere agents in the symbolical vision;" the meaning of which, he says, seems to be, "that the Babylonish captivity had happened on account of the wickedness committed by the Jews; and that a like dispersion would befall them, if they relapsed into like crimes. Thus the whole chapter would be an awful admonition that multiplied curses, and particularly that dispersion and captivity, would be the punishment of national guilt." Blayney interprets the vision in a similar way. "These, [namely, two women,] and the other circumstances mentioned verse 9, seem to indicate nothing more particular, than that Providence would make use of quick and forcible means to effect its purpose." Hence these women are said to have had wings like the wings of a stork; the stork, like other birds of passage, being provided with strong wings. Though the land of Shinar signifies, as he observes, the land of Babylon, (see Gen. xi. 2,) yet "this does not necessarily imply that Babylon would be the scene of the next captivity; but only that the people, in case of fresh transgression, might expect another severe captivity, like that in Babylon, but of still longer duration. In this manner Egypt is used proverbially for any grievous calamity, inflicted by the judgment of God: see Deut. xxviii. 68; Hos. viii. 13, and ix. 3."

CHAPTER VI.

In this chapter we have, (1.) A vision of four chariots, drawn by horses of different colours, representing the four great empires of the world, rising in succession, and distinguishable, both by their order and by their attributes, 1-8. (2.) The prophet is commanded by God, in the presence of witnesses, and for a memorial to them, to place a crown, or crowns, upon the head of Joshua the high-priest, thereby constituting him a type of Christ, the Branch, whom he proclaims, as about to come to build the spiritual temple of Jehorah, and to preside over it, both as king and priest, for the great purpose of peace, 9-14. (3.) The accession of strangers to assist in building the temple is foretold, and given as a proof of the prophet's divine mission, 15.

A. M. 3484.
B. C. 520.

AND I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold, there came four chariots out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass.

2 In the first chariot were ^a red horses; and in the second chariot ^b black horses;

3 And in the third chariot ^c white horses; and in the fourth chariot grizzled and ^d bay horses.

^a Chap. i. 8; Revelation vi. 4.—^b Rev. vi. 5.—^c Rev. vi. 2.
^d Or, strong.—^e Chap. v. 10.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VI.

Verse 1. And I turned and looked, &c.—"The main design of this eighth and last vision is to confirm the Jews in their faith in, and dependance upon God, by showing them that, weak and defenceless as they seemed to be, they had nothing to fear from the greatest earthly powers, while they remained under the divine protection; since all those powers originally proceeded from the counsels of the Almighty, were the instruments of his providence, and could not subsist, nor act, but under his permission."—Blayney. And behold there came four chariots—Horses and chariots are the usual emblems of conquerors: see Isa. xxi. 7-9; Zech. x. 3. The four chariots, here mentioned, denoted the four great empires, which either had subdued, or were to subdue the greater part of the then known world, namely, the Assyrian, or Babylonian, the Persian, Grecian, and Roman. They are here represented as coming from between two mountains, because mountains are the natural barriers which divide kingdoms; which, though they be strong as brass, are here supposed to be broken through by those that invade and conquer their neighbours. And it is observable, that several of the mighty conquerors of the world owed the beginning of their greatness to their successful passage through the straits of mountains, where a small force might have maintained the passes against a powerful army. Thus the beginning of Alexander's success against the Persians, was his passing without opposition through the straits of Cilicia; through which also the Babylonians and Persians had passed before, when they marched into Syria and Judea.

Verses 2, 3. In the first chariot were red horses—This meant the Chaldean empire, the bloody cruelties of which were signified by the red colour of the horses. This empire being overthrown, and its power extinct, when the prophet had this vision, it is only mentioned by-the-by, for the sake of order, 4 Then I answered ^a and said unto ^b the angel that talked with me, What are these, my lord? A. M. 3484.

B. C. 520.

5 And the angel answered and said unto me, ^c These are the four ^d spirits of the heavens, which go forth from ^e standing before the LORD of all the earth.

6 The black horses which are therein go forth into ^f the north country; and the white

^a Psa. civ. 4; Heb. i. 7, 14.—^b Or, winds.—^c 1 Kings xxii. 19; Dan. vii. 10; Chap. iv. 14; Luke i. 19.—^d Jer. i. 14.

and nothing further is said of it. And in the second, black horses—We find by the Apocalypse, chap. vi. 5, that a black horse was an emblem of famine, or dearth, so that the chariot with black horses seems to have signified the Persian empire, which brought desolation on many countries, as appears from the history of Darius and Xerxes. And in the third chariot white horses—Conquerors used to ride on white horses, when they were triumphing on account of victories gained over their enemies. This, therefore, aptly denoted the almost continual victories of Alexander, who in a few years overturned the Persian empire, and set up the Macedonian. And in the fourth chariot—Representing the Roman empire; grizzled and bay horses—Denoting the various forms of the Roman government.

Verse 5. These are the four spirits of the heavens—Or rather, The four winds, as the word רוחות very frequently signifies, and as it is here rendered in the margin, and also by the LXX. and the Vulgate: that is, these chariots are the four empires in the different parts of the world. Thus Daniel, beginning to foretel the rise of these four great empires, chap. vii. 2, observes, Behold, the four winds of heaven strove upon the great sea. But how, it may be asked, could these chariots be said to be winds? Like strong winds they rushed violently on, and produced great agitations and commotions in the earth, resembling the effects of strong winds, both by sea and land. These winds are said to go forth from standing before the Lord of all the earth, to signify that, as winds are frequently made God's ministers, and fulfil his word, (Psa. cxlviii. 8.) so these empires, as his servants, should do his pleasure, and execute his purposes, whether of judgment or mercy, upon the different nations of the earth. In other words, they should be made subservient to the designs of his providence.

Verses 6, 7. The black horses go forth into the north country—The Persians (signified, as before

A. M. 3484. go forth after them; and the grizzled
B. C. 520. go forth toward the south country.

7 And the bay went forth, and sought to go that they might ^h walk to and fro through the earth: and he said, Get you hence, walk to and fro through the earth. So they walked to and fro through the earth.

8 Then cried he upon me, and spake unto me, saying, Behold, these that go toward the north country have quieted my ⁱ spirit in the north country.

^h Gen. xiii. 17; Chap. i. 10.—ⁱ Judg. viii. 3; Eccles. x. 4.

observed, by the black horses) marched from Persia into Chaldea, which lay north of Judea, and is commonly denominated the north country. And the white go forth after them—Alexander, with his Macedonians, signified, as we have said, by the white horses, marched from Greece through Asia Minor to Babylon, after the Persians, who retired before his victorious army. And the grizzled go forth toward the south country—This probably was intended to denote the Romans conquering Egypt, frequently called the south country in Scripture: see Dan. xi. 6. This was the last country the Romans subdued, under Augustus, whereby they became masters of the greatest part of the known world. And the bay sought to go, &c., that they might walk to and fro through the earth—As the bay horses, as well as the grizzled, belonged to the fourth chariot, representing the Roman empire, (see note on verse 3,) and the bay horses are mentioned after the grizzled, this verse may be intended to describe the ambition of the Romans, especially under the last form of their government, the imperial, to extend their conquests to every quarter of the globe; and the divine permission granted them so to do, signified in the latter part of the verse. Or, as Lowth supposes, a different branch of that empire may be here intended, which should arise and extend its conquests in the latter times; namely, the empire of the Goths and Vandals, whose power rose out of the ruins of the first Roman empire, and who set up the kingdom of the ten horns, mentioned Rev. xiii. 1, and xvii. 3.

Verse 8. Then cried he unto me, Behold, these that go toward the north—Namely, the black horses, denoting the Persian empire; have quieted my spirit in the north country—That is, by conquering the Babylonians, and executing upon them the punishment which they deserved for their cruelty and other crimes, they have satisfied the wrath which I had conceived against that people. So the LXX., ἀνεπαύσαν τὸν θυμὸν μου ἐν γῇ βορρᾶ, they have caused my wrath to cease in the land of the north. Instead of these that go toward the north, it would be better to translate the words, those who have gone toward the north; because it is spoken of the Persians overturning the Babylonian empire, which happened before the prophet was favoured with this vision.

Verses 9–11. And the word of the Lord came unto

9 ¶ And the word of the LORD A. M. 3484.
came unto me, saying, B. C. 520.

10 Take of them of the captivity, even of Heldai, of Tobijah, and of Jedaiah, which are come from Babylon, and come thou the same day, and go into the house of Josiah the son of Zephaniah;

11 Then take silver and gold, and make ^k crowns, and set them upon the head of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high-priest;

12 And speak unto him, saying, Thus speak—

^k Exod. xxviii. 36; xxix. 6; Lev. viii. 9; Chap. iii. 5.

me, &c.—The prophet here proceeds to relate how he was favoured with another revelation, respecting a kingdom very different from the preceding; saying, Take of them of the captivity, &c.—That is, receive from the captivity, from Heldai, from Tobijah, &c. The exiles who remained in Babylon, showed their regard for the temple that was then building, by sending their gifts and oblations to Jerusalem, for carrying on the work, and adorning the temple after it was built. These offerings, it is to be supposed, they sent about the time when the prophet had this vision, by the persons here named, as they did afterward by Ezra and his companions: see Ezra vii. 16, and viii. 25, 26. And go into the house of Josiah—This was probably one who came from Babylon along with those before mentioned, namely, Heldai, &c.; for in other versions the words, which are come from Babylon, are put at the end of the verse. Then take silver and gold—That is, receive from them silver and gold, namely, of that which they had brought for the service of the temple, from those who remained still in Babylon. And make crowns—“That is, cause to be made by the artist.”—Newcome, who observes that Josiah, above mentioned, was probably a worker in gold and silver. Some versions read, not crowns, but a crown. It seems, however, more probable, that “two crowns are here ordered to be made, and both of them to be placed upon the head of Joshua; to signify that the Messiah, the branch, spoken of in the next verse, of whom Joshua was a type, should be both a king and a priest, and so should have a right to wear the two crowns that belonged to these offices. One crown was probably made of silver, and the other of gold; or both silver and gold might be used on the same crown; the silver denoting the human nature of the Messiah, and the gold the divine; or the former the exercise of his offices of priest and king on earth, and the latter the exercise of them in heaven. Or, as some think more probable, both crowns were made of gold, and the silver was employed for some different sacred use, especially as the high-priest’s crown, inscribed with HOLINESS TO THE LORD, was to be entirely made of pure gold.

Verse 12. And speak unto him, saying—Bishop Chandler justly observes, that the prophet’s speech is directed to Joshua only; the two crowns are put

A. M. 3484. B. C. 520. eth the LORD of hosts, saying, Behold ¹the man whose name is The BRANCH; and he shall ³grow up out of his place, ²and he shall build the temple of the LORD:

¹ Luke i. 78; John i. 45.—² Chap. iii. 8.—³ Or, branch up from under him.

only on the head of Joshua; to him only it is said, Behold the man whose name is The Branch—As much as to say, “Behold the sign of the BRANCH, the person whom I promised to David in Solomon, and by the prophets after David to the Jews, by the name of the BRANCH.” “There cannot be a doubt,” says Blayney, “that the same person is meant by the BRANCH here, who is so called chap. iii. 8, and this has been already shown to be, not Zerubbabel, but the Messiah himself; of whom Joshua is made the type, or representative, by the crown placed on his head. For to what end should he have been called in to represent Zerubbabel, who was his co-temporary, and altogether as ready at hand as himself. Nor will the passage, strictly and literally translated, answer to any other but him who was at once both king and priest, and, by uniting both characters in himself, was completely qualified to bring about the counsel of peace, or reconciliation between God and man.” It must be observed, however, that the human nature of our Lord is here chiefly intended by the expression, The man, the BRANCH. For, considered in his divine nature, he is not the branch out of the stem of Jesse, or David, but their root, as he is termed Isa. xi. 10; Rev. v. 5, and xxii. 16. In this his human nature, he was small in his beginning, even as to his kingdom as well as his person; and mean in his appearance, as a mere bud or sprout, but gradually flourishing and becoming great and fruitful. As a branch, he was to be cut off, but would produce sprouts, branches, and trees of righteousness innumerable. He shall grow up out of his place—Out of the tribe and family, and in the place foretold; as if he had said, Though you may suspect the root to be dry and dead, yet assuredly it is not: the branch will spring up, the Messiah, who shall be both priest and king, will make his appearance in due time. The Hebrew, יִצְחָקוֹ יִצְחָק, is literally, He shall spring up, or flourish, from under himself; by his own power, or by the power of his own Spirit, he shall be both stock and stem to himself. The words seem evidently to express his miraculous conception. He shall build the temple of the Lord—As the preceding clause speaks of his person, his conception, and birth, so this describes his work; as if he had said, He it is that stands by you, though unseen, and enables you to build this material temple; which neither Zerubbabel, nor Joshua, nor all the Jews uniting with them, would be able to complete without him. This, however, is a temple far inferior to that spiritual building, the gospel church, which the Messiah will in due time raise, beautify, preserve, and honour; the spiritual house, in which he will dwell, 1 Pet. ii. 4; the temple built on the 13 Even he shall build the temple of the LORD; and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne: and he shall be a priest upon his throne: and the counsel of peace shall be between them both.

¹ Chap. iv. 9; Matt. xvi. 18; Eph. ii. 20, 21, 22; Heb. iii. 3. ² Isa. xxii. 24.—³ Psa. cx. 4; Heb. iii. 1.

foundations laid in Zion, where he will manifest his grace and glory, and be worshipped in Spirit and in truth, 1 Cor. iii. 9–16; 2 Cor. vi. 16; Eph. ii. 19–22.

Verse 13. Even he shall build the temple of the Lord—Here we have a sentence omitted by the LXX., Syriac, Arabic, and one MS., and which Archbishop Newcome proposes to expunge, as being only a different reading of the foregoing clause. “But, in arrest of judgment,” says Dr. Blayney, “I would beg leave to plead, that, in my opinion, the clause is not superfluous, but highly emphatic, implying that EVEN HE, the self-same person, who should build the temple of Jehovah, יהוה, EVEN HE, should have the honour of governing and presiding in it, as both king and priest, in both capacities advancing the peace and prosperity of his people.” Or, perhaps, the prediction is repeated, chiefly in order to confirm the Jews in the assured expectation of what is promised. And he shall bear the glory—The glory of the priesthood and royalty had been divided between the house of Aaron and that of David: but now, he alone shall bear the glory of both. Glory, in general, is a burden, and this double glory would be a double burden; but not too heavy for him to bear who upholdeth all things. He bore the cross, which was his glory, and he bears the crown, an exceeding great and eternal weight of glory. They shall hang on him all the glory of his Father’s house, &c., Isa. xxii. 24. He shall bear such glory that the glory of the latter house shall be greater than that of the former. Thus he shall raise, or lift up (Hebrew, יָרָא) the glory. The glory of Israel hath been thrown down and depressed, but he shall raise it out of the dust. And shall sit and rule upon his throne—He shall have a throne: the government shall be on his shoulders; which denotes both dignity and dominion, exalted honour and extensive power: he hath a name above every name; all power is his in heaven and on earth. And this throne is his: by birth-right; by donation of his Father; by purchase; by conquest: it is his most undoubted right. And its being said that he shall sit and rule upon his throne, signifies at once his royal magnificence, the perpetuity thereof, and the ease with which he shall rule, namely, the world, by his providence, judging and punishing, or sparing and pardoning nations, families, or individuals; or the church, and all the members of it, by his word, especially his laws, his Spirit, and the exercise of discipline. Observe well, reader, Christ, who is ordained to offer sacrifice for us, is authorized to give law to us. He will not save us, unless we be willing he should govern us, Heb. v. 9. God has prepared him a throne in the heavens, and if we

A. M. 3484. 14 And the crowns shall be to He-
B. C. 520. lem, and to Tobijah, and to Jedaiah, and to Hen the son of Zephaniah, ^a for a memorial in the temple of the LORD.

15 And ^r they that are far off shall come and

^a Exod. xii. 14; Mark xiv. 9.

would have any benefit by that, we must prepare him one in our hearts, and be willing and glad that he should sit and rule there, and to him must every thought be brought into subjection. And he shall be a priest upon his throne—With the majesty and power of a king, he has the tenderness and sympathy of a priest, who, being taken from among men, is ordained for men, that he may offer both gifts and sacrifices for men; who can have compassion on the ignorant, &c., Heb. v. 1, 2. In all the acts of his government as a king, he prosecutes his intentions as a priest. Let not those, then, that believe in, and are subject to him, look on his throne, though a throne of glory and of judgment, with terror and amazement. For as there is a rainbow round about the throne, so there is a priest upon the throne. And his office as a priest is no diminution to his dignity as a king. But his dignity as a king gives efficacy to his intercessions and services as a priest. The counsel of peace shall be between them both—Between Jehovah on the one hand, and the man, whose name is the Branch, on the other. That is, the counsel concerning the peace to be made between God and man, by the mediation of the Messiah, shall be, or rather, shall appear to have been, concerted by infinite wisdom, in the covenant of redemption; and that the Father and the Son understood each other perfectly in that matter. So some interpret the words. But it seems more probable that the kingly and priestly offices of Christ are here referred to, and that the meaning is, that the peace made for God's people shall rest on these two offices; that Christ, by his priestly office, should make peace for them with God, and by his kingly office should deliver them from their spiritual enemies: that by the former he should expiate sin, and by the latter extirpate it; that as a priest he should make, and as a king maintain peace.

A. M. 3484. build in the temple of the LORD; and
B. C. 520. ^a ye shall know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto you. And this shall come to pass, if ye will diligently obey the voice of the LORD your God.

^r Isa. lvii. 19; lx. 10; Eph. ii. 13, 19.—^a Chap. ii. 9; iv. 9.

Verses 14, 15. And the crowns—The two crowns before mentioned, made of the gold and silver brought from Babylon, verse 11; shall be to Helem and to Tobijah, &c.—Of these persons we know no more, with any certainty, than their names. For a memorial in the temple of the Lord—Namely, of this transaction, of the pious liberality of those men, who had presented the gold and silver of which they were made, and especially of the Messiah's certain and speedy coming. And they that are far off shall come and build, &c.—Though this verse, in its literal sense, may refer to the Jews who lived in distant parts, and other artificers, coming to Jerusalem to assist in building the material temple, yet, in its mystical and ultimate meaning, it refers to the conversion of the Gentiles to Christ, and to that true temple, the Christian Church, in helping to erect, enlarge, and beautify which, thousands and myriads of the Gentiles have co-operated, and still more, in ages to come, will co-operate. And ye shall know that the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you—And the event of things, which, if not prevented by your disobedience, will be agreeable to my predictions, shall prove to you, beyond all doubt, that I was divinely inspired, and commissioned to declare these things to you: that is, the prediction, as far as it was intended to be understood literally, shall be accomplished in your days; and, in its mystical sense also, it shall be fulfilled in its season: the Gentiles shall come in and be united with you as brethren, and will help you to build the spiritual temple; if ye will diligently obey the voice of the Lord—For I must again desire you to observe, that the accomplishment of these promises depends on the condition of your obedience: for if you rebel and obey not, you shall even be cast out of God's church, shall be deprived of his protection and care, and the Gentiles shall be taken to be his peculiar people in your place.

CHAPTER VII.

In this chapter, (1.) A case of conscience is proposed to the prophet, by some Jews sent from a distant place, concerning fasting, namely, whether they should continue to observe their annual fasts in the fifth and seventh months, which had been appointed on the occasion of the destruction of Jerusalem and the ensuing captivity, 1-3. (2.) The prophet reproves them sharply for their selfish and carnal manner of observing their fasts, regardless of the instructions which God had given them by former prophets, 4-7. (3.) He reminds them how they had been exhorted to the practice of justice, mercy, and love toward each other, how obstinately their fathers had hardened their hearts, and how God, in wrath, rejected their prayers, destroyed or scattered them, and laid their land utterly desolate, 8-14.

A. M. 3486.
B. C. 518.

AND it came to pass in the fourth year of King Darius, that the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah in the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Chisleu;

2 When they had sent unto the house of God Sherezer and Regem-melech, and their men, to pray before the LORD,

3 And to ^a speak unto the priests which were in the house of the LORD of hosts, and to the prophets, saying, Should I weep in ^b the fifth

¹ Heb. to entreat the face of the LORD, 1 Samuel xiii. 12; Chapter viii. 21.—^a Deuteronomy xvii. 9–11; xxxiii. 10; Malachi ii. 7.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VII.

Verses 1–3. The word of the Lord came unto Zechariah, &c.—In this and the next chapter is contained a third and distinct revelation made to Zechariah, about two years after the former; of which the occasion and matter are as follows: A considerable progress having, by this time, been made in the rebuilding of the temple, and affairs going on pretty smoothly, the hopes of the Jewish nation began to revive, and a deputation was sent to inquire of the priests and prophets, whether it was God's will that they should still observe the fast, which had been instituted on account of the destruction of the city and temple by the Chaldeans. To this inquiry, the prophet is directed in these chapters how to answer; and his answer is given not all at once, but, as it seems, by piece-meal, and at several times. For here are four distinct discourses that have reference to this case. In the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Chisleu—This month corresponded with the latter part of our November and the beginning of December. When they had sent—The Hebrew verb here used is in the singular number, he had sent, or one had sent: but our translators very properly interpret it plurally, by the figure termed an enallage of the number, which is often used in the Hebrew; and the Vulgate renders it in the same sense. This is understood by some to be spoken of the Jews who still remained in Chaldea; but it seems more probable that those are meant who dwelt in the towns or villages at some distance from Jerusalem. These sent unto the house of God—That, is unto the temple, where the building was still carried on with success; Sherezer and Regem-melech—Men of note among them; and their men—Servants, or persons of less rank, who accompanied them; to pray before the Lord—To offer up prayers for themselves and their friends. The temple was the only place where they could offer sacrifices and oblations, to which solemn prayers were always wont to be joined. And to speak unto the priests and prophets—It was the office of the priests to resolve any doubts that might arise respecting the worship of God, or any part of his law, whether moral or ceremonial, and the people were commanded to consult them, and to act according to their determination. And since the Prophets Hagmonth, separating myself, as I have done these so many years? A. M. 3486.

B. C. 518.

4 ¶ Then came the word of the LORD of hosts unto me, saying,

5 Speak unto all the people of the land, and to the priests, saying, When ye ^e fasted and mourned in the fifth ^d and seventh month, ^e even those seventy years, did ye at all fast ^f unto me, even to me?

6 And when ye did eat, and when ye did

^b Jer. lii. 12; Chapter viii. 19.—^c Isaiah lviii. 5.—^d Jer. xli. 1; Chapter viii. 19.—^e Chapter i. 12.—^f Romans xiv. 6.

gai and Zechariah were at this time residing in Jerusalem, it was proper to inquire of them, who might probably give them an immediate answer to their inquiry from God himself. Should I weep in the fifth month—The fast in the fifth month was kept because in that month, answering to our month of July, the city and temple were burned by the Chaldeans, 2 Kings xxv. 8; in memory of which grievous judgment, the people instituted a solemn fast, which, it appears, they had observed from that time until the times here spoken of; refraining from all worldly business and pleasure, and employing themselves in the religious exercise of prayer and humiliation: see chap. xii. 12–14. The question they now proposed, was, whether it were proper for them still to continue this fast, when the ecclesiastical and civil state was in a great measure restored, and the judgment for which they mourned was removed.

Verses 4–6. Then came the word of the Lord unto me—When these men had proposed their case, and were expecting the priests' answer, God commissioned his prophet to give them the answer contained in the subsequent part of this and in the following chapter; saying, Speak unto all the people of the land—Let all the people in general, and not only those who have proposed the question, know what I am now about to say to thee, in answer to it. When ye fasted and mourned in the fifth and seventh month—"The Jews not only observed those fasts which were instituted by God himself, but likewise added others, in commemoration of great calamities. The exiled Jews instituted four of these fasts; one in the fourth month, (June 17,) in commemoration of the breach of the wall, mentioned Jer. lii. 7; one in the fifth month, (July 4,) in commemoration of the burning of the temple, Jer. lii. 12; one in the seventh month, (September 3,) for the murdering of Gedaliah, Jer. xli. 2; and one in the tenth month, (December 4,) in commemoration of the beginning of the siege, 2 Kings xxv. 1. These fasts were observed, not only in their captivity, but likewise in Judea, between the reigns of Cyrus and Darius the son of Hystaspes; the Jews therefore, as we have remarked, particularly inquired concerning the observation of the fast on account of the burning of the temple, because that temple was now

A. M. 3486. drink, ² did not ye eat for yourselves,
B. C. 518. and drink for yourselves?

7 ³ Should ye not hear the words which the LORD hath cried ⁴ by the former prophets when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, and the cities thereof round about her, when men inhabited ⁵ the south and the plain?

8 ¶ And the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, saying,

9 Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying,
¹ Execute ⁶ true judgment, and show mercy and compassions every man to his brother :

² Or, be not ye they that, &c.—³ Or, Are not these the words.
* Heb. by the hand of, &c.—⁴ Jer. xvii. 26.—⁵ Isa. lviii. 6, 7; Jer. vii. 23; Mic. vi. 8; Chapter viii. 16; Matthew xxiii. 23.
⁶ Heb. Judge judgment of truth.—¹ Exod. xxii. 21, 22; Deut. xxiv. 17; Isaiah i. 17; Jeremiah v. 28.

rebuilding; for they might doubt whether it was not improper to retain it any longer, as the reason had ceased which gave rise to it; or, whether the commemoration of past calamities was not of great utility to the morals of mankind." See Grotius, and Calmet's Dictionary on the word FASTS. Did ye fast at all unto me—Blayney renders it, Did ye fast any fastings of mine? Or, Did ye fast my fastings, mine? When ye fasted, were those fastings observed as mine, my ordinances? No: you did not fast with an intention to obey me, or from religious motives, and with sincere purposes of repentance and reformation. You lamented more the losses, inconveniences, and miseries you suffered, than the sinfulness of your conduct which brought these calamities upon you. And when ye did eat, did ye not eat for yourselves?—Did you not seek your own pleasure and convenience, and not my glory? I was as little regarded by you in your fasts as in your feasts.

Verse 7. Should ye not hear the words—You needed not to have thus inquired, had you regarded the words spoken by my prophets, who have borne testimony to the real excellence and absolute necessity of obedience to the great and momentous precepts of my law, and who have called for true repentance and sincere love to God and man, with their proper fruits, and have shown how light and insignificant all ceremonies and formal services are in comparison thereof. When Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity—He puts them in mind of the reproofs, warnings, and exhortations of Isaiah, Jeremiah, and others of the former prophets, delivered to them when they were in a state of comparative prosperity, in which state they would have been continued, if they had hearkened to these prophets, and been obedient to the Lord's voice uttered by them. As if he had said, This is what you should have done on your fast-days; it was not enough to weep and separate yourselves on those days in token of your sorrow for the judgments that had come upon you; but you should have searched the Scriptures of the prophets, that you might have seen

10 And ¹ oppress not the widow, A. M. 3486.
nor the fatherless, the stranger, nor B. C. 518.
the poor; ² and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart.

11 But they refused to hearken, and ¹ pulled ⁶ away the shoulder, and ⁷ stopped ^m their ears, that they should not hear.

12 Yea, they made their ⁿ hearts as an adamant-stone, ^o lest they should hear the law, and the words which the LORD of hosts hath sent in his Spirit ^a by the former prophets: ^p therefore came a great wrath from the LORD of hosts.

* Psa. xxxvi. 4; Mic. ii. 1; Chap. viii. 17.—¹ Neh. ix. 29; Jeremiah vii. 24; Hos. iv. 16.—⁶ Heb. they gave a backsliding shoulder.—⁷ Heb. made heavy.—^m Acts vii. 57.—ⁿ Ezekiel xi. 19; xxxvi. 26.—^o Neh. ix. 29, 30.—^a Heb. by the hand of. ^p 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16; Dan. ix. 11.

what was the ground of God's controversy with your fathers, and might have taken warning by their miseries, not to tread in the steps of their iniquities. You ask, shall you do as you have done in fasting? No; you must do that which you have not yet done; you must repent of your sins, and reform your lives; that is it that we now call you to, and it is the same that the former prophets called your fathers to. To affect them the more with a sense of the mischief that sin had done them, and to bring them to true repentance, he reminds them of the former flourishing state of their country; Jerusalem was then inhabited, and in prosperity, but is now desolate and in distress; the cities round about, that are now in ruins, were then inhabited too, and in peace; the country likewise was very populous. But then God by the prophets cried to them, as one in earnest, and was importunate with them to mend their ways, and their doings, or else their prosperity would soon be at an end. Now, says the prophet, you should have taken notice of that, and have inferred, that what was required of them for the preventing of the judgments, and which they did not perform, is required of you for the removal of the judgments; and if you do it not, all your fastings and weeping signify nothing. The south was that tract of land called the wilderness of Judea, Matt. iii. 1; part of which, or near to it, was the hill country, mentioned Josh. xxi. 11; Luke i. 39. The LXX. here render it Opewn, the hill country. The plain was that open country, called the plains of Jericho, 2 Kings xxv. 5; and the plain of the valley of Jericho, Deut. xxxiv. 3; and reached as far as the salt sea, or the lake of Asphaltites, called the sea of the plain, Deut. iii. 17; compare Jer. xvii. 26.

Verses 9–12. Thus speaketh the Lord of hosts—Or did speak, that is, to your fathers, and thus he speaks to you now; Execute true judgment—I often put your fathers in mind that judgment and mercy were more acceptable to me than fasting, or any external performances; (see the margin;) and I repeat the same admonition to you of the present age. And let none of you imagine evil against his brother

A. M. 3486. 13 Therefore it is come to pass, that
B. C. 518. as he cried, and they would not hear;
so ^a they cried, and I would not hear, saith the LORD of hosts:

14 But ^r I scattered them with a whirlwind

^a Prov. i. 24-28; Isaiah i. 15; Jer. xi. 11; xiv. 12; Mic. iii. 4.
^r Deut. iv. 27; xxviii. 64; Ezek. xxxvi. 19; Chap. ii. 6.

&c.—Neither think ill of, nor wish ill to, nor plot evil against one another. But they refused to hearken—But your fathers refused to obey the admonitions of the former prophets, and were often reproved by them for their refractory disposition; and pulled away the shoulder—Withdrew their shoulder from the yoke of the law. The metaphor is taken from oxen that refuse to put their necks under the yoke. See the margin. Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant-stone—So that no arguments could make any impression upon them; lest they should hear the law—Of God by Moses, which they were peremptorily required to do, but to do which they as peremptorily refused; and the words—The counsels and commands; which the Lord hath sent in his Spirit by the former prophets—Inspired and commissioned his prophets to declare; therefore—For this great obstinacy; came a great wrath—Which consumed the whole land, and burned against the people that had inhabited it ^s seventy years together in Babylon; from the Lord of hosts—In all among all the nations ^a whom they A. M. 3486.

knew not. Thus ^r the land was de- B. C. 518.
solate after them, that no man passed through nor returned: for they laid ^a the ^s pleasant land desolate.

^a Deut. xxviii. 33.—^r Leviticus xxvi. 22.—^s Daniel viii. 9.
^s Heb. land of desire.

which the hand of the Lord was most evidently seen, rendering unto them according to their ways.

Verses 13, 14. Therefore—On this very account; as he cried—As I, by my Spirit in my prophets, called, warned, entreated, and urged them to repent, obey, and live, but they would not; so they cried—In their deep distress, and amidst their overwhelming calamities; and I would not hear—Would not answer, or regard their prayer. But I scattered them—Cast them out of their habitations, and dispersed them through distant countries; with a whirlwind—Suddenly and irresistibly; among all the nations—All the heathen, that hated them and their ways. Thus the land—Once flowing with milk and honey; once full of cities, men, and cattle; was desolate after them—Became waste as a wilderness after they were cast out; that no man passed through—An entire riddance was not only made of its inhabitants, but the very highways were desolate, so that none passed and repassed: and that which was before a pleasant land, became a mere desert.

CHAPTER VIII.

The prophet, having accounted for God's past severity to the Jews, proceeds, in this chapter, (1.) To inform them, that the anger of the Lord was now appeased; and that he was again disposed to be gracious unto his people, and to restore Jerusalem, 1-8. He therefore, (2.) Exhorts them to proceed vigorously with the building of the temple, and assures them that they would, from that instant, experience a happy revolution in their affairs, 9-15. (3.) He renews his exhortation to the practice of moral righteousness, and promises that, on that condition, their fasts should be turned into joyful feasts; and they should be so distinguished by the divine favour, that many nations would be eager to embrace their religion, and sue for their alliance, 16-23.

A. M. 3486. A GAIN the word of the LORD of
B. C. 518. hosts came to me, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^a I was jealous for Zion with great jealousy, A. M. 3486.

and I was jealous for her with great B. C. 518.
fury.

^a Nahum i. 2;

Chapter i. 14.

NOTES ON CHAPTER VIII.

Verse 2. I was jealous for Zion with great jealousy—With great care that she should not, as formerly, sin against my love and her own welfare, and with a great desire to do her good, and rescue her from her enemies. Jealousy is properly the passion of a lover, or husband, made up of love, care, and anger, in their highest degrees, for his beloved, and against all that he thinks hurtful to her. Thus God had greatly loved Zion, had been careful of her honour and welfare, and displeased with her sins, which first hurt her, and then with the Chaldeans, who violated her. And I was jealous for her—Or toward, or against her, as לה may be rendered; with great fury—Hebrew, חמה, heat, or wrath, namely, for her sins. In a note on chapter i. 14. Blayney gives it as his opinion, that the jealousy there spoken of was God's resentment against his people for their disloyalty and misbehaviour toward him. "In this opinion," he here says, "I am confirmed by the present passage, where not the least mention is made of the persecuting nations. That

A. M. 3486. B. C. 518. 3 Thus saith the LORD; ^b I am returned unto Zion, and ^c will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and Jerusalem ^d shall be called, A city of truth; and ^e the mountain of the LORD of hosts, ^f The holy mountain.

4 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^g There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand ^h for very age.

5 And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets A. M. 3486. B. C. 518. thereof.

6 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; If it be ² marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in these days, ^h should it also be marvellous in mine eyes? saith the LORD of hosts.

7 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, ⁱ I will save my people from the east country, and from ³ the west country.

8 And I will bring them, and they shall

^b Chap. i. 16.—^c Chap. ii. 10.—^d Isa. i. 21, 26.—^e Isa. ii. 2, 3.—^f Jer. xxxi. 23.—^g 1 Sam. ii. 31; Isa. lxx. 20, 22; Lam. ii. 20; v. 11-14.—^h Heb. for multitude of days.—ⁱ Or, hard, or, difficult.

^h Genesis xviii. 14; Luke i. 37; xviii. 27; Romans iv. 21. ⁱ Isa. xi. 11, 12; xliii. 5, 6; Ezek. xxxvii. 21; Amos ix. 14, 15. ³ Heb. the country of the going down of the sun, Psa. l. 1; cxiii. 3; Mal. i. 11.

God's jealousy bespeaks wrath toward the object of it, needs no other proof than his own words, Num. xxv. 11."

Verse 3. I am returned unto Zion—"I have punished her infidelities with all the rigour of despised and abused love; but, though sensible of her fault, my tenderness has continued, and my love is rekindled for her, upon her change in conduct, and return in true repentance to me. I have received her, restored my love to her, and will render to her my former kindnesses." And will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem—Once more, as of old, I will manifest my presence and fix my residence there: according to my promise, repeated to my people, Jerusalem shall be my dwelling-place: see the note on chap. ii. 10. Jerusalem shall be called, A city of truth—That is, it shall be such: the truth of God shall be known, believed, loved, and adhered to therein; the true God, and he only, shall be worshipped there, and that in sincerity and truth, and in the manner which he hath prescribed. Its citizens shall love and speak the truth, shall practise and execute true justice and judgment, and be faithful to Jehovah; and the mountain of the Lord, The holy mountain—On account of the pure and holy worship performed there, and the holy conduct of its inhabitants. We see a shadow of the accomplishment of this prophecy in the Jews, after their return from captivity; but this faithful city, this city of truth and holiness, in the strictness of the letter, is no other than the Christian Church, that chaste and faithful spouse of Jesus Christ, Eph. v. 27.

Verses 4, 5. There shall yet old men, &c., dwell in Jerusalem—Namely, both at this time and afterward. Formerly war, or famine, or pestilence, or wasting diseases cut off men and women before they grew to old age; but now it shall be otherwise: I will bless the people with a state of peace, and with health and long life. And every man, or, every one, man or woman, with his staff in his, or her, hand for very age—It shall not be from weakness and diseases that they lean upon their staves, but mere old age shall bring them to do it. And the streets, &c., shall be full of boys and girls—Strong, brisk, and lively; playing in the streets—As in a time of perfect peace and security.

Verses 6, 7. If it be marvellous—If these things promised appear difficult, and in a manner impossible; in the eyes of the remnant of this people—In the judgment and opinion, or rather to the unbelief, of this people, who are few in number, exceedingly poor, and perpetually surrounded with dangers; in these days—Which are days of small things; should it also be marvellous in mine eyes—Impossible, or so much as difficult to me, who am the Almighty God. Thus saith the Lord of hosts—Here God engages his almighty power to make good his promise. Behold, I will save my people—Or, bring them safe; from the east country—From Persia and Media, which lay east from Jerusalem, and were now masters of Babylon; and from the west country—From the countries of Europe, in which many of the Jews were, or would afterward be dispersed. The original words may be literally rendered, From the rising to the going down of the sun, including all parts of the world. This implies the general restoration of the Jewish nation from all their dispersions: an event foretold by most of the prophets of the Old Testament: see note on Isa. xi. 11. The west country here mentioned, has a particular relation to their present dispersion, great numbers of them being, in these latter ages, settled in the western parts of the world. "The Jews, upon the completion of the Babylonish captivity, returned from the north, or from the east, but not from the west: nor can any other time here be pointed out, than the last return of the Jews; when they shall flow from all parts of the world to the New Jerusalem, and there constitute a new republic, the fame of whose sanctity shall allure and draw to it many nations, as is foretold at the end of this chapter. We cannot understand this either of the Jews or of the Gentiles, who embraced the faith upon the preaching of the apostles. Not of the Jews, because the Lord did not save at that time the Jewish nation, which he was about to disperse in a very short period;—not of the Gentiles, because the Gentiles were not the people of God, (my people,) before he had called them from the east and from the west."—Dodd.

Verse 8. And I will bring them—Though many things interpose to hinder, none shall prevent their returning; I will lead the way, guard them in it

A. M. 3486. dwell in the midst of Jerusalem ;
B. C. 518. ¹ and they shall be my people, and I will be their God, ¹ in truth and in righteousness.

9 ¶ Thus saith the LORD of hosts ; ^m Let your hands be strong, ye that hear in these days these words by the mouth of ⁿ the prophets, which were in ^o the day that the foundation of the house of the LORD of hosts was laid, that the temple might be built.

10 For before these days ⁴ there was no ^p hire for man, nor any hire for beast ; ^a neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in because of the affliction : for I set all men every one against his neighbour.

11 But now I will not be unto the residue of this people as in the former days, saith the LORD of hosts.

⁴ Jeremiah xxx. 22 ; xxxi. 1, 33 ; Chap. xiii. 9.—¹ Jer. iv. 2.
^m Haggai ii. 4 ; Verse 18.—ⁿ Ezra v. 1, 2.—^o Haggai ii. 18.
^a Or, the hire of man became nothing, &c.—^p Haggai i. 6, 9, 10 ;
ii. 16.—⁴ 2 Chron. xv. 5.

supply their necessities, give strength to the weak and support to the dejected, and bring them safe to the end of their journey. And they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem—They shall inhabit their capital city as in old times. And they shall be my people, &c.—They shall duly perform their duty to me, and I will perform my promises to them ; they shall truly worship me, and I will protect and bless them. In truth and in righteousness—If we refer these words to God only, the word righteousness is equivalent to mercy, as it is often used ; and, joined with truth, implies God's faithfulness in performing his gracious promises. Or, this may be understood of the people, implying that, as God was faithful to them, so they should live in obedience to him.

Verses 9, 10. Let your hands be strong—Be of good courage, and go on with resolution and perseverance in the work you have begun, the rebuilding of the temple, since you have received such assurances from God's prophets, even from the very first of your entering upon it, that he would prosper you in it, enable you to finish it, and bless you on account of your labour bestowed on it. Ye that hear these words of the prophets—He refers to the prophecies of Haggai, as well as those of Zechariah ; which were in the day, or, who spake in the day, that the foundation of the house was laid—The prophet speaks of the carrying on of the building as if it were the laying a new foundation : see Hag. ii. 18. For before these days there was no hire for man, &c.—Or rather, There was no reward for man, nor any reward for beast : so the word שָׂכָר, here used, often signifies ; that is, the fruits of the earth would not pay for the labour of those who cultivated it : see the margin. For I set all men every one against his neighbour—I suffered many

12 ^r For the seed shall be ^b prosperous ; the vine shall give her fruit, and ^e the ground shall give her increase, and ^t the heavens shall give their dew ; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things.

13 And it shall come to pass, that as ye were ^a a curse among the heathen, O house of Judah, and house of Israel ; so will I save you, and ^z ye shall be a blessing : fear not, but ^r let your hands be strong.

14 For thus saith the LORD of hosts ; ^z As I thought to punish you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith the LORD of hosts, ^a and I repented not :

15 So again have I thought in these days to do well unto Jerusalem and to the house of Judah : fear ye not.

^r Hos. ii. 21, 22 ; Joel ii. 22 ; Hag. ii. 19.—^b Heb. of peace.
^e Psa. lxxvii. 6.—^t Hag. i. 10.—^a Jer. xlii. 18.—^z Gen. xii. 2 ; Ruth iv. 11, 12 ; Isa. xix. 24, 25 ; Zeph. iii. 20 ; Hag. ii. 19.
^r Verse 9.—^z Jer. xxxi. 28.—^a 2 Chron. xxxvi. 16 ; Ch. i. 6.

molestations to be given you. The enemies of the Jews ceased not to molest them from without, Ezra iv. 1, &c. ; and civil dissensions, it seems, prevailed within.

Verses 11–13. But now I will not be as in the former days—But now, seeing that ye have proceeded in rebuilding my temple, I will order, by my divine providence, that things shall happen otherwise to you than they did before, or that your affairs shall be more prosperous. For the seed shall be prosperous—This in the Hebrew is, For the seed shall be of peace, which seems intended to express that they should have peaceable times, or be a seed or nation at peace. And, as ye were a curse—A standing form of imprecation ; among the heathen—Who wished that their enemies might be as miserable as the Jews. This was to be changed into a blessing, to the contrary effect ; May you be as happy as the Jews who are restored. See Grotius and Calmet. O house of Judah and house of Israel—By Israel may be understood here those of the ten tribes who returned to Judea with the two tribes of Judah and Benjamin. But the mentioning both Judah and Israel, which had been so long separated, shows that both the curse and the blessing here spoken of, in their ultimate sense, belong to the whole body of the Jews, who, as they are public instances of God's judgments now, so shall they be hereafter of his blessings ; namely, at the general restoration and conversion of that nation, to which several promises in this chapter relate.

Verses 14, 15. As I thought to punish you—As my wisdom saw it to be fit and necessary to punish your nation ; and I accordingly did punish it, when your fathers transgressed my laws in such a manner that my justice and wisdom could no longer suffer

A. M. 3486. B. C. 518. 16 ¶ These are the things that ye shall do; ^b Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour; ^c execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates:

17 ^c And let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbour; and ^d love no false oath: for all these are things that I hate, saith the LORD.

18 ¶ And the word of the LORD of hosts came unto me, saying,

19 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; ^e The fast of the fourth month, ^f and the fast of the fifth, ^g and the fast of the seventh, ^h and the fast of the tenth, shall be to the house

^b Chap. vii. 9; Verse 19; Eph. iv. 25.—^c Heb. judge truth, and the judgment of peace.—^d Proverbs iii. 29; Chap. vii. 10. ^e Chap. v. 3, 4.—^f Jer. lii. 6, 7.—^g Jer. lii. 12, 13; Chapter vii. 3, 5.—^h 2 Kings xxv. 25; Jer. xli. 1, 2.

it; So again, &c.—So now my wisdom sees it to be fit, since you have been reformed by your sufferings, that I should be favourable to you, bestow my blessings upon you, and protect you from your enemies.

Verses 16, 17. These are the things that ye shall do, &c.—But these my promises of good to you are conditional, and the performance of them will depend upon your observing the laws of justice and righteousness; Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour—Let no one deceive another by guile or falsehood. Execute the judgment of truth—True judgment; and peace in your gates—Use all means to restore and establish peace among you. Or, Let those who have the administration of justice committed to their charge endeavour to search out the truth from the witnesses, in the trials which come before them; and decide according to the law, and do all in their power to uphold truth and integrity, and maintain the public peace. The judges, it is to be remembered, used to execute their office at the gates of each city, and therefore it is said here, Execute judgments, &c., in your gates. Let none of you imagine evil in your hearts—See note on chap. vii. 10. And love no false oath—See note on chap. v. 3, 4. For all these are things which I hate—God, as he essentially, by his nature, loves that which is good and excellent, so must he hate that which is the contrary.

Verse 19. The fast of the fourth month and of the fifth, &c.—See the note on chap. vii. 5. The siege of Jerusalem was begun in the tenth month, and in the fourth of the year following the city was taken. God here informs the people, by his prophet, in answer to the question proposed, chap. vii. 3, that they might now disuse these fasts, and lay aside the mournful ceremonies with which they had been solemnized, the judgments, which had given occasion to them, being removed. Therefore—Rather, but, love the truth and peace—But take care to have a regard to truth in your dealings and conversation with each other; and cultivate a meek and peaceable disposition; which will be far more pleasing to

of Judah ⁱ joy and gladness, and ^j cheerful ^k feasts; ^l therefore love the truth and peace. A. M. 3486. B. C. 518.

20 Thus saith the LORD of hosts: It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities:

21 And the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, ¹ Let us go ² speedily ³ to pray before the LORD, and to seek the LORD of hosts: I will go also.

22 Yea, ^m many people and strong nations shall come to seek the LORD of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the LORD.

23 Thus saith the LORD of hosts; In those

^b Jeremiah lii. 4.—ⁱ Esther viii. 17; Isa. xxxv. 10.—^j Or, solemn, or, set times.—^k Verse 16.—^l Isa. ii. 3; Mic. iv. 1, 2. ^m Or, continually.—ⁿ Heb. going.—^o Heb. to entreat the face of the LORD, Chap. vii. 2.—^p Isa. lx. 3, &c.; lxvi. 23.

God than any of your outward performances. Such divine instructions as these prepared men's minds for the reception of the gospel. See Jer. xxxi. 33.

Verses 20–22. It shall yet come to pass, &c.—The design of this and the three following verses is evidently to show the high degree of estimation in which Jerusalem and the Jews would hereafter be held, by foreign nations, when those among them, who were piously disposed to worship Jehovah the true God, would come to worship him at Jerusalem, as a place of peculiar sanctity; and those who wanted protection would humbly sue to the Jews for it, convinced that the men of that nation were especial objects of divine favour. It must be observed, however, that though the prediction contained in these verses might, in the primary sense, refer to those times of the Jewish republic which should precede the coming of the Messiah, and to the proselytes, which should then be made to the Jewish religion; yet the expressions are such, that it can scarce be doubted that the times of the gospel are also and more especially intended, when many more, of various nations, should be brought to the knowledge of the true God, and engaged to worship him in an acceptable manner. There shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities—Great multitudes of different cities and nations. Saying, Let us go speedily to pray before the Lord—The expressions allude to the Jews going up in companies to Jerusalem at the solemn feasts. I will go also—So every single person shall express his willingness to go along with them. Many people, &c., shall come to seek the Lord in Jerusalem—Understanding the words literally, we find the first-fruits of these mentioned Acts ii. 10–12; but mystically Jerusalem means the church of Christ. To pray before the Lord—To perform all parts of gospel worship.

Verse 23. In those days ten men—That is, many men, a definite number being put for an indefinite. Out of all languages of the nations—From many

A. M. 3486. days it shall come to pass, that ten
B. C. 518. men shall ^atake hold, out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold

^a Isaiah iii. 6; iv. 1.

different and remote countries, no nation being any longer excluded; shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew—Christians are sometimes called by the name of Jews, as being confessors of the true religion, and those to whom the promises, made to the fathers of the Jewish nation, chiefly belong. In this sense especially the word is here to be taken.

of the skirt of him that is a Jew, A. M. 3486.
saying, We will go with you: for B. C. 518.
we have heard ^othat God is with you.

^o 1 Cor. xiv. 25.

To take hold of another is a gesture of entreating his friendly assistance: see the notes on Isa. iii. 6, and iv. 1. The meaning of the passage, therefore, is, that the heathen should apply themselves to the Christians, particularly to Christian pastors and ministers, for instruction, in order to qualify themselves for admittance into the church.

CHAPTER IX.

In this chapter, (1.) The prophet announces the fate of the Syrians, Sidonians, and Philistines, contrasted with the better prospects of the Jewish nation, 1-8. (2.) He foretels the coming of the Messiah to Jerusalem, and the peace of his kingdom, 9, 10. (3.) Predicts the restoration of Israel and Judah, together with a series of glorious victories, and great prosperity, 11-17.

A. M. 3494. THE ^aburden of the word of the
B. C. 510. LORD in the land of Hadrach, and ^bDamascus shall be the rest thereof:
when ^cthe eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the LORD.

2 And ^dHamath also shall border thereby;
^eTyrus and ^fZidon, though it be very ^gwise.

^a Jer. xxiii. 33.—^b Amos i. 3.—^c 2 Chron. xx. 12; Psalm cxlv. 15.—^d Jeremiah xlix. 23.—^e Isa. xxiii.; Ezek. xxvi.; xxvii.; xxviii.; Amos i. 9.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IX.

Verse 1. The burden, &c.—A heavy judgment appointed of God to be borne: or, a prophecy of a calamitous kind. See the note on Isa. xiii. 1. The word of the Lord in the land of Hadrach—Hadrach is not elsewhere mentioned as the name of a country; the context however shows it must have been some part of Syria, of which Damascus was the capital city. According to some Jewish rabbis it was a place near Damascus. The prophecy is thought to relate to Alexander the Great conquering Syria; Damascus being at the same time betrayed to him, and all Darius's treasure, which was laid up there, delivered into his hands. And Damascus shall be the rest thereof—Or, it shall rest upon Damascus; that is, the burden of the word of the Lord. Damascus shall in particular be afflicted with the judgment now threatened; when—Or rather, for the eyes of man, as of all Israel, shall be toward the Lord—For as all men's appeals, in case of wrong, are made to Heaven, so they who have been wronged by Syrian injustice shall look to Heaven for right, and the Lord will right them. The words however may be better translated: When the eyes of men, even of all the tribes of Israel, &c.; when the Jews saw the conqueror approach Jerusalem it was proper

3 And Tyrus did build herself a A. M. 3494.
strong hold, and ^hheaped up silver B. C. 510.
as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets.

4 Behold, ⁱthe LORD will cast her out, and he will smite ^kher power in the sea; and she shall be devoured with fire.

^f 1 Kings xvii. 9; Ezek. xxviii. 21; Obadiah 20.—^g Ezek. xxviii. 3.—^h Job xxvii. 16; Ezekiel xxviii. 4, 5.—ⁱ Isaiah xxiii. 1.—^k Ezek. xxvi. 17.

for them to look up to God, and to implore his protection. This, according to Josephus, (Antiq., lib. xi. cap. 8,) when Alexander was besieging Tyre, Jaddua the Jewish high-priest did, and was directed by a vision to meet the conqueror in his pontifical robes, by whom he was received very graciously. The clause however will admit of yet another translation, namely, For the eyes of the Lord are upon man, as well as upon all the tribes of Israel. That is, God is the ruler and judge of all the nations of the earth, as well as of the tribes of Israel, and will punish the heathen for their sins, as well as his professing people. This, considering the context, seems to be the most probable interpretation.

Verses 2-5. And Hamath also shall border there by—Or, Hamath also shall be within its borders. That is, the borders of this prophecy. Hamath shall be involved in the calamities which this prophecy denounces. "I suppose," says Newcome, "that Hamath on the river Orontes is meant." It was the capital of one part of Syria, and formed, some time, an independent kingdom. See note on Jer. xlix. 23. Tyrus and Zidon—These cities also shall be reached by the judgments threatened in this prophecy; though it be very wise—Although Zidon prides itself so much for its skill and knowledge of

A. M. 3494. 5 ¹ Ashkelon shall see it, and fear ;
B. C. 510. Gaza also shall see it, and be very sorrowful, and Ekron ; for her expectation shall be ashamed ; and the king shall perish from Gaza, and Ashkelon shall not be inhabited.

¹ Jer. xlvii. 1, 5 ; Zeph. ii. 4.

things, and puts much confidence in its crafty counsels. Blayney renders the latter clause of this verse and the next, And Sidon, though she be very wise, and hath built Tyre, a fortress, for herself; and hath heaped up silver as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets. Sidon was the capital of Phenicia, and mother of Tyre. For Justin informs us, (lib. xviii. cap. 3,) that the Sidonians, when their city was taken by the king of Ascalon, betook themselves to their ships and built Tyre. Hence Tyre is called the daughter of Sidon, Isa. xxiii. 12. The Sidonians were famous all over the world for their knowledge and skill in arts and sciences, and for their great riches, acquired by their traffic: see notes on Isa. xxiii. 2, 4, 12; Ezek. xxvii. 8, and xxviii. 2.

Behold, the Lord will cast her out—Will cast out her inhabitants. And he will smite her power in the sea, &c.—The Sidonians, according to Diodorus Siculus, (lib. xvi. p. 116,) on the approach of the army sent against them by Ochus, king of Persia, first of all destroyed their shipping at sea; and then retiring within the walls of the city, when they found they could hold out no longer, set fire to their houses, and burned themselves with all their families and effects together. Thus their wealth was effectually smitten, when by burning their ships their commerce, the source of their riches, was annihilated; and this last act of desperation completely fulfilled the remaining part of the prophecy. No wonder if their neighbours, the Philistines, (as is signified in the next verse,) were struck with consternation at seeing the disastrous fate of those on whose assistance they depended. See Blayney. Probably also the destruction of Tyre by Alexander the Great may be predicted in these verses; of which see the places referred to above. *Ashkelon shall fear; Gaza also be very sorrowful, and Ekron—*These cities flattered themselves, that if Tyre could withstand Alexander, they also should be able to escape his hand; but Tyre being taken, all these hopes vanished. Alexander made himself master of Gaza immediately after the taking of Tyre; 10,000 of the inhabitants were slain, and the governor Betis dragged round the city wall till he was dead. King is a general word for any governor, in Hebrew, as has been before observed. Strabo, speaking of Gaza, lib. xvi., says, "It was formerly a city of note, but was destroyed by Alexander the Great." Or, according to Josephus, having suffered severely, upon being taken by Alexander, it was at length totally ruined and destroyed by Alexander Jannæus, one of the Asmonean kings of Judah. Hence we read, Acts viii. 26, Gaza which is desert. *And Ashkelon shall not be inhabited—*Blayney

6 And a bastard shall dwell ^m in Ashdod, and I will cut off the pride of the Philistines. A. M. 3494.
B. C. 510.

7 And I will take away his ¹ blood out of his mouth, and his abominations from between reads, shall not be established; literally, shall not sit. "Ashkelon, and the other cities of the Philistines, having been subjugated by Nebuchadnezzar, as foretold Jer. xlvii., never recovered their former independence, but, falling under the dominion of the great empires in succession, were almost continually involved in their wars, and suffered considerably, till by degrees they dwindled away, and at last sunk to nothing."

^m Amos i. 8.—¹ Heb. bloods.

Verses 6, 7. *And a bastard shall dwell in Ashdod—*Newcome reads, strangers, understanding by the expression, "a strange and spurious race; a despicable race; born of harlots." But Blayney, who reads, a stranger, observes, that the Hebrew word, כּוּזָר here used, does not imply an illegitimate offspring. In proof of which he quotes Psa. lxi. 8, where כּוּזָר, a word from which the above is derived, is translated a stranger, so that he supposes the sense of this clause to be, that the city of Ashdod should be peopled with strangers, not descended from its present possessors. The LXX. and Chaldee understand the expression in the same sense. *And I will cut off the pride of the Philistines—*Ashdod, or Azotus, was burned and destroyed by Jonathan, brother of Judas Maccabeus, and eight thousand of its men burned or slain, 1 Mac. x. 84, 85. These were probably intended here by the pride of the Philistines, that is, the pride, or excellence, of the ancient inhabitants, in whose room the strangers were introduced. *And I will take away his blood out of his mouth—*The Philistine shall be brought down so low, that he shall not be in a condition to molest or threaten slaughter to his neighbours, as he did formerly. *And his abominations from between his teeth—*He shall be reduced to such poverty, that he shall no more make banquets in honour of his idols, and feast upon them. "The idolatrous and abominable practices of the Philistines shall cease. The metaphor is taken from beasts of prey, who gorge themselves with blood." Ashdod is mentioned by Josephus among the cities of the Phenicians which were under the dominion of the Jews; and it is well known that they exacted of all who were under their authority, a conformity, in a certain degree, to their religious rites and ceremonies. This will explain what is meant by taking his blood, &c. The stranger was required to abstain from eating blood, and from such things as were held in abomination by the Jewish law. *But he that remaineth, even he shall be for our God—*This was fulfilled in the times of the Maccabees, and also in the times of Alexander Jannæus, who subdued their principal cities, as Josephus relates, (Antiq., lib. xiii. cap. 23,) and made them part of the Jewish dominions, the inhabitants of several of which embraced the Jewish religion. And he

A. M. 3494. his teeth : but he that remaineth, even
B. C. 510. he shall be for our God, and he shall be as a governor in Judah, and Ekron as a Jebusite.

8 And ^aI will encamp about my house because of the army, because of him that passeth
by, and because of him that returneth : and

^a Psa. xxxiv. 7 ; Ch. ii. 5.—^o Isa. lx. 18 ; Ezek. xxviii. 24.
^p Exod. iii. 7.—^q Isa. lxii. 11 ; Chapter ii. 10 ; Matt. xxi. 5 ;

shall be as a governor in Judah—Shall be regarded and honoured. Blayney renders it, Shall be as a citizen in Judah, considering the expression as being used in contrast to the word which he renders stranger, verse 6 ; and signifying that the stranger who should come to dwell in Ashdod, would, after renouncing all his heathenish practices, become a convert to the true God, and, as a governor in Judah, entitled to all the same privileges in that city, as a prime citizen enjoyed among the Jews : terms these which exactly correspond with those used by St.
Paul, who, having called the unconverted Gentiles,
ἔθνοι καὶ παροικοὶ, strangers and foreigners, entitles
them, after their conversion, συμπολῖται τῶν ἁγίων καὶ οἰκείου τῇ Θεῷ, fellow-citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, Eph. ii. 19. And Ekron as a Jebusite—And the Philistines shall have the same privileges allowed them, and be put on the same footing, as the Jebusites, the ancient inhabitants of Jerusalem were, when the Israelites conquered them :
see Judg. i. 21.

Verse 8. I will encamp about my house—About this temple, and my church, of which this temple is an emblem, that I may defend it from all its enemies.
Because of the army—The Persian and Grecian army marching to and fro through Judea. The Hebrew is literally, I will encamp about my house as a garrison, the word מצודה, here used, meaning properly a military guard set to keep watch and ward against any hostile approach. “The purport of this passage is, that, while these revolutions were taking place in the neighbouring states, God would act as a guard in favour of his household, or family, against the armies that were marching forward and backward, so as not to suffer any enemy to come near to molest them ; for which purpose his eyes,
he says, were now, that is, at the time he was speaking of, continually upon the watch.”—Blayney.
Many think this alludes to the Maccabees, who were defenders of the house of God against Antiochus Epiphanes. They were as a wall of brass round about the sanctuary. From their days God preserved the temple against the profanation of strangers, till after the death of Jesus Christ, when he forsook it entirely ; choosing the Christian Church for his temple, and making it his peculiar care to watch over, encamp round about, and protect it. And no oppressor shall pass through any more.—Or rather,
any longer. None of those that now threaten to invade or oppress them shall prosper in their attempts against them. For now have I seen with mine eyes

^o no oppressor shall pass through A. M. 3494.
them any more : for now ^p have I B. C. 510.
seen with mine eyes.

9 ¶ ^a Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion ;
shout, O daughter of Jerusalem : behold, ^r thy King cometh unto thee : he is just, and ² having salvation ; lowly, and riding upon

John xii. 15.—^r Psalm ii. 7 ; Jer. xxiii. 5 ; xxx. 9 ; Hos. iii. 5 ;
John i. 49 ; Luke xix. 38.—³ Or, saving himself.

—I am not regardless of my people, but look upon their condition with an eye of pity and compassion.

Verse 9. Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion—
To give still greater encouragement to God's people,
the prophet, after uttering the foregoing promises,
was carried on by the Divine Spirit, which influenced
him, to announce a still more remarkable instance of God's special kindness to them, namely, the coming of their Messiah, or king, with reference to which this passage is cited in two places of the New Testament, Matt. xxi. 5 ; John xii. 15 ; so that we can have no doubt of the application. But, from comparing these three texts, we may perceive that the evangelical writers were not over-scrupulous of adhering to the exact words of their original, whether they cited from the Hebrew or from the Greek ; but were satisfied with giving the true sense of the passage, and taking more or less of it, as circumstances seemed to require. Behold, thy king cometh unto thee—He that is so often described in the prophets
as the king of Israel ; that was known by that name
among the Jews in our Saviour's time, and is repea-dedly called by the name of David their king : see the margin. To him the kingdom did properly belong, and to him the gathering of the people was to be,
Gen. xlix. 10. He is just, and having salvation—
Or, He is righteous, and the Saviour, as the ancient versions have it. He is that righteous branch, and the Lord our righteousness, as he is described by Jeremiah, chap. xxiii. 5 ; who was to execute justice and judgment in the earth ; and the righteousness
and salvation, that is, the Righteous One and Saviour, promised Isa. lxii. 1. Unlike the proud and destructive conquerors of the earth, he shall not enter with a mighty cavalcade of horse, but shall come lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass. Although it is certain that the ancient Jews understood this prophecy of the Messiah, yet that this divine person, this king of Israel, should come unto them riding upon an ass, which, notwithstanding that in former ages patriarchs and judges thought it no disgrace to ride upon them, yet was then looked upon as below the dignity of any person
of eminence, must, at the uttering of this prophecy,
have appeared a very mysterious and improbable circumstance. But we who know that the only time when the Lord Jesus entered publicly into Jerusalem, he thought proper, as an example of humility
and meekness, and of indifference to worldly pomp,
to ride upon a young ass, or colt ; and that, at the same time, the whole multitude were seized with

A. M. 3494. an ass, and upon a colt the foal of
B. C. 510. an ass.

10 And I ^a will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, and the battle-bow shall be cut off: and he shall speak ^t peace unto the heathen: and his domi-

^a Hosea i. 7; ii. 18; Micah v. 10; Haggai ii. 22. — ^t Eph. ii. 14, 17. — ^u Psa. lxxii. 8.

such a sudden and extraordinary impulse of joy, that they spread their garments in the way, and cut down branches of trees and strowed them in the way, shouting unanimously, HOSANNAH, BLESSED IS THE KING WHO COMETH IN THE NAME OF THE LORD—we, that know this remarkable circumstance, cannot but be greatly struck with this prophecy, as an admirable instance of the divine prescience, and a strong proof of the truth of Christianity.

Verse 10. And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim—This plainly shows that the character given of the Messiah, that he should ride on an ass, was in opposition to the pride of their warlike kings, to set an example of humility, and to show that his kingdom was not of this world. To the same purpose speaks the Prophet Hosea, chap. i. 7; and Micah, chap. v. 10, 11: passages which mutually support and cast light on each other, and show undeniably what the prophet had in view when he foretold that the Messiah should ride on an ass. This verse is also intended to signify that the kingdom of the Messiah should be a kingdom of peace, by which characteristic it is frequently described in the prophetic writings. Not that wars were immediately to cease on the earth at his coming, but because his doctrine, example, and grace, naturally tend to produce and promote universal peace and harmony; to diffuse among men a spirit of benevolence and humility, of meekness and forbearance; of doing to others, in every case, as we would they should do unto us in the like case. So that, if Christ's religion were truly and universally received and practised, certain it is there would be a universal peace among men, and we should no longer see or hear of wars and slaughters. And undoubtedly, before the consummation of all things, his religion will diffuse peace over all the earth. Another thing intended in this prediction is, that Christ's kingdom should not be set up, nor advanced, by external force and violence, by carnal weapons, or an arm of flesh; but by the power of truth and grace. For it follows, He shall speak peace unto the heathen, or, unto the nations, as the Hebrew is, namely, to the Gentile nations that were afar off, as well as to the Jews that were nigh; his gospel being the gospel of peace, proclaiming and ensuring peace to all the truly penitent that believe in him with their heart unto righteousness; even peace with God, peace of conscience, tranquillity of mind, and a disposition, as far as possible, to live peaceably with all men. And his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river, &c.—As was foretold by David, Psa. lxxii. 8, from whence these words are taken: see the note

nion shall be ^u from sea even to sea, A. M. 3494.
and from the river even to the ends B. C. 510.
of the earth.

11 As for thee also, ³ by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy ^x prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water.

³ Or, whose covenant is my blood, Exodus xxiv. 8; Heb. x. 29; xiii. 20. — ^x Isa. xlii. 7; li. 14; lxi. 1.

there. The sense is, his kingdom shall extend itself to all parts of the world, in defiance of the opposition made to it: The preachers of his gospel shall carry it from one country to another; from one island and continent to another; till the remotest parts of the earth are enlightened, and reduced by it to the obedience of the faith, and the practice of love and holiness.

Verse 11. As for thee also—O Jerusalem, or church of God; for the prophet, speaking in the name of God, must be supposed to direct his discourse to her, the pronoun and the affixes, in the Hebrew, being in the feminine gender; by the blood of thy covenant—By the blood of the Messiah, in which thy covenant is confirmed: for though it is God's covenant as made by him, and Christ's as made in and through him, it is Zion's covenant as made for her. I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit, &c.—By the prison here, Blayney thinks the land of Egypt is metaphorically intended, in which Israel were heretofore detained as in a prison, until God delivered them out of it, and at the same time entered into covenant with them. But it seems more probable the deliverance from Babylon, so lately experienced, is referred to. So most interpreters understand the passage. Bishop Hall paraphrases it thus: "As for thee, O Zion, whose covenant with me is made, and confirmed by the precious blood of the Messiah. I do herein give thee a type of thy future deliverance from all thy spiritual miseries, in that I have brought forth thy captives out of the miserable captivity at Babylon." Deep, dry pits, says Capellus, were frequently prisons in the East. Or by the pit here may be meant the lowest part of the prison, called the dungeon, (see Isa. li. 14,) as the Hebrew word כור is translated; Jer. xxxvii. 16; xxxviii. 6; Lam. iii. 53–55, where see the notes. Into one of these prisons Jeremiah was cast. But something further, and more interesting to the human race than the deliverance of God's ancient people either from Egypt or Babylon, is evidently here intended to be signified, even the deliverance of mankind in general from the bondage of sin and guilt, and of depravity, weakness, and wretchedness, that miserable prison in which all are naturally detained, into the glorious liberty of the children of God, by virtue of the covenant sealed with the blood of Christ the Mediator: see Isa. lxi. 1–3; Heb. xiii. 20. Observe well, reader, a state of sin and guilt is a state of bondage; it is a spiritual prison; it is a pit, or a dungeon, in which there is no water, no comfort to be had: we are all by nature prisoners in this pit; the Scripture has concluded us all under sin, and bound us over to the justice of

A. M. 3494. 12 ¶ Turn you to the strong hold,
B. C. 510. ^y ye prisoners of hope: even to-day do I declare that ^z I will render double unto thee;

13 When I have bent Judah for me, filled
the bow with Ephraim, and raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece,
and made thee as the sword of a mighty man.

14 And the LORD shall be seen over them,
and ^a his arrow shall go forth as the lightning:

^y Isa. xlix. 9.—^z Isa. lxi. 7.—^a Psalm xviii. 14; lxxvii. 17;
cxliv. 6.—^b Isa. xxi. 1.

God. God has been pleased to deal with these prisoners upon new terms, to enter into another covenant with them; the blood of Christ is the blood of that covenant, having purchased it and all its benefits for us; and by that blood effectual provision is made for the sending forth of these prisoners upon easy and honourable terms: and a proclamation of liberty to the captives is issued from the court of heaven, followed by the opening of the prison to them that were bound, (like Cyrus's proclamation to the Jews in Babylon,) which all those, whose spirits God stirreth up, ought to come and take the benefit of.

Verse 12. Turn you to the strong hold—To Zion, to the church of God, the strong city, mentioned Isa. xxvi. 1, which has salvation for walls and bulwarks; to the name of the Lord, which is a strong tower, his mercy, truth, and grace: ye that are under any bondage or oppression, any trouble or distress, do not despair, be not discouraged, but apply to and rely upon the blood of the new covenant; hasten to Christ, through whose blood alone you can have redemption, reconciliation, peace, and comfort. Ye prisoners of hope—Captives, yet not without hope. The Jews that were returned out of captivity into their own land were yet, in effect, but prisoners, servants, as they confess themselves to be, even in the land which God had given them, Neh. ix. 36; yet prisoners of hope, or expectation, for God had given them a little reviving in their bondage, Ezra ix. 8, 9. Those that continued still in Babylon, detained by their affairs there, yet lived in hope, some time or other, to see their own land again: now both these descriptions of Jews are here directed to turn their eyes to the Messiah, set before them in the promise, as their strong hold, to take shelter in him and stay themselves upon him, for the perfecting of the mercy which, by his grace, and for his sake, was so gloriously begun. But, as their deliverance was typical of our redemption by Christ, verse 11, so this invitation to the strong hold speaks the language of the gospel call. Sinners are prisoners, but they are prisoners of hope; their case is sad, but it is not desperate; there is yet hope in Israel concerning them. Christ is a strong hold for them, a strong tower, in whom they may be safe and quiet from the fear of the wrath of God, the curse of the law, and the assaults of their spiritual enemies: to him they must

and the Lord God shall blow the trumpet, and shall go ^b with whirlwinds of the south.

15 The LORD of hosts shall defend them; and they shall devour and ^a subdue with sling-stones; and they shall drink, and make a noise as through wine; and they ^b shall be filled like bowls, and as ^c the corners of the altar.

16 And the LORD their God shall save them

^a Or, subdue the stones of the sling.—^b Or, shall fill both the bowls, &c.—^c Lev. iv. 18, 25; Deut. xii. 27.

turn by a lively faith, to him they must flee, and in his name they must trust.

Even to-day—In this day of lowest distress, when things appear to be at the worst, and you think your case deplorable to the last degree, I declare—I solemnly promise, that I will render double unto thee—To thee, O Jerusalem, to every one of you prisoners of hope; I will give you comforts double to the sorrows you have experienced; or blessings double to what I ever bestowed upon your fathers, even when their condition was at the best; the glory of your latter state, as well as of your latter house, shall be greater, yea, twice as great as that of your former. Now this it was no otherwise than by the coming of the Messiah, the preaching of the gospel, and the setting up of his kingdom. These spiritual blessings in heavenly things were double to what they had ever enjoyed in their most prosperous state. Now as a pledge of this, to be enjoyed in the fulness of time, God in the next verses promises to the Jews victory, plenty, and joy, in their own land, which yet would be but a type and shadow of more glorious victories, riches, and joys, in the kingdom of Christ.

Verses 13–16. When I have bent Judah for me—“A strong and sublime manner of expressing that God would use Judah and Ephraim as his instruments of destruction.”—Newcome. As if he had said, When I have made Judah my bow, and Ephraim my arrow, have used them as my instruments of war. Judah and Ephraim are equivalent to Judah and Israel. The men of Ephraim being expert archers, the expression of filling the bow with Ephraim, seems to allude to that circumstance. And raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece—Enabled the Jews, under the conduct of the Maccabees, to destroy the forces of the Syrian kings, Antiochus Epiphanes, and others, who were the successors of Alexander, the founder of the Grecian monarchy: see note on Dan. viii. 22. And made thee as the sword of a mighty man—Given success to thy arms, that none shall withstand thee. And the Lord shall be seen over them—Shall give conspicuous tokens of his presence with them, and his presiding over them and directing them in all their enterprises, leading them on and protecting them; as when they came out of Egypt. And his arrow shall go forth as the lightning—He shall fight for them

A. M. 3494. in that day as the flock of his peo-
B. C. 510. ple: for ^d they shall be as the stones of a crown, ^e lifted up as an ensign upon his land.

^d Isa. lxii. 3; Mal. iii. 17.—^e Isa. xi. 12.—^f Psa. xxxi. 19.

with a force that shall be irresistible: the lightning is often called God's arrow. And the Lord shall blow the trumpet—Shall give the signal of war, shall animate them to, and assist them in battle. And shall go with whirlwinds of the south—Shall discomfit his enemies as a whirlwind tears in pieces every thing that stands in its way; or shall scatter them as the dust is scattered by the whirlwind. The most vehement storms to which Judea was subject came from the great desert country to the south of it: see note on Isa. xxi. 1. The Lord of hosts shall defend them—The hand of God shall visibly appear in protecting the Maccabees. And they shall devour and subdue with sling-stones—They shall conquer their enemies with as unequal a force as that of David, in respect of Goliath, when he subdued him with a sling-stone. And they shall drink and rejoice—In their festivals, when they shall offer sacrifices of thanksgivings for their victories; and make a noise as through wine—Raise shouts of triumph, as men are wont to do whose hearts are glad with success, and cheered with wine. And they shall be filled like bowls, &c.—They shall be filled, or shall fill themselves, with the spoil of their enemies; and as the corners of the altar—As the horns of the altar are with the blood of the victims. And the Lord shall save them as the flock of his people—Or, shall save them, his people, as a flock. He shall take care

17 For ^f how great is his goodness, A. M. 3494.
and how great is his beauty! ^g corn B. C. 510.
shall make the young men ^h cheerful, and new wine the maids.

^g Joel iii. 18; Amos ix. 14.—^h Or, grow, or, speak.

of them and preserve them, as a shepherd does his flock. They shall be as the stones of a crown—Precious in his sight; lifted up as an ensign, or trophy, upon his land—In other words, God shall make it known to the world how dear they are to him, and his favour toward them shall be an encouragement to others to become proselytes to the true religion: see Isa. lxii. 3; Mal. iii. 17.

Verse 17. How great is his goodness—Infinite goodness is the fountain of all the good done for his people. And how great is his beauty—How wonderful is the beauty of divine providence in Israel's deliverance and salvation. Corn shall make the young men cheerful—Plentiful harvests shall make the young men cheerful in sowing, reaping, and partaking of the fruits thereof. And new wine the maids—There shall be such plenty of wine that all, young and old, shall be cheered with it. Or rather, new wine is put here for the grapes which make it, as bread is frequently put for bread-corn, and then the sense will be, that the young men, employed in bringing in the harvest, should rejoice at seeing the great plenty of it, and the young women, occupied in gathering the grapes, should be as cheerful on account of the plenty of the vintage: or that, by the divine blessing, both those who reaped the corn, and those who gathered in the vintage, should thrive and be happy in their respective occupations.

CHAPTER X.

This chapter is a continuation of the prophecy begun in the preceding one; and goes on to encourage the Jews that were returned with hopes, that though they had been under divine rebukes for their negligence in building the temple, and were now surrounded with enemies and dangers, yet, that God would make them prosperous at home, and victorious abroad. (1.) They are directed to eye the great God in all events; and both in the evils they suffered, and the comforts they desired, to acknowledge his hand, 1-4. (2.) They are encouraged to expect strength and success from him in all their struggles with the enemies of their church and state, and to hope that the issue would be glorious at last, 5-12.

A. M. 3494. ASK ye ^a of the LORD ^b rain ^c in
B. C. 510. the time of the latter rain;

^a Jer. xiv. 22.—^b Deut. xi. 14.

NOTES ON CHAPTER X.

Verse 1. Ask ye of the Lord rain, &c.—Make supplication to Jehovah, and not to idols. The promise of future plenty made in the preceding verse, with which this appears to be closely connected, suggested the mentioning the means by which it might be procured. As if he had said, The fulfilling of the promise of fruitful seasons depends on the people's asking them of God, who will hear their

so the LORD shall make ¹ bright A. M. 3494.
clouds, and give them showers of B. C. 510.

^c Job xxix. 23; Joel ii. 23.—¹ Or, lightnings, Jer. x. 13.

petitions if offered to him with sincerity and fervour, and will give them both the former and the latter rain in its season. Of which rains see notes on Deut. xi. 14; Hos. vi. 3. So the Lord shall make bright clouds—Or lightnings, as the margin reads, and as the word is rendered Job xxviii. 25. Great rains usually accompany thunder and lightning. And give them—Namely, the Jews; showers of rain—Or rather, abundance of rain, as the Hebrew

A. M. 3494. rain, to every one grass in the field.
B. C. 510.

2 For the ^d idols ² have spoken vanity, and the diviners have seen a lie, and have told false dreams; they ^o comfort in vain: therefore they went their way as a flock, they ³ were troubled ^f because there was no shepherd.

3 ¶ Mine anger was kindled against the shepherds, ² and I ⁴ punished the goats: for the LORD of hosts ^h hath visited his flock the house of Judah, and ⁱ hath made them as his goodly horse in the battle.

4 Out of him came forth ^k the corner, out of him ^l the nail, out of him the battle-bow, out of him every oppressor together.

^d Jer. x. 8; Hab. ii. 18.—² Heb. teraphims, Judges xvii. 5. ^e Job xiii. 4.—³ Or, answered that, &c.—^f Ezek. xxxiv. 5. ^g Ezekiel xxxiv. 17.—⁴ Heb. visited upon.—^h Luke i. 68. Canticles i. 9.

means; to every one grass in the field—Or, to every man the herb, or fruits of the field, as the original word signifies. The sense is, that God, upon their asking it of him, would give plenty of all kinds of herbs and fruits that were useful to men, or to the animals which men make use of.

Verse 2. For the idols have spoken vanity—What I have said will certainly be verified when, with sincere and pious minds, you apply to God in prayer for his blessing on you and your land; but the case was quite otherwise when your fathers asked for any thing of idols; the priests, who answered in the names of the idols, could only give vain answers, which were not fulfilled by the events according to their promises. And the diviners have seen a lie—Those who pretended to divine, or predict future things, have uttered falsehoods. They comfort in vain—Rather, they comfort vainly, or with vain words. This they certainly did, because they promised prosperity to the people though they continued in their sins. Therefore they went their way as a flock—They were carried into captivity, and brought into great distress, as sheep are driven away and scattered, when there is no one to guide or take care of them. Because there was no shepherd—No ecclesiastical or civil governors, that would faithfully do their duty.

Verse 3. Mine anger was kindled against the shepherds—Against the kings, princes, and priests. These were the leaders of the Jewish people into idolatry and vice. The word shepherds is beautifully taken up from the preceding verse. And I punished the goats—The chief ones, as Newcome renders it. The principal men are meant. For—Or rather, but, the Lord of hosts hath visited his flock—In mercy. He hath now given his people manifest tokens of his favour and protection. And hath made them—Or, will make them, as his goodly horse in the battle—Will give them strength and courage. This must relate to the times of the Maccabees, and

5 ¶ And they shall be as mighty ^m men, which ⁿ tread down their ene- A. M. 3494. B. C. 510.

mies in the mire of the streets in the battle: and they shall fight, because the LORD is with them, and ⁵ the riders on horses shall be confounded.

6 And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and ^a I will bring them again to place them; for I ^o have mercy upon them: and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I am the LORD their God, and ^p will hear them.

7 And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their ^q heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see

^k Num. xxiv. 17; 1 Sam. xiv. 38; Isa. xix. 13.—^l Isa. xxii. 23.—^m Psalm xviii. 42.—ⁿ Or, they shall make the riders on horses ashamed.—^o Jer. iii. 18; Ezek. xxxviii. 21.—^p Hosea i. 7.—^q Chap. xiii. 9.—^a Psal. civ. 15; Chap. ix. 15.

afterward, when God punished several nations by the hands of the Jewish people.

Verse 4. Out of him—From God, came forth—Or rather, shall come forth the corner—The prince or ruler, who is in a body politic, as a corner stone in a building; the nail—Which fastens the tents of war, or the timber together in a house; the battle-bow—All warlike provision both of men and arms. Out of him every oppressor—Officer, exactor, or collector of tribute. It was from God that Nebuchadnezzar mightily prevailed and oppressed Israel; and it was from God also that Judah grows up to such power as to be able to cope with his adversaries, and to impose tribute on them. Newcome reads, From him shall go forth every ruler together, observing, that the word which we translate oppressor is also used in a good sense Isa. lx. 17: that is, Judah shall furnish both civil and military governors. Blayney's interpretation of the verse is, Out of it, that is, out of the house of Judah, shall go forth a corner, the commander-in-chief; out of it a nail, the officers next in rank; the bow of battle, the archers; out of it all that draw near together; so he renders כל יורו נגוש, instead of every oppressor, or ruler, together. "In the house, or building," says he, "the words would denote the stones of common use, placed contiguous, or close in order, one by another. Correspondently in the army must be meant, the close-imbodied phalanx, or main body of men of war, advancing on together in regular order to meet the enemy."

Verses 5-7. And they—The Jews, under the conduct of their captains; shall be as mighty men which tread down their enemies—God shall inspire them with courage to subdue their enemies, and trample upon their carcasses. This it seems must be understood of the victories obtained by the Jews under the Maccabees, or of those which they shall obtain over their enemies in the latter times, to which the latter part of the chapter seems ultimately to relate.

A. M. 3494. it, and be glad; their heart shall
B. C. 510. rejoice in the LORD.

8 I will ^rhiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them: ^sand they shall increase as they have increased.

9 And ^tI will sow them among the people: and they shall ^uremember me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again.

10 ^xI will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt, and gather them out of Assy-

^r Jer. v. 26.—^s Isa. xlix. 19; Ezek. xxxvi. 37.—^t Hos. ii. 23.
^u Deut. xxx. 1.—^x Isa. xi. 11, 16; Hos. xi. 11.

And the riders on horses shall be confounded—The cavalry of Antiochus seems to be intended by this. We have a description of this cavalry in some heathen writers, which shows it to have been a very formidable one. And I will strengthen the house of Judah—I will not only give courage to attempt, but also strength to go through with and finish the undertaking. This was remarkably verified in the wars of the Jews against the Seleucidæ, in which wars they had wonderful difficulties, and as wonderful courage and success. And I will save the house of Joseph—The remnant of the kingdom of Israel, the residue of the ten tribes. And I will bring them again—Both Judah and Joseph, out of captivity, or from their various dispersions; to place them—In their own land and in their own cities. This promise is understood by many interpreters to relate to the general restoration of the Jewish nation upon their conversion, a subject which seems to be treated of in many passages of the Old Testament, in which Judah and Israel are represented as equal sharers of this blessing: see the note on Isa. xi. 11, and compare Ezek. xxxvii. 16. And they shall be as though I had not cast them off—They shall be in as flourishing a condition as they were before I cast them off. And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man—Ephraim is put here for the ten tribes, as the house of Joseph is, verse 6. And their heart shall rejoice as through wine—Their heart shall be made as glad by their victories, as if they had been made merry through wine. Yea, their children shall see it and be glad—The children and youths, not yet fit for war, shall partake of their fathers' joy.

Verses 8–10. I will hiss for them—Rather, whistle, as the word קָרַח should be here translated. I will call them from distant countries, as a shepherd calls his flock together with his whistle. For I have redeemed them—For I have, and will, by the workings of my divine providence, deliver and redeem them out of their enemies' hands, and from those who hold them captives. And they shall increase as they have increased—Namely, in the most flourishing times, such as were the reigns of David and Solomon. I will sow—Rather, I have sown, them among the people—Or nations, for it appears beyond a doubt that what had been formerly done is here spoken of. And they shall remember me in far ria; and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and ^yplace shall not be found for them.

11 ^zAnd he shall pass through the sea with affliction, and shall smite the waves in the sea, and all the deeps of the river shall dry up: and ^athe pride of Assyria shall be brought down, and ^bthe sceptre of Egypt shall depart away.

12 And I will strengthen them in the LORD; and ^cthey shall walk up and down in his name, saith the LORD.

^y Isa. xlix. 20.—^z Isa. xi. 15, 16.—^a Isa. xiv. 25.—^b Ezek. xxx. 13.—^c Mic. iv. 5.

countries—Whithersoever they were driven. I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt—Ptolemy Philadelphus, one of the kings of Egypt, redeemed no fewer than 100,000 of the Jews, and sent them home; God, no doubt, inclining him to be thus remarkably favourable and kind to them. For this, we have the testimony of Josephus's history; as also, that other kings released many of those who still remained slaves, or servants in Egypt, and sent them back to their own land. And gather them out of Assyria—This was done by Alexander, the son of Antiochus Epiphanes, and by both the Demetriuses, as Josephus relates. This redeeming and releasing of the Jews, who were captives or servants in divers countries, by several kings, and sending them home at their charge or expense, which Josephus affirms to have been done, is a fact so very extraordinary that it deserves to be attended to; for it is a certain proof that the divine providence can accomplish whatever it pleases. And as this extraordinary particular was repeatedly foretold and promised by God's prophets, long before it took place, and when there was not the least human probability of it, it is a striking proof of the truth and divine inspiration of the Holy Scriptures. I will bring them unto the land of Gilead and Lebanon—Gilead was taken by the arms of the Maccabees, and the cities of Syria, (here signified by Lebanon, a famous mountain in Syria,) by Hyrcanus and his successors. Gilead and Lebanon were countries remarkable for their fruitfulness. And place shall not be found for them—The land shall be too narrow for them. But this verse, and indeed the whole paragraph, has a further and mystical meaning. It relates to the success of the gospel, and the bringing in of the Jews and Gentiles into the Christian Church; and probably also to the restoration of the Jews, and of the whole remnant of the house of Israel from their present dispersions to their own land, as has been observed on verse 6.

Verses 11, 12. And he shall pass through the sea with affliction—The sense might be more properly expressed, And he [Israel] shall pass through the straits of the sea: so the LXX. and the Vulgate understand the word. And [God] shall smite the waves of the sea, &c.—The expressions allude to the miraculous passage of the Israelites through the Red sea, and the river Jordan; and to God's destroying the Egyptians, and the Assyrian, or Babylonian empire, in order to the deliverance of his people. And the verse imports that God would, in a future time, do as great things for them as he had done formerly for their fathers. In this sense the Chaldee expounds the word. Egypt and Assyria, it must be observed, being two potent kingdoms, bordering upon Judea, and being by turns either allies to the Jews, or their conquerors; and the Jews frequently either going thither for refuge, or being carried thither as captives; therefore, when the prophets foretel the general restoration of the Jewish nation, they often express it by their returning from Egypt and Assyria. We may observe, likewise, that God's bringing his people again from these countries, and especially from Egypt, was a proverbial expression to signify any deliverance, as great or greater than these. Thus, the next clause, And the pride of Assyria shall be brought down, and the sceptre of Egypt shall depart, signifies, the enemies of God and his truth shall all be subdued, and broken in pieces, when Christ shall come in his glorious power to set up his kingdom on the earth: see Dan. ii. 33, 34; Isa. lx. 12.

And I will strengthen them in the Lord—That is, I will strengthen them in myself, or I will be their helper, and give them all needful strength and protection. And they shall walk up and down in his name, saith the Lord—Their evils and actions shall be under the influence of his grace, and under the government of his laws, and he shall give them success answerable to their upright intentions.

CHAPTER XI.

In the three preceding chapters Zechariah speaks of the advantages and prosperities of Judah and Jerusalem, after the return from Babylon, both before and after the times of the Maccabees. But this chapter contains a prophecy of a very different nature. Here he predicts the ruin of the temple, the reprobation of the Jews, and their subjection to the Romans, 1-3. But previous to these calamities taking place, this flock of God is delivered into the hands of the Messiah, typified by the prophet, who is charged with the custody of it, 4-6. This he undertakes, and bears rule for some time; but at length, finding them perverse, he gives up the care of them, and as a token of it, breaks his shepherd's staves, resenting the contempt put upon him, and the indignities done him, 7-14. After this the prophet is held forth as the type of a worthless shepherd, or a succession of evil governors, who, heedless of the flock, or seeking only to oppress it, at once ruin the flock and bring destruction on themselves, 15-17.

A. M. 3494.
B. C. 510. OPEN^a thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars.

2 Howl, fir-tree, for the cedar is fallen; because the ¹mighty are spoiled: howl, O ye oaks of Bashan; ^b for ²the forest of A. M. 3494.

B. C. 510. the vintage is come down.

3 There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds; for their glory is spoiled: a voice of

^a Chap. x. 10.—¹ Or, gallants.

^b Isa. xxxii. 19.—² Or, the defence forest.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XI.

Verse 1. Open thy doors, O Lebanon—The prophet, having signified in the foregoing prophecy that the Jewish nation should recover its prosperity, flourish for some time, and become considerable; and having announced to Zion the coming of Messiah her king, and congratulated her on the peaceable nature and great extent of his kingdom, with the blessed effects which his rule should produce, proceeds now to foretel the ruin which should come on the body of the Jewish nation for rejecting him, with the destruction of their temple and capital city. To this only can the first three verses of this chapter relate; for no calamities happened to that people, from the time of Zechariah till that event, of which the expressions here used can with propriety be understood. Lebanon itself cannot be here addressed, which had no doors or gates: but it is figuratively put, either for the temple, built of the cedars of Lebanon, as it is Ezek. xvii. 3; and Hab. ii. 17; or for the city of Jerusalem, whose lofty buildings resembled the stately ranks of trees in a forest: but the former is more probably intended. And, if the Jewish writers may be credited, such was the application made of this prophecy by the Rabbi Johanan, when the doors of the temple opened of their own accord, a little before the temple was burned, a circumstance attested by Josephus, Bell. Jud. lib. vi. cap. 5: "Then R. Johanan, a disciple of R. Hillel, directing his speech to the temple, said, 'I know thy destruction is at hand, according to the prophecy of Zechariah: Open thy doors, O Lebanon, &c.' That the fire—Either, figuratively, the wrath of God and the rage of the enemy, or, literally, fire kindled by the enemy; may devour thy cedars—Thy palaces and other fabrics built with cedars.

Verses 2, 3. Howl, fir-tree—By the several sorts of trees here mentioned, seem to be meant the several orders and degrees of men, who should be sharers in the common destruction: see Isa. ii. 13; x. 33, 34; and the notes. The fir-tree seems to denote the lower people, who are bid to howl because even their superiors, signified by the cedar, could not withstand the storm. Howl, O ye oaks of Bashan—O ye rich, great, and powerful people of the land; Bashan was famous for its stately oaks. For

A. M. 3494. the roaring of young lions; for the
B. C. 510. pride of Jordan is spoiled.

4 ¶ Thus saith the LORD my God; ° Feed the flock of the slaughter;

5 Whose possessors slay them, and ° hold themselves not guilty: and they that sell them ° say, Blessed be the LORD; for I am rich: and their own shepherds pity them not.

° Verse 7.—^d Jeremiah ii. 3; 1. 7.—^e Deuteron. xxix. 19; Hosea xii. 8.

the forest of the vintage—Or rather, a forest, the fenced one, is come down—“As the inhabitants are represented under the image of the trees, the city is aptly denoted by a forest; to which is added by way of distinction הכצר, the fenced one, the article ה being emphatic, and marking the extraordinary strength of its fortifications, or fence, which, however, proves insufficient for its security.” *There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds—*That is, of the princes and rulers of the people. *For their glory is spoiled—*Their magnificent houses are destroyed. *A voice of the roaring of young lions—*Those who are in the foregoing sentence called shepherds, are here called young lions, because they were devourers of the people by their extortions and oppressions. *The pride of Jordan is spoiled—*By the pride of Jordan, those woods and thickets are primarily intended that rose proudly above the banks of that river, and greatly decorated the scene. But as these were the receptacles of lions, they are here, in a secondary and metaphorical sense, put for the residences of those princes and grandees, who are denominated lions in the preceding clause for the reason now mentioned.

Verses 4-5. *Feed the flock of the slaughter—*That is, the people, who are so denominated, because they were devoted to ruin by the following mischievous counsels of their false teachers, and the oppressions of their rulers. This command seems to be addressed to Zechariah; but an insuperable objection lies against its being understood as given to him in his own person, because he did not live in such times as are here described; for Zerubbabel the governor, and Joshua the high-priest, it appears, were men of extraordinary piety and virtue; and no doubt the rest of the princes or rulers of the people at this time were good men. We can, therefore, understand it in no other manner, as addressed to Zechariah, than as he typified Christ; and so God commanded him to do that which he had appointed Christ to do, namely, to gather and feed the lost sheep of Israel, which their shepherds scattered and destroyed. *Whose possessors slay them—*Whose governors and teachers are the cause of their destruction. Those are not improperly said to do a thing who are the cause of its being done. *And hold themselves not guilty—*Are not aware of the great guilt of their conduct; or, act as if they thought they might lawfully make merchandise of men's bodies or souls, for their own lucre or advantage. See 2

6 For I will no more pity the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD: A. M. 3494. B. C. 510.

but lo, I will ³ deliver the men every one into his neighbour's hand, and into the hand of his king: and they shall smite the land, and out of their hand I will not deliver them.

7 And I will ^f feed the flock of slaughter, ^g even you, ° O poor of the flock. And I took ³ Heb. make to be found.—^f Verse 4.—^g Or, verily the poor.

^g Zeph. iii. 12; Matt. xi. 5.

Peter ii. 3. *And they that sell them—*Who betray their persons, or liberty, or property, for profit; or sell them for slaves to foreigners; or, by their exactions and oppressions, reduce them to such poverty that they are obliged to sell themselves; *say, Blessed be the Lord, for I am rich—*That is, they hypocritically and impiously pretend to return God thanks for having put it in their power to acquire riches by such ungodly practices! *And their own shepherds—*That is, their chief priests, princes, and rulers, as above; *pity them not—*Destroy them without remorse. In Christ's time, which seems to be here referred to, “the chief priests and the elders, who were the possessors of the flock, by their traditions, the commandments of men, and their impositions on the consciences of the people, were become perfect tyrants, devouring their houses, engrossing their wealth, and fleecing the flock instead of feeding it. The Sadducees, who were Deists, corrupted their judgments; the Pharisees, who were bigots for superstitious observances, corrupted their morals by making void the commandments of God, Matt. xv. 6. Thus they slew the sheep of the flock; thus they sold them. They cared not what became of them, so they could but gain their own ends, and serve their own interests.”—Henry.

Verse 6. *I will no more pity the inhabitants of the land—*I will no more spare them than their shepherds do. The inhabitants of the land are to be distinguished from the poor of the flock in the next verse. By the former are meant those who in their respective stations were as wicked as the rulers, chief priests, and others, termed their shepherds, ver. 5; by the latter, those who were oppressed and were piously disposed. But I will deliver the men every one into his neighbour's hand—“This verse assigns the reason for calling the people, the flock of slaughter. Nor can words more aptly describe the calamities which befell the Jews in the war which ended in the taking of Jerusalem by the Romans; when the people, having first, by their intestine broils, destroyed one another, as is set forth at large by Josephus, at length fell into the hand of him whom they had owned for their sovereign, (‘we have no king but Cesar,’ John xix. 15.) and who completely desolated the land for their rebellion against him.”—Blayney.

Verse 7. *And—*Or rather, *but, I will feed the flock of slaughter, even you—*Or, especially you, *O poor of the flock—*Zechariah here, representing Christ

A. M. 3494. unto me two staves; the one I called
B. C. 510. Beauty, and the other I called ^aBands;
and I fed the flock.

8 Three shepherds also I cut off ^hin one

^a Or, Binders.—^h Hos. v. 7.

thé true shepherd, says, he will enter upon his office, and undertake the care of the flock appointed for the slaughter; even you, O poor of the flock—This clause is explicatory of the former, and by the repetition of it we are shown, that God, in his charge to the prophet, as a type of Christ, and to Christ the antitype, distinguishes clearly between different sorts of people among the Jews; between those that were poor, despised, weak, and humble, and those that were tyrannical, proud, and cruel, and made a prey of their inferiors: these were left out of the pastoral charge; the others were to be taken care of. And I took unto me two staves—These were the proper accoutrements of a shepherd, and these the prophet assumed as a badge of his office, and gave them significant names, which are partly explained, verses 10-14. "The shepherds of old time," says Lowth, "had two rods, or staves, one turned round at the top, that it might not hurt the sheep: this was for counting them, and separating the sound from the diseased, Lev. xxvii. 32; the other had an iron hook at the end of it, to pull in and hold the straying sheep. The psalmist mentions both these, Psa. xxiii. 4, Thy rod and thy staff comfort me." The one I called Beauty—Or, pleasantness, or, delight, as the word נֶחֱמָה may be rendered, signifying, says Lowth, his favour, gentleness, or kindness toward his people; which was remarkably verified in Christ, whose gracious words, and beneficial works, were conspicuous through the whole course of his life. The other I called Bands—Which the same author interprets of the bond of the new covenant, whereby he intended to unite both the kingdoms of Israel and Judah under himself, as their head and king, Ezek. xxxvii. 22; and then afterward to unite the Jews and the Gentiles into one church, by breaking down the partition wall that was between them. Newcome considers the former, Beauty, as intended to "denote how beautiful and pleasant the land would have been, if its inhabitants had kept their covenant with God." The other, Bands, "as signifying the union which ought to have subsisted between Judah and Israel." Mr. Scott explains "the former word of the honour, privilege, and ornament which the Jews possessed, according to their national covenant, in the oracles, instituted worship, and temple of God; and especially by the ministry of Christ and his apostles, who preached the gospel to them first." The other, he thinks, means, "the connection of the nation under one government, and the harmony that had, in some measure, hitherto united them, as the flock of God." Many other interpretations are given of these two names, but as they all are, and must be, in a great measure, founded on conjecture, the reader is not here troubled with them.

month; and my soul ^aloathed them, A. M. 3494.
and their soul also abhorred me. B. C. 510.

9 Then said I, I will not feed you: ⁱthat
that dieth, let it die; and that that is to be cut

^a Heb. was straitened for them.—ⁱ Jer. xv. 2; xliii. 11.

Verse 8. Three shepherds also I cut off in one month—The prophet may be said to do what God did; either in the punishment of certain false prophets, or of certain wicked governors. Some think, that by these three shepherds were figuratively signified the chief priests, scribes, and elders of the Jews. Christ exposed these as blind guides, and thereby lessened their authority among the people, which contributed very much to the spreading of the gospel. Blayney, who thinks the common translation encumbered with insuperable difficulties, renders the clause, and I set aside the authority of the shepherds in one month. His reasons for this interpretation have certainly considerable weight, but cannot with propriety be introduced here. One argument, however, in favour of it, to which he appeals, may be noticed. It evidently suits that application of the prophecy which most commentators adopt. "Let us now see," says he, "what happened to him, of whom Zechariah is evidently set forth as the type. Our Saviour's teaching was in a style so far superior to that of the professed guides of the people in his days, that, stung with jealousy, they exclaimed, Perceive ye how ye prevail nothing? Ye have lost all your wonted influence; behold the world is gone after him, John xii. 19. Even so it may be presumed the purity and disinterestedness of Zechariah's instructions may have gained so far upon the minds of the people as to deprive the corrupt and selfish teachers of that ascendancy which they once possessed." And my soul loathed them—Or, was straitened toward them, as the Hebrew, חָקַר כָּהֵם, may be literally translated, that is, I was straitened in my affections to them. I was less tender toward them than toward the poor of the flock, because they showed themselves to be averse from my person and doctrine. So the Vulgate, contracta est anima mea in eis. The LXX., however, read, βαρυνθησεται η ψυχη μου, my soul shall be burdened; and Bishop Newcome, my soul was grieved at them. The word בָּהֵל, rendered abhorred, in the next clause, does not occur elsewhere in the Scriptures, but, according to Bishop Newcome, bears that sense in the Syriac. The LXX. render it, αι ψυκαι αυτων επωριστο εν εμε, Their souls howled, bellowed, roared, or, raised a horrible outcry against me, an expression strikingly descriptive of the fierce and vehement accusations of the Jewish chief priests, scribes, and elders against Christ, and of the violent, loud, and oft-repeated clamours of the people for his condemnation and crucifixion. Of which see Luke xxiii. 5, 10, 18-24.

Verse 9. Then said I, I will not feed you—I will no longer exercise a tender paternal care over you; that that dieth, let it die—Or rather, the dying let it die; that which has a deadly disease, let it perish by that

A. M. 3494. off, let it be cut off; and let the rest
B. C. 510. eat, every one the flesh ⁷of another.

10 And I took my staff, even Beauty, and cut it asunder, that I might break my covenant which I had made with all the people.

11 And it was broken in that day: and ⁸so
²the poor of the flock that waited upon me

⁷ Heb. of his fellow, or, neighbour.—⁸ Or, the poor of the flock, &c., certainly knew.

disease. Or, that which is ready to die, and will not be cured, but hath rejected the shepherd's love and skill, let it die. Thus Jesus said, If ye believe not, ye shall die in your sins. For this seems to be spoken of the miseries to which the Jewish people were delivered up for their manifold sins, and in particular for their rejection of Christ, which filled up the measure of their iniquity. And that that is to be cut off—Namely, by the sword of the enemy; let it be cut off; and let the rest eat every one the flesh of another—Either live to be besieged till hunger and famine make the living eat the dead, or cruelly kill their children and others, that they may eat their flesh; a calamity threatened, Deut. xxviii. 52-58; or else, by seditious and bloody intestine quarrels, destroy each other; all which happened to them in the siege of Jerusalem by the Romans.

Verses 10, 11. And I took my staff, even Beauty—Or, pleasantness, or delight. See note on verse 7: emblematical, as of God's favour, gentleness, or kindness to his people, and of the honour and privilege which they possessed in his oracles, instituted worship, and temple; so especially of God's covenant with them, and all the blessings of it. And cut it asunder—To signify that, as they had rejected God and his favour, and refused to comply with the terms of his covenant, so that God had now annulled it, and rendered it utterly void. That I might break my covenant—This, in some measure, illustrates what is meant by the staff Beauty. While it was unbroken, the covenant between God and the Jews was whole and unbroken. And it is to be observed, Christ calls it his covenant, for he was the mediator of it: namely, to bring us to God in repentance, faith, and holy obedience; and to reconcile God to us in mercy and grace. Which I had made with all the people—Hebrew, כל עמים, literally, all people, that is, all the tribes of Israel; and all other people that, by being proselyted to their religion, were incorporated into their nation. The Jewish Church is thus represented as being now stripped of all its glory, its crown profaned and cast to the ground, and all its honour laid in the dust, God being departed from it, and resolved no more to own it for his church. When Christ told the Jews that the kingdom of God should be taken from them, and given to another people, then he broke the staff of Beauty, Matt. xxi. 43. And it was broken in that day, though Jerusalem and the Jewish people were spared yet forty years longer; and though the great men did not, or would not, under-knew that it was the word of the A. M. 3494.

LORD. B. C. 510.

12 And I said unto them, ⁹If ye think good, give me my price; and if not, forbear. So they ¹weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver.

13 And the LORD said unto me, Cast it unto

² Zeph. iii. 12; Verse 7.—⁹ Heb. If it be good in your eyes.
¹ Matt. xxvi. 15; Exod. xxi. 32.

stand Christ's words uttered on that occasion as a divine sentence, but thought to put it by with a cold, God forbid, Luke xx. 16. Yet the poor of the flock, that waited upon him—Namely, who knew the Messiah, believed in him, observed his doctrine, miracles, and life, and obeyed him; who understood with what authority he spoke, and could distinguish the voice of their shepherd from that of a stranger; knew that he was the word of the Lord—Saw and acknowledged God in all this, trembled at his word, and were confident that it would not fall to the ground.

Verses 12, 13. And I said unto them—Namely, upon parting. The prophet, still personating Christ, or acting as a type of him, reminds the Jews of his concern for their welfare, the care he had taken of them, and the labour he had bestowed on instructing them; and refers it to them whether his services had not deserved some reward, and, if they had, what that reward ought to be; saying, If ye think good, give me my price—Or rather, my wages or hire of service, as the word שכר undoubtedly signifies; and if not, forbear—If you dismiss me without wages I shall be content. So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver—That is, as is supposed, thirty shekels, of the value of about 2s. 4d. each, which was the price of a slave. This showed how little they regarded him, or his labours; that is, how little value the Jews would put on the ministry of Christ; or on his labours and sufferings for their salvation. For, according to St. Matthew, chap. xxvi. 15; xxvii. 9, this symbolical action was fulfilled when the chief priests and elders of the Jews paid that sum to Judas for betraying Christ to them, and putting his life in their power. And the Lord said unto me—Unto the prophet, personating Christ; Cast it unto the potter—Hereby intimating that it was a reward only suitable to a potter's labour, and a price only adequate for such wares as he sold, which were of the meanest value. A goodly price that I was prized at of them—Thus the prophet ironically remarks on the high estimation in which he and his services were holden: or rather, God here upbraids the shepherds of his people, who prized the great Shepherd no higher. And I cast them to the potter, &c.—Or, cast them into the house of the Lord for the potter: I cast them back into the treasury in the temple, whence afterward they were taken, and laid out in purchasing the potter's field. This whole transaction, performed by Zechariah in a vision, as Lowth, Doddridge, and many

A. M. 3494. the ^m potter : a goodly price that I was
B. C. 510. prized at of them. And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORD.

14 Then I cut asunder mine other staff, even

^m Matt. xxvii. 9, 12.

other interpreters suppose, or, as others think, in reality, "was designed to be an exact representation of the several circumstances that should attend the betraying of Christ by Judas, the price the chief priests would put upon him, (to whom, as the governors of the temple, the money was returned,) and the use to which the money would be applied. And this whole prophetic scene was transacted in the single person of Zechariah, just as Ezekiel sustained the type or figure both of the Chaldean army that should besiege Jerusalem, and of the Jews themselves that should be besieged, Ezek. iv. 1-12." So Lowth, who adds, "This is one of those prophecies whose literal sense is fulfilled in our blessed Saviour, and cannot be applied to any other person but in a very remote or improper sense." The like instances may be seen Psa. xxii. 16-18; lxix. 21; Hos. xi. 1. The Jews themselves have expounded this prophecy of the Messiah. "There can be no doubt," says Blayney, "that this is the passage referred to Matt. xxvii. 9, though under the name of Jeremiah, (put by mistake of some transcriber of St. Matthew's gospel,) instead of Zechariah. But a question arises, how the transaction related by the evangelist can be said to be a fulfilling of that which was spoken by the prophet, considering the striking difference in some of the circumstances. In the one case, thirty pieces of silver were given as wages for service; in the other, they were paid as the price of a man's blood: in the one they were thrown with contempt to the potter; in the other, they were cast down in the temple in a fit of remorse, and taken up by others, who employed them in the purchase of the potter's field. But notwithstanding these differences, considering that all passed under the special direction of Divine Providence, it is impossible not to conclude, from a review of both transactions, that there was a designed allusion of the one to the other, and not a mere accidental resemblance between them. But the quotation, it is said, is not just: for no such words are to be found in the prophet, which the evangelist hath pretended to cite from him. To this it may be answered, that though not the precise words, the substance of them is given, so that the passages are at least equivalent," as a collation of them in the original will show: see the note on Matt. xxvii. 9.

Verse 14. Then—As soon as I saw what little value they put upon me, and my pastoral care over them, and services for them; I cut asunder mine other staff, even Bands—The prophet did this in type, and Christ in reality; that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel—That I might declare, or foreshow, that the friendship and ¹⁰ Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel. A. M. 3494. B. C. 510.

15 ¶ And the LORD said unto me, ⁿ Take unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish shepherd.

¹⁰ Or, Binders.—ⁿ Ezek. xxxiv. 2, 3, 4.

union which had existed between the two tribes and the remnant of the ten tribes, was broken. "From the time that the people returned from Babylon, the Jews and Israelites had formed one society, both of religion and polity, which society continued till the last destruction of Jerusalem, when, the Jewish kingdom being subverted, the bands were broken, and a disunion in religion was made; some of the Jews continuing attached to their ancient law as much as they could without the temple, and others professing the Christian faith."—Houbigant. The design of the prophet's commission, says Blayney, was to endeavour to bring about a reformation, upon which would depend the continuance of the brotherhood, or political union, between Judah and Israel. The second crook, or staff, was therefore called Bands. But when the commission ended without producing its effect, the breaking of the crook prefigured the dissolution of that brotherhood. What that brotherhood was, is well explained by Mr. Lowth, who says, that "upon the destruction of Jerusalem, which was the bond and cement of all their tribes, being the seat and centre both of their civil power, and of the divine worship, (Psa. cxxxii. 3-5), the consequence was the entire dissolution of the nation, and the dispersion and confusion of all their tribes, whose families could no longer be distinguished after the loss of their genealogies." Calmet thinks that, in this verse, Israel denotes the unbelieving Jews, who rejected Christ, and Judah the faithful ones who believed in him.

Verse 15. And the Lord said, Take thee yet [or once more] the instruments of a foolish [or unwise] shepherd—The prophet, having hitherto represented the good shepherd, is now directed to assume the dress and equipage of one of a contrary character. As folly in the Scripture is equivalent to wickedness, by a foolish shepherd here may be meant, not only unskilful, but likewise ill-designing governors, or teachers, who should only intend their own advantage, and have no regard for the good of the flock, or people committed to their charge. The instruments of such a shepherd must be suitable to his own disposition and indiscretion, such as a crook armed with iron, which, whenever it was used, would wound the flock; and a scrip, or bag, which contained nothing useful for the sheep, and the like. The prophet here follows the order of time, that he may foretell the madness and blindness of the shepherds; that is, of the priests, rulers, and teachers of the Jewish nation, till the last destruction of Jerusalem; who not only disregarded religion, and the safety and welfare of the sheep, but even devoured such of them as were worth devouring.

A. M. 3494. 16 For lo, I will raise up a shepherd in the land, which shall not visit those that be ¹¹ cut off, neither shall seek the young one, nor heal that that is broken, nor ¹² feed that that standeth still: but he shall eat the flesh of the fat,

¹¹ Or, hidden.—¹² Or, bear.

Verse 16. For lo, I will raise up a shepherd in the land—A shepherd, in the singular number, denotes a succession of such shepherds as are described in the following words. So a succession of priests is represented under the single person of Levi, Mal. ii. 5, 6. Since the Jews had rejected the true Shepherd, God threatens to send, or permit to arise, among them, such shepherds to rule or teach them as should be notorious for their negligence and avarice, their cruelty and oppression. This may be understood either of the blind guides of whom Christ speaks, and whose character he describes at large, Matt. xxiii. 13–33; namely, the scribes and Pharisees, the priests and doctors of their law; or of the avaricious, tyrannical, and unmerciful princes, that should rule them with rigour, and make their own land as much a place of bondage to them as ever Egypt or Babylon had been. And when they had rejected him by whom princes decree justice, it was just that they should be given over into the power of those who should decree unrighteous decrees. It is probable, also, that there is a reference here to the false prophets and false Christs, which, as our Lord foretold, Matt. xxiv. 5, should arise. Many such there were, who, by their seditious practices, provoked the Romans, and hastened on the ruin of the Jewish nation: but it is very remarkable that they were never deceived by a counterfeit Messiah till they had refused and rejected the true Messiah. The prophet proceeds to describe the character of these foolish shepherds, in the following words: 1st, They should be negligent; which shall not visit those that be cut off—Or, as the LXX. render it, το εκλιμνανον, that which is missing, or has wandered from the flock; and it may signify that which is ready to perish. Neither shall seek the young one—Which are most apt to perish through weakness; he alludes to the lambs which, on account of their tender age, are not able to follow the flock. Nor heal that which is broken—Which has received some hurt, but shall leave it to die of its wounds. Nor feed that that standeth still—Not able to go forward. Blayney renders the word, made to stand, or set up again after sickness. “Such,” says he, “it is well known, require much care to nourish and support them, in order to their regaining strength; a care which the foolish shepherd will not bestow upon them.” Or, as the LXX. render it, το ολοκληρον η μη κατευθυνη, nor shall direct that which is whole, mentioned in opposition to those that wander, or are diseased. 2d, These shepherds would be luxurious; he shall eat the flesh of the fat—That is, instead of preserving the best of his flock, in order to increase it, and tear their claws in pieces. A. M. 3494. 17 ° Wo to the idol shepherd that leaveth the flock! the sword shall be upon his arm and upon his right eye: his arm shall be clean dried up, and his right eye shall be utterly darkened.

° Jer. xxiii. 1; Ezek. xxxiv. 2; John x. 12, 13.

he kills them to indulge his own appetite: or, enriches himself by oppressing, or otherwise taking from those that are persons of property: like that wicked servant that said, My lord delays his coming, he eats and drinks with the drunken, serving his own belly. 3d, They are tyrannical and cruel to the flock. And tear their claws [or, as it ought to be rendered, break their hoofs] in pieces—This implies the same as when it is said (Ezek. xxxiv. 4) of such shepherds, With force and with cruelty have ye ruled them. The unwise shepherd, instead of being tender and gentle with his flock, is supposed to drag them about with his iron crook, or to overdrive them in rough and stony ground, so as to break their hoofs. Or, he imposes burdens and hardships upon them that they are unable to bear. Upon the whole, a sluggish, negligent, covetous, riotous, oppressive, and cruel government, priesthood, or ministry, is here shadowed out by a foolish shepherd.

Verse 17. Wo to the idol shepherd—Or the shepherd of nothing, or of no value, as רע דאליל should be translated; he who calls himself the shepherd, ruler, or teacher of the people, but is in reality nothing less. So רפאי אליל, Job xii. 4, signifies physicians of no value. That leaveth the flock—Who taketh no care of the flock, and minds nothing but making his own profit out of them. Such a shepherd is no better than an idol, that is profitable for nothing, (Isa. xlv. 10,) and hath only the outward form and appearance of a shepherd. The sword shall be upon his arm, and upon his right eye—As he has abused his power and his understanding, signified by his arm and his right eye, God shall, in his just judgment, deprive him of the use of both those faculties. The sword is put for any instrument of the divine vengeance. As the word דורב, here rendered sword, also means desolation, Blayney renders the clause, Because of his arm is desolation, and because of his right eye: observing, “The purport of the passage is, that since, through the misapplication of his power, and through his negligence in watching over the flock, they are subjected to desolation or the sword; therefore, as of strict justice, he shall be punished with a deprivation at least of those faculties which he so fatally misused.” Some think the right arm and right eye of the people are intended, and observe, that the arm of the Jews was dried up from that time when they were no longer able to bear arms, or to defend themselves; as their right eye has been darkened to the true knowledge of the Scriptures, which they read as with a veil before them.

CHAPTER XII.

"The former part of this chapter," says Loeeth, "relates to an invasion made upon the inhabitants of Judea and Jerusalem, in the latter times of the world, probably after their return to, and settlement in, their own land, which is often spoken of by the prophets. It is probably the same attempt that is more largely described in the thirty-eighth and thirty-ninth chapters of Ezekiel." Be this as it may, it seems at least probable, that the condition of the Jewish nation, after the present dispersion, and of the gospel church, either in the apostolic or millennial periods, is here spoken of. It is promised, (1.) That all the attempts of their enemies to destroy them would issue in their own danger and ruin, 1-4, 6, 9. (2.) That, trusting in the Lord, they should subdue their opposers, and even the weakest of them be marvellously saved and strengthened by God, 5, 7, 8. (3.) That to prepare them for, and help them to improve, these mercies, they should be blessed in a remarkable degree with a spirit of prayer, faith, and repentance for sin, 10-14.

A. M. 3494. THE burden of the word of the
B. C. 510.

LORD for Israel, saith the LORD,
a which stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, and b form-

a Isa. xlii. 5; xlv. 24; xlv. 12, 18; xlviii. 13.—b Num. xvi. 22; Eccles. xii. 7; Isa. lviii. 16; Heb. xii. 9.—c Isa. li. 17, eth the spirit of man within him. A. M. 3494.

B. C. 510.

2 Behold, I will make Jerusalem
c a cup of ¹ trembling unto all the people round about, ² when they shall be in the siege both

22, 23.—¹ Or, slumber, or, poison.—² Or, and also against Judah shall he be which shall be in siege against Jerusalem.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XII.

Verse 1. The burden of the word of the Lord for Israel—Or, toward Israel; that is, as some interpret it, the prophecy which containeth the words of the Lord to Israel. Saith the Lord, which stretcheth forth the heavens—Who hath spread out the heavens to such a vast extent. And layeth the foundation of the earth—Hath assigned to the earth a fixed place in the creation, or regulates all its motions by fixed laws, which cannot be altered by the power of any creature. And formeth the spirit of man within him—Who gave life to the first man, and created the soul, and united it to the body. All these things are mentioned as undeniable instances of God's almighty power, and are made use of as arguments to encourage men to rely on his word for the fulfilment of such promises as might seem to the understanding of man most unlikely to be brought to pass.

Verse 2. Behold, I will make Jerusalem a cup of trembling—"An inebriating and stupifying potion of the strongest liquor and drugs. Jerusalem shall strike the nations with dread and astonishment." When they shall be in the siege—"A future siege, after the final restoration of the Jews."—Newcome. See on chap. xiv. 3; Rev. xx. 9. "It is not difficult to perceive," says Blayney, "that the prophecies in this and the two following chapters relate to future times, and most probably to those predicted by Ezekiel in the xxxviii and xxxix chapters; where it is said that Israel, after their restoration and return to their own country, would be assailed by a combination of many nations. Such an invasion is also here foretold; but it is not to be expected that all the particulars of a distant prophecy should be clearly understood, before the time of its accomplishment. It is at least likely that when the time shall come for the re-establishment of the Jews, (of which sufficient intimation is given in the prophecies both of the Old and New Testaments,) and they shall begin to collect themselves, and attempt a settlement in their ancient possessions, such a measure will create jealousy and uneasiness, in those powers more especially who are interested in the dominion over those countries. The Turks, we know, are at present, and long have been, in possession of the country of Palestine; and in the opinion of many, who have brought specious arguments to justify it, particularly of the learned Joseph Mede, (p. 674 and 816,) their prince is intended by Gog, prince of Meshech and Tubal, Ezek. xxxviii. 2, &c.; and by the king of the north, Dan. xi. 40, &c.; concerning whom the like things are prophesied in those chapters respectively. Now should that power subsist at the time, it may fairly be presumed, that he, and any other power in the like circumstances, would oppose with all their might an attempt to set up an independent sovereignty in those parts. But, without pretending to determine precisely concerning the invaders, the substance of the prophecy in this, and on to the seventh verse of the next chapter, will be found to amount to this; that Jerusalem will be besieged by a multitude of hostile nations, to the great terror of the people in its vicinity, as well as of Judah itself; but that the attempts of those nations will be frustrated through the special interposition of the Deity, and will terminate in their total discomfiture and ruin, and in the permanent peace and prosperity of the victorious Jews. After which, the Jews will be brought at length to see and lament the sin of their forefathers in putting their Messiah to death, and thereupon will have the means of purification and atonement afforded them; and, being thus cleansed from past guilt, will renounce all their former offensive practices, and carefully abstain from a future repetition of them." To these views of Dr. Blayney, on the important subject of the restoration of the Jews to their own land, however probable upon the whole, there seems to be one great objection. Inasmuch as God cast the Jews out of their land for rejecting and crucifying the Messiah, it seems highly improbable that he should restore them to it while they remain in impenitence and unbelief, and in a state of enmity to that Messiah. It appears much more likely that, previous to their restoration, they must be made sensible of the great guilt which their nation contracted by the commission of that sin, and of the various other sins which accompanied it; and that they must be truly humbled and brought to a

A. M. 3494. against Judah and against Jerusalem.
B. C. 510.

3^d And in that day will I make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all people: all that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces, though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it.

4 In that day, saith the LORD, I will smite every horse with astonishment, and his rider with madness: and I will open mine eyes upon the house of Judah, and will smite every horse of the people with blindness.

^d Verses 4, 6, 8, 9, 11; Chapter xiii. 1; xiv. 4, 6, 8, 9, 13.
^e Matt. xxi. 44.—^f Psa. lxxvii. 6; Ezek. xxxviii. 4.

thorough repentance as a people, before God will open the way in any degree for their restoration. It is certain that, as they were carried captive into Babylon chiefly to punish them for the sin of idolatry, so no way was made for their restoration from that captivity, till they were generally humbled and made truly penitent for that sin.

Verse 3. I will make Jerusalem a burdensome stone—Jerusalem is here compared to a stone of great weight, which, being too heavy for those who attempted to lift it up, or remove it, falls back upon them and crushes them to pieces. St. Jerome, in a note on the place, speaks of an exercise, which, he says, was common in Palestine, and throughout all Judea, in his days, in which the young men, who were ambitious to show their strength, used to lift up stones of enormous weight, as high as they could, some to their knees, others to their navel, their shoulders, and even their heads; and some placed them on the top of their heads, with their hands erect and joined together. In this exercise, it is evident, they must have been in great danger of the stone's falling upon them and bruising them, or even crushing them to pieces. Mr. Lowth, who quotes this passage from Jerome, remarks that, to the same sense, Christ saith, Matt. xxi. 44, On whomsoever this stone shall fall, it will grind him to powder. All that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces—All that undertake to contend with Jerusalem shall be either destroyed or greatly injured, as men will have their flesh torn or bruised that let a heavy stone fall upon them. Though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it—It is obvious, that by all, here is meant only many people, as it is expressed Ezek. xxxviii. 6, 9, 15, Thou, and many people with thee.

Verses 4, 5. In that day—This expression, in the prophetic writings, is of large extent, and not only signifies that particular point of time last spoken of, but some time afterward. I will smite every horse with astonishment—Many commentators explain this of the victories which Judas Maccabæus gained over Antiochus's captains, whose chief force consisted in cavalry. But, as Archbishop Newcome observes, the language is much too strong, as it is also verses 6–9, to denote the successes of the Maccabees against the Seleucidæ. This prophecy therefore, he thinks,

5 And the governors of Judah shall say in their heart, ³The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the LORD of hosts their God.

6 ¶ In that day will I make the governors of Judah like a hearth of fire among the wood, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf; and they shall devour all the people round about, on the right hand and on the left: and Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem.

^a Or, There is strength to me and to the inhabitants, &c., Joel iii. 16.—^b Obadiah 18.

remains to be accomplished. And many commentators, who are of the same opinion, consider it as a prediction of victories that will be obtained over Gog and Magog by the Jews, upon their restoration to their own land. One circumstance in favour of this interpretation is, that Gog and Magog are represented, Ezek. xxxviii. 15, as riders on horses. And if by that people the Turks be intended, we know that they have been, and still are, famous for their cavalry, wherein chiefly the strength of their armies consists. But it is here foretold, that in order to their discomfiture God will send such distraction among their horses and their riders, and throw them into such a state of confusion, that they shall fall foul one upon another, (see chap. xiv. 13,) and not be able to distinguish between their friends and their foes. And I will turn mine eyes upon the house of Judah—I will have an especial concern for their preservation. And the governors of Judah shall say in their heart—Shall say within themselves, The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the Lord—"The text here," says Blayney, "has been supposed corrupt, and many attempts have been made to amend it. But, without any alteration, it well expresses the sentiments of the men of Judah, concerning the interest they had in the safety of Jerusalem and its inhabitants, on which their own strength and security depended in a great degree; so that they would, of course, be influenced to bring that assistance, the efficacy of which is set forth in the verse that follows."

Verse 6. In that day will I make the governors of Judah like a hearth of fire, &c.—The word may be rendered, a pot. The Arabs, according to Harmer, (vol. i. p. 233,) make a fire in a great stone pitcher, and when it is heated, spread paste upon it, which is baked almost in an instant. By a hearth of fire, however, here may be meant, a firebrand taken from the hearth, which, though small, will set other things on fire, and even whole cities. This is thought by some to be a very apt resemblance of the mischief done by the small forces of the Jews, under Judas Maccabæus, to the armies of Antiochus. It may, however, be a resemblance equally, and even more apt, of the destruction made of Gog and Magog, in the latter days, by the Jews restored to their own land. And they shall devour all the peo-

A. M. 3494. 7 The LORD also shall save the
B. C. 510. tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not magnify themselves against Judah.

8 In that day shall the LORD defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and ^hhe that is ⁴feeble ⁵among them at that day shall be as

^h Joel iii. 10.—⁴ Or, abject.—⁵ Heb. fallen.—ⁱ Hag. ii. 22;

ple round about—They shall destroy all the enemies that annoy them; on the right hand and on the left—That is, on the south and on the north: see note on Ezek. xvi. 46. The Targum explains the right hand and the left, of the south and the north. And Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place—Shall be situated and inhabited on the very spot where she formerly stood: see note on chap. xiv. 10.

Verse 7. The Lord shall save the tents of Judah first—Some MSS. and versions read ראשונה, as at the first; “but the meaning here is, that God would save the tents of Judah first, or previously to any other; and for this the reason immediately follows, that the house of David and the inhabitants of Jerusalem might not be tempted to value themselves too highly on the preference given to them (supposing that had been the case) above the rest of Judah.”—Blayney. As the house of David were wont to glory in the honour of their being descended from him, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to value themselves above their brethren, because their city was the place of God’s peculiar residence, and the seat of the royal family; therefore, to take away all occasion of any such glorying and emulation, God here promises that he would first appear in behalf of those Jews that should live in the open country, in cottages or tents, in places unfortified. He will first save the weaker and despised, and then the stronger and more honourable. But this promise, which evidently looks forward to gospel times, seems principally to imply, that the conversion of the nation to Christianity will begin among the more poor, low, and obscure Jews, and not among the rich, great, and learned: lest the latter should glory over the others, as if the change among the people had been effected by their power, wisdom, or influence; or should assume any improper ascendancy over their inferiors: in other words, that the wise man might not glory in his wisdom, neither the mighty man in his might, nor the rich man in his riches: and that no flesh might glory in God’s presence, but that he that should glory might glory only in the Lord, Jer. ix. 23.

Verses 8, 9. In that day shall the Lord defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem—Not only Jerusalem itself from being taken and destroyed, but all the inhabitants of it from being in any way injured: he will not only be a wall of fire about the city to fortify it, but he will compass particular persons with his favour as with a shield. The mystical Jerusalem,

David; and the house of David shall ^{A. M. 3494.}
be as God, as the angel of the LORD ^{B. C. 510.}
before them.

9 And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to ⁱdestroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem.

10 ^k And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem,

Verse 3.—^k Jer. xxxi. 9: l. 4: Ezek. xxxix. 29: Joel ii. 28.

the Christian Church, and particularly that of the converted Jews, seems to be chiefly intended. And he that is feeble among them shall be as David—The feeblest among them shall be men of war, bold and brave, skilful and strong: shall enterprise and accomplish great things, as David did, and become as serviceable to Jerusalem in guarding it as David himself was in founding and enlarging it, and as formidable as he was to the enemies of it. Observe, reader, God helps and defends his church and people by giving them courage and strength to defend and help themselves. He enables them to do their part, and then he is not wanting to do his. And the house of David shall be as God—Or, as angels, as the word אלהים, Elohim, is rendered, Psa. viii. 3. As the angel of the Lord before them—Or, at the head of them; as that angel (so some interpret it) which went before the people of Israel through the wilderness, Exod. xxiii. 20. God will increase the gifts and abilities, both of the people and princes, in proportion to the respective services for which they are designed. It was said of David, that he was as an angel of God, to discern good and bad, 2 Sam. xiv. 17; such shall now the house of David be. But this was to have its full accomplishment in Christ: now the house of David looked little and mean, and its glory was eclipsed, but in Christ the house of David was to shine more bright than ever. In him it was to become more blessed, and more a blessing than ever it had been. And I will seek to destroy all the nations, &c.—See notes on verses 3–6.

Verse 10. And I will pour, &c.—God’s signal interposition in behalf of Judah and Jerusalem, after their future restoration, having been foretold, the prophet proceeds to foretel their conversion to Christianity. But though the prophet speaks of this after he has foretold their restoration, it does not follow that it shall take place after that event. It is certainly much more probable that they will first be brought to repentance for the sin of rejecting and crucifying their Messiah, and to believe in him with their heart unto righteousness, and then that God will bestow upon them that great mercy of re-establishing them in the possession of Canaan: see note on verse 2. “The Jews had stumbled and fallen at the stone of stumbling and rock of offence, the Messiah, in his humble appearance, as Isaiah foretold. That no one might be surprised at this sudden change of their affairs, [namely, their restoration to their own land, and their prosperity therein,] Zechariah tells us, they should themselves be first

A. M. 3494. the spirit of grace and of supplica-
B. C. 510. tions: and they shall ¹ look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn
for him, ^m as one mourneth for his only son,
and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn.

¹ John xix. 34, 37; Rev. i. 7.—^m Jer. vi. 26; Amos viii. 10.
ⁿ Acts ii. 37.

changed, and repent heartily of that sin which had been the cause of their fall, for God should pour out on them the spirit of grace and supplication, that they might look with compunction of heart on him whom they had pierced; and he should, by his Spirit, improve those good dispositions into a thorough conviction of his being the Messiah, whom they had rejected: for this they should weep bitterly, verse 11, and make earnest supplications till received again into his grace and favour. This done, it follows, chap. xiii. 1, In that day shall a fountain be opened, &c. Now who were they whose sin and uncleanness were washed away, but the house of David, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem; the same who had sinned, and mourned, and repented, and were therefore pardoned? What did they mourn for, but for him whom they had pierced, and whose death they had bewailed with all the solemnities of true mourners? It was then the act and sin of the house of David, and of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that they pierced and slew him whom they now looked upon; for which their land was treated as polluted, and removed out of God's sight into captivity, not to be restored to them till their sin was remitted upon their true repentance. Thus much is evident from the context:" see Chandler's Defence, and Dodd.

But though this passage may chiefly relate to the future and general conversion of the Jews to the Christian faith, which St. Paul calls life from the dead, and therefore will not receive its full accomplishment till that event takes place; yet it may also be understood of some other prior conversions of the Jewish people, and particularly of those of the many thousands brought to repentance by the preaching of John the Baptist, of Christ, and his apostles. For it appears from the accounts we have in the New Testament, that though the rulers and leading men among the Jews were not converted in that age of the Christian Church, yet a vast number of the people were. So that this prophecy has, in some degree at least, been already fulfilled, and the spirit of grace and supplication hath been poured out in a measure, if not upon the house of David, yet upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem. In the expression, They shall look upon me whom they have pierced, (the words being spoken by God,) is implied, that in the piercing of Christ, God himself, figuratively speaking, was pierced through the wounds of his beloved Son, he being infinitely dear to his heavenly Father, and his cause the cause of God. This passage is undoubtedly cited in St. John's gospel, chap. xix. 37. Οφονται εις ου εξεκεντησαν, They shall look

11 In that day shall there be a great ^{A. M. 3494.}
^{B. C. 510.} mourning in Jerusalem, ^o as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon.

12 ^p And the land shall mourn, ^q every family apart; the family of the house of David apart,

^o 2 Kings xxiii. 29; 2 Chron. xxxv. 24.—^p Matthew xxiv. 30
Rev. i. 7.—^q Heb. families, families.

on him whom they have pierced. For although the present Hebrew text is, הביטו אלי, They shall look unto me, between forty and fifty MSS. are produced which read אלי, unto him, with the concurrence of other authorities. They shall mourn for him—They shall heartily lament the crucifying of the Lord Jesus, not only as the sinful, cruel act of their fathers, but as that in which their sins had a great share. As one mourneth for his only son—With an unfeigned and real, a great and long-continued, a deep and lasting sorrow, such as is the sorrow of a father on the death of an only son: they shall retain it inwardly, and express it outwardly, as in the funeral mournings on such occasions. And shall be in bitterness for him—True repentance will bitterly lament the sins that brought sorrows and pain upon the Son of God.

Verses 11–14. In that day—When the Jews shall mourn for their sins, and for that great sin, the crucifying the Lord of glory; there shall be a great mourning in Jerusalem—A mourning expressed by the greatest the Jews ever experienced, the mourning for Josiah slain in Hadadrimmon, a town in the valley of Megiddon. There the lamentations for that good prince began, and were continued for many days from thence to Jerusalem, whither his body was carried to be interred in the sepulchre of his fathers; and there all Judah and Jerusalem mourned for him, and appointed the day to be annually observed with lamentations: so that from thenceforward the mourning for Josiah became a proverb for an extraordinary lamentation. And the land shall mourn, every family apart—The whole land shall mourn in a most solemn manner: and every family shall sequester themselves from business and conversation for that purpose. The house of David apart, and their wives apart—Those of the royal family, who have rejected Christ, shall lead the way. Even husbands and wives shall abstain from each others company, as was usual in times of solemn humiliation. Or, as some learned men suggest, in solemn processions, it was usual for the several orders of men to go distinctly, and likewise for the women to go in ranks by themselves, each tribe, or order of men and women, using a distinct form of lamentation, and expressing their sorrow in different words. This was probably done in the mourning for Josiah, and observed in the times after the return from captivity: see 2 Chron. xxxv. 25, to which ceremonies the expressions of text may allude. The family of Nathan apart—David had a son named Nathan, 2 Sam. v. 14. This branch of the royal family seems to be here meant, as that by

A. M. 3194. and their wives apart; and the fa-
B. C. 510. mily of the house of ^a Nathan apart, and their wives apart;

13 The family of the house of Levi apart,

^a 2 Sam. v. 14; Luke iii. 31.

Solomon is implied in the preceding clause. "It is possible," says Newcome, "that at the final restoration of the Jews, the genealogies of some tribes may be found to have been preserved; and that the family of David may be traced up to more than one of its collateral branches; each of which, on account of its distinguished eminence, is to mourn apart." The house of Levi apart—If the tribe of Levi be intended, it may be observed, the sacerdotal tribe were the most bitter persecutors of Christ; they hired the traitor, they sought witnesses; the high-priest, the head of that family, condemned him to die: for all which sins they shall one day be called upon to reckon with God, and therefore, above other tribes, are particularly named as chief mourners, for their injustice and cruelty to their Messiah. But probably a Levi, mentioned Luke iii. 29, is meant. The family of Shimei apart—For Shimei, the LXX., Arabic, and Syriac have Simeon. "As Nathan, Simeon, and Levi, are all reckoned among

and their wives apart; the family ⁷ of A. M. 3494.
Shimei apart, and their wives apart; B. C. 510.

14 All the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart.

⁷ Or, of Simeon, as LXX.

the progenitors of Christ, Luke iii. 29–31, may not their families be mentioned by name as more particularly concerned in the guilt to be lamented? For neither did his brethren believe in him, John vii. 5."—Blayney. All the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart—Thus, after the mention of four particulars, he completes the induction by a general clause. As if he had said, It would be tedious to mention every family and their wives, though but once, therefore a general comprehensive account may suffice: some of every family, of the whole remnant of Israel, shall mourn, look to, believe in, and obey Christ. Thus the mourning of the Jews for their Messiah shall bear some proportion to their violence and cruelty against him; and they, through faith, shall live by the death of him whom they slew, and rise to glory by him whom they loaded with reproaches! What will not grace do, when it converts, accepts, comforts, and glorifies such offenders!

CHAPTER XIII.

In this chapter we have, (1.) A general promise of pardon proclaimed to the Jews upon their conversion, and of their being cleansed from idolatry, and false pretences to prophecy, upon their believing in Christ, 1–6. (2.) A clear prediction of the sufferings of Christ, the destruction of the bulk of the Jewish nation, and the purifying of a remnant, 7–9.

A. M. 3494. IN ^a that day there shall be ^b a B. C. 510. fountain opened to the house of ^a Chap. xii. 3.—^b Heb. ix. 14; 1 Pet. i. 19; Rev. i. 5.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIII.

Verse 1. In that day—When the Lamb of God shall be offered up a sacrifice for mankind, and the gospel shall be preached, in which the glad tidings of our redemption are published. This seems to be a continuation of the prophecy begun at the ninth verse of the preceding chapter; and the meaning to be that, through the atoning sacrifice of the Messiah, the repentance and humiliation there described should be accepted of God, and followed with a full pardon and gracious communication of sanctifying grace to the penitent. There shall be a fountain opened—"The blood of Christ, which cleanseth from all sin, (1 John i. 7,) is manifestly here intended, the Jews being, upon their repentance and conversion, to be admitted to all the privileges of the Christian covenant." Probably there may be an allusion in the words "to the one great spring at Jerusalem, (mentioned Isa. vii. 3,) which served the uses of king and people." See Vitringa. The spouse of Christ, his church, is a spring shut up, a fountain

1064

David and to the inhabitants of Je- A. M. 3494.
rusalem for sin and for ¹ uncleanness. B. C. 510.

¹ Heb. separation for uncleanness.

sealed, Cant. iv. 12; but Christ is to sinners a fountain opened: under the law, he was as the waters of the temple for the Jews; but now his merits are opened to us Gentiles, free for all, and of easy access, and of sovereign virtue to heal. For sin and for uncleanness—The original words here used, חטאת and נדב, are "legal terms; the former denotes sin generally, or any transgression of the law which required atonement, and is sometimes put for the means of purification from it, Num. xix. 9–17; the latter is used for that uncleanness, or legal defilement, which secluded a man from all intercourse with God, and holy things. Now whatever efficacy the blood of bulls and of goats, and the ashes of a heifer, sprinkled on the unclean, had to purify from legal sin and defilement, the same is ascribed to the blood of Christ in the Christian dispensation, for purging the conscience of a sinner from the guilt of dead works, or moral pollution."—Blayney. The legal washings were but shadows and types of this matchless, healing, purifying fountain, which never

3

z. M. 3494. B. C. 510. 2 And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD of hosts, that I will ^acut off the names of the idols out of the land, and they shall no more be remembered: and also I will cause ^dthe prophets and the unclean spirit to pass out of the land.

3 And it shall come to pass, that when any shall yet prophesy, then his father and his mother that begat him shall say unto him, 'Thou shalt not live; for thou speakest lies' in

^c Exod. xxiii. 13; Josh. xxiii. 7; Psalm xvi. 4; Ezek. xxx. 13; Hosea ii. 17; Micah v. 12, 13.—^d 2 Pet. ii. 1.—^e Deut. xiii. 6, 8; xviii. 20.

fails to heal all those that apply to it. It must be observed, likewise, that spiritual graces and influences, communicated by the Holy Spirit, are also compared to a fountain, Joel iii. 17; and by these sinners are represented as being washed and cleansed, Ezek. xxxvi. 25; Titus iii. 5.

Verse 2. I will cut off the names of the idols—I will utterly destroy idols and idolatry. The Jews were forbidden to mention the names of the heathen idols, Exod. xxiii. 13; Josh. xxiii. 7; and when idolatry should be utterly extirpated, the names of the idols should be buried in oblivion. "It has been urged, in proof that this prophecy was uttered before the Babylonish captivity, that idolatry and groundless pretensions to prophecy were common among the Jews at that time, which has not been the case since. But, admitting the Jews not to have been addicted to idolatry, or false prophesying, at any particular period, [since the Babylonish captivity,] who can say they will not fall into both those transgressions at some future time? It is probable they will do so; for Ezekiel, confessedly prophesying of the latter times, when Israel and Judah, incorporated again into one nation, shall return into their own land, says, to the same effect as Zechariah, Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions, Ezek. xxxvii. 23. But besides, supposing the Jews themselves to remain untainted with those corruptions, it surely will not be denied that they do and may still prevail among other nations, who may be included in the term האֲדָמִים, taken in its most general sense, the earth; and so I conceive it should be: for we are taught to expect that the conversion of the Jews will be followed by a further reformation in the world, Rom. xi. 15; and that the time will come, when the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our God and of his Christ, Rev. xi. 15; and the beast, the emblem of idolatry, and with him the false prophet, shall be cast into a lake of fire and brimstone, Rev. xix. 2."—Blayney. I will cause the prophets—The false prophets; and unclean spirit—This seems to mean those that prophesy by means of an unclean spirit: see Acts xvi. 16; Rev. xvi. 13; and what is said in the next verse of any one that shall prophesy, must be understood the name of the LORD: and his father shall and his mother that begat him ^ashall thrust him through when he prophesieth. A. M. 3194. B. C. 510.

4 And it shall come to pass in that day, that the prophets shall be ashamed every one of his vision, when he hath prophesied; neither shall they wear ^aa ²rough garment ³to deceive:

5 ^bBut he shall say, I am no prophet, I am a husbandman; for man taught me to keep cattle from my youth.

^f Micah iii. 6, 7.—^g 2 Kings i. 8; Isaiah xx. 2; Matthew iii. 4.—² Heb. a garment of hair.—³ Heb. to lie.—^b Amos vii. 14.

of those that undertake to prophesy by means of an impure spirit, or other false pretences.

Verse 3. And when any shall yet prophesy—Namely, falsely; then his father and his mother shall say unto him—His dearest friends shall discourse with him, and inform him what the law of Moses directs in this case; Thou shalt not live—This probably is not to be considered as the condemnatory sentence; for, being private persons, they had no right to pronounce such a sentence; but it is a repetition of the law, which saith, that a false prophet ought not to be suffered to live, Deut. xiii. 6–8. For thou speakest lies in the name of the Lord—Thou fallest under the sentence of the law. And his father and his mother shall thrust him through—Even the parents of such a person shall be forward to put in execution against him the penalties inflicted by the law upon false prophets and seducers. "They shall treat such a one in the same manner as their fathers did the true prophet, the Messiah; they shall pierce or thrust him through."—Lowth. The purport of this passage seems to be, that very vigorous and decisive measures shall then be taken against every kind and degree of idolatry.

Verses 4, 5. The prophets shall be ashamed every one of his vision—That is, of the extraordinary communication which he pretended to have received, when he uttered a prophecy which he knew to be false. Neither shall they wear a rough garment to deceive—The true prophets were wont to wear rough or hairy garments, and therefore the false ones did the same, in order to pass off their impostures; but the words here imply that they should do this no longer. But he shall say, I am no prophet—The name they so much affected before, they shall quite disown. I am a husbandman; man taught me to keep cattle from my youth—Disclaiming all pretensions to the character of a prophet, he shall profess himself to be no other than a plain, ordinary labouring man, employed in husbandry from his youth. Mr. Harmer's observations on this passage, which he justly parallels with the declaration of Amos, chap. i. 14, go to show the incompatibility of such active and laborious employments with the retired and sedentary life of those who were trained up in the schools of the prophets, in order to qualify themselves for that profession.

A. M. 3494. 6 And one shall say unto him,
B. C. 510. What are these wounds in thy hands? Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.

7 ¶ Awake, O sword, against ⁱ my Shepherd, and against the man ^k that is my fellow, saith the LORD of hosts: ^l smite the Shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered; and I will turn my hand upon ^m the little ones.

ⁱ Isa. xl. 11; Ezek. xxxiv. 23.—^k John x. 30; xiv. 10, 11; Phil. ii. 6.—^l Matt. xxvi. 31; Mark xiv. 27.—^m Matt. xviii. 10, 14; Luke xii. 32.

Verse 6. What are these wounds in thy hands—"Two ancient usages," Blayney thinks, "are alluded to; the one, that of the idolatrous priests and prophets, who sought to engage the attention and favour of their deity by cutting and slashing themselves, as the priests of Baal did, 1 Kings xviii. 28; the other, that of those who cut themselves, as a token of their grief and mourning for their deceased relations and friends:" see note on Jer. xvi. 6. It appears, also, from Jer. xlvi. 37, that these cuttings were performed on the hands in particular. "When therefore the man, now ashamed of his pretensions to prophesy, came to be challenged for those scars that were visible on his hands, he would deny them to have proceeded from any idolatrous cause; but would have them thought to be marks left by those wounds which he gave himself in the house of his relations and friends, in the paroxysms of his grief for the loss of them." The word כְּבוֹת, however, here rendered wounds, may be translated strokes, or marks, and is thought by many learned interpreters to signify some particular marks or characters, imprinted on the body of the person here spoken of, in honour of the particular God he worshipped. Thus the worshippers of Bacchus had an ivy leaf imprinted on their bodies. These impressions were most frequently made on the hands, to which the expression, Rev. xiii. 16, receiving the mark of the beast on the right hand, alludes; so that, according to this interpretation, the meaning of what is said here must be that, in the times here spoken of, inquiry would be made of those in whose hands any marks or characters were perceived, by what means they came there, and what they signified. These marks, Bishop Lowth observes, on Isa. xlv. 5, "were made by punctures rendered indelible by fire, or by staining; thus the slave was marked with the name of his master; the soldier of his commander; the idolater with the name or ensign of his god. And the Christians seem to have imitated this practice, by what Procopius says, 'Because many marked their wrists, or their arms, with the sign of the cross, or with the name of Christ.'" Then he shall answer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends—This is given as the answer which the person who had been addicted to idolatry, and had received the marks of some false god in his hands,

8 And it shall come to pass, that in A. M. 3494.
all the land, saith the LORD, two B. C. 510.
parts therein shall be cut off and die; ^a but the third shall be left therein.

9 And I will bring the third part ^o through the fire, and will ^p refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: ^q they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: ^r I will say, It is my people; and they shall say, The LORD is my God.

^a Rom. xi. 5.—^o Isa. xlviii. 10.—^p 1 Pet. i. 6, 7.—^q Psa. l. 15; xci. 15; Chapter x. 6.—^r Psa. cxlv. 15; Jer. xxx. 22; Ezek. xi. 20; Hos. ii. 23; Chap. viii. 8.

would make to the above-mentioned inquiry; he would conceal the truth, and pretend that they were not marks belonging to any god, but marks which he wore in his flesh by way of honour to, or in token of, his dependance on the family which had taken him under their patronage. Several interpreters understand this verse of the wounds of Christ, and the rather because a remarkable prophecy of his being wounded for our transgressions, by the sword of divine justice, follows in the next verse. And certainly the passage is very capable of such an interpretation; for, as the Jews professed to be the friends of the promised Messiah, and he had conducted himself in the most friendly manner toward them; when he was scourged, nailed to the cross, and pierced, he might, with great propriety, be said to have been wounded in the house of his friends.

Verses 7-9. Awake, O sword, against my shepherd—Here "the prophet goes back to the great subject of prophecy, the Messiah, after having foretold some events posterior to his appearance; and he then proceeds to other events subsequent to that grand epocha in the history of the Jews, and of mankind; some near it, and some remote."—Newcome. That the sufferings and death of Christ are here predicted, is certain from Christ's having applied this prophecy to himself, a few hours before he was apprehended in order to be put to death, as St. Matthew (chap. xxvi. 31) and St. Mark (chap. xiv. 27) inform us, where, foretelling to his disciples that they should all be offended because of him that night, he added, For it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered; and his applying it so directly to himself and his disciples, is as much as if he had said, in direct terms, that this was a prediction of what should happen to himself and them; so that it seems an entire perversion of the passage to apply it to any other subject. He alone, strictly speaking, was and is God's shepherd, and the man, his fellow, or friend, or very near to him, as Houbigant renders כִּבְיָ, and as it certainly properly signifies, no thing or person being so near and dear to God as his beloved Son; the consequence of whose crucifixion was the scattering for a time of his disciples. And I will turn my hand upon the little ones—Houbigant reads, instead of smite, I will smite the shepherd; but I will turn, or bring back, my hand upon the little ones: that is, upon that third part of the people, which was to be tried as gold in the furnace. This is that part which, it is said, verse 9, shall call on the name of the Lord: whence it is justly inferred that the two other parts of the Jewish nation, which were to perish, were those Jews who received not the gospel, and who were slain by the Romans: for it is said of the third part, They shall call on my name, in opposition to the two parts who should be cut off and die, verse 8. But, even of that third, many Jews, who had believed the gospel, fell away, as when gold or silver is tried, much dross is found among it. So that the number of Jews who should continue in the faith of the gospel is left very small; which the event sufficiently proves, as we learn from the Acts of the Apostles: see Houbigant. Upon the whole we learn from these verses, as Dr. Sharpe observes, the following particulars: "That the shepherd, called the fellow of God, was to be smitten; the sheep were to be scattered; two parts of all that inhabited the land were to be cut off, and die; a third only left, which was to be brought through the fire, refined as silver, and tried as gold. Then it follows, verse 9, They shall call, &c. The like events happened under the gospel: the shepherd was smitten, the sheep were scattered, they were to endure severe trials, and their faith was to be more precious than gold tried with fire. To the Jews, our Saviour said, Behold, your house is left unto you desolate; and verily I say unto you, ye shall not see me until the time come when ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Our Saviour here foretels the desolation and destruction of Jerusalem; and, instead of comforting the Jews with the prospect of a third temple, and the restoration of bloody sacrifices, in some future age, or advent of the Messiah, he expressly declares they shall see him no more, till they shall acknowledge him by saying, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord."—Dr. Sharpe's 2d Argument, p. 356.

CHAPTER XIV.

In this chapter we have a continuation of the prophecy begun in the last two verses of the preceding chapter. Here is (1.) The taking and spoiling of Jerusalem by many and cruel enemies, 1, 2. (2.) The Lord coming forth to fight against the nations who had been the instruments of his vengeance, 3, 4. (3.) The manifestation of the kingdom of God, and the great increase of spiritual light and grace, till the name and majesty of Jehovah are acknowledged through the whole earth, 5-9. (4.) The rebuilding, replenishing, and final establishment of Jerusalem in security, 10, 11. (5.) Dreadful judgments inflicted upon all who fought against her, 12-19. (6.) The extraordinary holiness of the church in the latter days, 20, 21.

A. M. 3494.
B. C. 510.

BEHOLD, ^athe day of the LORD cometh, and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee.

2 For ^bI will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and ^cthe houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city.

A. M. 3494.
B. C. 510.

^a Isa. xlii. 9; Joel ii. 31; Acts ii. 20.

^b Joel iii. 2.—^c Isa. xlii. 16.

NOTES ON CHAPTER XIV.

Verses 1, 2. Behold, the day of the Lord cometh—A day of the Lord's great wrath and indignation will soon overtake you, O sinful, unthankful, bloody Jews! A day remarkable for the execution of divine vengeance upon you, and your city, Jerusalem. This chapter ought to have been joined to the preceding; for here the prophet continues to foretel the execution of the threatenings contained in the latter part of the former chapter; namely, how the unbelieving Jews should be destroyed by the Romans. Thy spoils shall be divided in the midst of thee—All that thou hast, O Jerusalem, shall become a prey to thine enemies, who shall be such absolute masters of thee, that, in the greatest security, they shall divide among themselves whatever spoil they take from thee, in the very place where they take it. For I will gather all nations—"The Romans, being lords of the known world, had the strength of all nations united in their forces. Thus, (Jer. xxiv. 1.)

Nebuchadnezzar is said to fight against Jerusalem with all the kingdoms of the earth."—Lowth. And the city shall be taken—For God is its enemy, and who can stand before him, or before nations gathered by him? Where he gives commission, he will give success. And the houses rifled, and the women ravished—The Roman soldiers shall exercise those acts of lust and violence which are too frequent among conquerors. That all the outrages were committed, and the miseries endured, which are here predicted, when the Romans took Jerusalem, we have abundant proof from Josephus and other historians: see notes on Deut. xxviii. And half of the city shall go into captivity—The Hebrew word rendered half, may be translated a portion. It must be observed, that the city only is here spoken of; but chap. xiii. 8, where mention is made of two parts being cut off and dying, refers to the whole land. And the residue of the people shall not be cut off—"The Romans spared the young and useful part of

A. M. 3494. 3 ¶ Then shall the Lord go forth, B. C. 510. and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle.

4 And his feet shall stand in that day^d upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east, and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west,^e and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the A. M. 3494. mountain shall remove toward the B. C. 510. north, and half of it toward the south.

5 And ye shall flee to the valley of B. C. 510. the mountains; ²for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee like as ye fled from before the ¹earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah:

^d Ezekiel xi. 23.—^e Joel iii. 12, 14.—¹ Or, my mountains.

² Or, when he shall touch the valley of the mountains to the place he separated.—¹ Amos i. 1.

the Jews: Josephus, Bel. Jud., vi. ix. 2. However, these were either condemned to the mines in Egypt, or exposed to the sword and to wild beasts in the provincial theatres, or sold for slaves. Ibid. It must be observed, that the forty thousand who were permitted to go where they pleased, were Idumeans: Bel. Jud., vi. viii. 2.—Newcome. "But it is probable that the remnant of the Jews, who survived this almost exterminating destruction, and their descendants, who have for so many centuries been preserved a distinct people, in order to their future restoration, are intended."—Scott.

Verse 3. Then shall the Lord—After he hath sufficiently punished Jerusalem and the rest of the Jewish nations; go forth—Out of his holy place, as a warrior prepared for battle. This is spoken after the manner of men; and fight against those nations—Which had taken and destroyed Jerusalem, and oppressed his people. As when he fought in the day of battle—As in those days when he evidently fought for his people. The meaning is, that in after times God would discomfit and destroy the posterity of these nations, namely, the Roman idolaters and those under their empire; that when he had made use of them as a scourge to his people, he would execute his judgments upon them, as when he fought against the enemies of his church formerly, the Egyptians, Canaanites, and others. Observe here, reader, the instruments of God's wrath will themselves be made the objects of it; for it will come to their turn to drink of the cup of trembling; and whom God fights against, he will be sure to overcome. It is observable that the Roman empire never flourished after the destruction of Jerusalem as it had done before; but God evidently fought against it, and against all the nations under its dominion, or in alliance with it, till at last it was subverted and destroyed, its richest cities taken and plundered, and its various provinces ravaged by the Goths and Vandals, and other barbarous invaders.

Verses 4, 5. And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, &c.—It is very difficult to say to what time this prediction refers, or what is its precise meaning. Commentators are not at all agreed on the subject. Some think the passage refers to the time immediately subsequent to the destruction of Jerusalem, foretold in verses 1, 2, and that it is to be understood figuratively, namely, 1st, That by the Lord's standing before Jerusalem on the east, is meant, his drawing peculiarly near to his church and people, here, as frequently elsewhere, signified by Jerusalem; and that he would be at hand to succour and save them: and would give success to, and be manifested in, the gospel preached by his apostles, who received their commission on that mount before Christ's ascension. 2d, That by the cleaving of the mount of Olives in the midst, toward the east and toward the west, so as to make a very great valley, is meant the removing of the ceremonial law, which was like an aspiring mountain, or partition wall, between the Jews and Gentiles, and a great obstruction to the conversion of the latter, and their entrance into the church of God? but that, by the destruction of Jerusalem, this mountain should be made to cleave, as it were, in the midst, this partition wall be broken down, and God's church, the spiritual Jerusalem, made of easy access to the Gentiles. Thus the way of the Lord would be prepared, every mountain and hill brought low, and a plain and pleasant valley, or open way of communication, be found in the place of them: see Isa. xl. 4. 3d, That by the valley of the mountains, is meant the gospel church, to which, as a place of refuge, many of the Jews should flee, as people fled formerly from before the earthquake here mentioned, and should hasten into it together with the Gentiles. 4th, That by this valley reaching to Azal, or, to the separate place, as the word signifies, is signified that the privileges of the church should not be limited, as formerly, to any particular nation, or people, but should be extended to all those who, in obedience to the call of God, should come out from the world, separate themselves from sinners, devote themselves to God, and become his peculiar people. And, 5th, That by the Lord's coming, and all his saints with him, is signified the spiritual coming and extension of his kingdom, whereby a multitude of converts, both of Jewish and Gentile extraction, should be made, who, through faith working by love, should become saints, or holy persons. This, in substance, seems to be Henry's view of the passage, as it is that of many others.

Lowth, on the other hand, interprets it literally, as follows: His feet shall stand upon the mount of Olives—"The glory of the Lord, that is, the Shechinah, or symbol of God's presence, when it departed from the city and temple, settled itself upon the mount of Olives, Ezek. xi. 23; so when God shall return to Jerusalem, [that is, to Jerusalem rebuilt and inhabited by the converted Jews restored to their own land, at the beginning of the millen-

A. M. 3494. ^a and the LORD my God shall come, B. C. 510. and ^b all the saints with thee.

6 And it shall come to pass in that day, ³ that the light shall not be ⁴ clear, nor ⁵ dark :

^a Matt. xvi. 27; xxiv. 30, 31; xxv. 31; Jude 14. — ^b Joel iii. 11. — ³ That is, it shall not be clear in some places, and dark in other places of the world.

nium,] and make it the seat of his presence again, it [the Shechinah] shall return by the same way it departed, Ezek. xliii. 2. We may add, that when our Lord ascended from the mount of Olives, the angels told his disciples, he should come again in like manner, that is, in a visible and glorious appearance, at the same place, Acts i. 11, 12. And the mount of Olives shall cleave, &c.—By an earthquake, such as was in the time of King Uzziah: see Amos i. 1. The middle of mount Olivet shall cleave asunder, and sink into a deep valley, so as to leave the two points, or tops of the hill, north and south, still standing. For mount Olivet, as we learn from Maundrel, had three tops, or eminences; one on the north side, another on the south, and a third in the middle, from whence Christ ascended, and where the Christians in after times erected a cross, in memory of his ascension there. And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains—When ye see the mount of Olives cleave asunder, ye shall flee toward the valley for fear. The margin reads, The valley of my mountains, which may be understood of Zion and Moriah; but the Chaldee and LXX. read, The valley of my mountains shall be filled up; for the valley of the mountains shall join even to Azal, it shall even be filled up, as it was by the earthquake in the days of Uzziah. Josephus writes, (Ant. Jud., lib. ix. cap. 10), ‘That before the city, at a place called Εππωρη, [or the cleft,] one half of the mountain, on the western side, was broken off, and having rolled four furlongs toward the eastern mountain, stopped, so that the roads were choked up, and the king’s gardens.’ And the Lord my God shall come, and all the saints [or holy ones] with thee—Or with him, as the Chaldee and LXX. read.” “The words,” Lowth adds, “are a description of Christ’s coming to judgment, attended with all the holy angels, as the writers of the New Testament express it, the word קרשי, translated saints, often signifying angels: see Deut. xxxiii. 2; so the word saints seems to be used 1 Thes. iii. 13; and St. Jude, verse 14, quoting the prophecy of Enoch, says, The Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints, or holy ones: a place exactly parallel with this of the text.”

One observation seems needful to be made here: if the visible and personal coming of Christ be intended in these verses, it certainly cannot be his coming to raise the dead and judge the world in righteousness, because that view of the passage would not, by any means, be consistent with what is said in the two next verses concerning the continually increasing light of knowledge, holiness, and happiness in the gospel church, till, at length, at evening time it shall be quite light: but it must rather be understood of his coming to introduce,

7 But ^a it shall be ¹ one day ^k which shall be known to the LORD, not day, nor night: but it shall come to pass, that at ¹ evening time it shall be light.

^a Heb. precious. — ^b Heb. thickness. — ^c Or, the day shall be one. — ^d Rev. xxii. 5. — ^e Matt. xxiv. 36. — ^f Isaiah xxx. 26; lx. 19, 20; Rev. xxi. 23.

establish, and perfect his millennial reign, believed in and expected generally in the first Christian church. The reader will consider these different interpretations, and will of course adopt that which he thinks the most probable.

Verses 6, 7. And it shall come to pass in that day—Namely, when the Lord shall come forth to fight against the enemies of his church, the nations that fought against Jerusalem, as foretold verse 3; or, in that day when he shall come to convert and restore the Jews, and spread his gospel through all the world; the light—Namely, of knowledge, holiness, and happiness in his church; shall not—Namely, at first; be clear—Like that of the perfect day; nor dark—As perfect night, but shall be a kind of twilight, a mixture of light and darkness, of knowledge and ignorance, as to divine things, of holiness and sin, of happiness and misery, or of prosperity and adversity. But it shall be one day—One continued day; there shall be no setting of the sun to make it quite night; but God will invariably pursue the end he has in view, and always act in order to it, namely, the full salvation of his spiritual Jerusalem. Which shall be known to the Lord—The Lord will always have his eye upon this progressive day, and upon all the events of it. He will continually take notice of them, and order and dispose of all for the best, according to the counsel of his own will. But at evening time—When natural days end, and when, perhaps, the shades of the evening may appear to be coming on, and there may be an apprehension of returning darkness; it shall be light—This spiritual day shall be full of light and glory, Isa. xlviii. 8; and lx. 19–21. Mr. Scott considers these verses as containing a compendious prophecy of the state of the church, from its establishment in the apostles’ days, to those glorious times which are expected; a prophecy foretelling that, “for a long season, the light would neither be clear nor dark: it would be greatly obscured by ignorance, heresy, superstition, and idolatry, yet not wholly extinguished: and the state of the church would be much deformed by sin and calamities; yet some holiness and consolation would be found. This period could neither be called a clear, bright day, cheered and illumined by the shining of a summer’s sun, nor would it be dark, as if the sun were set or totally eclipsed; but it would contain a great mixture of truth and error, of holiness and sin, of happiness and misery. Yet it would form one day, and never be interrupted by a night of total darkness. It would also be known unto the Lord, as to the degree of its light, and the term of its continuance; and he would watch over, and take care of, his cause and people all the time of it. But his people would hardly know whether to call it day or night, or a

A. M. 3494. 8 And it shall be in that day that living ^m waters shall go out from Jerusalem; half of them toward the ⁷ former sea, and half of them toward the hinder sea: in summer and in winter shall it be.

9 And the LORD shall be ⁿ King over all the earth: in that day shall there be ^o one LORD, and his name one.

10 All the land shall be ⁸ turned ^p as a plain, from Geba to Rimmon, south of Jerusalem:

^m Ezek. xlvii. 1; Joel iii. 18; Rev. xxii. 1. — ⁷ Or, eastern, Joel ii. 20. — ⁿ Daniel ii. 44; Rev. xi. 15. — ^o Eph. iv. 5, 6. ^p Or, compassed.

compound of both: yet, at length, toward the evening of the world, the Sun of righteousness would break forth and shine with unclouded splendour, dispelling the gloom of ignorance, heresy, idolatry, and superstition, and illuminating the church and the earth with knowledge, righteousness, peace, and consolation."

Verses 8, 9. And it shall be in that day—Spoken of verse 6, when the light shall not be clear, nor dark, that is, during the whole of the forementioned period; living waters shall go out from Jerusalem—The enlightening, quickening, and saving truths of Christianity, accompanied by the power of the Holy Spirit, shall proceed from the church of Christ, the true spiritual Jerusalem; half of them toward the former sea—The eastern sea; and half of them toward the hinder sea—The western sea. They shall spread themselves eastward and westward, and on all sides; and even the sea, whether on the east or west, shall not be able to obstruct their progress; but, having watered and refreshed, enlightened, renewed, and cheered the continent, they shall make their way into the islands, and diffuse their renovating and gladdening influence even over them. In summer and in winter shall it be—Perpetually, without intermission; these waters shall never dry up, be obstructed in their course, or lose their healing, fructifying, and refreshing virtue. In other words, "the gospel, attended by the influences of the Holy Spirit, having begun its progress from Jerusalem, shall continue its course on every side, amidst all those changes of which summer and winter are an emblem: so that nothing shall totally impede its progress, till the Lord shall become King over all the earth, not only in right but in fact; till neither idols, false religion, nor antichristian power, shall remain as his rivals; till all princes shall submit to and serve him; and all the earth shall agree in one object and way of worship, and unite in submission and obedience to one Lord."—Scott.

Verses 10, 11. All the land—The whole land of Judea, a type of the whole earth, the seat of the universal church, filled with the knowledge of God, and abounding with multitudes of converts: shall be turned as a plain—All high, uneven places, all rocky and barren grounds, shall be changed into fruitful vineyards. So the church of Christ shall be fruitful humble, and lovely. From Geba—The north and it shall be lifted up, and ^a inhabited ⁹ in her place, from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner-gate, ^r and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's wine-presses.

11 And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be ^s no more utter destruction; ^t but Jerusalem ¹⁰ shall be safely inhabited.

12 ¶ And this shall be the plague wherewith the LORD will smite all the people that have

^p Isa. xl. 4. — ^q Chap. xii. 6. — ^r Or, shall abide. — ^s Neh. iii. 1; xii. 39; Jeremiah xxxi. 38. — ^t Jer. xxxi. 40. — ^u Jer. xxiii. 6. — ¹⁰ Or, shall abide.

boundary of the land; to Rimmon—The south boundary. And it—That is, Jerusalem; shall be lifted up—Raised out of the dust, to which its enemies had brought it, through God's permission. Jerusalem, taken mystically, is the church of Christ in gospel days; and by the repair of all parts of this Jerusalem, as here described, is shadowed out the complete building of the church on all sides, north, south, east, west. From Benjamin's gate—That is, this gate was probably to the north of Jerusalem; unto the place of the first gate—Or, as Newcome reads it, the former gate, supposed to be that called the old gate, Neh. iii. 6; xii. 39, placed by Lightfoot toward the south-west. Unto the corner-gate—See 2 Kings xiv. 13. And from the tower of Hananeel—Placed by Cocceius eastward; who observes, that the tower and corner-gate seem mentioned as two extremities of the city. Unto the king's wine-presses—Near the king's garden southward. So Cocceius. "These points are given, no doubt, to signify that Jerusalem shall again occupy as much space as ever it did in its most flourishing times. The same intention appears Jer. xxxi. 38–40. Both these places may derive some illustration from comparing them together, and at the same time inspecting the plan of Jerusalem in the Ancient Universal History, vol. i. b. i., which seems to have been laid down pretty accurately, according to the circuit of the walls, made by the two companies, Neh. xxxi. 40, and the information collected from other parts of Scripture."—Blayney. And men shall dwell in it—Many, for number; eminent, for worth. And there shall be no more utter destruction—They that dwell in it shall dwell securely, and there shall be none to make them afraid. There may be afflictions, but there shall be no more of that utter destruction that formerly laid both town and country waste. There shall be no more curse, as the latter part of the sentence may be translated. In the new state of things, here foretold, the curse which sin brought into the world shall be, at least in a great measure, if not entirely, removed. Similar words, recorded Rev. xxii. 3, seem to be taken from this place. But Jerusalem shall safely be inhabited—A promise often repeated by the prophets. See Jer. xxiii. 6, and the note there.

Verses 12, 13. And this shall be the plague, &c.—Those that do not die in battle, nor fall by the hand of their brethren, shall be destroyed by famine, or

A. M. 3494. fought against Jerusalem; Their flesh
B. C. 510. shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth.

13 And it shall come to pass in that day,
that ^a a great tumult from the LORD shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbour, and ^x his hand
shall rise up against the hand of his neighbour.

14 And ¹¹ Judah also shall fight ¹² at Jerusalem; ^y and the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together, gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance.

15 And ^z so shall be the plague of the horse,

^a 1 Samuel xiv. 15, 20.—^x Judges vii. 22; 2 Chron. xx. 23;
Ezek. xxxviii. 21.—¹¹ Or, thou also, O Judah, shalt.—¹² Or, against.—^y Ezek. xxxix. 10, 17, &c.—^z Verse 12.

consumption. *Their flesh shall consume away
while they stand upon their feet*—They shall be miserably emaciated, even while they stand in arms ready to fight; or so suddenly, that they shall hardly have time to lie or sit down. And their eyes shall consume away in their holes—A dreadful and exemplary blindness shall seize them. A great tumult—
That is, confusion; from the Lord—Hebrew, of the Lord, that is, one caused or permitted by him; shall be among them—Shall take place and prevail, as a punishment of their hostility to God's church. Those that are confederated and combined against God and his people, will be justly separated, and set against one another; and their tumults raised against God will be avenged in tumult among themselves. And they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbour—That is, they shall seek help from one another, but instead of helping they shall turn their arms against one another. And his hand shall rise up, &c.—The sum of the verse is, that intestine divisions and hostilities shall be added to the foregoing divine judgments.

Verses 14, 15. And Judah also shall fight at [or rather, for] Jerusalem—The meaning seems to be,
that while the enemies of Jerusalem are engaged in fighting with each other, Judah also (Hebrew, נֹכַח (nochach), will come up and join their forces with those of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, will fall upon the weakened nations, and take from them great spoil.
And the wealth of all the heathen, &c., shall be gathered together—And shall fall into the hands of God's people. Thus the wealth of the sinner is often laid up for the just; and the Israel of God are enriched with the spoil of the Egyptians. And so shall be the plague of the horse, &c.—The very cattle shall share in the plagues with which the enemies of God's church shall be cut off, as they did in divers
of the plagues of Egypt.

Verse 16. And every one that is left of all the nations—Such as escape the fore-mentioned strokes
of divine judgment, and are by mercy preserved;

of the mule, of the camel, and of the A. M. 3494
ass, and of all the beasts that shall be B. C. 510.
in these tents, as this plague.

16 ¶ And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem, shall even ^a go up from year to year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep ^b the feast of tabernacles.

17 ^c And it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain.

18 And if the family of Egypt go not up,
and come not, ¹³ that ^d have no rain, there shall be the plague wherewith the LORD will

^a Isa. lx. 6, 7, 9; lxvi. 23.—^b Lev. xxiii. 34, 43; Neh. viii.
14; Hos. xii. 9; John vii. 2.—^c Isa. lx. 12.—¹³ Heb. upon whom there is not.—^d Deut. xi. 10.

of all the nations which came against Jerusalem—
That is, many among all these nations shall consider God's hand, repent, and submit to his law. Such a change shall the grace of God, sanctifying his judgments, make upon them. Of Christ's foes, as some shall be made his footstool, so others shall be made his friends; and when the principle of enmity is slain in them, their former acts of hostility are pardoned to them, and their services are accepted as though they had never fought against Jerusalem.
Shall even go up to worship, and keep the feast of tabernacles—That is, they shall join in the solemn acts of Christian worship. The prophets, as we have repeatedly had occasion to observe in the course of these notes, often describe the state of the gospel by the usages of their own times. The feast of tabernacles, being kept in remembrance of God's conducting and preserving the Israelites forty years in the wilderness, and afterward bringing them into the promised land, was observed with extraordinary expressions of rejoicing. Here this one solemn festival is, by a figure, put for all the days consecrated to God for holy worship; and that very properly, because of those two great graces which were, in a special manner, signified and required in that feast, namely, contempt of the world and joy in God, Neh. viii. 17. The life of a true Christian is a constant feast of tabernacles, and in all our acts of devotion we must retire from the world and rejoice in the Lord, or worship as the truly pious did in that feast.

Verses 17, 18. Whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth—If there be any remiss herein, and neglect to worship the Lord; even upon them shall be no rain—They shall be punished with want of rain, and of the blessings which plentiful and seasonable rains produce; their land shall be barren,
and they shall suffer a famine. "There is a restriction, verse 16," says Newcome, "to such nations as warred against Jerusalem." "But if, according to the opinion of many commentators, by going up to

A. M. 3494. smite the heathen that come not up
B. C. 510. to keep the feast of tabernacles.

19 This shall be the ¹⁴ punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles.

20 ¶ In that day shall there be upon the ¹⁵ bells of the horses, ° HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD; and the pots in the Lord's ¹⁴ Or, sin.—¹⁵ Or, bridles.—° Isa. xxiii. 18.—^f Isa. xxxv.

house shall be like the bowls before A. M. 3494.
the altar. B. C. 510.

21 Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the LORD of hosts: and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and seethe therein: and in that day there shall be no more the ^f Canaanite in ^e the house of the LORD of hosts.

g; Joel iii. 17; Rev. xxi. 27; xxii. 15.—^e Eph. ii. 19-22.

Jerusalem to worship, and to keep the feast of tabernacles, be only meant a conformity to the established worship of the one true God, or, which is the same thing, to the Christian religion, there can be no objection to understanding a strict universality of the nations. For it is repeatedly foretold, that a time would come, when all the ends of the world shall remember and turn unto the Lord, and all the families of the nations shall worship before him, Psa. xxii. 27."—Blayney. And if the family of Egypt go not up, that have no rain—Where, by the situation of the country, there is no rain; there shall be the plague wherewith the Lord will smite the heathen—That is, although they be not visited in the same manner as the other nations, namely, with a want of rain, which of itself would be no punishment to that country; yet, as it follows in the next verse, they shall not be exempt from the same punishment with the other nations that sinned in like manner, namely, famine, "which would be the sure consequence if the rains did not fall in Ethiopia, so as to cause an overflowing of the Nile."—Newcome. The reader will observe, respecting these predictions, that the prophet, "foretelling the blessings arising from the restoration of the Jews, and the conversion of the Gentiles to the Christian faith, draws his images from the old dispensation; and, as is usual throughout the prophetic writings, expresses the rewards and punishments of the new dispensation, under figures borrowed from the old."

Verses 20, 21. In that day—When the nations are converted to God, as is foretold verse 16; shall there be upon the bells of the horses—Written, as it were, on every common thing; HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD—This was the inscription on the mitre of the Jewish high-priest, denoting the great holiness of his office, and how he ought to conduct himself in a holy manner in all things, especially in those relating to divine worship. Now in these days of the gospel, when the Jews shall be converted to Christ, and the fulness of the Gentiles brought in, and made a holy nation, a royal priesthood, the grace of God shall be so abundant and efficacious, that common ordinary things in the hands of Christians, much more their persons, shall bear the dedicating inscription of HOLINESS TO THE LORD, and by their study and practice of holiness they shall make good their motto; they shall honour and glorify God in all circumstances and situations, times and places, and use every thing in a holy manner. And the pots in the Lord's house—The meanest utensil employed in his service;

shall be like the bowls before the altar—Shall be as the vessels of silver and gold used in the solemn sacrifices. Yea, every pot in Jerusalem shall be holiness unto the Lord—The utensils of private houses shall all be dedicated to God's service, and employed in his fear and to his glory; with such sobriety and temperance, such devotedness to God, and such a mixture of pious thoughts and expressions, that even their meals shall look like sacrifices; they shall not eat and drink to themselves, but to Him that spreads their tables and fills their cups. And all they that sacrifice—In allusion to sacrifices, the prophet expresses all religious affections, practice, and worship, which shall be as pleasing to God as were the sacrifices of his people, offered up with divine warrant and approbation. Shall come and take of them—Of those pots and vessels, freely and without scruple; and seethe therein—The ceremonial distinction between holy and unholy places and things shall cease with the ritual law on which it was founded. One place shall be as acceptable to God as another, and one vessel or instrument of divine service as holy as another. For the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and in truth, and men shall pray and give thanks everywhere, lifting up holy hands without wrath and doubting. Little regard shall be had to the circumstance, provided there be nothing indecent or disorderly, while the life, and soul, and substance of divine worship and service are religiously preserved and adhered to. And there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the Lord—There shall be no more a profane or impious person in the societies of the faithful. For though persons that were Canaanites, strangers, and foreigners, should be brought into the house of the Lord, yet they should cease to be Canaanites; they should have nothing of the spirit or disposition of Canaanites, or heathen, in them. And though in gospel times people should be indifferent as to holy vessels and holy places, yet they should be very strict with respect to church discipline, and careful not to admit the profane to sacred ordinances, or to Christian fellowship with them, but should separate between the precious and the vile, between Israelites and Canaanites. Yet this will not have its perfect accomplishment short of the heavenly Jerusalem, that house of the Lord of hosts into which no unclean thing shall enter. For at the end of time, and not before, Christ shall gather out of his kingdom every thing that offends; and the tares and wheat shall be perfectly and eternally separated.

THE BOOK OF MALACHI.

ARGUMENT.

THOUGH Malachi is the last of those divinely-inspired prophets whose writings have been transmitted to posterity, and in him prophecy ceased; yet the spirit of prophecy appears to have shone as clear, bright, and strong in him as in any that preceded him. The Jews call him, The seal of prophecy, because in him the succession of prophets came to a period; God wisely ordering, that prophecy should cease some ages before the Messiah came, that he might appear the more conspicuous, and be the more welcome. Nothing is known respecting the country or parentage of this prophet, nor even whether Malachi, a word that means my angel, or my messenger, was his proper name, or only a generical name, signifying that he was the messenger of the Lord. The LXX. have rendered the Hebrew word, αγγελος αυτου, his angel, instead of my angel; and several of the fathers have quoted this prophet as the angel of the Lord. Justyn Martyr, however, and most of the primitive fathers, have considered Malachi as a proper name, (as it probably was,) and taken this prophet to have been cotemporary with Nehemiah, and to have prophesied a little after Haggai and Zechariah, as his prophecy supposes the temple to be already rebuilt, and the worship of God established there. For whereas Haggai and Zechariah reprove the people for delaying to build the temple, Malachi reproves them for their neglect of it, now it was built, and for their profanation of the temple service. And the other sins for which he rebukes them are those complained of by Nehemiah. He appears, indeed, to have prophesied when great disorders had begun to take place among both the priests and people, whom he charges with rebellion, sacrilege, adultery, profaneness, and infidelity, and condemns the priests for being scandalously careless in their ministry; at the same time not forgetting to encourage the pious few, who, in that corrupt age, maintained their integrity. And since prophecy was now to cease, he speaks more clearly of the Messiah than almost any other of the prophets had done; and concludes with a prediction of terrible judgments about to be executed on such Jews and others as should reject him when he came, and of signal mercy to such as should believe on him. In the mean time, till the Messiah should appear, he admonishes them carefully to observe the law of Moses, and to look for no other prophet till Elias, that is, John the Baptist, the forerunner of the Messiah, should come. He prophesied about the year of the world 3604, and 400 years before Christ. As to his style, Bishop Lowth says, it shows him to have lived in the decline of the Hebrew poetry; which, from the time of the Babylonish captivity, had been decaying very much, and fast verging toward a state of debility.

CHAPTER I.

In this chapter, (1.) The prophet shows how much Jacob and the Israelites were favoured by God, beyond Esau and the Edomites, 2-5. (2.) He reproves the Jews for their ungrateful and unbecoming deportment toward God, 6-10. (3.) He intimates that the Gentiles should be called to be the church of God in their room, 11. (4.) He charges the Jews with profanation and weariness of the worship of God, and with offering him sacrifices blemished and corrupt, 12-14.

A. M. 3604. THE burden of the word of the
B. C. 400. LORD to Israel ¹ by Malachi.

2 ^a I have loved you, saith the LORD. Yet

¹ Heb. by the hand of Malachi.

NOTES ON CHAPTER I.

Verses 1-3. The burden of the Lord—The word burden is here, as often elsewhere, equivalent to pro-
VOL. III. (68)

ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? A. M. 3604
Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith B. C. 400
the LORD: yet ^b I loved Jacob.

^a Deut. vii. 8; x. 15.—^b Rom. ix. 13.

phesy; to Israel—To those of all the tribes that were returned from captivity. I have loved you, saith the Lord—That is, in a particular and extraordinary de-

A. M. 3604. 3 And I hated Esau, and ^o laid his
B. C. 400. mountains and his heritage waste for the dragons of the wilderness.

4 Whereas Edom saith, We are impoverished, but we will return and build the desolate places; thus saith the LORD of hosts, They shall build, but I will throw down; and they shall call them, The border of wicked-

* Jeremiah xlix. 18; Ezek. xxxv. 3, 4, 7, 9, 14, 15; Obadiah 10.
† Psalm xxxv. 27.

gree; not only as men, but above the rest of men, and above the other posterity, both of Abraham and Isaac. Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us?—That is, wherein does thy particular love to us appear? What proofs hast thou given of loving us in an extraordinary degree? Us, who have been captives, and have groaned under the miseries of captivity and bondage all our days till of late? Is this a proof of thy love to us?

Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the Lord—Did not one father beget them, and one mother bear them? Yet I loved Jacob—Namely, more than Esau; I preferred him to the honour and privileges of the birthright, and this of free love. I loved his person and his posterity. Here God is introduced as answering the question, which, in the preceding clause, they are represented as asking, namely, wherein his particular regard to them appeared. But it must be well observed, that Jacob and Esau, as elsewhere Israel and Edom, are put to signify the whole posterity arising from these two persons, namely, the Israelites and Idumeans. And in asking, Was not Esau Jacob's brother? God reminds them that the Idumeans, as they themselves very well knew, were descended from Abraham as well as they, and from a progenitor who was own brother to their progenitor Jacob. And I hated Esau—I loved not Esau's posterity as I loved Jacob's. By hating here is only meant, having a less degree of love, for in this sense the expression is frequently used. Thus, Gen. xxix. 31, Jacob's loving Leah less than Rachel is termed hating her; and Luke xiv. 26, the loving father and mother, wife and children, less than we love Christ, is termed the hating of them. That this is the meaning of the expression hating, there, is evident from the parallel text, Matt. x. 37, 38, where we read, He that loveth father or mother MORE than me, is not worthy of me, &c. From these, and other passages that might be produced, it is evident that the expression, hating, is frequently used to signify no more than loving in a less degree, or showing less regard or favour to one than another. Indeed, as it may be further added, it would be doing a high dishonour to the nature of God to suppose that the expression, as here applied to Jacob and Esau, is to be taken in the strict sense of the word hating. And laid his mountains and his heritage waste—In these words the Lord shows in what sense he had hated Esau, that is, his posterity; he had given him a lot inferior to that which he had conferred on Jacob. Idumea had ness, and, The people against whom A. M. 3604.

the LORD hath indignation for ever. B. C. 400.

5 And your eyes shall see, and ye shall say, ^a The LORD will be magnified ² from ³ the border of Israel.

6 ¶ A son ^o honoureth his father, and a servant his master: [†] if then I be a father, where is my honour? and if I be a master, where is been laid waste by the arms of Nebuchadnezzar, five years after the taking of Jerusalem; and whereas Jacob's captivity, or that of the Israelites, were restored to their own land, and their cities rebuilt, Esau's never were. For the dragons of the wilderness—Creatures which delight in desolate places, by which the utter desolation of Idumea is signified. The Hebrew word תנינ, or תנין, here rendered dragons, signifies any large creature of the creeping kind, whether by land or sea. In this place it is taken for a great serpent, such as are commonly found in deserts and desolate places.

* Or, upon.—* Heb. from upon.—* Exod. xx. 12.—† Luke vi. 46.

Verses 4, 5. Edom saith, We are impoverished, [or, brought low,] but we will return and build the desolate places—This they accordingly did, as we learn from the history of those times; and undoubtedly thought to become a flourishing people again, and to continue so. But God had determined otherwise, as is here declared. Thus saith the Lord, They shall build, but I will throw down—This was accordingly done by God's giving success, first to the arms of Judas Maccabæus, and afterward to those of Hyrcanus, by whom Edom was spoiled and laid waste again. And they shall call them, The border of wickedness—They shall be called, or accounted by others, a wicked nation, or a country of wicked men, and therefore deservedly laid waste. And ye shall say, The Lord will be magnified—Or, rather, Let the Lord be magnified; from the border of Israel—Namely, from that border which extended even to Idumea.

Verse 6. A son honoureth his father, &c.—Since it is evident I am not only your Lord, and have a right to govern and command you by my creation of you, but also may be esteemed your Father, on account of the extraordinary benefits I have bestowed upon you, where are those proper dispositions which I might expect to find in you in return? namely, reverence for me, and fear of offending me, as your Lord and Master, and love and honour toward me as your Father. Unto you, O priests, &c.—What is here said is addressed in particular to your priests, because, being chosen and appointed, according to your office, to honour and glorify me, you ought to have been the first and most forward to do it; but, instead of that, you have been the first to dishonour me. Had undutifulness been found among the ignorant people, it might have been, in some measure, excusable; but you, whose calling and business it is to know, love, and serve me, are without excuse, be

A. M. 3604. my fear? saith the LORD of hosts
B. C. 400. unto you, O priests, that despise my name. ⁸ And ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name?

7 ⁴ Ye offer ^h polluted bread upon mine
altar; and ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee? In that ye say, ⁱ The table of the LORD is contemptible.

8 And ^k if ye offer the blind ⁶ for sacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and sick,
is it not evil? offer it now unto thy governor;
will he be pleased with thee, or ^l accept thy person? saith the LORD of hosts.

9 And now, I pray you, beseech ⁶ God that he will be gracious unto us: ^m this hath been ⁸ Chapter ii. 14, 17; iii. 7, 8, 13.—⁴ Or, Bring unto, &c.

^h Deut. xv. 21.—ⁱ Ezekiel xli. 22; Verse 12.—^k Lev. xxii.
22; Deut. xv. 21; Verse 14.—⁶ Heb. to sacrifice.—^l Job
xlii. 8.—⁶ Heb. the face of God.

A. M. 3604. by your means: will he regard your
B. C. 400. persons? saith the LORD of hosts.

10 Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for naught? ^a neither do ye kindle fire on mine altar for naught. I have no pleasure in you, saith the LORD of hosts, ^o neither will I accept an offering at your hand.

11 For, ^p from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same, my name shall be great ^q among the Gentiles; ^r and in every place ^s incense shall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering: ^t for my name shall be great among the heathen, saith the LORD of hosts.

^m Hos. xiii. 9.—⁷ Heb. from your hand.—^a 1 Cor. ix. 13.
^o Isa. i. 11; Jer. vi. 20; Amos v. 21.—^p Psal. cxlii. 3; Isaiah
lix. 19.—^q Isaiah lx. 3, 5.—^r John iv. 21, 23; 1 Tim. ii. 8.
^s Rev. viii. 3.—^t Isa. lxvi. 19, 20.

&c.—And now I beseech you, (for you cannot deny that ye have done as I have said,) that you would supplicate God to pardon the nation in general, as well as yourselves, for what offences have been committed against his laws; for ye have been the principal cause of them, by the disregard you had for God's service. Will he regard your persons?—This ought rather to be rendered, If, perhaps, he may regard your persons. Who among you would shut the doors for naught?—All those pretences which you make use of to excuse yourselves, for presenting unto God improper and worthless offerings, are quite vain, for it is plain that a general avarice prevails, and is practised among you; for even the officers, or ministers, whose duty it is to open and shut the doors of the temple, and to kindle fire on the altar, will not perform their office without making a gain of it, or receiving fees for it. *I have no pleasure in you, saith
the Lord*—I cannot take pleasure in men so intent upon their own profit as ye are; and under the gospel I will put an end both to your priesthood and the sacrifices which you offer. This is implied in the next verse.

Verse 11. For from the rising of the sun, &c., my name shall be great among the Gentiles—You may perhaps think, if I will not accept an offering from your hands, that I shall have none; but in this you err greatly; for know that my name shall be great,
or highly revered, among all the nations of the earth, who will worship me, not as you do, as if it were a labour for which they ought to be paid; but with pure minds, inflamed with love toward me and zeal for my glory. And in every place incense shall be offered to my name—Prayers and praises shall be presented before me as incense. For here the prophet describes the Christian sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving by the outward rites of the Jewish worship: see note on Zech. xiv. 16. Indeed, incense was considered by the Jews themselves as a figure or emblem of prayer and praise: see Psal. cxli. 2

cause, like Eli's sons, you have despised me yourselves, and made others do so too. The prophet adds, that perhaps they would have the assurance to pretend they had not done it, and to ask in what particular such a charge could be alleged against them? if so, he would enumerate the particulars to them, which he does accordingly in the following verses.

Verses 7, 8. *Ye offer polluted bread upon mine
altar*—By this seems to be meant, the bread-offering, or the cake of fine flour, which was to be offered with the continual sacrifice in the morning and evening of every day. By being polluted is to be understood, that it was not such as the law required. They diminished something, either in the quality or quantity of what the law commanded them
to offer; either the bread was not made of good flour, or mixed with the required quantity of good oil. And ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee?—Or dishon-oured, or had thee in contempt? The answer is ready, In that ye say, The table of the Lord is contemptible—You pretend, as a cover for your avarice, that the table or altar of the Lord is despised among the people, and that therefore they do not bring to it, by way of offering, that quantity of flour and oil which they should. Or the meaning is, By your actions you declare how little value you have for the worship of God, since you care not in how slight and contemptuous a manner it is performed. And if ye offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil?—
The beasts to be offered were required to be perfect and without blemish, Lev. xxii. 21, 22. Offer it now to thy governor; will he be pleased with thee?—Wilt thou be acceptable or welcome unto him, bringing him such a worthless present? It argues a great contempt of Almighty God, when men are less careful in maintaining the decencies of his worship
than they are in giving proper respect to their superiors.

Verses 9, 10. And now, I pray you, beseech God,

A. M. 3604.
B. C. 400.

12 But ye have profaned it, in that ye say, "The table of the LORD is polluted; and the fruit thereof, even his meat, is contemptible.

13 Ye said also, Behold, what a weariness is it! ⁸ and ye have snuffed at it, saith the LORD of hosts; and ye brought that which was torn, and the lame, and the sick; thus ye

^a Verse 7.—⁸ Or, whereas ye might have blown it away.
^x Lev. xxii. 20.

Luke i. 10. This spiritual service, the prophet says, shall be offered in every place, whereas the Jewish worship was confined to the temple. The words of Christ, John iv. 21, 22, are a good commentary upon this text; where to worship in spirit is opposed to the carnal ordinances of the Jewish service, such as meats and drinks and bloody sacrifices, or to mere external worship; and in truth, to the types and ceremonies of the Mosaic law, which were only shadowy representations of things to come. And a pure offering—Namely, the offering of prayer and praise, of faith, love and obedience, of the heart and life, the body and soul, to be dedicated to and employed for God. Such, also, are the oblations of real Christians for the support of God's worship, the maintenance of a gospel ministry, or the relief of the poor. Thus, in this verse, two important points of our religion are declared in the fullest manner: the abolition of the sacrifices and ceremonies of the ancient law, and the pure and spiritual nature of the Christian worship and service.

Verses 12, 13. But ye—O priests, and the people, by your example; have profaned it—Namely, my great name. You have used it as a common thing, and as of no importance or consideration. In that ye say—Namely, by your deportment; The table of the Lord is polluted—Not a sacred thing, or a thing to be revered; and the fruit thereof, his meat, is contemptible—Either the meat which fell to the priests' share, or the portion which was laid upon the altar. They were neither pleased with that which the Lord reserved for himself, nor with that which he gave to them, but they found fault with both; the latter, in particular, they termed contemptible, a poor, sordid allowance, scarce fit for meaner persons and less service. Ye said also—To the sins before mentioned, the priests chiefly, and the people brought an offering: ^x should I accept this of your hand? saith the LORD. A. M. 3604.

B. C. 400.

14 ¶ But cursed be ^y the deceiver, ⁹ which hath in his flock a male, and voweth, and sacrificeth unto the LORD a corrupt thing: for ^x I am a great King, saith the LORD of hosts, and my name is dreadful among the heathen.

^y Ver. 8.—⁹ Or, in whose flock is.—^x Psalm xlvii. 2; 1 Tim vi. 15.

with them, added this also, that they openly complained of God's service. Behold what a weariness—What a toil and drudgery is it to observe every point of the law! Ye have complained of the constant attendance upon my altar as a wearisome employment. And ye have snuffed—Have expressed your disgust, at it. And ye have brought that which was torn—Ye have brought into the temple, for victims, that which had been torn by wild beasts, &c. It was forbidden even to eat in common that which had been torn, Exod. xxii. 31, and therefore nothing could show higher contempt than to bring such things for offerings to God.

Verse 14. But cursed be the deceiver—The hypocrite, that deceives man, and seems as if he would be glad to deceive God; the false heart, that intends one thing and pretends another, would appear to offer a sacrifice of the best, but puts God off with the worst. Which hath in his flock a male—A perfect male, such as God requireth; and sacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing—Such as the Lord hath declared he will not accept. The former reproofs related only to the priests; here the prophet reproves those in general who showed a contempt of God by vowing unto him, upon any occasion, the worst of their flock. It seems to be spoken of such offerings as any of the people, of their own accord, vowed to God: see Lev. xxii. 19. And if they did not think fit to vow such things as God directed, they would have done less dishonour to him not to have vowed at all. For I am a great King, saith the Lord, and my name is, or shall be, dreadful—As God is the great King over all the earth, and will be acknowledged as such among the Gentiles under the gospel, (verse 11,) so men's religious services ought to be performed with a reverence suitable to the greatness of his majesty.

CHAPTER II.

In this chapter, (1.) The prophet reproves the priests for profaning the holy things of God, and neglecting to instruct the people, 1–10. (2.) He rebukes both priests and people for various abuses with regard to the marriage of strange wives and divorces, 11–17.

A. M. 3604.
B. C. 400.

AND now, O ye priests, this commandment is for you.

2 * If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, to give glory unto my name, saith the LORD of hosts, I will even send a curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings; yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart.

3 Behold, I will ¹corrupt your ²seed, and ²spread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your solemn feast; and ³one shall ^btake you away with it.

4 And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you, that my covenant

^a Lev. xxvi. 14; Deut. xxviii. 15.—¹ Or, reprove.—² Heb. scatter.—³ Or, it shall take you away to it.—^b 1 Kings xiv. 10.
^c Num. xxv. 12; Ezek. xxxiv. 25; xxxvii. 26.

NOTES ON CHAPTER II.

Verses 1-4. O ye priests, this commandment is for you—Or decree, rather, for properly speaking no commandment is here given to the priests, only punishment is denounced upon them if they did not repent. If ye will not hear, &c., to give glory unto my name—Which you have despised and dishonoured, by your irreverent performance of my service, chap. i. 6. I will send a curse upon you—I will send poverty and affliction upon you, and you shall not prosper in any thing. And I will curse your blessings—I will turn your blessings into curses, or rather, remove your blessings and send curses and calamities in their stead; behold, I will corrupt your seed—The seed wherewith you sow your ground: I will cause it to rot so that it shall bring forth little or nothing. And spread dung upon your faces—I will make you as contemptible and vile as if some one had covered your faces with filth and dung. And one shall take you away with it—You shall be cast out of the temple as so many nuisances, only fit to be removed out of sight. And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you—By the punishment which will follow upon your neglecting to lay what hath been said to heart, and to give glory unto my name, as you are here enjoined: see verses 1, 2. That my covenant might be with Levi—That the covenant which I made with the tribe of Levi, that they should be mine, and employed in my service, might continue firm to their posterity. Some render the clause, Because my covenant was with Levi, for the breach of which you are accountable.

Verses 5, 6. My covenant was with him—The prophet here speaks of the succession of the ancient priests, such as Aaron, Eleazar, Phineas, and their successors, as of one single person, under the name of Levi, (see Zech. xi. 16,) and says, I gave him my covenant of life and peace, or of happiness and security; or I promised him a secure enjoyment of his office of the priesthood, on his due administration of his office before me. The words allude to might be with Levi, saith the LORD A. M. 3604.

of hosts. B. C. 400.

5 * My covenant was with him of life and peace; and I gave them to him ^dfor the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name.

6 * The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips: he walked with me in peace and equity, and did ^fturn many away from iniquity.

7 * For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth: ^bfor he is the messenger of the LORD of hosts.

^d Deut. xxxiii. 8, 9.—^e Deut. xxxiii. 10.—^f Jer. xxiii. 22; James v. 20.—^g Deut. xvii. 9, 10; xxiv. 8; Lev. x. 11; Ezra vii. 10; Jer. xviii. 18; Hag. ii. 11, 12.—^h Gal. iv. 14.

Num. xxv. 12, 13, where God says concerning Phineas, Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace, and he shall have it, and his seed after him, even the covenant of an everlasting priesthood; because he was zealous for his God, and made an atonement, &c. Or, as it is here expressed, For the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name—Here God declares what was the foundation of the terms upon which he entered into this covenant with Phineas and his successors in the priesthood, namely, an awful reverence of him, and zeal for his honour and service. The law of truth, &c.—In this verse is described how Phineas and others, who were his successors in piety as well as in the priesthood, behaved in their office: and 1st, The law of truth was in his mouth—He taught the people that which was agreeable to the divine laws, that is, Aaron, Eleazar, Phineas did this; and every one of those priests or Levites, in whatever age they lived, who feared God and were obedient to him. 2d, Iniquity was not found in his lips—He neither lived himself in any known sin, nor did he mix any thing with the instructions he gave the people which was false, and calculated to mislead them, but declared to them the pure word of God, or the divine laws, without any false glosses or comments. The words may also mean, He judged, without respect of persons, in all the causes between man and man which came before him. 3d, He walked with me in peace and equity—He made my word the rule, and my glory the end of all his actions, and discharged his duty with fidelity and care, maintaining peace with me, and endeavouring to live peaceably with all men. And, 4th, Did turn many away from iniquity—He was not content with being pious and virtuous himself, but endeavoured, by his instructions and admonitions, to make others pious and virtuous.

Verses 7-9. For the priest's lips should keep knowledge—Preserve and store up, so as to distribute it. It is his duty to understand the meaning of the law of God: and people ought to resort to him for instruction in any difficulty that arises concern-

A. M. 3604. 8 But ye are departed out of the
B. C. 400.

way; ye ¹ have caused many to ⁴ stumble at the law; ^k ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the LORD of hosts.

9 Therefore ¹ have I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but ⁵ have ⁶ been partial in the law.

10 ¶ ^m Have we not all one father? ⁿ hath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, by profaning the covenant of our fathers?

¹ 1 Samuel ii. 17; Jeremiah xviii. 15.—⁴ Or, fall in the law.
^k Neh. xiii. 29.—¹ 1 Samuel ii. 30.—⁵ Or, lifted up the face against.—⁶ Heb. accepted faces.

ing the sense of it. For he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts—He is appointed to declare God's will unto the people, and to enforce upon them obedience to it. But ye are departed out of the way—Ye act in a quite different manner from that which was the original design of your office, and which those observed who were first instituted into it. Ye have caused many to stumble at the law—You have either perverted the sense of the law, or encouraged others to break it by your bad example; ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi—By your evil practices you have broken or rendered void that covenant: by your not performing that part of the covenant which the tribe of Levi was bound to perform, you have disengaged me from performing my part, or fulfilling those promises which I had engaged to make good to them on the performance of certain conditions on their side. Therefore have I also made—Or rather, will make, (a future event being evidently foretold,) you contemptible and base—The indignities which the priests were to receive in the times of Antiochus, seem to be here intended. According as ye have not kept my ways—Have not been careful to walk in them. But have been partial in the law—Or, accepted faces, or persons, in the law, as the Hebrew signifies, that is, have wrested the sense of the law in favour, or to please great men, or to serve some unworthy design of particular persons. When we inquire into "the reasons of the contempt of the clergy," ought we to forget this?

Verse 10. Have we not all one father?—Here a new section begins, wherein the prophet severely censures the intermarriages of Israelites with women of another country, which Moses had forbidden, Deut. vii. 3; and also divorces, which seem to have been multiplied for the purpose of contracting these prohibited marriages. The former of these evils was much practised in Ezra's and Nehemiah's time, who expressed great detestation of it: Ezra ix. 1; Neh. xiii. 23. The prophet begins his expostulation with putting them in mind that they were not only descended from one progenitor, Abraham, or Jacob, with whom God made the covenant by which their posterity were constituted a peculiar people; but they owned one God and Father, in opposition to 11 Judah hath dealt treacherously, A. M. 3604.

and an abomination is committed in B. C. 400.

Israel and in Jerusalem; for Judah hath profaned the holiness of the LORD which he ⁷ loved, ^o and hath married the daughter of a strange god.

12 The LORD will cut off the man that doeth this, ⁸ the master and the scholar, out of the tabernacles of Jacob, ^p and him that offereth an offering unto the LORD of hosts.

13 ¶ And this have ye done again, covering the altar of the LORD with tears, with weep-

^m 1 Cor. viii. 6; Eph. iv. 6.—ⁿ Job xxxi. 15.—⁷ Or, ought to love.—^o Ezra ix. 1; x. 2; Neh. xiii. 23.—⁸ Or, him that waketh and him that answereth.—^p Neh. xiii. 28, 29.

the idols of the heathen, and therefore should deal with one another as brethren, being nearly allied by a spiritual as well as fleshly relation. Why do ye deal treacherously, &c., profaning the covenant of our fathers?—By these marriages with strangers, we deal falsely and injuriously with our countrymen and brethren, by the ill treatment of their daughters or sisters, whom we took to marriage, (see verse 14,) and we violate that covenant which God made with our fathers, whereby he separated us from the rest of the world, and, in order to preserve that distinction, forbade us to intermarry with idolaters.

Verses 11-13. Judah hath profaned the holiness of the Lord which he loved—As if he had said, "This sin," says Lowth, "implies the profanation of God's holy people, which he set apart for his own worship and service; a profanation of the temple, when the priests who officiated there were guilty of the same crime; (see verse 12;) and lastly, a profanation of that covenant God made with the Jews, verse 10; God hath expressed a tender regard for these three sorts of holiness, and threatened severe punishments to those that break the laws made to preserve them." And hath married the daughter of a strange god—That is, one who worships a strange god. For as gods were called fathers by their worshippers, (Jer. ii. 27,) therefore those who worshipped them might properly be called their children. The Lord will cut off the man that doeth this—Will take him away by death; the master and the scholar—Him that persuades and instructs others that these marriages are lawful, and him that follows such advice. The expression seems to comprehend both the priest and the people. The Hebrew is, he that wakes and he that answers. An instructor is described, (Isa. l. 4,) as one that wakeneth the ear of his disciple. The meaning is, there shall be left neither any to teach nor any to learn. And him that offereth an offering—Although he should make great offerings, yet that would avail him nothing if he continued in his sin, and did not put away his strange wife. Perhaps this might be intended chiefly of the priests, many of whom were guilty of this crime. And this have ye done—Or, "This also you have done: you have covered the altar of

A. M. 3604. ing, and with crying out, in such
B. C. 400. that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good-will at your hand.

14 Yet ye say, Wherefore? Because the LORD hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, against whom thou hast dealt treacherously: yet is she thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant.

15 And did not he make one? Yet had he the residue of the Spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed.
Therefore take heed to your spirit, and let ⁹ Prov. v. 18.—⁷ Prov. ii. 17.—⁸ Matt. xix. 4, 5.—⁹ Or, excellency.—¹⁰ Heb. a seed of God.—¹¹ Ezra ix. 2; 1 Cor. vii. 14.—¹² Or, unfaithfully.

the Lord with tears, with weeping, and with groan-
ings; so that no respect is now had to your offerings, nor is any thing accepted from your hand. The priests not only had married strange wives, but also had divorced those of their own country whom they had married; with whose tears the altar was imbued,
when these wives offered up their sacrifices to God,
entreating him to give their husbands a better mind;
whom God heard so effectually, that he would not accept the sacrifices of their husbands on account of the tears and just complaints of their wives.—Houbigant. The complaints of the distressed, if made known to God in prayer, will be heard, and redress granted.

Verses 14, 15. Yet ye say, Wherefore—Ye will, perhaps, still inquire wherefore God regards not your offerings; if so, the answer is ready, namely,
because the Lord hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth—Because the Lord sees how you act toward your wives; that when you have enjoyed the flower of their youth, and they begin to grow old, you condemn them, and use them ill. Yet is she thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant
—Yet didst thou thyself make choice of her to be thy companion through life; and didst enter into covenant or contract with her, to live with her in true love and affection. *And did not he make one,
&c.*—“Among various interpretations of the words,” says Lowth, “this seems the most probable, that the prophet puts the Jews in mind of the first institution of marriage in paradise, (as Christ did afterward upon a like occasion, Matt. xix. 5,) and tells them
God made but one man at first, and made the woman
out of him, when he could have created more women if he had pleased; to instruct men that this was the true pattern of marriage, ordained for true love and undivided affection, and best serving the chief
end of matrimony, namely, the religious education of children, whereas in polygamy, the children are none deal ¹¹treacherously against the A. M. 3604.

wife of his youth. B. C. 400.

16 For the LORD, the God of Israel, saith ¹²that he hateth ¹³putting away: for one covereth violence with his garment, saith the LORD of hosts: therefore take heed to your spirit, that ye deal not treacherously.

17 ¶ Ye have wearied the LORD with your words. Yet ye say, Wherein have we wearied him? When ye say, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the LORD, and he delighteth in them; or, Where is the God of judgment?

¹² Deut. xxiv. 1; Matt. v. 32; xix. 8.—¹³ Or, if he hate her, put her away.—¹⁴ Heb. to put away.—¹⁵ Isa. xliii. 24; Amos
ii. 13; Chap. iii. 13, 14, 15.

brought up with more or less care in proportion to the affection men bear to their wives.” Therefore take heed to your spirit—Do not give way to an inordinate and irregular passion.

Verse 16. For the Lord God of Israel saith that he hateth putting away—He allowed the Jews liberty of divorce only for the hardness of their hearts,
Matt. xix. 8, not that it was a thing pleasing to him.
For one covereth violence with his garment—Or,
And when one puts violence upon his garment, or covers his garment with violence, as Dr. Pocock translates it, who hath given the clearest sense of this phrase, and showed, out of several eastern writers, that they usually call a wife by the name of a garment; the expression of Moses, Deut. xxii.
30, agreeing with this way of speaking. According to this interpretation, the sense of the text will be,
that God hates divorcing a former wife to take in one of a strange nation: and he hates that any should bring into his family an illegitimate wife, over and above one that he had legally married before.

Verse 17. Ye have wearied the Lord with your words—You have tired his patience by your blasphemous speeches, charging his providence with injustice. Yet ye say—Ye persist to say; Wherein have we wearied him?—See on chap. i. 6. When ye say—When your discourse and reasoning tend to overthrow (if it were possible) all piety and morality; while you affirm, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of God—A repetition of the old objection against providence, taken from the prosperity of the wicked, which implied, as they thought,
either that their works were pleasing to God, or else
that he disregarded human affairs, and would never call men to account for their actions; and he delighteth in them—As appears, said these atheists, by his prospering them. Or, Where is the God of judgment?—If he is in the world, judging and governing it, why does he not punish these men?

CHAPTER III.

In this chapter we have, (1.) A promise of the coming of the Messiah, and of his forerunner, with the consequences thereof, both to saints and sinners, 1-6. (2.) A reproof of the Jews for corrupting God's ordinances, and robbing him of his dues, with a solemn charge to them to repent and amend, and a promise, if they did, God would return in mercy to them, 7-12. (3.) A description of the wickedness of such as spake against God, and of the righteousness and blessedness of such as spake for him, 13-18.

A. M. 3604.
B. C. 400.

BEHOLD, ^a I will send my messenger, and he shall ^b prepare the way before me : and the LORD, whom ^{A. M. 3604.}

^{B. C. 400.} ye seek, shall suddenly come to his

^a Matt. xi. 10; Mark i. 2; Luke i. 76; vii. 27.

^b Isaiah xl. 3.

NOTES ON CHAPTER III.

Verse 1. Behold, &c.—To silence the cavils of unbelievers, spoken of in the last verse of the preceding chapter, the prophet here foretells the coming of the Messiah, who should set things in order; and of his harbinger, who should prepare men for his reception. I will send my messenger—It is God who speaks here, for John the Baptist, who is here intended, was God's messenger, and had his commission from heaven and not of men, Matt. xxi. 25, 26; being sent by the same divine authority by which the prophets were sent, and for the same purposes, namely, to call men to repentance and reformation; and he shall prepare the way before me—Before Jehovah, the fulness of whose Godhead dwelt in Christ bodily. Whoever compares this verse with Isa. xl. 3, &c., will easily see that both passages speak of the same person. The messenger here spoken of as sent to prepare the way before the Lord, who is described as coming immediately after this his forerunner, is represented in Isaiah as preparing the way of the Lord, who is spoken of as coming, and his glory as just ready to be revealed, verses 5-9. Both passages, according to the evangelists, were intended of John the Baptist, and indeed are applicable to no other person whatever. He is promised under the name of Elias in the following chapter, whom all the Jews, both ancient and modern, expected should come as the forerunner of the Messiah. This messenger, or prophet, (see the note on chap. ii. 7,) here represented as the Lord's harbinger, was to be as much inferior to the Lord himself, as servants are to a great person, of whose arrival they give notice. This John himself often confessed, Matt. iii. 11; John i. 26, and iii. 28; and so much appears by the following words. Instead of the reading here, which is the literal translation of the Hebrew, we read in three places of the New Testament, (see the margin,) I send my messenger before thy face to prepare thy way before thee, namely, before the Messiah, to prepare his way before him; the Messiah acting in the name of his Father, the Father being in him and he in the Father, John xiv. 10, 11. John prepared the way of Christ by calling men to the practice of those duties which would qualify them for the reception of the blessings of the Messiah's kingdom; and by taking them off from all confidence in their relation to Abraham as their father, which they thought would ensure the favour of God to them without a Saviour; and by giving them notice that the Messiah was now at hand, and so raising their expectation of him that they might readily enter into his measures for the setting up of his kingdom in the world.

And the Lord, whom ye seek—That promised Lord or Shiloh, of whom you have such great expectations, and whose coming you so much desire; and who, if you obey him, will bring the greatest good to your state, and will also make foreign nations partakers of your blessings; shall suddenly come—That is, soon after the messenger, or unawares, as Christ's first coming was, and second will be; to his temple—The second temple at Jerusalem, lately built by Zerubbabel and Joshua. All the Jews, before the birth of Christ, firmly believed that the Messiah was to come into that very temple, according to what the Prophet Haggai had expressly declared, chap. ii. 8. The word here rendered Lord, אֲדֹנָי, is the same that is used by David, Psal. cx. 1, where he calls the Messiah his Lord, and properly means a basis, or foundation, and also a proprietor, and governor. It is a term peculiarly proper to Christ, who is at once the foundation and governor of his church, and was the Lord of that temple in which he was to make his appearance. Even the messenger [or angel] of the covenant—A phrase, says Secker, found nowhere else in Scripture. "It may mean the person by whose intervention the covenant is made, or by whom a covenant proposed by one party is sent to the other." The same person is meant who is termed the angel of God's presence, Isa. lxiii. 9; who delivered the law upon mount Sinai, as St. Stephen speaks, Acts vii. 38, and as the apostle's words imply, Heb. xii. 25, 26. He is both the revealer and mediator of the new covenant, which the prophets foretold would take place under the Messiah, Jer. xxxi. 31; Isa. xlii. 6, and lv. 3; even that blessed one that was sent from heaven to negotiate a peace and settle a correspondence between God and man; commissioned from his Father to bring man home to God by a covenant of grace, who had revolted from him by the violation of the covenant of innocence. By his mediation this covenant is procured and established; and though he is the prince of the covenant, as some read the clause here, yet he condescended to be the messenger of it, that we might, upon his word, have the fullest assurance of God's goodwill to man. Whom ye delight in—Whose coming ye so much desire, the time of it being the subject of your earnest inquiry and diligent search, and the expectation of it your comfort and delight. Behold, he shall come—The promise is repeated, and

A. M. 3604. temple, ^e even the messenger of the B. C. 400. covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, ^d he shall come, saith the LORD of hosts.

2 But who may abide ^e the day of his coming? and ^f who shall stand when he appeareth? for ^g he is like a refiner's fire, and like fuller's soap.

3 And ^h he shall sit as a refiner and purifier

^c Isa. lxiii. 9. — ^d Hag. ii. 7. — ^e Chap. iv. 1. — ^f Rev. vi. 17.
^g Isa. iv. 4; Matt. iii. 10, 11, 12.

that in the name of the Lord of hosts, to give the fullest assurance of its accomplishment. There were few among the Jews who did not please themselves to think of the Messiah's coming, though from various motives; the pious among them doubtless expecting spiritual blessings, such as a further revelation of God's will, and larger communications of his grace and Spirit; but the great bulk of the nation looking for mere worldly advantages under a temporal kingdom, which they expected he would set up.

Verse 2. But who may abide the day of his coming—The LXX. read, τις υπομενει ημεραν εισοδος αυτου, who shall be able to bear the day of his coming? So also the Chaldee. "Quare hoc?" "Why this?" says Grotius: "Because he himself shall bear the cross, that he may come to the kingdom, and shall show the same way to his followers." The day of his coming, with respect to the Jews, includes all the time from the beginning of his preaching, to the total destruction of their temple and city by the Romans: and his coming, here and in several other places, comprehends all the effects and consequences of his coming, as well the judgments which arose from it to the disobedient, as the mercy that flowed from it to the obedient. So that the meaning of the question is, Who shall be able to stand under the weight of those trials and tribulations which at that time will fall on all sorts of men? great crosses being to be borne by the believing and pious, and great calamities to be endured by the unbelieving and refractory. In the same light John the Baptist represents the effects of Christ's coming, Matt. iii. 7-12, Who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? meaning, primarily, the wrath about to come on that rebellious people: whose fan, he adds, is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire. For he is like a refiner's fire—As if he had said, Some men are like metals, mixed with much dross, which nothing but a fierce fire can purge away. Such a fire shall the troubles of these days be. The divine judgments are often called a fiery trial, such as separates the pure metal from the dross, purifying the former and consuming the latter. See Isa. i. 25; iv. 4; Zech. xiii. 9. Our Lord is to be understood in the same sense Luke xii. 49, where he says, I am come to send fire upon the earth, namely, a fire of trial and purgation, to try and purify the hearts and reins of men, and find out and separate the good from the bad; like as the refiner's fire makes the

of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may ⁱ offer unto the LORD an offering in righteousness.

4 Then ^k shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the LORD, as in the days of old, and as in ^l former years.

5 And I will come near to you to judgment;

^h Isaiah i. 25; Zech. xiii. 9. — ⁱ 1 Peter ii. 5. — ^k Chap. i. 11.
^l Or, ancient.

dross of the metal to appear and fly off. And like fuller's soap—The word ברית, here rendered soap, and Jer. ii. 22, according to St. Jerome, was an herb growing in Palestine, which the fullers used to take spots out of clothes.

Verses 3, 4. And he shall sit as a refiner—He shall be diligently employed in his office, in performing which he shall resemble a refiner and purifier of silver. And he shall purify the sons of Levi—And whereas the misconduct of the sons of Levi has been very great, (particularly of those who have been taken notice of and reproved in the foregoing chapters,) the Messiah when he comes will reform these abuses, and purify the worship of God from such corruptions. And purge them as gold and silver—The effect of this fiery trial, and purifying furnace, shall be the thorough cleansing of the persons that are to pass through it. Not all the sons of Levi, says Houbigant, "for the similitude is taken from gold and silver, which being purified there remains some dross behind. So it happened after the ministration of Jesus Christ: a great company of the priests were obedient to the faith, Acts. vi. 7. Of the other sons of Levi, who did not believe in Christ, it is just before said, Who may abide the day of his coming, when, the metal being purified, he will cast the dross into the fire." But those who should minister in holy things in the Christian Church, instead of the Levitical priests, are chiefly intended: or rather, all real Christians, who are made a holy priesthood, and who, with hearts and minds purified by faith, offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ, 1 Peter ii. 5; yea, who even offer themselves, their souls and bodies, their faculties and members, their time and talents, all they are and have, unto the Lord an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem—The services and duties of the Christian ministry, and of the whole Christian Church; be pleasant unto the Lord—Acceptable and even well pleasing to him. The prophet describes the Christian worship, and the various services of the Christian Church, and of its true members, by expressions taken from the Jewish service, being that with which they were acquainted; as in the days of old—As in the purest ages of the patriarchal or Mosaic dispensation, or, as in the times of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Samuel, David.

Verse 5. And I will come near to you to judgment—In answer to their demand, Where is the God

A. M. 3604. and I will be a swift witness against
B. C. 460.

the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, ¹and against false swearers, and against those that ²oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the LORD of hosts.

6 For I am the LORD, ^mI change not; ⁿtherefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.

7 ¶ Even from the days of ^oyour fathers ye

¹ Zech. v. 4; James v. 4, 12. — ² Or, defraud. — ^m Num. xxiii. 19; Rom. xi. 29; James i. 17.

of judgment? chap. ii. 17, God here tells them that he will hasten the time of judgment, and it shall come speedily upon them, on account of those sins that were general among them: and that if they did not repent, and reform their conduct upon the preaching of the gospel by the forerunner of the Messiah, the Messiah himself, and his apostles and other servants, he would proceed to the utter excision of their nation. And I will be a swift witness, &c.—It belongs to God alone to be both witness and judge; for he alone seeth all the actions of men, and needeth not that any should testify against them, because he can himself convict them of their guilt, as having been present and looking on when their most secret sins were committed. Against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, &c.—The sins enumerated in this verse were very prevalent in Malachi's time. Diviners, dreamers, and such as consulted oracles at the idols' temples, are reprov'd, Zech. x. 2; as are the false pretenders to prophecy, Nehemiah vi. 12–14. False swearing and oppression are complained of, Zech. v. 4; Nehemiah v. 3, &c. Their marrying strange women, and putting away their former wives to make room for them, was no better than adultery, and a breach of that solemn oath with which they had bound themselves, Nehemiah x. 29, 30. And the same sins seem to have been commonly practised before and at the time of Christ's appearance, till the destruction of Jerusalem. No nation was more given to charms, divinations, and fortune-telling, than the Jews were about that time, as Dr. Lightfoot has shown out of their own authors. Adulterers were then so common, that the Sanhedrim ordained that the trial of an adulteress, prescribed Num. v., should no longer be put in practice, as the same author observes out of the Talmud. Josephus informs us that magicians swarmed in Judea, under the government of Felix, and afterward. The denunciation here, that God would come near to judgment with all these, and be a swift witness against them, was fulfilled by that terrible destruction which was made of them by the Romans when Jerusalem was taken, and such havoc was made of the nation as never happened to any people before.

Verse 6. I am the Lord—Hebrew, Jehovah; I change not—In my nature or perfections there is no change, or shadow of turning, and therefore I have

are gone away from mine ordinances, A. M. 3604.
and have not kept them. ^pReturn B. C. 400.

unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the LORD of hosts. ^qBut ye said, Wherein shall we return?

8 ¶ Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? ^rIn tithes and offerings.

9 Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation.

ⁿ Lam. iii. 22. — ^o Acts vii. 51. — ^p Zech. i. 3. — ^q Chap. i. 6. ^r Neh. xiii. 10, 12.

and always must have an unchangeable hatred to all sin: and my long-suffering also changes not, and therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed—Are not destroyed and sent into eternal misery in your sins. God's wisdom also changes not, but remains the same to dispense rewards to the good, and punishments to the wicked, in the fittest season, and therefore neither the one nor the other are consumed, but preserved to the time appointed of God. Or, the sense may be, Because I am the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever, as my name Jehovah imports, and I am true to my former promises, (see Ex. vi. 3–6,) therefore you still continue a people, and are not consumed, as your iniquities deserve. And I will still preserve a remnant of you to fulfil to them the promises I made to your fathers: see Rom. xi. 29.

Verse 7. Even from the days of your fathers, &c.—Here the discourse is again addressed to the wicked, and from hence to the end of verse 12 the people are reprehended for slighting the institutions of divine worship, and for withholding the legal tithes and oblations; are assured that they are under a curse for these violations of the law, and that an opposite conduct would bring on them the divine blessing. Ye are gone away from mine ordinances—Those which directed you respecting my worship, or your dealings one with another. Return unto me—Namely, by repentance, and amendment of life; and I will return to you—I will pardon and accept you, and bestow my blessings upon you. But ye said—Or, ye say, Wherein shall we return?—You persist to justify yourselves, and inquire what it is you are to repent of? as if your crimes were not most notorious and shameful. And your words, or at least your actions, show that you have no sense of, nor remorse for, your former sins, nor any purpose of forsaking them.

Verses 8, 9. Will a man rob God—Grotius reads, "Would any one dare to rob his judges as ye have robbed me?" the word rendered God sometimes meaning judges or magistrates. Some others render the clause, Is it right that God should be robbed (or defrauded) by man? Here God gives them an answer to their question in the foregoing verse, Wherein shall we return? or, repent and amend? But ye have robbed me—Notwithstanding it is so unjust and presumptuous to defraud God, that men

A. M. 3604. 10 ^a Bring ye all the tithes into ^t the
B. C. 400. storehouse, that there may be meat
in my house, and prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you
the ^u windows of heaven, and ³ pour ^x you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

11 And I will rebuke ^v the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not ⁴ destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her

^a Prov. iii. 9, 10.—^t 1 Chron. xxvi. 20; 2 Chron. xxxi. 11;
Nehemiah x. 38; xiii. 12.—^u Genesis vii. 11; 2 Kings vii. 2.
³ Heb. empty out.—^x 2 Chron. xxxi. 10.

in general are afraid to do it, yet ye have done it.
Do you ask, wherein you have robbed me? I answer, In tithes and offerings—By this seems to be meant the first-fruits of their ground and cattle, and other offerings which were allotted to the priests, Deut. xviii. 4, out of which revenue they were to provide the daily sacrifices, and also maintain the Levites, who attended upon the service in the temple. Ye are cursed with a curse—Are greatly cursed, or, you lie under a heavy curse, and are likely still to do so, for the curse shall continue upon
you while you continue in this your sinful course.
For ye have robbed me, even this whole nation—
This has not been the crime of a few only, but ye have in general defrauded me, and evil shall come upon you for it. In a note on Rom. ii. 22, where the apostle ranks sacrilege with idolatry, Grotius observes, “Non multum distat falsos deos colere et verum spoliare.” There is very little difference between adoring false gods and robbing the true God.

Verses 10–12. Bring ye all the tithes—Make a punctual and full payment of all tithes: and in this instance make good your solemn engagement with Nehemiah, mentioned chap. x. 29. Into the storehouse—This was one or more large rooms built on purpose for this use; that there may be meat—That there may be provision for the daily sacrifices, and for the maintenance of my ministers, the priests and Levites, who attend upon the service of my temple.
And prove me now herewith—Make the experiment in this particular. If I will not open you the windows of heaven, &c.—There is now a scarcity of the fruits of the earth, and a dearth, but take the advice which I give you, and try whether your plenty will not be in proportion to the free-will wherewith you bring in your tithes and offerings; and whether I will not immediately send you plentiful showers of rain, whereby the earth shall bring forth its fruit in great abundance. The dearth here spoken of is mentioned Neh. v. 3: compare 2 Chron. xxxi. 10. To open the windows of heaven is a proverbial speech, expressing God’s showering down plenty, or giving great abundance of the fruits of the earth; (see 2 Kings vii. 2;) as shutting up heaven denotes scarcity, Deut. xi. 17; Hag. i. 10, 11. And pour out a blessing—First of rain to water the earth, next a fruit before the time in the field, saith A. M. 3604.

the LORD of hosts. B. C. 400.

12 And all nations shall call you blessed; for ye shall be ^a a delightful land, saith the LORD
of hosts.

13 ¶ ^a Your words have been stout against me, saith the LORD. Yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee?

14 ^b Ye have said, It is vain to serve God:
and what profit is it that we have kept ⁵ his

^v Amos iv. 9.—⁴ Heb. corrupt.—^a Dan. viii. 9.—^a Chap.
ii. 17.—^b Job xxi. 14, 15; xxii. 17; Psa. lxxiii. 13; Zeph. i.
12.—⁵ Heb. his observation.

blessing of corn, wine, and oil, and all other products
of the earth. That there shall not be room, &c.— Or, till there be enough; or, till you shall say, There is enough. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes—All kinds of devourers, the locusts, the can-ker-worms, the caterpillars, and all other destructive insects, which, though they may be in incredible multitudes, yet, by a rebuke from God, they will be checked all at once, as if they were but one insect.
Neither shall your vine cast her fruit—Neither shall your vines, or other fruit-trees, be blasted by blighting winds, so as to make their fruit fall off before it comes to maturity, but they shall carry it till it be fully ripe. And all nations—All that are near you; shall call you blessed—Shall style you a happy people. For ye shall be a delightful land—Your country shall be again known by the name of the pleasant land, as it was formerly called. The revival of religion in a land will make it delightful
both to God and all good men.

Verses 13–15. Your words, &c.—“From this verse to the end of chap. iv. 3, the prophet expostulates with the wicked for their hard speeches; and declares that God will make a fearful distinction between them and the righteous.”—Newcome. Have been stout against me—Your words have been blasphemous, and void of all reverence and duty. Ye have spoken injuriously of me, and have uttered
such things as dishonour me. Ye have even arraigned my proceedings, and spoken against them. Yet ye say, What have we spoken, &c.—This is to the same purport as their words in verse 8, and some other foregoing verses. They impudently deny the charge, therefore the prophet renews it against them in the following words; Ye have said—If not with your lips, yet at least in your hearts; It is vain to serve God—We receive no advantage from it, it is of no use to us. That they should talk thus impious-ly in the times of Zerubbabel, when Malachi uttered these reproofs and exhortations, is not probable; but God, who sees into the hearts of men, saw, lurking in their hearts, the seeds of that impiety which broke out in the following age. And what profit is it
—What benefit is it of to us; that we have kept his ordinance—That we have attended upon the institutions of his worship, and have governed our lives according to his laws? And that we have walked

A. M. 3604. ordinance, and that we have walk-
B. C. 400. ed ⁶ mournfully before the LORD of hosts ?

15 And now ^c we call the proud happy ; yea, they that work wickedness ⁷ are set up ; yea, they that ^d tempt God are even delivered.

16 ¶ Then they ^e that feared the LORD ^f spake often one to another : and the LORD hearkened, and heard it : and ^g a book of remembrance was written before him for them

⁶ Heb. in black. — ^c Psa. lxxiii. 12 ; Chap. ii. 17. — ⁷ Heb. are built. — ^d Psalm xcv. 9. — ^e Psalm lxvi. 16 ; Chap. iv. 2. — ^f Heb. iii. 13. — ^g Psa. lvi. 8 ; Isa. lxxv. 6 ; Rev. xx. 12.

mournfully before the Lord—Have humbled ourselves before him with fasting and prayer, sackcloth and ashes. Their beholding the prosperity of the wicked made them conclude, that it was to no purpose to walk according to the laws of God, or to confess their offences and express their sorrow for them. And, or rather, but, or therefore, now we call the proud happy—Those who behave themselves arrogantly against God, the proud contemners of his law. We can now do no less than think them happiest who do not concern themselves about the observance of God's laws, but live according to their pleasure, and do every thing that their inclination or profit prompts them to do, without any fear of God's calling them to an account for it. Yea, they that work wickedness are set up—Are the flourishing ones ; are raised to prosperity, as buildings are to their height. Yea, they that tempt God are even delivered—Yea, they who, one would have supposed, should have wearied out God's patience with their provocations, who have seemed to act as if they tried to provoke him, even these men escape those dangers and calamities which other men are involved in. Those who spake thus seem to have expected an exact distribution of temporal rewards and punishments to be made to good and bad men in this life.

Ver. 16, 17. Then—When contempt of God was grown to such a height ; they that feared the Lord—Those that were truly religious, that knew God's judgments to be a great deep, and that his ways are as high above our ways as heaven is above the earth ; spake often one to another—Conversed together about spiritual things the more frequently : for though it is not said what was the subject of their conversation with each other, yet we have reason to believe it was as good concerning God and his providence as the discourse of the wicked was evil. They spake what was right concerning God's justice and mercy, his holiness, forbearance, and long-suffering, his wisdom and equity in his government of the world in general, and of his church and the members of it in particular. And by their pious discourse they endeavoured to arm each other against the impressions which such wicked suggestions as those above mentioned might otherwise have made upon their minds ; and to confirm one another in piety that feared the LORD, and that thought upon his name. A. M. 3604.

B. C. 1000.

17 And ^h they shall be mine, saith the LORD of hosts, in that day when I make up my ⁱ jewels ; ^j and ^k I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.

18 ^l Then shall ye return and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.

^h Exodus xix. 5 ; Deut. vii. 6 ; Psalm cxxxv. 4 ; Titus ii. 14 ; 1 Pet. ii. 9. — ⁱ Or, special treasure. — ^j Isa. lxiii. 3. — ^k Psa. cxiii. 13. — ^l Psa. lvi. 11.

and virtue. And the Lord hearkened and heard—Took a special notice of what these pious persons did and said. And a book of remembrance was written—It was as safely laid up in his memory as if it had been entered into a register, in order to be produced at the day of judgment to their praise and honour : see the margin. The words are a beautiful allusion to the records kept by kings, Esth. vi. 1. And they shall be mine—It shall appear how dear they are to me, when the time comes in which I shall separate the precious from the vile, the vessels of honour from those of dishonour, 2 Tim. ii. 20. In the day of the execution of my judgments they shall be distinguished and preserved safe, as choice jewels are wont to be. And I will spare them as a man spareth his own son, &c.—They shall be spared, pitied, and loved, and I will preserve them from those calamities which shall fall upon the wicked and unbelieving, with the same tenderness which a father shows to a dutiful son. The period especially referred to may be the Roman war under Titus. When God should utterly cut off the Jewish Church and nation for their infidelity, the remnant among them, that should be found to believe his word, and having waited for the Messiah, the consolation of Israel, should welcome him when he came ; these, being admitted into the Christian Church, should become a peculiar people to God, and God would take care of them, that they should not perish with the unbelievers, but that they should be hid in the day of the Lord's anger against that nation. These pious ones should have all the glorious privileges of God's Israel appropriated to them, and centring in them. They should be a peculiar treasure unto him, when the rest were rejected ; should be vessels of mercy and honour when the rest should be made vessels of wrath and dishonour. This, however, is very applicable to all the faithful people of God, and the distinction he will put between them and others, in the great day of final accounts.

Verse 18. Then shall ye—Ye contemners of God and religion ; return and discern—See clearly, and distinguish perfectly ; between the righteous and the wicked—Between the characters and the portion of the truly righteous, and of those who are not so. How different the lot is, and to all eternity will be, between the former and the latter ; between him that serveth God—And makes conscience of his duty to him, and him that serveth him not—But puts contempt upon his service. You that now speak against God, as making no difference between the good and bad, and therefore say, It is vain to serve him, verse 14, you shall be made to see your error: and you that speak for God, but know not what to say to this, that there seems to be one event to the righteous and the wicked, and that all things come alike to all, will then have the matter set in a true light, and will see to your everlasting satisfaction the difference between the holy and the profane, the godly and the ungodly. Then shall ye return—That is, change your minds, and come to a right understanding of this most important matter. For then every man's character will be both perfected and perfectly discovered; and every man appear in his true colours; and every man's condition, likewise, will be both perfectly happy or miserable, without mixture or alloy, and everlastingly determined.

CHAPTER IV.

In this chapter, which is a continuation of the discourse in the preceding, we have, (1.) A prediction of the general destruction of the Jewish nation, as a type and emblem of the final destruction of all the impenitent and unbelieving at the time of the general judgment and final conflagration of the heaven and the earth, 1. (2.) The benefit which such as believed on the Messiah, at his coming, and became his subjects and servants among the Jews, should enjoy, while their unbelieving countrymen were given up to destruction: a figure of the final salvation of the righteous at the time of Christ's second coming, 2, 3. (3.) A solemn charge given to the Jews, in the mean time, strictly to observe the law of Moses till the Messiah should appear, 4. (4.) A promise of a further discovery of God's will by Elijah the prophet, that is, John the Baptist, the harbinger of the Messiah, whose ministry, it is foretold, should produce a happy effect in the reformation of many, both young and old, 5, 6.

A. M. 3604.
B. C. 400.

FOR behold, ^a the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all ^b the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be ^c stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the LORD of ^{A. M. 3604.} hosts, that it shall ^{B. C. 400.} leave them neither root nor branch.

2 ¶ But unto you that ^e fear my name, shall

^a Joel ii. 31; Chap. iii. 2; 2 Pet. iii. 7.—^b Chap. iii. 18.

^c Obad. 18.—^d Amos ii. 9.—^e Chap. iii. 16.

NOTES ON CHAPTER IV.

Verse 1. For behold the day cometh—Though it may appear to be at a distance from you, yet it is coming, and will soon overtake and overwhelm you: even that great and terrible day of the Lord, as it is called Joel ii. 31. That shall burn as an oven—God is described as a consuming fire, when he comes to execute his judgments, Deut. iv. 24, and the prediction here was remarkably verified when, upon the taking of the city and temple of Jerusalem, by the Roman army under Titus, they were both destroyed by such flames as no human power could quench. The refiner's fire, mentioned chap. iii. 2, now became unspeakably more dreadful, raging everywhere through the city and temple, and most fiercely where the arched roofs made it double itself and infold flames within flames: by which terrible destruction, and the judgments accompanying it, an end was put to the whole state of the Jews: an awful image this of the conflagration of the heavens and the earth, and the final judgment of the last day on the whole human race. And all the proud—Such especially as those spoken of chap. iii. 15. And all that do wickedly—All impenitent sinners, of whatever kind, whether heathen, Jews, or Christians, so called, even all that do not obey the truth, whether manifested by God's works or his word, but obey unrighteousness, shall be as stubble—Shall perish by these awful judgments. And the day that cometh shall burn them up—Shall totally and speedily consume them. It shall leave them neither root nor branch—A proverbial expression for utter destruction, and signifying, as applied to the unbelieving Jews, that both they and their families should be utterly destroyed.

Verse 2. But unto you that fear my name—So they are described, chap. iii. 16, whose names were written in the book of remembrance; who loved the law of their God, and kept it; who believed its promises, and rejoiced in expectation of the blessings promised; who believed his threatenings and trembled at them, and who walked humbly with their God; shall the Sun of righteousness arise—Christ, who is fitly compared to the sun, being the fountain of light and vital heat to his church: elsewhere called the day-spring from on high, Luke i. 78, and the east, or sun-rising, for so the word rendered branch, Zech. iii. 8, is translated by the Chaldee and LXX.: see the note there, and on Isa. lx. 1, 2. Thus the church is described, Rev. xii. 1, as clothed with the sun, that is, adorned with graces communicated to her from Christ. He is termed the Sun of righteousness, not only because he is the end of the law for righteousness, that is, for justification, sanctification, and practical obedience, to believers, and is made of God unto them righteousness, but because he is the medium and source of the divine mercy and benignity to them, as the word rendered righteousness also signifies. He is said to arise with healing in his wings, because his doctrine and media-

A. M. 3604. the ^f Sun of righteousness arise with
B. C. 400. healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall.

3 ^e And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the LORD
of hosts.

^f Luke i. 78; Ephesians v. 14; 2 Pet. i. 19; Revelation ii. 28.
^e 2 Sam. xxii. 43; Mic. vii. 10; Zech. x. 5.

tion, with the spirit of truth and grace, which he has procured for, and confers upon, his true followers, removes men's ignorance and errors, sins and miseries, and heals all the diseases of their fallen souls, communicating to them spiritual health and strength, with delight and joy, safety and security, and restoring and regulating all their faculties and powers. And ye shall go forth—That is, as the words are thought primarily to signify, out of the city of Jerusalem before the fatal siege begin, being warned by Christ so to do, (see Matt. xxiv. 15-18; Luke xxi. 20, 21,) and thereby escaping those dreadful calamities, in which those who stayed in the city were involved. Indeed, those who had faith in Christ's predictions, apprehending, from the circumstances of things, the destruction of the city to be near at hand, quitted it before it was invested by the Romans. And grow up—In strength, vigour, and spiritual stature; as calves of the stall—Where they are safely guarded, and well ordered and provided for. This shall be your state when the rest of your nation shall be consumed with divers kinds of death. Ye shall be in a good condition through your faith in the Redeemer, which shall be to you the evidence of things not seen; through the peace which you shall have with God, and in your own minds; through the love of God shed abroad in your hearts, and communion with him; and through the well-grounded and lively hopes with which you shall be inspired of the like deliverance in the judgment of the last day.

Verse 3. And ye shall tread down the wicked—“Ye shall know that they are wholly subdued.”—Newcome. Houbigant thinks this “refers to the miracles of the rising church, by which the wicked were compelled to yield, and submit themselves; for there is no other dominion under which they could be held by Christians.” There was a time when the wicked trode them down, and said to their souls, Bow down that we may go over; but the day will come that will make them victorious over all their enemies, and they, as it were, shall tread down the wicked; for, being made Christ's footstool, Psa. cx. 1, they are also made theirs, and shall come and worship before the feet of the church, Rev. iii. 9. “When believers, by faith, overcome the world; when they suppress their corrupt appetites and passions; and when the God of peace bruises Satan under their feet, then they indeed tread down the wicked.”—Henry. For they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet—The meaning of this is thought by some to be, that when these believing

4 ¶ Remember ye the ^h law of ^{A. M. 3604.} Moses my servant, which I com- ^{B. C. 400.}
manded unto him in ⁱ Horeb for all Israel, with ^k the statutes and judgments.

5 ¶ Behold, I will send you ^l Elijah the prophet ^m before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the LORD:

^h Exod. xx. 3.—ⁱ Deut. iv. 10.—^k Psa. cxlvii. 19.—^l Matt.
xi. 14; xvii. 11; Mark ix. 11; Luke i. 17.—^m Joel ii. 31.

ones, who through their faith should escape the destruction in which the unbelievers were involved, should return to the place where the city stood, they would there tread upon the ashes of the wicked, who were destroyed in the destruction of the city, and many of them burned to ashes in the flames by which it was consumed. According to Eusebius, a Christian Church was erected in a town called Elia, built upon the ruins of Jerusalem, of which no less than thirteen persons of Jewish parentage were bishops. So that the faithful among the Jewish nation did literally tread the ashes of the wicked under the soles of their feet. But the general sense of the expression no doubt is, that the great, the unspeakable superiority of the righteous over the wicked, should be evident to themselves and all men, in the distinction which should be made in their favour, first, in the calamities which would come on the Jewish nation, and secondly, and especially, in that day when the righteous shall rise to everlasting life, and the wicked to shame and everlasting contempt.

Verse 4. Remember ye the law of Moses—Ye are not now to expect any succession of prophets for the time to come, nor any prophet whatever, till the forerunner of the Messiah appears: your chief care, therefore, till that time, must be to attend upon the institutions, and to obey the precepts, which Moses has given to all Israel in his law; particularly in that part of it which was delivered to him by God with an audible voice from mount Horeb: see Exod. xix. 9; Deut. iv. 10. This your lawgiver spake plainly of the Messiah, instructed you to expect his coming, and solemnly charged you to believe his doctrines and obey his commands, when he should come, threatening all those who did not with inevitable destruction. The words law, statutes, and judgments, are promiscuously used to signify the same thing, as appears from the greater part of the hundred and nineteenth Psalm.

Verse 5. Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet—The first prophet that I shall send to you, after him who now speaks to you, will be Elijah the messenger, that shall go before the Messiah to prepare his way. In him the spirit of prophecy shall be revived; and he shall be another Elijah for zeal, for courage, austerity of life, and labour for reformation. “It was the universal opinion in Christ's time, received by the learned and unlearned, the governors and the common people, that Elijah should usher in the Messiah, and anoint him; all expected that Elijah

A. M. 3604. 6 And he shall turn the heart of the
B. C. 400. fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come A. M. 3604.

and ° smite the earth with ° a curse. B. C. 400.

° Zech. xiv. 12.

p Zech. v. 3.

should first come and restore all things; and long before that time the son of Sirach grounded his expectation of him on the passage now before us: see Eccelus. xlviii. 10. The Jews have not since varied from this notion: in all their later writings the coming of Elijah and of the Messiah are usually mentioned together; and this is the reason why they pray so heartily for the coming of Elijah, even without mention of the Messiah, because the coming of the one, according to Malachi, infers the coming of the other." But it is neither said nor implied in the text that Elijah the Tishbite should come in person, but only that one should come in the spirit and power of Elijah, and when such a one did come, Malachi's words were fulfilled; who meant no more that Elijah should rise again, than Hosea and Jeremiah did that David should be restored to life, in order to reign over Israel and Judah, when they prophesied that the tribes should hereafter serve David their king. Whoever this Elijah was, he must, according to the next clause of this verse, precede the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord, that is, the time of the final destruction of the Jewish city, temple, and commonwealth, which events actually took place near one thousand seven hundred years ago, and no other Elijah than John the Baptist, followed by the Messiah, came to warn them of it, as is confessed by them.

It is allowed by the Jews as a fact, that prophecy was sealed up with Malachi, and that when he died the Holy Spirit was taken away from Israel. They expected, however, that it would be restored in the days of the Messiah, and they ought, therefore, to have concluded that John the Baptist, in whom this gift did revive, must be the Elijah of Malachi: for all the people held John as a prophet, Matt. xiv. 5; xxi. 26. Even the members of the Sanhedrim, astonished at his preaching and actions, (see John i. 19-25,) thought he must be Elijah, or that prophet, namely, the Messiah, mentioned by Moses: and the scribes and Pharisees, as well as the rest of the country, went to be baptized of him, confessing their sins, Matt. iii. 5-7. Add to this, that his preaching exactly answered the description given of it by Malachi. As Elijah was to give notice of the coming of the day that should burn as an oven, verse 1, that great and dreadful day, wherein the Lord, Messiah, should smite the land of Judea with a curse, verse 6; so did John the Baptist exhort to repentance, from this motive, that the kingdom of God was at hand, that wrath was coming, from which they ought to flee, and that the person coming after him, who was mightier than he, with his fan in his hand, would thoroughly purge his floor, and burn the chaff with unquenchable fire: see Matt. iii. 2, 7, 10, 11; and Bishop Chandler's Defence. The reader will be pleased to see the sacred historians' account of John confirmed by a wise, learned, and well-disposed Jew, who was not a Christian, namely, the well-known historian Josephus: "It was the opinion of the Jews," says he, "that Herod's army was cut off by the Arabs through God's just judgment, for the sake of John, who was surnamed the Baptist. For he killed that excellent man, who excited the people to the exercise of all virtues, especially piety and justice, and to receive his baptism, which, he assured them, would be pleasing to God, if to purity of body they added purity of life, and first cleansed their souls, not from one or two, but every sin. But when the people resorted in numbers to him, eager to hear his doctrine, and ready to do any thing by his counsel, fearing what might be effected through so great authority of the man, he first imprisoned and then slew him."—Antiq., lib. xviii. cap. 7.

Verse 6. And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, &c.—After the times of the Maccabees, to the times of Christ, the Jewish people were miserably divided among themselves, by discords, which broke out into civil wars, of which Josephus gives an account. And moreover, the different religious sects among them, especially those of the Sadducees and Pharisees, greatly distracted the people, and alienated and separated the nearest relations from each other: Now John the Baptist began to apply a remedy to these evils, by instilling the precepts of love and charity, and directing all to one and the same master, Christ: see Luke iii. 11; Matt. iii. 11; Mark i. 7; John i. 15. This seems to be the most probable interpretation of the words, taking them in the sense of our translation, and as they are understood by the LXX., and by St. Luke, chap. i. 17. But a more easy sense may be given of them by translating the Hebrew preposition ל, not to, but with, in which sense it is often used, and as Kimchi, Noldius, and others render it, namely, He shall turn the hearts of the fathers with the children, and of the children with the fathers; that is, he shall do his utmost to produce a national reformation, to turn both fathers and children from their evil practices, and to make them all unanimously join in the great duties of repentance and amendment of life; to restore a true sense of religion, which was then dwindled into a mere form, and thereby to prepare the people for the reception of Christ, in order to prevent the utter excision denounced upon the land, as it follows, Lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.—By the earth here, as frequently elsewhere, is meant the land of Judea, and the clause would be better rendered, Lest I come and smite the land, namely, of Judea, with utter destruction: for so the word חרם, here rendered curse, is often translated, as the learned reader may see by referring to Num. xxi. 2; Deut. vii. 2, 13, 15, 16; Josh. vi. 21; Zech. xiv. 11. So that the meaning is, Lest, when I come to execute judgment upon

Judea, all the inhabitants of it should be utterly destroyed. By the preaching of John, and his directing the people to Christ, many were brought to repentance and reformation of life, and thereby escaped the common destruction of the nation. All, therefore, did not perish, but a remnant was saved, as St. Paul takes notice, Rom. ix. 27, 29, and xi. 5. Judea, however, remains a desolation, and Jerusalem a heap of ruins, both of them sad and perpetual monuments of God's displeasure against such as reject Christ and his salvation. The three remarkable predictions, therefore, contained in this last chapter of the ancient records of the divine will, like a multitude of others, which have come under our consideration in the course of these notes, have all been punctually fulfilled. The harbinger of the Messiah appeared at the time foretold, in the spirit and power of Elias; the Messiah himself was manifested as the Sun of righteousness, as soon as that messenger sent before his face had prepared his way; and the most signal vengeance was executed, as foretold, on all such as rejected him and his salvation. These remarkable predictions, therefore, added to all that went before, being evidently verified, are so many fresh proofs of the divine authority of the Holy Scriptures, of the truth of the Christian religion, of the certain accomplishment of all the promises and threatenings of the gospel of Christ, and of the absolute necessity of possessing the religion there delineated, and practising the duties there enjoined. This, indeed, is the design of all the prophecies, and even of all the books contained in the Old and New Testaments, and the principal use which ought to be made of them.

Thus, through the assistance of God, we are come to the conclusion of the writings of the prophets:

for, from the time of Malachi to the time of the Messiah, for the space of near four hundred years, there was, as some of the prophets had foretold, there should be, a famine of the words of the Lord; (see Amos, chap. viii. 11, 12;) and during this long course of time no prophet appeared in Israel, where there had been before a succession of them for a very long period of years. The divine providence, it is probable, as was intimated in the argument to this book, caused this long cessation of prophecy, this long famine of the word of the Lord in the land, in order to excite the greater expectation and a more fervent desire of the coming of the great prophet, the Christ of God; and to prepare men's minds for a new and different dispensation, in which, after the first establishment of it, there was no longer to be a succession of prophets; but the work of God in and among men, in order to their salvation, was to be carried on through and by the grace of the Lord Jesus, that great one, who had been foretold by the mouth of all the prophets; and by the fellowship of the Holy Ghost, or a Divine Spirit, enlightening and renewing men's minds, inspiring them with true wisdom, and communicating to them the divine nature, and forming them after the image of him that had created them. It has been observed by some, and not improperly, that whereas the last word of the Old Testament is a curse which threatens the earth, of our danger of which we must be made sensible, that we may welcome the gospel of Christ, which comes with a blessing; it is with a blessing, with the choicest of blessings, that the New Testament ends: and with it let us arm ourselves, or rather, let God arm us, against this curse. The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with us all! Amen.

To God only wise be ascribed all the glory.

THE END OF ALL THE CANONICAL BOOKS OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

FOR REFERENCE ONLY

FOR REFERENCE ONLY

